States that met the criteria for a basic grant would be eligible for supplemental grants for each of the following: (1) the adoption of a mandatory blood alcohol testing program for drivers in accidents involving fatalities or serious injuries; (2) providing for enhanced enforcement of "21 drinking age" laws; (3) the establishment of laws preventing drugged driving, including prompt license suspension, presumed driver consent to drug testing, mandatory minimum sentences for those convicted of drugged driving, and a system of detection of drugged drivers; (4) the establishment of a mandatory BAC intoxication level of 0.08 during the first three years of the grant; (5) making it unlawful to possess open containers of alcohol in the passenger area of motor vehicles (excepting charter buses) while on the road; or (6) and requiring the suspension of car license plates and registrations for repeat offenders of impaired driving laws. For each supplemental grant criteria that is met, a state would receive an amount equal to 10 percent of its section 402 allocation.

The Senate amendment also authorizes appropriations out of the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) in the following amounts to carry out this program: $25 million in FY 1992; and $50 million for each of the fiscal years 1993–1996.

Conference substitute

The Conference substitute, in large part, adopts the Senate provisions regarding the grant program. The agreement, however, deletes the waiver provision for the basic requirements, and provides that a state only has to meet five of the six requirements under the basic grant criteria of be eligible for a basic grant. In addition, videotaping of drunk drivers is now a supplemental grant criteria, and distinguishable license for those under 21 is a basic grant criteria.

SECTION 2004—AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

House bill

The House bill, in Section 205(1), for programs under section 402 of Title 23 U.S. Code, provides for an authorization out of the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) of $121 million for FY92, $190 million for fiscal years 1993–1995, and $168 million for fiscal years 1996–1997.

The House bill, in section 205(2), authorizes an appropriation of $25 million for FY 1992, and $50 million each for FYs 1993 through 1997, for the program under Section 403 of Title 23, U.S. Code.

The bill also authorizes $14,000,000 for carrying out Section 410 of Title 23 U.S. Code for fiscal year 1992.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment, in section 203(d), authorizes expenditures from the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) to carry out section 402 of title 23 of the U.S. Code for FY 1992 through 1996. The amendment provides for an authorization of $126 million for FY 1992; $130,788,000 for FY 1993; $135,757,944 for FY 1994; $140,916,745 for FY 1995; and $146,271,537 for FY 1996.

The Senate amendment, in section 203(e), authorizes expenditures out of the Highway Trust Fund to carry out Section 403 of title 23, U.S. Code. The bill provides for an authorization of $45,869,000 for FYs 1992–1996.

The Senate amendment, in section 226(—), authorizes expenditures out of the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) for carrying out the impaired driving programs set out in that section as follows: $25,000,000 for FY 1991; and $50,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1992–1995.

The Senate amendment, in Sections 226(a) and 226(b), authorizes appropriations for the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to carry out its responsibilities under the National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1966 as follows: FY 1992—$68,722,000; FY 1993—$71,333,436; FY 1994—$74,044,106. These amounts reflect the Administration's budget request for 1992 increased by the inflation factor recommended by the Congressional Budget Office for the remaining fiscal years. It also authorizes appropriations for the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to carry out the Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act as follows: $6,485,000 for fiscal year 1992; $6,731,430 for FY 1993; and $6,987,224 for FY 1994.

Conference substitute

The Conference substitute provides new authorization levels for both Sections 402 and 403, and the Impaired Driving Enforcement program. For programs under Section 402, the agreement provides for an authorization of $126 million for FY92; $175 million for FYs 1993–1994; and $171 million for FYs 1995–1997. For programs under Section 403, the agreement provides for expenditures in the amount of $44,000,000 per year for FYs 1992–1997. For the Impaired Driving Enforcement program, the agreement provides for authorization of $25 million per year for FYs 1992–1997.

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provisions with respect to expenditures for the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration's administration of the National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1966 and the Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act, and includes an authorization for FY 1995 for the latter two purposes.

SECTION 2005—DRUG RECOGNITION EXPERT TRAINING PROGRAM

House bill

The House bill, in section 206, provides for the establishment of a drug recognition expert training program. The purpose of the program is to train law enforcement officers to recognize and identify individuals who are operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol, a controlled substance, or other drug. The bill also establishes a citizens' advisory committee to monitor the progress of the implementation of the program. The advisory committee is to include one member from the organization Mothers Against Drunk Driving. The bill provides for an authorization of $5 million for FY92, and $6 million each for FYs 1993–1997, from the highway trust fund (other than the Mass Transit Account) to carry out the program.

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The Conference substitute adopts the House provision, but reduces the funding to $4 million each for FYs 1992–1997. The agreement also provides that the citizens' advisory committee shall include a member of the American Bar Association, and a member of the American Medical Association.

SECTION 2006—NATIONAL DRIVER REGISTER ACT AUTHORIZATIONS

House bill

The House bill, in section 207, provides an authorization of $4 million each for FYs 1992–1994 for programs under the NDR Act.

Senate amendment

The Senate bill, in section 203, provides for a three year authorization to carry out programs under the National Driver Register Act. The bill authorizes expenditures in the amount of $6,131,000 for FY '92; $6,363,978 for FY '93; and $6,605,809 for FY '94.

Conference substitute

The Conference substitute adopts the House provision.

SECTION 2007—OBLIGATION CEILING FOR FISCAL YEAR 1992

House bill

Section 210 of the House bill established obligation ceilings for a number of highway safety programs.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute provides for the following obligation ceilings:

(1) Fiscal Year 1992—Sums authorized for sections 2004(1), 2004(3), and 2005(c) of this Act, and Section 211(b) of the National Driver Register Act of 1982 for Fiscal Year 1992, are subject to the obligation limitations of Section 102 of this Act.

(2) Fiscal Years 1993–1997—2003, 2004(1) and 2005 of this Act and Section 211(b) of the National Driver Register Act of 1982 should be reduced proportionally if an obligation ceiling is placed on the sums authorized to be appropriated to carry out Section 402 of Title 23, United States Code.

PART B—AUTHORIZATIONS AND GENERAL PROVISIONS

SECTION 2500—SHORT TITLE

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate bill in Section 201, provides the following short title: "National Highway Traffic Safety Administration Authorization Act of 1991".

Conference substitute

The Conference substitute adopts the Senate provision.

SECTION 2501—AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment, in Sections 226 (a) and (b), authorizes appropriations for the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) to carry out its responsibilities under the National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1966 as follows: $68,722,000 for FY 1992; $71,333,436 for FY 1993; $74,044,106 for FY 1994. These amounts reflect the Administration's budget request for FY 1992, increased by the inflation factor recommended by the Congressional Budget Office for the remaining fiscal years. The Senate amendment also authorizes appropriations for the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to carry out the Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act as follows: $6,485,000 for FY 1992; $6,731,430 for FY 1993; and $6,987,224 for FY 1994.

Conference substitute

The Conference agreement adopts the Senate provisions, with modifications to include an additional authorization for FY 1995 of $76,857,782 for carrying out the National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1996; and $7,252,739 for the Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act.

SECTION 2502—GENERAL PROVISIONS

House bill

No provision.

Senate Amendment

The Senate amendment, at Section 202, sets out definitions of terms used in the amendment, including definitions of passenger car and multipurpose passenger vehicles (MPVs). These definitions, according to NHTSA, are identical to those used in current NHTSA regulations.

Conference substitute

The Conference adopts the Senate definitions. The Conference agreement also sets out procedures to be used in carrying out the rulemakings required by the Conference agreements.

SECTION 2503—MATTERS BEFORE THE SECRETARY

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate requires the Secretary of Transportation to conduct rulemakings on a number of issues:

(1) Side impact standard: Section 205 of the Senate amendment requires the Secretary, within 18 months after enactment, to promulgate a final rule to extend FMVSS 214, to MPVs and other light trucks, such as minivans, sport utility vehicles and small trucks.

The Senate notes that approximately 8,000 Americans die each year in side impact crashes, and approximately 23,000 suffer serious, nonfatal injuries. After many years of work, NHTSA recently issued an upgraded side impact protection standard for passenger cars, to prevent injuries to the chest and pelvis in such crashes. At the same time, NHTSA indicated that it would continue its work to address head injury prevention in such crashes. MPVs and other light trucks are not currently required to meet the passenger car standard for protection of the chest and pelvis. This section of the Senate amendment would require that the passenger car standards be applied to MPVs and other light trucks.

This Section also would require that the Secretary complete a rulemaking, within a time certain, to consider methods of preventing head injury in side impact crashes.

(2) Protection against rollover: Section 210 of the Senate amendment requires rulemaking to prevent unreasonable risk of rollover in passenger cars, MPVs and other light trucks. The Senate notes that NHTSA's own research indicates that a significant percentage of accidents involving certain types of MPVs, other light trucks and passenger cars involve vehicle rollover. To date, no rule has been issued to deal with this problem. This section of the Senate amendment would require completion of the rulemaking within 12 months of enactment.

(3) Improved design for seatbelts: Section 224 of the Senate amendment requires a rulemaking, to be completed within 12 months of enactment, to consider whether to amend the current standard for seatbelt design to take into account the needs of children and shorter adults. The Senate notes that there is some evidence that current seatbelt design does not protect adequately such individuals, and that this situation could be remedied easily by minor design changes. The Senate notes that while NHTSA recently terminated a rulemaking on this issue, that analysis did not consider the affect on children of such an amendment to the standard. The rulemaking required by the Senate amendment would have to consider the safety of children.

(4) Safety child booster seats used in passenger cars and other motor vehicles: Section 213 of the Senate amendment requires a rulemaking proceeding, to be completed within 12 months of enactment, to increase the safety of child booster seats. Booster seats, used by toddlers and older children, are designed to elevate children so that they are in the proper position to use lap and shoulder belts. The Senate notes that a study conducted for NHTSA, "Evaluation of the Performance of Child Restraint Systems," indicates that some of these systems may not restrain adequately a child in a crash, and some may put pressure on the child's abdomen during a crash. The Senate amendment is a response to the concerns expressed in this study.

(5) Methods of reducing head injuries: Section 219 of the Senate amendment would require a completion of a rulemaking, within two years of enactment, to consider methods of reducing head injuries caused by contact with the interior components of passenger automobiles, MPVs and other light trucks.

The Senate notes that each year a large number of Americans suffer head injuries in automobile crashes. Many of these victims are permanently disabled. The Senate notes that an airbag can reduce the number of head injuries resulting from frontal crashes. Even if all cars were equipped with airbags, however, head injuries will still occur from rollover, side impact, and other crashes. NHTSA's own research indicates that many of these head injuries could be prevented if additional padding were placed in the interior portions of the vehicles likely to come into contact with a crash victim's head.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute provides in lieu of the above mentioned provisions a process for conducting rulemakings in accordance with the National Traffic and Motor Safety Act of 1966. It also provides that any resulting standards be enforced in accordance with the 1966 statute. The process includes a procedure for initiating a rulemaking either as an Advanced Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (ANPRM) or a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) at the discretion of the Secretary of Transportation. It also provides for completion of the rulemakings consistent with the 1966 statute and the Administrative Procedure Act. Except as otherwise provided, completion could include promulgation of a final rule (with or without changes from the proposed rule), or deciding not to promulgate a rule through termination of the rulemaking process (which decision may include a deferral of a rule, or a decision to start all over at some future time). The Department cannot, however, terminate the rulemaking because it lacked time to complete the rule. Whatever action is taken it must be published in the Federal Register in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act and the 1966 Act and must include the reasons for that action.

Section 2503 lists five priority matters for which the Secretary must initiate a rulemaking in accordance with these general procedures. They are as follows:

(1) Unreasonable risk of rollovers in passenger cars, MPVs and light trucks.

(2) Extension of passenger car side impact protection to MPVs and light trucks.

(3) Safety of child booster seats in passenger cars and other appropriate vehicles.

(4) Improved design for safety belts.

(5) Improved head impact protection.

With the exception of number five, the listing of these matters for initiating rulemaking decisions is not to be construed as a determination by Congress as to whether or not a rule shall be finalized or if it is finalized what it should contain. The objective of the conferees is to require that the Secretary give priority consideration to these matters without affecting other rulemakings or decisions pending at the Department.

For these five matters, the conferees expect the Secretary to initiate either an ANPRM or a NPRM by May 31, 1992. If the Secretary cannot begin any one of these by that date, he must give notice of the decision to initiate them and provide a date certain for the initiation of either an ANPRM or a new NPRM. Such date certain shall not extend beyond January 31, 1993. He must also explain the reasons for this delay. A decision to provide a new date for that decision will not be reviewable.

Once a rulemaking is initiated, the Secretary must complete the rulemaking within 26 months after initiation, in the case of an ANPRM, and within 18 months after initiation, in the case of an NPRM. However, with the exception of the head injury rulemaking, in the case of an ANPRM, the Secretary may decide not to proceed to an NPRM after issuing the ANPRM if, after consideration of the ANPRM and the comments thereon, he so decides and publishes this decision against continuation of the rulemaking process. He must do this in a manner consistent with the APA and the 1966 Act. The Secretary may in the case of an NPRM extend the 18 month period for an additional 6 months. That extension is not reviewable.

In the case of Section 2503(5) which provides for improved head injury protection regarding interior components of passenger cars (i.e., roofs, pillars, and front headers) there is a special rule. Under that special rule the Secretary must complete the rulemaking and issue a final rule within 24 months after the date of initiation of rulemaking by publication of the ANPRM or the NPRM. That publication must occur either by May 31, 1992 or, as indicated above, by January 31, 1993. If the Secretary determines that there is a need for delay and if the public comment period is closed, the Secretary may extend the date of completion by an additional six months and publish a notice thereof in the Federal Register. The conferees emphasize that in the case of this special provision a final rule is to be promulgated within the timeframe specified.

Thus, with exception of the head injury protection issue, the conferees do not predetermine the outcome of these rulemakings. The Secretary is free to conclude the rulemaking in any manner consistent with the APA and the 1966 Act. The conferees expect the Secretary to act on these matters in accordance with the time schedule provided.

The conferees expect NHTSA to move quickly on these matters and give preference to rollover protection, and to extension of passenger car side impact protection to light duty trucks and MPVs. In the case of rollovers, the conferees note that in a November 7, 1991 letter to the Committee on Energy and Commerce, the Administrator of NHTSA said:

> The rulemaking process will develop an advanced notice of proposed rulemaking (ANPRM) which will be published late this year. This will be followed by a notice of proposed rulemaking. If the comments and other information in the rulemaking record support the issuance of a final rule, the agency would adopt such a rule.
> Since the late 1980s, the agency has conducted research to determine if vehicle attributes exist which are related to vehicle rollover. In a multi-contract effort, the agency has collected engineering data on approximately 60 different vehicles, including MPVs, vans, trucks, and passenger cars. In addition, the agency has collected and analyzed over 100,000 accidents associated with rollover and non-rollover crashes of these vehicles. These two data sets, the physical measurements of the vehicles and the rollover propensity of the vehicles as measured by their actual accident history, were analyzed to determine correlations between vehicle rollover propensity and accident involvement. Correlations were found when controlling for variations in the individual crashes, such as driver demographics, weather conditions, and road conditions. This analysis was completed in the spring of 1991 and will provide the basis for the forthcoming ANPRM.

The conferees would expect NHTSA to issue an ANPRM before May 31, 1992. Indeed, the conferees understand that an ANPRM has recently been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget.

SECTION 2504—RECALL OF CERTAIN MOTOR VEHICLES

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Section 216 of the Senate amendment provides the Secretary with authority to require manufacturers to send a second notification to owners of defective vehicles to enhance safety defect and non-compliance recall response rates. DOT's review of techniques such as postcard reminders to increase recall response rates shows that a follow-up notice can achieve response rates significantly higher than those achieved by the initial notification.

This section further requires that any owner of leased vehicles who receives a recall notice shall send a copy of such notice to the lessee of the vehicle. Finally, the section requires that any dealer who receives a recall notice with respect to any vehicle or item of equipment may not sell or lease that product unless the defect is remedied or the recall order has been restrained or set aside. This provision, according to the Senate, is intended to close a loophole that exists in the Safety Act.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute adopts the Senate provision. The conferees note that according to a letter from NHTSA Administrator Jerry Curry to the Chairman of the House Committee on Energy and Commerce, dated November 7, 1991, 1991, this provision was recommended by the Department of Transportation.

SECTION 2505—STANDARDS OF COMPLIANCE TEST PROGRAM

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Section 207 requires the Secretary to establish a schedule for investigating compliance with each Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standard in effect which is capable of being tested. This provision is a result of a December 1986 GAO report, "Motor Vehicle Safety: Enforcement of Federal Standards Can Be Enhanced," which found that enforcement of these standards could be enhanced by insuring that each standard is subject to testing on a regular, rotating basis.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute requires the Secretary to maintain, on a continuing basis, a five-year plan for testing Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standards. The initial plan may be the five-year plan for compliance testing that is in effect on the date of enactment of the substitute. This provision provides the Secretary with considerable leeway in development of the plan and its implementation. The Conferees intend that the Secretary's testing plan will be available to the public, as it is currently.

SECTION 2506—REAR SEATBELTS

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Section 211 of the Senate bill provides that the Secretary expend such funds as are deemed necessary from funds appropriated to carry out the Cost Savings Act for FYs 1992 and 1993 to provide consumers with information about retrofitting their vehicles with rear seat lap-and-shoulder belts. The Senate notes that such belts only recently have been required to be installed as original equipment, and there is ample evidence, compiled in part through NHTSA's rulemaking, to conclude that rear seat shoulder belts enhance vehicle safety.

All rear passenger car seats have been required since 1968 to be equipped with brackets to allow installation of lap-shoulder belts. Consumers and auto dealers should be made fully aware of the availability of retrofit kits.

Conference substitute

The conference adopts the Senate provision, with the modification that the program would be conducted solely during FY 1993.

SECTION 2507—BRAKE PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR PASSENGER CARS

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Section 222 of the Senate amendment requires a rulemaking, to be completed within 12 months of enactment, to consider whether to adopt a standard requiring antilock brake systems for cars and MPVs. The Senate notes that there is evidence that these systems are useful in avoiding accidents, particularly in bad weather, and this section requires that NHTSA give priority consideration to whether they should be required.

Conference substitute

Not later than December 31, 1993, the Secretary, in accordance with the National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1966, shall publish an Advanced Notice of Proposed Rulemaking to consider the need for any additional brake performance standards for passenger cars, including antilock brake standards. The rulemaking is to be completed not later than 36 months from the date of initiation of the ANPRM, in accordance with clause 2502(b)(2)(B)(ii). In order to facilitate and encourage innovation and early application of economical and effective antilock brake systems for all such vehicles, the Secretary shall consider as part of the rulemaking, any brake system adopted by a manufacturer.

SECTION 2508—AUTOMATIC CRASH PROTECTION AND SAFETY BELT USE

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate notes that the current regulations of the Department of Transportation (DOT) require that passenger cars be equipped with "passive restraints," which include either airbags or automatic seatbelts that do not require action by the occupant in order to be engaged. When fully effective, in model year 1994, these regulations will require that all cars have one of these forms of passive restraint on both the driver and passenger side of the front seat (i.e. the front outboard seating position). 49 C.F.R. 571.208.

The Senate notes that in March 1991, DOT issued a similar requirement for passive restraints in the "light truck" fleet, which includes minivans, small pickups, and sport utility vehicles. 56 Fed. Reg. 12472-12487 (March 26, 1991). These vehicles, which originally were used primarily for cargo or work purposes, now make up approximately one-third of the new passenger vehicles sold, and are increasingly used by families. Under the DOT rule, "light trucks" will be required to have "passive restraints" (automatic belts or airbags) on both the driver and passenger sides on the following schedule: 20 percent of the vehicles manufactured after September 1, 1994; 50 percent of those manufactured after September 1, 1995; 90 percent of those manufactured after September 1, 1996; and 100 percent after September 1, 1997. However, those manufacturers that install airbags instead of automatic seatbelts on the driver side are permitted through a credit system to delay installation of any airbags on the passenger side until September 1, 1998.

The Senate amendment addresses the fact that the current rule permits manufacturers to choose between two forms of passive restraints. The Senate notes that DOT has estimated that airbags could save over 9,000 lives and prevent 155,000 moderate to serious injuries each year as compared to the situation if no cars were equipped with airbags. 49 Fed. Reg. 28986 (July 17, 1984).

Section 214 of the Senate amendment sets out two requirements with respect to airbags in passenger vehicles.

First, subsection 214(a) requires that, to the extent practicable, the Secretary, in cooperation with the General Services Administration and heads of other federal agencies, insure that passenger automobiles purchased for the federal fleet be equipped with airbags. Driver side airbags would be required for passenger cars acquired after September 30, 1991, and driver and passenger side airbags would be required for passenger cars acquired after September 30, 1993. If only one source of airbag-equipped vehicles is available, so that competitive bidding cannot occur, such purchase may not be practicable. However, since most manufacturers have announced plans to install airbags in their passenger car fleet in the mid 1990s, this problem is not likely to occur.

Second, subsection 214(b) requires that manufacturers equip all passenger cars and other passenger vehicles as defined in the section to include most multipurpose vehicles, with airbags on a phased-in schedule set out in the bill. Specifically, all passenger cars manufactured on or after September 1, 1995 must be equipped with airbags on both the driver and right front outboard seating positions. In addition, all trucks, buses and multipurpose passenger vehicles with a gross vehicle weight rating of 8,500 pounds or less and an unloaded vehicle weight of 5,500 pounds or less must have a driver side airbag if manufactured after September 1, 1996 and a passenger side airbag if manufactured on or after September 1, 1997.

Conference substitute

Paragraph (a)(1) requires the Secretary to issue a rule, by September 1, 1993, amending FMVSS 208 in a number of ways, including requiring the installation of an airbag that meets the requirements of FMVSS 208 on both the driver and front outboard passenger seating positions of passenger cars and MPVs and other light trucks. The issuance of a rule to accomplish mandatory airbags in the manner specified in this section is required notwithstanding any other provision of law or rule, but the rule is to be promulgated in accordance with the National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1966 to the extent such Act is not in conflict with this section. This subsection requires a rule that supplements and revises but does not replace existing FMVSS 208, which was amended on March 26, 1991 to extend the standard's requirements to MPVs and other light trucks.

Paragraph (a)(2) requires that after the promulgation of the amendment in (a)(1), the Secretary shall require that owner's manuals contain specific language informing consumers about the need to wear seatbelts even in vehicles equipped with airbags. It states:

(A) that the vehicle is equipped with an inflatable restraint referred to as an "airbag" and a lap and shoulder belt in either or both the front outboard seating positions;

(B) that the airbag is a supplemental restraint;

(C) that the airbag does not substitute for lap and shoulder belts which must also be correctly used by an occupant in such seating positions to provide restraint or protection not only from frontal crashes but from other types of crashes or accidents; and

(D) that all occupants, including the driver, should always wear their lap and shoulder belts where available or other safety belts, whether or not there is an inflatable restraint.

Paragraph (a)(3) contains a finding that it is in the public interest for all States to adopt and enforce mandatory seat belt laws and for the Federal government to adopt and enforce mandatory seat belt rules. The conferees note that nine states have not yet adopted such a law. Also, the DOD and the Interior Department's Bureau of Land Management and National Park Service have adopted such rules.

Subsection (b) sets forth the following schedule for implementation of requirements of subparagraph (a)(1): (1) New Passenger Cars—95% of each manufacturer's production volume of cars manufactured on or after September 1, 1996 and before September 1, 1997, and 100% of all such production manufactured on or after September 1, 1997. (2) New MPVs and other light trucks and buses—80% of each manufacturer's production volume manufactured on or after September 1, 1997 and before September 1, 1998, and 100% of each manufacturer's production volume manufactured on or after September 1, 1998.

Subject to the provisions of subsection (c), the requirements for 100% coverage mean that all of these vehicles actually are equipped with airbags on both sides. This is not to be a mathematical calculation involving credits available under the 208 standard, as amended by this bill, from which the Secretary would derive 100% coverage. Rather, it is actual 100% coverage. The subsection provides that the incentives or credits available to the manufacturers under the amended Standard 208 are no longer available when the requirement for 100% coverage becomes effective.

Subsection (c) provides for a temporary exemption from requirements of this section due to supply and unavoidable disruptions. This exemption authority is permanent and is available even after the 100% requirement.

The Conferees intend that the temporary exemption be granted or renewed where there is a disruption of supply, or a disruption in the use and installation by the manufacturer of such component due to unavoidable events totally beyond the manufacturers' control. The Conferees expect that these exemptions will be rarely necessary. However, history shows that there have been supply problems in the past, as shown by a recent report of the General Accounting Office.

The Conferees expect that the Secretary will require written documentation of the facts that have made the inflatable restraint unavailable. The exemption is not intended to be available in situations in which vehicle production plans are interrupted or altered for reasons unrelated to the inflatable restraint, such as general economic conditions or work stoppages at the vehicle manufacturing plant.

In granting the exemption, the Secretary must require that the manufacturer recall the exempted vehicle and install the inflatable restraint within a reasonable time, which is to be proposed by the manufacturer subject to approval by the Secretary. Thus, each grant of exemption by the Secretary must include a requirement for vehicle recall and installation of the inflatable restraint, and a date by which that recall and installation must be completed.

The substitute directs the Secretary to require labeling for each exempted motor vehicle and to provide that the label can only be removed after recall and installation of the airbag. If the vehicle is delivered to the dealer without an inflatable restraint the Secretary shall require that written notification of exemption be delivered to the dealer and first purchasers of such exempted motor vehicles in such manner and containing such information as the Secretary deems appropriate. The purpose of this notice requirement is to inform the dealer and the consumer once the vehicle has reached the showroom of the dealer. Such notice is not necessary if the exemption is granted for the vehicle, and the vehicle is not sold by the manufacturer to the dealer prior to installation of the airbag. The bill does not specify the contents of the label. However, the intent is to inform the prospective purchaser that the inflatable restraint is absent and will have to be installed within a specified period of time. It is, of course, the intention of the Conferees that, in the case of a label, it be conspicuous and that it not be removed by anyone until the restraint has been installed as required.

With respect to subsection (d), the Conferees, noting NHTSA's letter of November 7, 1991, do not want by this section to change the law on liability as it existed prior to enactment. This section is not intended to be a "sword" or a "shield" in litigation or otherwise.

Subsection (e) provides for the Secretary to report biannually on the actual effectiveness of occupant restraint systems.

Subsection (f) provides for the establishment of a program, consistent with applicable provisions of Federal procurement law and available appropriations, under which light duty vehicles acquired by the Federal Government, to the maximum extent practicable, will have driver and passenger-side airbags.

SECTION 2509—HEAD INJURY IMPACT STUDY

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Section 205 of the Senate amendment requires the Secretary, within 12 months of enactment, to issue a final rule amending Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standard (FMVSS) 214 to establish performance criteria for passenger cars, to provide improved occupant protection from head injury in a side impact crash.

The Senate notes that approximately 8,000 Americans die each year in side impact crashes, and approximately 23,000 suffer serious, nonfatal injuries. Thirty-five percent of the life-threatening automobile injuries occur in side crashes. After many years of work, NHTSA recently issued an upgraded side impact protection standard for passenger cars, to prevent injuries to the chest and pelvis in such crashes. The Senate notes that, at the same time, NHTSA indicated that it would continue its work to address head injury prevention in such crashes.

Conference substitute

The conferees understand that there are other head injury protection matters which are the subject of research at NHTSA and which are not covered by section 2503(5) of this bill. This could include head injury protection matters from various types of crashes, such as side impact.

This section of the bill directs the Secretary to report on the need for rulemaking regarding this research and the extent of that research. The report would be provided by the end of FY 1993 and would identify such research matters and their status. It would also include a statement of any actions planned by the DOT toward initiating rulemaking not later than FY 1994 or 1995. Such a rulemaking would be either an ANPRM or NPRM and would be completed as soon as possible after proposal.

AUTOMOBILE CRASHWORTHINESS DATA

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Section 206 of the Senate amendment required the Secretary to enter into agreements with the National Academy of Sciences to conduct a study, within specified time frames, to consider means of establishing a uniform rating system to permit consumers to compare the crashworthiness of different vehicles. Upon completion of the study, it is to be furnished to Congress, and the Secretary is to begin a period of public comment on the recommendations made in the study. The Secretary then shall determine whether such a crashworthiness rating system can be developed, and shall publish that determination. If it is determined that such a system can be developed, the Secretary is to conduct a rulemaking proceeding to develop such a rule within established time limits.

The Senate notes that the Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act currently requires DOT to compile crashworthiness information. However, the only such information available is obtained through random sampling in connection with NHTSA's New Car Assessment Program, and is not available at the vehicle's point of sale. The Senate notes that NHTSA studies indicate that prospective new car purchasers favor the idea of a Government safety rating. While a system that could compare all crashworthiness features with just one rating would be preferable and should be explored, the Senate amendment recognizes that a single rating may not be workable, and that a system of several ratings to indicate crashworthiness in various situations may be necessary. This section would permit either a single rating or multiple ratings.

Conference substitute

Senate recedes. The conferees believe that the development of such a system could be beneficial to consumers and encourage NHTSA to continue to work on providing vehicle purchasers usable, accurate, and timely crashworthiness information, taking into consideration all relevant factors in obtaining and disseminating such information.

INVESTIGATION AND PENALTY PROCEDURES

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Section 208 of the Senate amendment requires the Secretary to establish written guidelines for conducting expeditious and thorough investigations of noncompliance with any requirements issued under the Safety Act, which includes NHTSA safety standards and recall orders. The Secretary also is to develop written guidelines for determining when the results of such investigations shall be the subject of a civil penalty proceeding. This provision was based on recommendations in the 1986 GAO report previously referred to in connection with section 207 of the Senate amendment.

Conference substitute

Senate recedes.

MULTIPURPOSE PASSENGER VEHICLE SAFETY

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Section 209 of the Senate amendment requires that the Secretary complete, within 12 months of enactment, a rulemaking to review the classification system for safety purposes of vehicles that weigh under 10,000 pounds. The Senate notes that in the 1960s, NHTSA defined a number of vehicle classes, including a category referred to as multipurpose vehicles (MPVs) (less than 10,000 pounds and designed for carrying 10 persons or less, constructed either on a truck chassis or for occasional off-road operation). GAO recommended in 1978 that NHTSA review its system of classification of vehicles under 10,000 pounds. The Senate notes that since the original classification of passenger vehicles, the types of vehicles making up the passenger fleet have changed dramatically. The use patterns of multipurpose vehicles (MPVs) have changed from primarily cargo-carrying to primarily passenger-carrying. The Senate notes that there are differences between Customs Service classifications for duty purposes.and NHTSA classification for safety purposes.

The Senate notes that in 1988 NHTSA issued a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking to consider reclassification. NHTSA terminated this rulemaking proceeding in April 1991, finding that although there could be some benefits associated with a new classification scheme, reclassification was less important because many passenger car safety standards had been extended to light trucks. The Senate notes, however, as NHTSA recognizes, the current situation with respect to current safety standards does not resolve the classification issue for the future. The Senate amendment intends that classification review should be completed to insure that the current classifications are logical and accurate, and insure that future safety standards are applied appropriately across the fleet.

In addition, this section requires that any reclassification of vehicles weighing under 10,000 pounds which is undertaken must consider the Customs Service Classification of vehicles and, to the maximum extent practicable, include as a passenger automobile any vehicle classified by the Customs Service as a vehicle principally designed for the transport of persons. The Senate amendment recognizes that there currently is no coordination between NHTSA and Customs, and that vehicles receiving favorable duty treatment as passenger vehicles may not be required to meet passenger car safety standards. While it may not be practicable to conform NHTSA passenger automobile classification completely to the classification made by the Customs Service, it is the intent of this section to insure that NHTSA reviews the Customs classification in the course of its classification process.

Senate recedes.

IMPACT RESISTANCE CAPABILITY OF BUMPERS

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Section 212 of the Senate amendment establishes two requirements with respect to bumpers. Subsection 212(a) amends the Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act to require the Secretary to promulgate a rule regarding disclosure by the manufacturers of the speed at which the bumper meets the applicable Federal damage criteria. Such information must be provided to the Secretary and disseminated by the Secretary to consumers in a form to facilitate comparison among various vehicle types. Subsection 212(b) requires the Secretary to amend, within one year of enactment, the current standard for bumper impact capability, in order to return to the standard in effect on January 1, 1982. The current standard requires bumpers to withstand established levels of damage at impact speeds up to 2.5 miles per hour without damage to the safety features or the exterior sheet metal of the vehicle. The standard to be implemented requires the vehicle to withstand certain levels of damage at impact speeds up to 5 miles per hour.

Conference agreement

Senate recedes.

STATE MOTOR VEHICLE INSPECTION PROGRAMS

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Section 215 of the Senate amendment requires the Secretary to report regularly to Congress on its efforts to assist states and coordinate with EPA in establishing state motor vehicle inspection programs. The Senate notes that a recent GAO report, "Motor Vehicle Safety: NHTSA Should Resume Its Support of State Periodic Inspection Programs," found that such inspection programs reduce highway accident rates by reducing the number of poorly maintained vehicles. This section will allow Congress to monitor more effectively NHTSA's activities in this area.

Conference substitute

Senate recedes.

DARKENED WINDOWS

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Section 217 of the Senate amendment requires the Secretary to conduct a rulemaking to consider certain safety issues related to the use of dark tinted windows in passenger vehicles and the adequacy to current safety standards in this regard. The Senate notes that NHTSA completed a study of this issue in March 1991, and determined that rulemaking is appropriate. This section would insure that the rulemaking is completed in a timely fashion.

Conference substitute

Senate recedes.

GRANT PROGRAM CONCERNING USE OF SEATBELTS AND CHILD RESTRAINT SYSTEMS

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Section 218 of the Senate amendment establishes a grant program to encourage the states to increase the rate of seat belt usage among their citizens, and to educate their citizens about the proper use of child restraint systems. Grants would be available for a maximum of three fiscal years, to fund a declining percentage of the cost to states of their programs to achieve the required goals. Grants would be available to states that (1) have in effect mandatory seat belt use laws applicable to front seat passengers; (2) achieve either 70 percent seat belt usage by those passengers or a stated, and increasing, improvement over 1989 use rates; and (3) have in effect a program determined by the Secretary to encourage the correct use of child restraint systems.

Conference substitute

Senate recedes. A similar grant program is included in Title I of the conference report.

PEDESTRIAN SAFETY

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Section 220 of the Senate amendment required that NHTSA complete a rulemaking, within two years of enactment, to minimize pedestrian injury attributable to vehicle design elements such as hoods, hood ornaments, fenders and grills. The Senate notes that, according to NHTSA, almost 7,000 pedestrians are killed annually in the United States. Since 1981, NHTSA had done considerable research on reducing pedestrian injuries, and identifying sources of these injuries. This section would require that a rulemaking be conducted utilizing that research.

Conference substitute

Senate recedes.

DAYTIME RUNNING LIGHTS

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Section 221 of the Senate amendment required a rulemaking, to be completed within 12 months of enactment, to authorize passenger cars and MPVs to be equipped with daytime running lights. The Senate notes that some preliminary research in other countries has indicated that these lights reduce accidents. However, some state laws on headlight configuration have the effect of prohibiting the use of such lights. This section would allow their use. The section also requires that the Secretary report to the appropriate congressional committees, within two years of enactment, on the safety implications of these lights.

Conference substitute

Senate recedes. The conferees note that on August 12, 1991 NHTSA issued a notice or proposed rulemaking on the issue of whether manufacturers should be permitted to produce vehicles with daytime running lights despite state laws concerning headlight configuration.

HEADS-UP-DISPLAYS

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Section 223 of the Senate amendment required a rulemaking, to be completed within 12 months of enactment, to consider whether heads-up displays, which permit the driver to obtain information on speed, fuel level, and other instrument readings without looking down, should be required in cars and MPVs. The Senate notes that there is some information that such displays may reduce accidents by allowing the driver to keep his or her eyes on the road while obtaining instrument information. The rulemaking required by this section would not have to result in the issuance of a new or different performance standard or requirements. It is presumed, however, that NHTSA would establish such standard if its investigation showed that they were practicable, would meet the need for motor vehicle safety, and could be stated in objective terms.

Conference substitute

Senate recedes.

TITLE III—TRANSIT

House Bill

The House bill provides that unless specifically identified otherwise, all changes to existing law contained in the Act have been made to the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964 (49 U.S.C. App. 1601–1621).

Senate amendment

The Senate bill contains a similar provision.

Conference substitute

Senate recedes to House.

AGENCY NAME CHANGE

House bill

The House contains a provision that would rename the Urban Mass Transportation Administration (UMTA) as the Federal Transit Administration (FTA).

Senate amendment

Senate contained similar provision.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the House provision.

FINDINGS AND PURPOSES

House bill

No similar provision.

Senate bill

The Senate bill contained a provision not included in the House bill that would add a new finding that a significant improvement in public transportation is necessary to achieve national goals for improved air quality, energy conservation, international competitiveness and mobility for the elderly, persons with disabilities and the economically disadvantaged in urban and rural areas of the country.

This section would also amend Section 2(b) to state that an objective of the Act will be to provide State and local governments with financial resources to help implement the national goals related to improved air quality, international competitiveness and mobility for the elderly, persons with disabilities and economically disadvantaged persons.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the Senate provision which has been incorporated into Title I.

CAPITAL GRANTS—ELDERLY AND PERSONS WITH DISABILITIES

House bill

No similar provision.

Senate bill

The Senate bill contained a provision not included in the House bill that would amend Section 3 of the Act to allow public transit agencies to apply for capital funding under the Section 3 grant program for transportation projects that are specifically designed to meet the needs of elderly persons and persons with disabilities.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the Senate provision.

SECTION 3—PROGRAM ALLOCATIONS

House bill

The House bill contains a provision not included in the Senate bill that would allocate 10 percent of Section 3 funds for a minimum apportionment program which guarantees that each State will receive ½ of 1 percent of Mass Transit Account funds distributed annually. These funds may be used, at the discretion of the Governor of the state, for any highway or transit capital project eligible for Federal funding. The Federal share for minimum apportionment projects will be 80 percent, unless a lower Federal share in specified under title 23, United States Code.

Senate amendment

The Senate bill contained a provision not included in the House bill that would require the Secretary to allocate Section 3 grant funds in the following way: 40 percent for rail modernization; 40 percent for construction of new fixed guideway systems and extensions to fixed guideway systems; and 20 percent for the replacement, rehabilitation and purchase of buses and related equipment and the construction of bus-related facilities.

Conference substitute

House recede to Senate with an amendment to create a rural transit set aside of 5.5 percent of the 20 percent allocated for the replacement, rehabilitation and purchase of buses and bus related equipment and the construction of bus facilities.

ADVANCE CONSTRUCTION—TECHNICAL AMENDMENT RELATED TO INTEREST COST

House bill

No similar provision.

Senate bill

The Senate bill contained a provision not included in the House bill that would amend Section 3(l) to make the advance construction mechanism more workable by deleting language that requires grantees to bet on future inflation. The bill substitutes the requirement that operators obtain the most favorable interest terms reasonably available for the project at the time of borrowing.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the Senate provision with an amendment to ensure that operators use due diligence in obtaining the most favorable interest terms.

CAPITAL GRANTS—EARLY SYSTEMS WORK CONTRACTS

House bill

No similar provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate bill contained a provision not included in the House bill that would authorize the Secretary to enter into full funding contracts and early systems work agreements with applicants to provide for more efficient project management.

Conference substitute

The conference agreement includes the Senate provision with technical amendments.

TRANSIT DEFINITIONS

House bill

The House bill contains a provision not included in the Senate bill that makes the terms transit, public transportation and mass transportation synonymous.

Senate amendment

The Senate bill did not include a similar provision.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the House provision.

CAPITAL GRANT OR LOAN PROGRAM

House bill

No similar provision.

Senate bill

The Senate bill contained a provision not included in the House bill that would rename section 3 of the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964 to read "Capital Grant or Loan Program" rather than "Discretionary Grant or Loan Program".

Conference substitute

The conference report does not include the Senate provision.

SECTION 3—LETTER OF INTENT

House bill

The House bill contains a provision not included in the Senate bill that eliminates the letter of intent process currently used by the Secretary to make discretionary grants under the UMTA Section 3 program.

Senate amendment

No similar provision.

Conference substitute

House recede to Senate.

SECTION 3—INNOVATIVE TECHNIQUES

House bill

No similar provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate bill contained a provision not included in the House bill that would expand eligible activities under the section 3 discretionary program to include projects that introduce innovative techniques and methods to public transportation. This change merely codifies existing statute by incorporating language from section 4(i) into section 3.

Conference substitution

The conference report does not contain the Senate provision.

SECURITY GRANTS

House bill

The House bill contained a provision not included in the Senate bill that would set aside $10,000,000 annually from the section 3 bus discretionary program for projects which enhance transit security.

Senate bill

No similar provision.

Conference substitution

The conference report contains the House provision with an amendment to provide funding for transit security through the section 9 formula program rather than the section 3, a discretionary program. Section 9 recipients must spend 1 percent of their formula apportionment on transit security projects or certify to the Secretary that transit security needs are adequately met. Transit security would also be added as a factor for consideration in the development of transportation plans and programs.

SECTION 3—GRANDFATHERED JURISDICTIONS

House bill

No similar provision.

Senate bill

The Senate bill contained a provision not included in the House bill that would clarify that all existing letters of intent, full funding grant agreements and letter of commitment will remain in effect with passage of this Act.

Conference substitute

The conference agreement included the Senate provision.

MATCHING SHARES

House bill

The House bill contains a provision not included in the Senate bill that would increase the Federal share for projects under Section

3 of the UMT Act from 75 percent to 80 percent.

Senate bill

The Senate bill contained a provision not included in the House bill that would establish a higher federal match for those projects funded under sections 3, 9, 16(b), and 18 that involve the acquisition of bus-related equipment (e.g. lift equipment, particulate traps) or the construction of facilities (e.g. alternative fuels facilities) required by the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990 or the Americans with Disabilities Act. The federal match would be set at 90 percent of the cost of such equipment or facilities. The Secretary would determine the portion or portions of a project eligible for the higher federal match.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the House provision and the Senate provision with an amendment to also make vehicle-related equipment required by the Clean Air Act, as amended, or the Americans with Disabilities Act eligible for a 90 percent federal match.

PLANNING

House bill

Section 305 creates an intermodal transportation planning process by combining the fundamental requirements of highway and transit planning under sections 134 and 135 of title 23, United States Code.

Senate amendment

The Senate bill contains a similar provision.

The Conference agreement contains elements of both the House and Senate bills.

The conferees intend and expect that MPOs when developing long-range plans will cooperate with States and units of local government in outlying areas that are not yet urbanized but are included in the long-range plan since they are expected to become urbanized in the future.

Private Enterprise and MPO Certification

In accordance with this provision, localities shall be afforded wide flexibility in establishing criteria to be used in determining the "feasibility" of private involvement in local programs. However, nothing in this provision shall diminish the responsibility of the Secretary to encourage grantees of federally funded projects to provide for the maximum feasible participation of private enterprise in accordance with Section 8(e).

SECTION 9 PROGRAM

House bill

The House bill contains a provision not included in the Senate bill that would increase the share of formula grant funds allocated to urbanized areas of less than 200,000 population from 8.64 percent to 10 percent and consequently reduce the share of formula grant funds allocated to urbanized areas of 200,000 or more population from 88.43 percent to 85 percent.

The House bill would specifically extend the safety authority of the FTA to the Section 9 formula grant program.

The bill would redefine "materials and supplies" as associated capital maintenance items.

It provides that the operating assistance limitation imposed on urbanized areas under the section 9 formula grant program will be adjusted for inflation according to the Consumer Price Index of the most recent calendar year on October 1, 1991 and each year thereafter.

Senate bill

The Senate bill contained a provision not included in the House bill that would make several amendments to simplify the section 9 grant application process—particularly the existing requirements that recipients self-certify their compliance with various statutory mandates.

The bill would mandate that all certifications required by law be incorporated into a single document to be submitted annually as part of the Section 9 application. The subsection would also require the Secretary to publish an annual list of all required certifications in conjunction with its annual publication—currently required by Section 9(q)—of information outlining the apportionment of Section 9 funds.

The bill would require the Secretary to establish streamlined procedures to govern a recipient's "continuing control" certification with respect to track and signal equipment. Under existing law, a section 9 recipient is required to certify that it has or will have "satisfactory continuing control" over the use of its facilities and equipment. Transit operators have found that UMTA's interpretation of this requirement with respect to track and signal equipment imposes unnecessary administrative burdens on transit recipients.

The Senate bill contained a provision not included in the House bill that would amend section 9 to prevent a transit recipient that undertakes certain energy efficiency initiatives from losing formula funds.

The Senate bill contained a provision not included in the House bill that would apply Section 22 of the Federal Transit Act, which gives the Secretary investigatory powers to ensure safety in mass transit systems, to the section 9 program. The provision is necessary because of the requirement in section 9(e)(1) that only specified sections of the Federal Transit Act apply to section 9.

The conference report includes the Senate provisions with the following amendments. The share of formula grant funds allocated to urbanized areas of less than 200,000 population is increased from 8.65 percent to 9.32 percent; the share of formula funds for urbanized areas greater than 200,000 population is consequently reduced from 88.43 to 85.10.

The operating assistance limitation in current law would be adjusted for inflation based on the consumer price index, but such increase could not be greater than the increase in the section 9 appropriations from the previous fiscal year.

Energy Efficiency

"The conferees expect that the FTA will adhere to the energy efficiency policy in this legislation. Grantees are deemed in compliance with this policy should they operate shorter trains during certain time periods in order to achieve energy and operating efficiencies."

Security Grants

"The conferees agree that eligible projects include safety communications equipment, as well as, the design and construction of safety and security facilities located on transit system premises."

SECTION 9 PROGRAM—ELIMINATION OF INCENTIVE TIER

House bill

No similar provision.

Senate bill

The Senate bill contained a provision not included in the House bill that would eliminate the "incentive tier" provisions of the section 9 bus and rail funding formulas.

Conference substitute

The conference report does not include the Senate provision.

SECTION 9 PROGRAM—PROGRAM OF PROJECTS

House bill

No similar provision.

Senate bill

The Senate bill contained a provision not included in the House bill that would require a recipient, in developing its program of projects, to assure that the program provides for the maximum feasible coordination of public transportation services assisted under the section 9 program with transportation services assisted by other federal sources. A similar provision currently is in Section 18 of the Act.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the Senate provision with an amendment to delete the words "maximum feasible."

MODIFIED BUS SERVICE

House bill

The House bill contained a provision not included in the Senate bill that would allow "tripper service" to accommodate the needs of students in New York City.

Senate bill

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the House provision with a modification to define express bus service to include special school bus service intended to alleviate pressure on regularly scheduled local bus service.

USE OF POPULATION ESTIMATES AND CENSUS DATA

House bill

The House bill did not include a similar provision.

Senate bill

The Senate bill contained a provision not included in the House bill that would require more frequent updates of the population statistics used to distribute funds under Section 18 and Section 9 for small urbanized areas. Under current law, all UMTA formula programs use population statistics from the most recently available Federal Census. This section would require the Secretary to use interim population estimates provided by the Secretary of Commerce to update the formulas every four years.

The Senate bill also contained a provision not included in the House bill that would require the Secretary to use data from the 1990 census, to the extent practicable, in determining allocation of funds under Sections 9, 16(b)(2) and 18 for fiscal year 1992. The Secretary of Transportation and the Secretary of Commerce would be required to coordinate efforts to expedite the availability of census data in a form that is appropriate for the transit program formulas. The Secretary of Transportation must notify the Congressional authorizing Committees of actions taken under this section within 9 months of enactment of the Federal Transit Act.

Conference substitute

The conference agreement contained the Senate provision with an amendment to drop the use of the 1990 Census to the extent practicable for fiscal year 1992 and limiting the use of interim estimates to the Section 16(b)(2) and 18 programs.

FORMULA GRANT PROGRAM—DISCRETIONARY TRANSFER OF APPORTIONMENT

House bill

The House bill would allow the Governor of a state to transfer 25 percent of the funds allocated to that state for expenditure in urbanized areas of less than 200,000 population under the section 9 program to any other transportation purpose eligible for Federal funding under title 23, United States Code, and an additional 10 percent if transit services are being adequately maintained in those areas.

The House bill would also allow the Governor of a state to transfer 25 percent of the funds allocated to that state for expenditure in rural areas under the section 18 program to any other transportation purpose eligible for Federal funding under title 23, United States Code, and an additional 10 percent if transit services are being adequately maintained in those areas.

Senate bill

The Senate bill would provide that, in a transportation management area, formula grants for construction projects could also be used for highway projects; provided that (i) such use is approved by the metropolitan planning organization in accordance with section 8(c) after appropriate notice and opportunity for comment and appeal is provided to affected transit providers, (ii) adequate provision is first made for any program of investments required to comply with the Americans with Disabilities Act and (iii) funds for the State or local government share of the project are eligible to fund either highway or transit projects, or the Secretary finds that State or local law provides a dedicated source of sufficient funding available to fund local transit projects.

Conference substitute

The conference report contains the Senate provision with an amendment to remove the Secretary's authority to certify that sufficient funding is available to fund transit projects.

SPECIAL PROCUREMENT

House bill

The House bill contains a provision that would permit the use of "turnkey" procurement in the award of grants for the construction of new transit systems. A "turnkey system project" is defined as one in which a grant recipient contracts with a consortium of firms, an individual firm(s), or a vendor to build a transit system that meets specific performance criteria and which is operated by the vendor for a period of time. Multiyear rolling stock procurements are also specifically permitted.

Senate amendment

The Senate bill contained a similar provision.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the House provision with an amendment to ensure that the Secretary must allow at least two projects to pursue turnkey system procurements, and to require the Secretary to consider any other projects using turnkey procurement in the development of regulations. The report also includes a provision to allow transit grantees to select other than the lowest bidder if such selection furthers objectives which are consistent with the purposes of this Act, such as improved long term operating efficiency and lower long term costs.

RULEMAKING

House bill

No comparable provision.

Senate bill

The Senate bill would require the Secretary to use the notice-and-comment rulemaking process on a range of significant Federal Transit Administration policy issues but would not require the process to be followed in the case of emergency rules, routine matters, or matters of insignificant impact.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the Senate provision. The conferees do not intend that the Secretary publish all of the Federal Transit Administration's instructions or routine requirements as rulemakings. Examples of matters not subject to the rulemaking process include the issuance or revision of grant application circulars, such as those for the section 9 or 18 programs, letters of explanation or interpretation of regulations or policies in response to requests from Members of Congress or the public, internal procedures on administrative issues, and other routine managerial and program issues.

TRANSFER OF FACILITIES AND EQUIPMENT

House bill

The House bill contains a provision not included in the Senate bill that would allow the transfer of capital assets acquired with Federal assistance, which are no longer needed for the purpose for which they were acquired, to any public purpose, provided that the Secretary determines that certain conditions regarding the value and use of the assets have been met.

Senate bill

The Senate bill included a similar provision. The Senate bill also included a provision to allow a similar transfer of assets between the section 18 and section 16 programs.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the House provision and the Senate provision for transfer of assets under section 18 and section 16.

ELDERLY AND PERSONS WITH DISABILITIES

House bill

The House bill would permit the use of section 16(b) funds for operating expenses. Also, transit service providers receiving assistance under sections 16 or 18 may coordinate and assist in providing meal delivery service for homebound persons on a regular basis if providing the meal service does not conflict with the provision of transit service or result in a reduction of service to transit passengers.

Senate bill

The Senate bill contained a provision not included in the House bill that would clarify existing FTA practice by specifying that funds provided under the Section 16(b)(2) program will be allocated to the States, who in turn will distribute funds to eligible private non-profit organizations. States would submit a program of projects to the Secretary for approval as is current practice. The section also requires an assurance that the State's program of projects provides for the coordination of Section 16(b)(2) transportation services with transportation services assisted from other Federal sources. This provision is designed to encourage more effective coordination and to avoid duplication of service.

In addition, the section would authorize assistance to public bodies that are approved by a State to coordinate transportation services for elderly persons and persons with disabilities. This provision is designed to support the efforts of States attempting to coordinate transportation services.

The Senate bill would allow the Governor of each State to use any funds that remain unobligated from the Section 16(b)(2) program during the final 90 day period prior to the expiration of the grant to be used to supplement funds distributed under either the Section 18 program or the Section 9 program.

The Senate bill would also require the Secretary to issue regulations to allow recipients of 16(b)(2) funds to lease their equipment to public transit entities. The section specifies that the regulations shall be issued within 60 days of enactment of the bill.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the Senate provisions with an amendment to clarify that public bodies are eligible for capital funding under Section 16(b)(2) only if they certify to the Governor that no non-profit corporations are readily available in an area to provide transportation for elderly persons and persons with disabilities. The conference report includes a provision to allow eligible capital expenses to include the acquisition of transportation services under a contract, lease or other arrangement. The report includes the House provision regarding meal delivery service for homebound persons.

ELIGIBILITY STUDY

House bill

The House bill contains a provision not included in the Senate bill that requires the Secretary to conduct a study on the eligibility requirements of individuals with disabilities for off-peak reduced transit fares.

Senate amendment

The Senate bill did not include a similar provision.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the House provision.

E&H FUNDS FOR PENNSYLVANIA

House bill

Section 329 sets aside an additional $1,000,000 in Section 9 and 18 funds in FY 1992 for the State of Pennsylvania for elderly and handicapped transportation services.

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The conference report does not include the House provision.

INTERCITY BUS TRANSPORTATION

House bill

The House bill contains a provision not included in the Senate bill that would provide that, before apportioning section 18 funds, the Secretary shall set aside $20,000,000 for intercity bus transportation.

Senate amendment

The Senate bill did not include a similar provision.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the House provision with an amendment to set aside funds for intercity bus service from each State's apportioned section 18 funds rather than provide a discretionary set-aside from the total program. A State would be required to spend 5% of its section 18 allocation in fiscal year 1992, 10% in fiscal year 1993 and 15% in fiscal year 1994 and all years thereafter, for the development of an intercity bus program unless it certifies to the Secretary that the State's intercity bus needs have been adequately met relative to other rural needs in the State.

GAO STUDY ON PUBLIC TRANSIT NEEDS

House bill

The House bill contains a provision requiring the Secretary, beginning in January 1993 and biennially thereafter, to report to the Congress a comprehensive estimate of the future transit needs of the nation, including an assessment of the impact of the transferability of transit funds to highway projects.

Senate bill

The Senate bill contained a similar provision that would require the General Accounting Office, on a biennial basis, to submit a report to Congress that evaluates the extent to which the nation's transit needs are being adequately addressed. The report would include (1) an analysis of the unmet needs for transit; (2) a projection of the maintenance and modernization needs that will accrue over the coming five years as existing transit equipment and facilities deteriorate; and (3) a projection of the need to invest in additional transit facilities over the coming five years to meet changing economic, commuter and residential patterns. The report would also estimate (1) the cost of meeting the needs identified above; (2) the public and private resources that will be available to support public transit; and (3) the gap between transit needs and resources.

Conference substitution

The Conference Agreement contains the Senate provision requiring the General Accounting Office to conduct a comprehensive study on total funding needs for public transit systems as well as a study on the effects of shifting transit funds to highway projects.

ENGINEERING AND DESIGN SERVICES

House Bill

The House contains a provision not included in the Senate bill that would allow the use of indirect cost rates established in accordance with Federal acquisitions regulations in the performance of, or auditing of, FTA grants.

Senate bill

No simillar provision.

Conference substitute

Recede to Senate.

SAFETY CONDITIONS IN MASS TRANSIT

House bill

The House bill included a provision not in the Senate bill that would require states to establish and implement a safety program for fixed guideway transit systems and require the Secretary to withhold transit funds if the State does not comply with the provisions of the section.

Senate bill

The Senate bill contained a provision not included in the House bill that would require the Secretary to submit a report to Congress within 180 days of enactment on the safety of mass transit. The report would include a summary of all passenger-related and employee-related deaths and injuries resulting from unsafe conditions in mass transit facilities. The report would also include a summary of the investigative and remedial actions taken by the Secretary in accordance with the authority provided by Section 22. Finally, the report would make recommendations concerning any legislative or administrative actions that are necessary to ensure that recipients of federal funds will institute the best means available to correct or eliminate safety hazards.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the Senate provision and the House provision with an amendment to limit the ability of the Secretary to withhold transit funds.

AWARD AUDITS

The House bill contains a provision not included in the Senate bill.

House bill

Section 310 clarifies Congressional intent regarding pre-award and post-award audits of rolling stock purchases.

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The conference report does not contain either provision.

M ACCOUNT

House bill

The House bill contains a provision not included in the Senate bill.

Preserves the availability of M account balances available as of August 1, 1991.

Senate amendment

No similar provision.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the House provision.

PROJECT MANAGEMENT OVERSIGHT

House bill

No comparable provision.

Senate bill

The Senate bill contained a provision not included in the House bill that would increase the percentage of funds reserved for FTA's project management oversight program. The current ½ percent takedown of all funds available to carry out sections 3, 9, 18, interstate transfer projects, and the National Capital Transportation Act (authorizing legislation for D.C. Metro) would be increased to ¾ percent. A technical restriction would be removed that currently limits the use of these "takedowns" from each eligible program to projects funded under that same particular section. Instead, FTA could aggregate all of these funds for use on projects in any of the eligible programs.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the Senate provision with an amendment to limit the increase to ¾ percent set-aside to section 3 projects at the discretion of the Secretary.

PLANNING AND RESEARCH

House bill

Section 317 establishes a combined planning and research program under a new section 26. Of the funds made available annually, one-third is available to the Secretary to make grants under sections 6, 8, 10, 11(a), 18(h), or 20.

The remaining two-thirds is available to the states and metropolitan planning organizations for transit-related planning under sections 134 and 135 of title 23, United States Code.

Senate amendment

The Senate bill included a similar provision with a different funding structure.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the Senate provision with an amendment to add several research demonstration projects.

The suspended Light Rail System Technology Pilot Project should be administered and implemented by the Federal Transit Administration Office of Technology Assistance and Safety with normal oversight and control by the Office of the Administrator.

The conferees want to make clear their intentions with regard to the transit cooperative research program under Section 317(a) of the House bill and under Section 341 of the Senate bill. It is our intention, as specified under an understanding between UMTA and the transit industry and as outlined in the Floor statement of Public Works and Transportation Chairman Roe, that the Transit Development Corporation be designated as the independent governing board that determines what research and related activities are carried out. In interpreting the statutory language it is the conference committee's expectation that this independent governing board will have the authority to provide its own staffing and that UMTA will pay for such expenses. In addition, while the conferees envision that the Transportation Research Board, under the National Academy of Sciences will conduct the research projects designated by the Transit Development Corporation, they expect that the Transit Development Corporation and the American Public Transit Association will have the opportunity to disseminate the results of such research and that UMTA will support such dissemination costs.

CHARTER SERVICE DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM

House bill

No comparable provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate bill contained a provision that would require GAO to conduct a study on charter service regulation.

Conference substitute

The GAO charter service regulation study is amended to include a demonstration program. In response to the concerns expressed by local transit operators regarding the existing charter service regulation, the Conferees have mandated the Secretary to implement an alternative set of regulations in not more than four states that would permit transit operators to provide charter services.

These regulations should be designed to enable public transit operators to provide charter services to government, civic, charitable and other community organizations that serve a public purpose and help address unmet transit needs. It is intended that these regulations will grant public transit operators with additional flexibility that is not afforded under the existing charter services regulations, but will to the maximum extent feasible, not create undue competition for privately owned charter services.

It is the desire of the Conferees to ensure that the regulations provide proper balance between the interests of public and private operators. Thus, in developing the regulations, the Secretary will be required to consult with an advisory board which has equal representation of public transit operators and privately owned charter services.

The Conferees intend to throughly monitor the demonstration program and to review the results of the study carefully during consideration of the interim surface transportation bill.

The Conferees believe this demonstration program will provide Congress and the Secretary with information to determine: (1) the most effective methods for providing charter services to local communities; and (2) whether the current regulations are in need of modification. The Conferees recommend that the Secretary select the state of Michigan as a participant in the program.

EFFECTIVE DATE

House bill

Section 331 sets an effective date of October 1, 1991 for the Act.

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The conference report does not include the House provision.

BUDGET COMPLIANCE

House bill

Section 332 ensures compliance with budgetary guidelines.

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the House provision with a conforming amendment.

House bill

The House bill contains a provision not included in the Senate bill that would allow the New Jersey Transit Corporation to apply Petroleum Violation Escrow Account (PVEA) Funds as a credit toward the non-Federal match of transit projects.

Senate bill

The Senate bill did not include a similar provision.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the House provision.

FORGIVENESS OF OBLIGATION

House bill

The House bill would forgive the balance on a grant agreement made to the Fayetteville Transit Authority.

The House bill would extend the period by which the Southeastern Pennsylvania Transit Authority (SEPTA) must repay certain loans to UMTA by 10 years.

Senate bill

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the House provision with an amendment to forgive the SEPTA loan.

MILWAUKEE ALTERNATIVES ANALYSIS

House bill

Section 333 requires the Secretary to approve the undertaking of an alternatives analysis for the East-West Central Milwaukee Corridor.

Senate amendment

The Senate bill did not include a similar provision.

Conference substitute

Conference agreement included the House provision.

House bill

The House bill would allow the New Jersey Transit Corporation to apply Petroleum Violation Escrow Account (PVEA) Funds as a credit toward the non-Federal match of transit projects.

The House bill would provide an additional $4,000,000 to the Niagara Frontier Transit Authority for service associated with the 1993 World University Games.

The House bill would increase the operating assistance limitation for the Staten Island Ferry by $2,700,000 in FY 1992.

Senate amendment

The Senate bill would amend the Surface Transportation and Uniform Relocation Assistance Act of 1987 Act to permit a commuter rail line (Tri-County Rail Authority) in south-eastern Florida to continue to receive federal operating assistance under section 9.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the House and Senate provisions.

PETROLEUM VIOLATION ESCROW ACCOUNT FUNDS

House bill

The House bill would allow the New Jersey Transit Corporation to apply Petroleum Violation Escrow Account (PVEA) Funds as a credit toward the non-Federal match of transit projects.

OPERATINO ASSISTANCE

The House bill would provide an additional $4,000,000 to the Niagara Frontier Transit Authority for service associated with the 1993 World University Games.

The House bill would increase the operating assistance limitation for the Staten Island Ferry by $2,700,000 in FY 1992.

Senate amendment

The Senate bill would amend the Surface Transportation and Uniform Relocation Assistance Act of 1987 Act to permit a commuter rail line (Tri-County Rail Authority) in south-eastern Florida to continue to receive federal operating assistance under section 9.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the House and Senate provisions.

FORGIVENESS OF OBLIGATION

House bill

The House bill would forgive the balance on a grant agreement made to the Fayetteville Transit Authority.

The House bill would extend the period by which the Southeastern Pennsylvania Transit Authority (SEPTA) must repay certain loans to UMTA by 10 years.

Senate bill

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the House provision with an amendment to forgive the SEPTA loan.

MILWAUKEE ALTERNATIVES ANALYSIS

House bill

Section 333 requires the Secretary to approve the undertaking of an alternatives analysis for the East-West Central Milwaukee Corridor.

Senate amendment

The Senate bill did not include a similar provision.

Conference substitute

The conference agreement included the House provision.

SECTION 3—NEW STARTS

House bill

The House bill included provisions that would require all new start projects to be authorized in statute in order to receive funds. The bill would require FTA to submit to Congress annually a report on new starts.

Senate bill

The Senate bill included provisions not included in the House bill that would revise the new starts criteria and project development process.

Conference substitute

The conference report contains provisions from both the House and Senate bills.

The Conferees want to make clear that, in establishing guidelines for construction of new fixed guideway systems or extensions to such systems, the Act's directive that the "degree of local financial commitment shall be considered acceptable only if—"(ii) each proposed local source of capital and operating funding is stable, reliable, and available within the proposed project timetable;" shall not prevent funding for projects for which there is a reasonable expectation of local funding. The conferees expect that the guidelines would include among the types of financial commitment that constitute an acceptable degree of local financing, state and local tax levies or assessments, annual state or local general fund appropriations, anticipated bond revenues, in kind contributions, and other possible funding sources.

3(C)(iii)—The Conferees want to make clear that, in establishing guidelines for construction of new fixed guideway systems or extensions to such systems, the Act's directive that the "degree of local financial commitment shall be considered acceptable only if—"local resources are available to operate the overall proposed transit system (including essential feeder bus and other services necessary to achieve the projected ridership levels) without requiring a reduction in existing transit services in order to operate the proposed project" shall not prevent funding for projects where such proposed projects would provide a substantially similar level of existing transit service. The conferees do not intend such guidelines to prevent initiation of fixed guideway projects that would provide a level of service similar to that already provided through other means.

NEW JERSEY URBAN CORE PROJECT

House bill

The House bill would prescribe terms and conditions which the Secretary must include in a full funding grant agreement for the construction of the New Jersey Urban Core Project.

Senate amendment

The Senate bill did not include a similar provision.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the House provision.

SAN FRANCISCO BAY AREA RAIL EXTENSION PROGRAM

House bill

The House bill would prescribe terms and conditions which the Secretary must include in a full funding grant agreement for the construction of an extension of BART to the San Francisco International Airport and for the construction of the locally preferred alternative for the Tasman Corridor Light Rail Project.

Senate amendment

The Senate bill did not include a similar provision.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the House provision.

MULTI-YEAR METRO RAIL CONTRACT

House bill

The House bill would prescribe terms and conditions which the Secretary must include in a multi-year grant agreement for the construction of planned extensions to the Metro Rail Rapid Transit System in Loa Angeles, California.

Senate amendment

The Senate bill did not include a similar provision.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the House provision.

MISCELLANEOUS MULTI-YEAR CONTRACTS

House bill

The House bill would prescribe terms and conditions which the Secretary must include in various multi-year grant agreements for specified transit projects.

Senate amendment

The Senate bill did not include a similar provision.

Conference substitute

The conference report includes the House provision with amendments.

The conferees expect the Connecticut Department of Transportation to continue to designate the Penquonnock (Peck) River Railroad Bridge project as a high priority project to be completed within available funds. The conferees concurrently direct the federal Urban Mass Transportation Administration, in acting on the Connecticut Department of Transportation's funding request for the Peck Bridge project, to take account of the importance the conferees place on the completion of this project for the state of Connecticut and the proper functioning of the entire Northeast rail corridor.

The managers direct that $250,000 of the funds made available under section 3 be used to initiate an analysis of the possible route, options and incremental phases for assistance necessary for a rail connection between North Station and South Station in Boston, Massachusetts.

This study should include an operating analysis, taking into consideration the option of connecting such service with existing or proposed rail services to and from Boston, including the connection's capability of meeting the regional, intrastate and interstate transportation demands.

This study should include an engineering and financial analysis, taking into consideration a regional commuter railroad service, Massachusetts intercity service and/Amtrak interstate service. UMTA is responsible for the overall study, but should conduct it in coordination, as deemed necessary, with the Federal Railroad Administration, Amtrak, private freight lines and regional transportation authorities.

The study is intended only as an assessment of feasibility, but shall include recommendations for possible federal assistance. This analysis shall be of rail link separate and distinct from the Boston Central Artery/Third Harbor Tunnel project and the Federal Highway Administration.

Of the funds authorized to be appropriated under this Act, the conferees intend that $750,000 be provided to assist the Research Triangle Regional Public Transportation Authority with a regional transit planning study to identify transportation system deficiencies, possible solutions, and evaluate transit technology alternatives.

TITLE IV—MOTOR CARRIER ACT OF 1991

House bill

SECTION 401, SHORT TITLE

This title may be cited as the "Motor Carrier Act of 1991".

Senate amendment

This part may be cited as the Motor Carrier Safety Assistance Program Reauthorization Act of 1991.

Conference substitute

Retains the House title.

Motor Carrier Safety Assistance Program Amendments

House bill

Amends section 402 of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982. The principal changes affect the purposes and goals of the program and the plan that must be submitted by the states participating in the program.

Subsection (a) permits new activities to be initiated in this program. It further provides that state plans must ensure that these new activities will not diminish other aspects of the program. In addition, subsection (a) requires the plan to ensure that fines imposed and collected will be reasonable and appropriate, and that the program will be coordinated with the state highway safety plan under section 402 of Title 23 of the United States Code.

Subsection (b) requires that the states initiating these new efforts must maintain current support for their programs for enforcement of size and weight laws, controlled substance laws and traffic law enforcement laws.

Subsection (c) amends the program to allow states to begin certain new activities and to incorporate these activities into their respective programs. States may incorporate motor vehicle size and weight enforcement, controlled substance interdiction activities, and enforcement of state traffic laws. The size and weight enforcement activities under this program must be directed at weighing vehicles at other than fixed-site weighing stations. The activities can include weighing activities at seaports and at locations such as steep grades or mountainous terrains where weight may cause more acute safety problems. These activities can be carried out only in conjunction with principal activity of this program; namely, roadside safety inspections.

Subsection (d) establishes funding levels for the Motor Carrier Safety Assistance Program established under section 404 of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982. The levels are $65 million for fiscal year 1992, $80 million for fiscal year 1993, and $100 million per fiscal year for fiscal years 1994, 1995, and 1996.

Subsection (e) provides that grants made under the program will be available to the states for three years, rather than for one year.

Subsection (f) provides that funds made available for this program are now available until expended.

Subsection (g) provides that the Secretary may use one percent rather than one-half of one percent for administrative purposes.

Subsection (h) provides earmarking of funds for training roadside inspectors in the hazardous materials regulations, for making grants to states to adopt uniform accident reporting forms for truck and bus accidents, for research, for essential administrative functions, for public education, and for several specified reports.

Subsection (i) authorizes appropriations for carrying out the motor carrier safety functions of the Federal Highway Administration.

Subsection (j) lists a number of reports which the Secretary is required to make. The reports are to be funded at $150,000.00 per year for fiscal years 1992 and 1993.

Senate amendment

This section amends Chapter 4 of title 23 of the U.S. Code by adding a new section 411. Subsection (a) of this new section authorizes the Secretary to make grants to eligible States for the enforcement of Federal or compatible State commercial motor vehicle safety rules, regulations, standards, and orders, as well as State and local traffic safety laws and regulations.

Subsection (b) of this new section requires the Secretary to formulate procedures for a State to use when submitting its annual Motor Carrier Assistance Program plan. This section requires States to adopt and assume responsibility for enforcing Federal motor carrier safety rules, regulations, standards, and orders, including vehicle size and weight requirements and commercial motor vehicle alcohol and controlled substances awareness and enforcement (including interdiction of illegal shipments), or compatible State rules in these areas. This new section provides the Secretary with discretion to approve State plans which designate a lead State agency responsible for administering the plan, ensure qualified personnel and adequate funds to administer the plan, provide a right of entry and inspection and that the State will grant maximum reciprocity for inspections conducted pursuant to the North American inspection standard, provide for the adoption of uniform reporting requirements and use of uniform recordkeeping and inspection forms, ensure participation in databases on drivers, vehicle inspections, and driver compliance with traffic safety laws and regulations, and ensure that size and weight inspection activities will not diminish other safety initiatives. Additionally, this new section requires that a State plan give satisfactory assurances that the State would conduct effective activities in the area of drug and alcohol enforcement, provide training to Motor Carrier Assistance Program officials and employees in drug recognition techniques, promote Commercial Drivers' License enforcement, ensure adequate enforcement of traffic safety, improve the enforcement of hazardous materials transportation regulations by encouraging more inspections of shipper facilities and vehicle loads, promote drug interdiction activities, and attempt to ensure that fines imposed and collected by the State will be reasonable and that the State will seek to implement the recommended fine schedule published by the Commercial Vehicle Safety Alliance.

In the areas of commercial motor vehicle safety and drug and weight enforcement, this new section specifies that a State maintain an average of the expenditures for the last three years, exclusive of Federal funds or State matching funds, in order to receive Program funds for these purposes. If a State chooses to use Program funds for weight enforcement, a State must couple that enforcement with a safety inspection and conduct enforcement at locations other than fixed-weight facilities, such as at specific geographic locations, or on containers being loaded or unloaded at seaports.

Each fiscal year, this new section allows the Secretary to deduct up to 1.25 percent of the funds available for the administration of the Program, of which 75 percent is to be used for the training of non-Federal employees and development of training material. In order for this plan to be approved, a State must maintain a level of motor carrier safety expenditures which does not fall below an average of the previous 3 fiscal years, exclusive of Federal funds and State matching funds required to receive Federal funds. Funds made available to a State are to remain available for the fiscal year in which they were allocated and one succeeding fiscal year. If not expended by a State during those 2 years, the Secretary is to reallocate these funds. This section provides funding for the Motor Carrier Assistance Program at levels not to exceed $70 million in fiscal year 1993, $75 million in fiscal year 1994, $80 million in fiscal year 1995, and $85 million in fiscal year 1996.

Funding is increased to take into account inflationary costs that will raise the cost of the Program's current inspection and audit work. In addition, the new section's funding level recognizes the need for increased traffic-related enforcement efforts (not less than $7.5 million to be spent for this purpose annually, beginning in fiscal year 1993). The new section requires that each of the States should use Program funds to improve their existing traffic safety enforcement programs affecting operators of commercial motor vehicles, and therefore, each of the States should receive an appropriate portion of the earmarked funds.

Finally, section 2(b) of the bill amends the existing Motor Carrier Assistance Program provisions of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982. Under that amendment, funding of $65,000,000 is allocated for fiscal year 1982 and is not subject to the new State plan requirements. A State may, however, resubmit its fiscal year 1992 State enforcement plans and seek reimbursement for any of the new activities required in fiscal year 1993.

The Conference substitute on the funding levels for the Motor Carrier Safety Assistance Program established under Section 404 of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act are $65 million for fiscal year 1992, $76 million for fiscal year 1993, $80 million for fiscal year 1994, $83 million for fiscal year 1995, $85 million for fiscal year 1996, and $90 million for fiscal year 1997.

The substitute retained the general structure of the House bill. The substitute permits new activities to be initiated in this program. It further provides that state plans must ensure that these new activities will not diminish other aspects of the program. In addition, subsection (a) requires the plan to ensure that fines imposed and collected will be reasonable and appropriate, that the program will be coordinated with the state highway safety plan under section 402 of Title 23 of the United States Code, and that the 48 contiguous states participate in SAFETYNET by January 1, 1994.

The substitute allows states to begin certain new discretionary activities and to incorporate these activities into their respective programs. States may incorporate motor vehicle size and weight enforcement, controlled substance interdiction activities, and enforcement of state traffic laws. The size and weight enforcement activities under this program must be directed at weighing vehicles at other than fixed-site weighing stations. The activities can include weighing activities at seaports and at locations such as steep grades or mountainous terrains where weight may cause more acute safety problems. These activities can be carried out only in conjunction with principal activity of this program; namely roadside safety inspections.

The substitute requires that the states initiating these new efforts must maintain current support for their programs for enforcement of size and weight laws, controlled substance laws and traffic law enforcement.

The substitute retains slightly altered House provision on the commercial motor vehicle information system, the truck and bus accident data grant program and the common carriers providing transportation for charitable purposes. It also incorporates amended language on the provisions in the Senate bill dealing with research and development, public education, and the new allocation formula. The Senate provisions on violations of out-of-service orders, intrastate compatibility, and FHWA positions are incorporated into the Conference Substitute.

The conferees expect that local governments receiving motor carrier assistance program funds from the States will continue their existing motor carrier safety and combined motor carrier safety and associated traffic enforcement efforts and use MCSAP funds to supplement their existing efforts.

Commercial Motor Vehicle Information System

Section 403 amends Part A of title IV of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 by adding a new section 407.

New subsection 407(a) empowers the Secretary to review state motor vehicle registration systems for license tags in order to determine if such systems could be utilized in establishing a Commercial Motor Vehicle Information System. The system established by the Secretary should be designed to link state registration systems to the Department of Transportation's Safetynet System which contains essential data on the safety fitness of interstate motor carriers. The system is to be maintained by user fees.

The Commercial Motor Vehicle Information System could be operated by the Secretary, by a state or states, or a third party. Uniform data collection and reporting by all states would be required.

New subsection 407(b) provides that as part of the development of this program, the Secretary is empowered to carry out a pilot project with states in order to determine how to provide the needed linkage of the relevant systems and to determine types of sanctions which might be imposed on registrants to ensure safety compliance.

New subsection 407(c) authorizes the Secretary to issue regulations to implement this section.

New subsection 407(d) provides the funding necessary to carry out this section as provided in section 404(g)(2) of this title. The Secretary is provided $2 million per fiscal year for fiscal years 1992–1996 for carrying out the pilot project. The money is from the Motor Carrier Safety Assistance Program.

New subsection 407(e) defines a commercial motor vehicle for the purpose of this section.

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The House bill, with one additional provision. The provision is that the Secretary of the Department of Transportation should prepare and submit a report assessing the costs, benefits, and feasibility of such a system. The report should include legislative recommendations on the nationwide implementation of such system, if the Secretary finds that such a nationwide system would be beneficial.

Truck and Bus Accident Data Grant Program

House bill

Section 404 amends Part A of title IV of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 by adding a new section 408.

New subsection 408(a) authorizes the Secretary to make grants to states to assist them in adopting and implementing uniform reporting of accident data for trucks and buses.

New subsection 408(b) provides that grants may be made for assisting states in designing appropriate forms, in preparing instruction manuals, in training state and local officers, and for such other activities as are determined to be appropriate.

New subsection 408(c) requires the Secretary to coordinate grants made under this section with the highway safety programs under section 402 of title 23 U.S.C.

Under new subsection 408(d), the Secretary is authorized to make grants of up to $3 million per year for fiscal years 1993 through 1996.

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The House bill, with several changes. The funding level is changed to $2 million per fiscal year for fiscal years 1993 through 1997. Another change adds training language pertaining to accident investigation techniques. Finally, it permits grant money to be used for analyzing and evaluating safety data.

Single State Registration System

Amends section 11506 of title 49 U.S.C.

Subsection 406(a) provides that effective January 1, 1994 states are prohibited from requiring motor carriers regulated by the Interstate Commerce Commission to file certificates or permits with the states in which they operate. It further eliminates the requirements for displaying a decal to indicate the possession of such a permit or certificate or the collection of a fee for such registration or decals.

States may continue the practice of requiring motor carriers to file and maintain proof of insurance.

Subsection 406(b) authorizes the Secretary to make grants to states to offset revenues lost as a result of subsection (a). A state is eligible if it had imposed and collected fees in 1991. The funding is established at $50 million for fiscal year 1994. Reimbursement is for one year only.

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

Section 405 repeals, effective January 1, 1994, the "bingo stamp" program authorized by Congress in 1965 through enactment of P.L. 89–170. The bingo stamp program allowed states to require interstate carriers to register their interstate operating authority with the state and charge a fee for doing so. The interstate carrier then received identification or "bingo" stamps from the state. Currently, 39 states require interstate carriers to carry such a stamp in the cab of each commercial motor vehicle operating within its borders.

The bingo stamp program authorized by P.L. 89–170 has been characterized as inefficient and has been an administrative burden on the trucking industry and the states. The trucking industry estimates that the program costs interstate carriers up to $250 million per year. Meanwhile, the 39 participating states collect only about $50 million under the program. The repeal of the bingo stamp program under Section 405 is intended to benefit the interstate carriers by eliminating unnecessary compliance burdens. It is the hope of the Conferees that, ultimately, consumers will also benefit from the cost savings associated with the elimination of the bingo program.

In order to preserve revenues for the states which had participated in the bingo program, Section 405 establishes a new annual fee system enabling such states to continue to collect funds from interstate motor carriers. The fee is based upon the carrier's filing of proof of required liability insurance. Fee revenues under this system must be collected through a streamlined administrative process established by Section 406 known as the "single state" or "base state" registration system. Under the single state registration system, a carrier will pay its annual fees to a single state (its base state) and that state will distribute the collections to other participating states in which the carrier's vehicles operate. This system is to be instituted by the Interstate Commerce Commission, in consultation with the participating states and the trucking industry, in such a manner as to eliminate as much of the paperwork and other compliance burdens as possible. Section 405 specifies that the only evidence of payment or other identification a vehicle must carry under this system is a copy of the receipt given the carrier by the base state.

States which did not collect bingo stamp fees under the former program will not be able to collect the new fees authorized by Section 405. Additionally, states must participate in the base state program in order to collect the fees authorized by Section 405. States are expressly prohibited from charging a fee for the registration of a carrier's interstate operating authority or for any other filings which may be required under Section 405.

The new fee system is to be based upon the number of vehicles which a carrier operates in a state and the number of states in which that carrier operates. States will not be allowed to charge a greater fee under Section 405 than the fee they charged under the former program as of November 15, 1991. The fee cannot exceed $10 per vehicle under any circumstances.

The Conference version of Section 405 does not authorize any funds to be distributed to the states from the Highway Trust Fund.

VEHICLE LENGTH LIMITATION

House bill

Section 407(a) amends the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 by adding a new subsection (j) to section 411.

New subsection (j)(1) prohibits a state from allowing operation of any commercial motor vehicle combination with two or more cargo carrying units (not including the truck tractor) which units as measured from the front of the first cargo carrying unit to the rear of the last carrying unit are a total length greater than were authorized by state statute or regulation and were being lawfully operated on or before June 1, 1991. The prohibition applies to the National System of Interstate and Defense Highways and those classes of qualifying Federal-aid primary system highways as designated by the Secretary subject to subsection 411(e).

New subsection (j)(2) allows the operation of commercial motor vehicle combinations with two or more cargo carrying units (not including the truck tractor) to continue to operate on the relevant highway system if (A) the state determined on or before June 1, 1991 that such commercial motor vehicle combination could lawfully operate on such relevant system or highways pursuant to a state statute or regulation in effect on June 1, 1991; (B) the commercial motor vehicle combination was in lawful operation on a regular or periodic basis (including seasonal operation or operation pursuant to a permit issued by the state) on the relevant system or highways on or before June 1, 1991; and (C) if all operations of such commercial motor vehicle combinations on such relevant system and highways continue to be subject to, at a minimum, all state statutes, regulations, limitations and conditions (including routing-specific and configuration specific designations and all other restrictions) in effect on June 1, 1991; except that, subject to guidelines established by the Secretary, the state may make minor adjustments to route-specific designations and vehicle operation restrictions for safety purposes and for road construction purposes.

New subsection (j)(3) provides that in addition to the vehicles which may continue to operate in the State of Wyoming under (j)(2), such State may allow commercial motor vehicle combinations not in actual use on June 1, 1991 on the relevant system and highways by enactment of a State law on or before November 3, 1992. The State must notify the Secretary of enactment of such State law within 30 days and the Secretary must publish notice of the enactment of such law in the Federal Register.

New subsection (j)(4) provides that states may further restrict or prohibit vehicles covered by this provision, however, any such restriction or prohibition must be consistent with sections 412 and 416 of this Act. Any such changes must be submitted to the Secretary. Such change must be published in the Federal Register by the Secretary.

New subsection (j)(5) requires that within 90 days after the effective date of this subsection (October 1, 1991) states must complete and file in writing with the Secretary a complete list of all state statutes, regulations, limitations and conditions governing the operation of these types of vehicles.

If the state fails to file within the specified time, the Secretary is given the authority to complete and file the list for the state.

The state is further required to certify in writing that the state had determined pursuant to a state statute or regulation in effect on June 1, 1991 that such commercial motor vehicle combinations could lawfully be operated on such relevant system and highways, and such combinations were in operation on a regular or periodic basis on such system and highways on or before June 1, 1991.

The Secretary is required to publish the list in the Federal Register. After publication the Secretary is required to review the certifications and may commence a proceeding, on the Secretary's own initiative or pursuant to a challenge by any person, to determine whether or not the state's certification is inaccurate. The state has the burden of proof.

If the Secretary determines the certification is inaccurate, the Secretary is required to amend the list published in the Federal Register.

This subsection also provides that no state statute or regulation shall be included on the list published by the Secretary merely on the grounds that it is authorized, or could have authorized, by permit or otherwise, the operation of commerical motor vehicle combinations not in actual operation on a regular or periodic basis on or before June 1, 1991.

This subsection further provides the lists published in the Federal Register shall become final on the 30th day after publication, with the exception of adjustments made pursuant to paragraphs 2(C), (3), and (4) and subparagraph (D) of paragraph 5.

New subsection (j)(6) requires the Secretary to issue regulations establishing guidelines for states to follow in making minor adjustments for safety or road construction purposes.

New subsection (j)(7) provides that nothing in this subsection should be construed to allow operation on the relevant system or highways of any commercial motor vehicle prohibited under section 127(d) of title 23, U.S.C., or to affect in any way the operation of commercial motor vehicles having only cargo carrying unit.

New subsection (j)(8) defines cargo carrying unit.

Subsection 407(b) amends section 411(a) to include buses having lengths of 45 feet. States must allow buses of up to 45 feet to utilize the Interstate System and those classes of Federal-aid Primary System highways as designated by the Secretary pursuant to section 411(e). It also includes these vehicles in the access provisions of subsection 412(a).

Senate amendment

The Senate Amendment contains a similar length limitation. A state is prohibited from allowing the operation on the National System of Interstate and Defense Highways and designated Federal-aid Primary highways of any commercial motor vehicle combination with two or more cargo carrying units whose cargo units exceed the maximum state length limitation authorized by state law on or before June 1, 1991, or were not in actual continuing lawful operation in the state on or before June 1, 1991.

A state would not be prevented from further restricting commercial motor vehicle combinations consistent with parameters of current law. If a state further restricted the operations of commercial motor vehicle combinations, it would be required to so advise the Secretary within 30 days and the Secretary would publish a notice of the state's action in the Federal Register.

Combinations of commercial motor vehicles could continue to operate if such vehicles were in actual, continuing operation (including continuing seasonal operation) in that state on or before June 1, 1991, and were authorized pursuant to state law.

The provisions on the preparation of the list of state length limits differs under the Senate Amendment. Specifically, the Secretary would determine and publish within 60 days of enactment the list of applicable state length limitations as of June 1, 1991. The list would become final within 60 days after publication.

The Senate Amendment has no comparable provisions on length of buses as contained in the House bill.

Conference substitute

The Conference Agreement includes the length limitation for commercial motor vehicles as provided by both House and Senate versions. No state can allow by state law or any other means the operation on the National System of Interstate and Defense Highways and designated classes of qualifying Federal-aid primary system highways of any commercial motor vehicle combinations with two or more cargo carrying units whose cargo units exceed the length limitations authorized by state law on or before June 1, 1991, or whose cargo carrying units by specific configuration were not in actual, lawful operation on a regular or periodic basis (including continuing seasonal operation) in the state on or before June 1, 1991. States could further restrict the operation of commercial motor vehicle combinations consistent with the parameters of current law. A state making such further restrictions must advise the Secretary within 30 days and the Secretary is required to publish notice of such action.

Limited narrow transitional rules for determining the applicable date of state law length limitations are included for the States of Wyoming and Alaska. In addition, a limited narrow exception is included for a 1-mile segment on Ohio State Route 7.

The Conference Agreement length limitation contains a narrow exception for nondivisible vehicles and loads which have been issued special permits under state law.

The Secretary is required to define by regulation nondivisible loads for purposes of this exception. The types of nondivisible loads envisioned by this provision are long loads, e.g., missiles or bridge section on two or more connected flat bed trucks. The Secretary should interpret this exception so as to ensure that no state allows any genuine divisible load to operate contrary to the length limit freeze. Permits issued under this provision shall be on a temporary and exceptional basis. This provision is more narrow than the House bill's original exception for special permits under state law. The Senate Amendment did not contain an express provision on special permits under state law.

The Conference Agreement also contains a modified and more narrow version of the House provision which allowed a state to make minor adjustments to routing-specific and vehicle operation restrictions in effect on June 1, 1991, for safety purposes and road construction. The Senate Amendment did not contain a similar provision. Under the Conference Agreement, a state can only make minor adjustments to route designations and vehicle operating restrictions if the minor adjustments are of a temporary and emergency nature. In addition, such adjustments would have to be for specific situations made necessary by safety purposes and road construction. The Secretary is required to issue regulations establishing criteria for states to follow in making such minor adjustments. Any state making such minor adjustments is required to notify the Secretary within 30 days. The Secretary is required to publish notice of such action.

Preparation of the list of state length limitations under the conference agreement proceeds in the following manner: Within 60 days of the date of enactment, each state is required to submit to the Secretary a complete list of its length limits under state law. This initial list is considered an interim list. No state statute or regulation is to be included on the list submitted by a state merely because it authorized, or could have authorized, by permit or otherwise, the operation of commercial motor vehicle combinations not in actual operation on a regular or periodic basis on or before June 1, 1991.

Not later than 90 days after enactment, the Secretary is required to publish the interim list in the Federal Register. The Secretary is required to review the list for accuracy and also solicit public comment on the accuracy of the information in the interim list. Not later than 180 days after enactment, the Secretary is required to publish a final list after making any revisions to correct inaccuracies. After publication of the final list, commercial motor vehicle combinations with two or more cargo carrying units may not operate on the National System of Interstate and Defense Highways and designated Federal-aid primary system highways except as published on the list. A procedure is provided for the Secretary to correct any inadvertent mistakes which may later be discovered on the list.

In addition, the Conference Agreement includes the provisions in the House bill requiring states to allow passenger buses of up to 45 feet to utilize the Interstate System and designated classes of Federal-aid Primary System highways and related House language to include passenger buses within the access provisions of subsection 412(a).

LONGER COMBINATION VEHICLE REGULATIONS, STUDIES AND TESTING

House bill

Provides that the Secretary must begin and complete a rulemaking to establish minimum training requirements for operators of longer combination vehicles. A final rule is required two years after October 1, 1991.

New subsection 408(b) provides for a safety study on longer combination vehicles. The report on the study is due two years after October 1, 1991.

New subsection 408(c) requires the Secretary to study the effects on drivers, including driver fatigue, of driving longer combination vehicles. The report is due two years after October 1, 1991.

New subsection 408(b) directs the Secretary to conduct tests on the operation of longer combination vehicles in order to determine whether any modifications to the Federal safety regulations are needed for longer combination vehicles. The Federal safety regulations to be addressed are those contained in Subchapter B of Chapter III of Title 49 of the Code of Federal Regulations. The report is due 3 years after October 1, 1991.

New subsection 408(e) provides $1,000,000 a year out of the Highway Trust Fund for FY 1992–1996 for the Secretary to carry out this section.

New subsection 408(f) defines longer combination vehicles for purposes of this section.

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The conference agreement includes the House (previously section 402 of the House bill) and Senate (previously section 241 of the Senate bill) requirement of a report by the Secretary of Transportation to Congress on the effectiveness of efforts of the private sector to ensure adequate training of entry-level drivers. The due date of the report has been changed to 12 months, with an additional requirement that a rulemaking by the Secretary on the need to require training of all entry-level drivers of commercial motor vehicles be completed not later than 24 months after the date of the enactment. If the Secretary determines that it is not in the public interest to require a rule that requires training for all entry-level drivers, a report on the reasons for such decision is required not later than 25 months after enactment.

The House bill language on the rulemaking to establish training requirements for operators of longer combination vehicles, the safety study and report on longer combination vehicles and the testing of the operations of these vehicles has been included, with several changes. The rulemaking on longer combination training requirements is due within 24 months of enactment of the Act.

The scope of the safety study is expanded to require an assessment of the adequacy of currently available data bases for the purpose of determining the safety of longer combination vehicles and recommendations for safety improvements. The economic and safety impact of these vehicles on shared highways also is to be a component of the study.

The safety report is due 2 years after the date of enactment. The testing language was expanded to include the study of fatigue with a focus on examination of driver stress, and characteristics of longer combination vehicles, including an assessment of on-board computers, anti-lock brakes, and anti-trailer under-ride systems to determine the potential safety effectiveness of those technologies as applied to such vehicles. This report is due not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act. The funding of $1,000,000 to carry out this section remains unchanged.

The title of the section is changed to "Training of Drivers; Longer Combination Vehicle Regulations, Studies, and Testing".

PARTICIPATION IN INTERNATIONAL REGISTRATION PLAN AND INTERNATIONAL FUEL TAX AGREEMENT

House bill

The House bill provides that after September 30, 1996, no State except those participating in the International Registration Plan, shall establish, maintain, or enforce any commercial motor vehicle registration law, regulation, or agreement which limits the operation of any commercial motor vehicle within its borders which is not registered under the laws of that state if the commercial motor vehicle is registered under the laws of a state that is a participant in the Plan.

The House bill further provides that after September 30, 1998, no State shall establish, maintain, or enforce any law or regulation which has fuel use tax reporting requirements (including tax reporting forms) which are not in conformity with the International Fuel Tax Agreement.

The House bill establishes a working group to establish procedures for resolving disputes among states participating in the Plan and the agreement and for providing technical assistance. It will be comprised of state and local officials, representatives from the National Governor's Association, the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrator's and the National Conference of State Legislatures, the Federation of Tax Administrators, and the Board of Directors for the International Fuel Tax Administrators. The bill further provides $1 million per fiscal year for activities of the working group and $5 million per fiscal year for grants to states to facilitate participation in the Plan and Agreement.

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The Conference substitute retains the House bill, but changes the preemption date for the International Fuel Tax Agreement from September 30, 1998 to September 30, 1996. It also allows for the continuation of the Regional Fuel Tax Agreement currently in effect in Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont.

However, nothing in this section should be construed as Congressional authorization for the charging of fees for decals and other markings by RFTA members or as insulating RFTA from court challenge based on the constitutionality of the RFTA system. This statute is silent on those issues and does not disturb the status quo.

Grant funding available for the purpose of facilitating participation in IRP and IFTA may also be extended to those states participating in RFTA for purposes of technical assistance, personnel training, travel reimbursement, and technology and equipment associated with their participation in RFTA. Improvements to the fuel use tax administration in RFTA states benefit the motor carrier industry as well.

Violations of Out-of-Service Orders

Senate Amendment.

BRAKE PERFORMANCE STANDARDS

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate provision required the Department of Transportation to conduct a rulemaking on methods for improved braking performance for commercial motor vehicles. The required rulemaking would be comprehensive, addressing basic brake problems, such as the compatibility between tractor brakes and trailer brakes, methods of ensuring effective brake timing, and antilock braking systems. The Senate provision required such rulemaking to be initiated by July 1, 1991 and completed by April 1, 1992. Antilock brakes have been required on heavy trucks and buses in Europe since October 1, 1990 and will be required in Japan before the end of this year.

Conference substitute

Section 412 requires the Department of Transportation to inititate a rulemaking proceeding concerning methods for improving the braking performance of newly manufactured commercial motor vehicles with a gross vehicle weight of 26,001 or more pounds. This rulemaking is required to be initiated by May 31, 1992 and completed within 18 months after initiation unless the Secretary determines that a six month extension is necessary. The rulemaking proceeding must include an examination of antilock systems, means of improving brake compatibility and methods of ensuring effectiveness of brake timing.

The Conferees note that a critical component of rulemaking on truck brake performance is the issue of stopping-distance performance. On October 21, 1991 NHTSA published a notice in the Federal Register, Vol. 56. No. 203 indicating:

> Accidents involving heavy trucks have a disproportionate (higher) fatality rate than all other motor vehicles. This [planned] rulemaking proposes to reinstate stopping distance performance requirements in Standard 121 so as to help improve heavy vehicle braking performance and hence reduce the number of accidents involving these vehicles. Although a court decision found that Standard 121, as it then existed was unenforceable, additional accident data and technical review have persuaded NHTSA that the court's requirement can now be met.

NHTSA goes on to indicate that it intends to issue a notice of proposed rulemaking on stopping distance in October, 1991. Thus, the Conferees expect that the rulemaking in question under this section as it relates to stopping distance will be initiated through a NPRM rather than an ANPRM.

RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, DEMONSTRATIONS AND TRAINING MANUALS

Section 405 amends Part A of title IV of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 by adding a new section 409.

New subsection 409(a) authorizes the Secretary to make grants for research and for other specified purposes that will enhance commercial motor vehicle safety. In addition, the Secretary may utilize some of the funds authorized for educating the public on the use of highways with commercial motor vehicles.

New subsection 409(b) provides that grants must be announced publicly and awarded on a competitive basis whenever practicable.

New subsection 409(c) provides that some of the funds may be used to pay for the development, publication, and distribution of training manuals and other training devices for roadside inspectors involved in the Motor Carrier Safety Assistance Program.

New subsection 409(d) earmarks money for educating the public on the use of highways with commercial motor vehicles. Note, funding for this section is contained in 402(h). That section requires the Secretary to spend at least $500,000 annually for this program, but he or she may spend up to $2 million annually for this grant program.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment provides for the same funding levels; however, it contains separate funding for driver education and includes training and training materials funding in its deductions permitted to be made by the Secretary for administrative purposes. The Senate amendment requires that grants be made on a competitive basis. The funding is at 100 percent.

Conference agreement

The Senate amendment with a cap placed upon research grants at $500,000.00 and driver education at $350,000.00 for each fiscal year. The provision is included in Section 402.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment adds to the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 801 et seq.), after section 408, a new section 409 entitled "Transportation Safety Offenses." This new section provides that any person who violates section 401(a)(1) or section 416 of that Act by distributing or possessing with intent to distribute a controlled substance in or on, or within 1,000 feet of a truck stop or safety rest area is subject to a maximum term of imprisonment, fine, or term of supervised release for a first offense that is twice that authorized by section 401(b). A term of imprisonment under this section does not apply to offenses involving 5 grams or less of marijuana.

Additionally, this new section specifies that after a prior conviction under the new section, a person who again violates section 401(a)(1) or section 416 of the Controlled Substances Act shall be subject to the greater of (1) a term of imprisonment of not less than 3 years and not more than life imprisonment, or (2) three times the maximum punishment authorized by section 401(b) for the first offense.

New section 409 prohibits the suspension or probation of any sentence imposed under section 409. Also, an individual convicted under this section is required to serve a minimum sentence prior to being eligible for parole.

The new section uses the term "safety rest area" as it is defined in part 752 of title 23 of the Code of Federal Regulations.

Also, new section 409 requires the U.S. Sentencing Commission, to promulgate or amend sentencing guidelines for a defendant convicted of violating section 409 of the Controlled Substances Act to provide that a sentence is two levels greater than the level that would have been assigned for the underlying controlled substance offense and not less than level 26. This new section also specifies that if the sentencing guidelines are amended after the effective date of this section, the Sentencing Commission should use the instruction in paragraph (1) to achieve a comparable result. These offenses would be subject to only one enhancement as found under the guidelines.

Conference substitute

The Senate recedes to the House based on an understanding of the Conferees that the House and Senate Conferees on the Crime bill have agreed to include a drug-free truck stop provision in the conference report on that bill.

EXEMPTION OF CUSTOM HARVESTING EQUIPMENT

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment provides that states may waive the commercial drivers license requirement with respect to drivers of certain types of vehicles. The vehicles are those used to transport farm supplies from retail dealers to or from a farm, vehicles used for custom harvesting, and to vehicles used to transport livestock feed, whether or not such vehicles are controlled and operated by a farmer.

Conference substitute

The substitute removes custom harvesting farm machinery from the Act. Operators of such machinery are not covered by the Commercial Motor Vehicles Safety Act of 1986. A state, however, may still impose a requirement for a commercial drivers license if it so desires. The change does not apply to vehicles used to transport this type of machinery.

TITLE V—INTERMODAL TRANSPORTATION

NATIONAL GOAL TO PROMOTE INTERMODAL TRANSPORTATION

House bill

The House bill establishes as a national goal the encouragement and promotion by the Federal government of an intermodal transportation system to improve energy-efficiency, productivity growth, international competitiveness and to obtain the optimum yield from the Nation's transportation resources.

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

Same as the House provision..

The fundamental transportation challenge facing the Nation today is the development of an intermodal transportation system that will accelerate, expedite, enhance and improve the movement of people and goods in an energy-efficient manner. Audacious and bold new approaches are needed if the nation is to transform the existing separate, balkanized transportation systems into a single, coordinated unit that will provide the foundation for the nation to confront the realities of the 1990s and the 21st century.

An intermodal transportation system—the use of connections between, and improved access to, different forms of transportation to enhance efficiency—will be the key to meeting the economic, energy and environmental challenges of the coming decades. The nation will not be able to meet all of those demands through continued reliance on separate, isolated modes of transportation.

Development of an intermodal transportation system will result in the increased productivity growth the nation needs to compete in the global economy of the 21st century. We can no longer rely on a transportation system designed for the 1950s to provide the support for American industry to compete in the international marketplace.

Since 1973, real wages and the American standard of living have been declining. Transportation advances using new innovative technology as well as better use of our existing transportation systems are essential to reversing this decline in the quality of life.

An intermodal transportation system will provide the means to confront the nation's energy vulnerability. With fully 63 percent of our oil resources devoted to transportation, two-thirds to automobiles, a transportation policy is an energy policy. Events in the Persian Gulf in 1990 and 1991 have shown that the nation can no longer afford to rely on volatile and insecure nations for our oil supply. If the nation is to reduce its dependence on foreign oil sources, reduced use of oil for transportation is required.

The Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990 made air pollution policy an overriding factor in transportation policy. The centerpiece of the plan to reduce air pollution is transportation control measures, many of which focus on reduced Vehicle Miles Traveled (VMT). States and Metropolitan Planning Organizations must develop Transportation Improvement Programs (TIPs) that comply with State Implementation Plans (SIPs) under the Clean Air Act Amendments.

DUTIES OF SECRETARY; OFFICE OF INTERMODALISM

House bill

The House bill creates as a duty of the Secretary of Transportation the coordination of Federal intermodal transportation policy and the initiation of policies to promote efficient intermodal transportation.

To carry out the intermodal responsibilities of the Secretary, an Office of Intermodalism is established within the Department of Transportation to be headed by a Director who must be appointed within six months of the date of enactment.

The Director is required to develop an intermodal transportation data base in coordination with states and metropolitan planning organizations. The compilation of such data, especially along state and regional lines, is crucial to the development of an efficient transportation system. The data base is to include information on the movement of people and goods by intermodal transportation, patterns of movements by intermodal transportation, and information on public and private investment in intermodal transportation facilities and services.

The Director must coordinate Federal research on intermodal transportation and must provide technical assistance to state and metropolitan planning organizations in urban areas with populations of 1 million or more to facilitate collection of data on intermodal transportation.

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute adopts the House provision except that the Office of Intermodalism is created within the Office of the Secretary. The Director is required to collect, maintain and disseminate intermodal transportation data through the new Bureau of Transportation Statistics.

In addition, it creates an Intermodal Transportation Advisory Board consisting of the Secretary as Chairman and the administrators of the Federal Highway Administration, the Federal Aviation Administration, the Maritime Administration, the Federal Railroad Administration and the Federal Transit Administration to provide recommendations for furthering the implementation of intermodalism.

An intermodal transportation system is vitally needed to meet the economic realities of the 1990s. The American economy is no longer a separate entity but part of the larger global economy. New methods of shipment of goods and advanced marketing techniques, such as "just-in-time" deliveries, have replaced the outdated warehouse. Fully one-third of the nation's economic activity involves international commerce which is projected to be one-half of the economy in the next 10 to 15 years.

In 1989, 973 million short tons of cargo, worth $438 billion, moved through our nation's ports—an increase of 30 percent in the last half of the 1980s alone. The virtual explosion of trade with the Pacific Rim nations has produced unprecedented growth at many West Coast ports and the development of the "mini-land bridge" to bring imported Asian products to the Midwest and East Coast. East Coast ports are projecting similar substantive growth as a result of Europe 1992.

Air cargo shipments, now being referred to as "flying warehouses," grew by more than 10 percent annually during much of the 1980s. In less than a decade, air cargo tonnage at Newark International Airport, John F. Kennedy International Airport and LaGuardia Airport increased by 41 percent.

An intermodal transportation system is essential to move our goods expeditiously and efficiently to and from harbors and airport facilities. Without adequate landside access, first-rate airport and port facilities are wasted and the ability of U.S. industry to compete and capture our share of the global economy is seriously limited.

This title firmly establishes national intermodal transportation policy. It is intended to bring the need for intermodalism to the forefront of the nation's transportation and economic debate. It establishes the central focal point for intermodalism in the Department of Transportation where policy is currently set through separate administrators for each mode of transportation with very limited interaction and coordination.

The Office of Intermodalism will promote policies which will enhance intermodal connectivity and foster continued development of intermodal transportation systems.

The Office will create a national data base with information on flows of people and goods to and from major metropolitan areas, to indicate the mode of choice and where two or more modes are used. The Office should also maintain policy balance in the Department between transportation modes and work to ensure interconnectivity of all transportation modes.

MODEL INTERMODAL TRANSPORTATION PLANS

House bill

The House bill requires the Secretary to award grants of no more than $500,000 for the development of model state intermodal transportation plans. The grants must be awarded to a maximum of six states representing a variety of geographic regions and transportation needs, patterns and modes. States must complete the plans within 18 months of the grant award.

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute contains the House provision except that the grants for model intermodal plans may be awarded to more than six states.

This title is designed to establish the essential process of developing transportation systems that will include the necessary interconnections and access to seaports, airports, urban centers and rural areas. Some regions have already started the process. In Southern California, the planned $800 million Alameda corridor to move cargo to and from the Ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach through the most efficient intermodal use of trucks and rail is an outstanding example.

SURFACE TRANSPORTATION ADMINISTRATION

House bill

The House bill directs the Secretary to enter into an agreement within 60 days of enactment with the National Academy of Public Administration to continue a study of options for organizing the Department of Transportation to increase the effectiveness of program delivery, reduce costs, and improve intermodal coordination among surface transportation-related agencies.

The Secretary must report to Congress on the findings of the study and recommend appropriate organizational changes no later than January 1, 1993. Organizational changes are prohibited unless approved by law.

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute contains the House provision.

NATIONAL COMMISSION ON INTERMODAL TRANSPORTATION

House bill

The House bill contains no provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment authorizes a transportation assistance program to provide highway and transportation agencies in urbanized areas of 50,000 to 1 million population and in rural areas, access to modern highway technology.

Conference substitute

This section establishes a National Commission on Intermodal Transportation, consisting of 11 members selected to represent diversified transportation expertise on intermodalism, to develop a National Intermodal Transportation Plan with a specific agenda for implementation. The Commission is to submit the Plan and implementing agenda to Congress by September 30, 1993.

It is crucial for the development of an efficient intermodal transportation system that the Commission recognize the need for innovation through the maximum integration of transportation systems and the earliest possible application of advanced technology to increase efficiency. New approaches are needed for the economic, energy and environmental challenges of the 1990s and the 21st century to enhance the nation's leadership in the global economy.

The Commission should review the need for unified decision-making on transportation policy and implementation. The structure of existing modal administrations may no longer be the best means of developing transportation efficiency and advances.

In its Plan, the Commission should recognize the accelerated importance of foreign trade and international commerce to the nation's future economic growth and the finding in the 1990 Census that more than 50 percent of the nation's population now lives in metropolitan areas of more than 1 million. Both of these trends have enormous implications for future transportation policy.

It is important that the Commission pay special attention to economic productivity concerns. The intermodal research agenda should be oriented towards increasing our nation's productivity.

The Commission should focus on creating a public-private alliance to target intermodal projects that are essential to close obvious deficiencies and gaps in our transportation system.

International product standardization, both technological and administrative, is also vital to the promotion of intermodalism. The Commission should review issues such as international freight rates and customs procedures, as well as the development of standardized designs for containers and any other innovative technology to expedite and stimulate intermodal transfers of goods and people. The Commission should review innovative equipment and hub terminal designs to provide for maximum efficiency.

Intermodal use of urban terminals is especially important to make the most efficient use of space and congested transportation corridors in crowded environments. The Commission is to examine the status of intermodal transportation, identify problems, and determine the resources needed to implement policies to achieve the national goal of an efficient intermodal transportation system.

The Commission is specifically directed to investigate and study:

1. The benefits of and impediments to international intermodal standardization, in coordination with the National Academy of Science;
2. Capital investment for infrastructure development necessary to accommodate intermodal transportation, especially surface transportation access to airports and ports;
3. Legal impediments to efficient intermodal transportation, specifically regulation of individual modes of transportation;
4. Impediments to efficient financing of intermodal transportation, including the most efficient use of existing sources of funds to connect individual modes of transportation, to accommodate intermodal transfers. The Commission must address the use of innovative methods of financing, current methods of public funding and increased use of private sources of private funding;
5. New technologies and problems with incorporating new technologies in intermodal transportation;
6. Problems in documentation and the need to achieve uniform, efficient, and simplified documentation;
7. Areas for additional research and development with an agenda for carrying out the research and development program; and
8. The relationship of intermodal transportation to rates, costs and economic productivity.

The Commission will be composed of 11 members, three appointed by the President and two each by the Speaker of the House, the House Minority Leader, the Senate Majority Leader, and the Senate Minority Leader. The Commission members should include representatives of Federal, State and local governments, other public transportation authorities or agencies, transportation providers, shippers, labor, the financial community, and consumers.

The Commission is required to submit its final report to Congress by September 30, 1993.

The following projects in this title are considered by the Managers as necessary to meet the existing transportation needs of the area and are not dependent or conditioned on any future development in the area. Moreover, funds authorized to be appropriated for these projects may be interchanged so long as the Federal contribution on any one project does not exceed 80 percent.

TITLE VI

RESEARCH AND TECHNOLOGY PROGRAM

House bill

The House bill amends the general research authority of the Secretary under Section 307(a) to clarify authority to conduct research on motor carrier transportation, highway planning, and highway operations. The Secretary is authorized to engage in cost-shared collaborative research with non-Federal entities, including state and local governments, foreign governments, colleges and universities, corporations, institutes, partnerships, sole proprietorships, and trade associations. The average Federal share may not exceed 50 percent unless it can be demonstrated that there is substantial public interest or benefit. Funds to carry out collaborative research under this section shall be derived from Section 104(a) administrative funds. Not less than 15 percent of the funds are to be used for long-term projects.

The House bill also directs the Secretary to conduct systems research for a short-haul passenger transportation system, an expansion of transportation infrastructure research and development and implementation of Strategic Highway Research Program results. The Secretary also must continue long-term pavement performance testing.

Section (f) of this section requires 1½ percent of state apportionments under Sections 104 and 144 be reserved to state research and planning purposes only, and requires that states use 25 percent of such funds for research, development, and technology transfer purposes.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment directs the Secretary to establish a coordinated long-term program of highway research for the development, use and dissemination of performance indicators to measure the performance of the surface transportation system, including the indicators for productivity, efficiency, energy use, air quality, congestion, safety, maintenance, and other factors that reflect the overall performance of the surface transportation system.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute combines the House and Senate provisions. Two percent of state apportionments are to be made available for state research and planning purposes.

EISENHOWER FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM

House bill

No comparable provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment provides for the establishment of a transportation research fellowship program at a level of $2,000,000 per fiscal year.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute is the provision in the Senate amendment. Development of new and efficient combinations of transportation infrastructure requires that the nation's brightest minds be attracted to the transportation engineering and research professions. The Dwight David Eisenhower Transportation Fellowship Program is designed to accomplish this objective. The conferees recognize that the fellowship program will be most successful if it serves to attract critical masses of students and professors to evolve into centers of excellence. Therefore, the conferees intend that the program shall be limited to no more than fifty universities, to be selected by the Secretary on the basis of their academic reputation in the transportation engineering and research areas. The conferees intend that the fellowships should be awarded competitively, and be available only to students enrolled in work toward a graduate degree in transportation engineering or research, but exceptions can be made for students in the final year of undergraduate engineering degrees who can demonstrate that they intend to specialize in a transportation-related field following graduation.

NATIONAL HIGHWAY INSTITUTE

House bill

The House bill provides for the continuation of the National Highway Institute and removes the current limitation on training to allow for training of U.S. citizens and foreign nationals engaged in highway work of interest to the United States.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment is the same as the House bill but provides for a 75 percent Federal share.

Conference substitute

The conference adopts the Senate amendment with an 80 percent Federal share.

INTERNATIONAL TRANSPORTATION OUTREACH PROGRAM

House bill

The House bill requires the Secretary of Transportation to conduct an international transportation outreach program to (1) seek, evaluate, and disseminate information about innovations abroad for application in the U.S.; (2) to encourage use of American goods and services abroad; and (3) to assist developing countries to improve their surface transportation technology and institutions. Funds provided by cooperating organizations or persons may be held in a special account and used in furtherance of the outreach program.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment provides authority for an international outreach program but does not require it.

Conference substitute

The Conference substitute is the Senate amendment modified by a House provision requiring coordination with other appropriate Federal agencies.

EDUCATION AND TRAINING

House bill

The House bill continues the Rural Transportation Assistance Program (RTAP) to provide technical assistance to highway and transportation agencies in rural areas and urbanized areas of 50,000 to 1,000,000 in population.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment contains two provisions continuing the Rural Transportation Assistance Program. Both continue the program as proposed in the House bill, but one expands RTAP activities to include tourism and recreational travel assistance. The provision also requires that four program centers be designated to provide training on intergovernmental transportation planning and project selection and tourism recreational travel for American Indian tribal governments. In 1992 $5 million is provided to fund tourism and recreational travel assistance, and $8 million is provided annually to fund the RTAP program and new services for American Indian tribal governments at a 100 percent share.

Conference substitute

The Conference substitute continues RTAP technical assistance programs and expands RTAP services to include assistance to urban areas between 50,000 and 1,000,000 in population and tourism and recreational travel technical assistance. Two centers must be designated to provide training on intergovernmental transportation planning and project selection and tourism recreational travel to American Indian tribal governments. The RTAP program is authorized at $6 million annually and services to American Indian tribal governments are funded at a 100 percent share. In addition, the Secretary of the Interior may reserve funds from the Indian reservation roads program to finance Indian technical centers.

APPLIED RESEARCH AND TECHNOLOGY PROGRAM; SEISMIC RESEARCH PROGRAM

House bill

The House bill amends Section 307 of Title 23 to require the Secretary to establish and implement an applied research and technology program. The purpose of the program is to accelerate testing, evaluation, and implementation of technologies that may improve the durability, efficiency, environmental impact, productivity, and safety of highway, transit, and intermodal transportation systems. Eighteen months after date of enactment, the Secretary must issue guidelines on selection of technologies, test locations, and collection and evaluation of test data. The Secretary is directed to carry out projects to assess the state of technology for heating bridge decks on a minimum of ten bridges being replaced or rehabilitated, to carry out a project demonstrating the environmental and safety benefits of elastomer modified asphalt, to conduct a program to demonstrate the safety benefits and durability of all weather pavement markings, to assess the state of technology of thin bonded overlay and surface lamination of pavement, and to demonstrate the durability and construction efficiency of high performance blended hydraulic cement. Highway projects carried out under this program must be conducted on the Federal-aid system.

The Secretary is required to transmit to Congress an annual report on the progress and findings of the applied technology program.

Funding for the applied technology program established under this section is derived from administrative and research funds set aside under section 104(a) of title 23 and section 21(h) of the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964 as amended at $35 million in fiscal year 1992, and $41 million per fiscal year for each of fiscal years 1993, 1994, 1995, 1996 and 1997. Not less than $4 million per fiscal year must be expended for projects related to heated bridge technologies, not less than $2 million must be expended for projects related to all weather pavement markings, and not less than $2,500,000 per fiscal year must be expended on thin bonded overlay projects.

A seismic research program must be carried out under this section in cooperation with a national earthquake engineering center to study the vulnerability of Federal-aid system highways, tunnels, and bridges to earthquakes and to develop and implement cost-effective methods of retrofitting highway facilities. Program progress and research findings are to be reported to Congress two years after date of enactment. Up to $2 million per fiscal year may be expended for carrying out seismic research under this section. The research is to be carried out in cooperation with the National Center for Earthquake Engineering at the University of Buffalo.

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute is the provision in the House bill with clarification that in implementing the seismic research program the Secretary shall consult and cooperate with other Federal agencies participating in the National Earthquake Hazards Reduction Program and ensure the program is consistent with objectives and planning of the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

BUREAU OF TRANSPORTATION STATISTICS
(SEC. 606)

House bill

No comparable provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment amends sec. 303 of title 23 U.S.C. to create a Bureau of Transportation Statistics, to be headed by a Director appointed by the President, to collect information on the performance of the national transportation system, to produce annual estimates of the use, productivity, safety, durability, and environmental effects of transportation systems, and to report these results annually to Congress.

Conference substitute

The conference agreement accepts the Senate language, with several modifications. It changes the reporting interval to once every two years, requires the Bureau to collect data relative to intermodal transportation, and affirms that the existence of the Bureau does not relieve the modal Administrators from responsibility of data collection and dissemination. $90 million is authorized from the Highway Trust Fund to fund the operation of the Bureau.

The Bureau of Transportation Statistics shall be responsible for compiling, analyzing, and publishing a comprehensive set of transportation statistics of sufficient scope, quality, relevance, and reliability that Federal and nonfederal agencies and Congress have adequate and accurate information about the availability, reliability, costs, and benefits of alternative transportation technologies to make informed decisions about how best to allocate Federal funds among transportation projects and programs. Such information should include productivity in various portions of the transportation sector, traffic flows, travel times, vehicle weights, variables affecting the choices people make about travel (including the mode, time, and willingness to pay), the availability and number of passengers served by mass transit for each transit authority, the frequency of vehicle and infrastructure repairs and resulting losses of time and money, frequency of accidents, injuries and fatalities, damage to the environment resulting from transportation, and the condition of transportation infrastructure. All data shall, to the extent practicable, be comparable across transportation modes and intermodal transport systems. The conferees intend that all such statistics must have a sound scientific basis, be as free as possible from bias resulting from data collection or interpretation procedures, and they must be widely accepted by decision-makers as accurate and relevant.

The Director of the Bureau shall, in cooperation with the modal administrators, other federal agencies, the States, and other non-federal entities, pursue a comprehensive program for the collection and analysis of data relating to the performance of the national transportation system.

A necessary step in this process is developing better indicators for productivity, efficiency, energy use, air quality related to vehicle operation, congestion, safety, maintenance, and other factors that reflect the overall performance of the surface transportation system. It is the intention of the conferees that the Director be directly involved in planning and review of the research to develop performance indicators for the national transportation systems. The most often reported indicators of productivity of transportation systems today are weight-miles or person-miles per employee-hour. While the underlying data are easily collected, these indicators are inadequate, because they convey little information about important issues such as the amount of fuel consumed, the cost of maintaining and repairing infrastructure and vehicles, the amount of pollution produced, the number of injuries, the reliability of timely arrival, and other factors that affect the costs and benefits of alternative decisions involved in transportation infrastructure planning. It is the intention of the conferees that the Director insure that such indicators are identified, and that data relative to their measurement are collected, analyzed, and reported.

The Director shall assure that data and other information are collected in such a manner as to maximize the ability to compare data from different regions, and over time, such that trends and regional differences, if they exist, can be detected and analyzed for statistical significance. The Director shall insure that the data are quality-controlled for accuracy, and promulgate guidelines for the collection of such information to insure that the information is accurate, reliable, relevant, and in a form that permits systematic analysis.

The Director shall coordinate the activities of the Bureau with related information gathering activities of other agencies. The conferees intend that data managed by the Bureau shall not be limited to highway transportation, but is extended to include rail, maglev, and intermodal transportation systems involving rail, highways, ships, and air transport. The purpose of this change in section 115 of the previous Act is to ensure that the efficiency and productivity of the transportation systems in the United States is maximized. This cannot be done by developing newer technology for highways alone. Strategic research planning must consider the importance of potential and actual products in the context of competing transport modes or economies of intermodal approaches to transport. The conferees intend that the Bureau integrate environmental effects and economics into transportation statistics, and that the Director coordinate data collection activities with those of the Environmental Protection Agency, the Department of Commerce, and other government agencies, wherever appropriate.

The Director shall make transportation statistics readily available to federal and non-federal agencies and other organizations. It is the intention of the conferees that data managed by the Bureau be accessible in computerized format, with adequate documentation and user-services.

The Director shall review information needs at least annually with the Advisory Council on Transportation Statistics and make recommendations to appropriate officials responsible for research programs in the Department of Transportation and other agencies involved in indicator research and development. The Director shall appoint an Advisory Council on Transportation Statistics, comprised of no more than six private citizens who have experience in transportation statistics and analysis (at least one of whom should have expertise in economics) to provide advice on the operation of the Bureau. The Council shall be subject to the provisions of the Federal Advisory Committee Act. It is the intention of the conferees that at least one of the Council members be a professional statistician. No later than one year after the start of Bureau operations, the Bureau shall enter into an agreement with the National Academy of Sciences for a study of the adequacy of the data collection resources, needs, and requirements, including data collection procedures and capabilities, data analysis procedures and capabilities, the ability of data bases to integrate with one another, computer hardware and software capabilities, information management systems (and their ability to integrate with one another, personnel, and budgets. The report shall be delivered within 18 months of initiation of the agreement, and should include recommendations for improving data collection systems, procedures, hardware, software, and information management systems. It is the intention of the conferees that this study serve as the first of the annual data reviews required of the Director.

Nothing in paragraph (1) shall authorize the Bureau to require the collection of data by any other monitoring Department, or to establish observation or monitoring programs. It is the intention of the conferees that the Director use Bureau resources to enhance data collection, analysis, and reporting by other organizations to fill identified data gaps, rather than to organize stand-alone monitoring programs, in order to insure the most cost-effective use of transportation monitoring resources.

The Bureau shall be under the direction of a Director of Transportation Statistics, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice of the Senate. The Director shall have substantial technical experience in the compilation and analysis of transportation statistics. The term of the appointment shall be four years, to begin within 180 days of enactment of this Act. It is the intention of the conferees that the term of office of the Director overlap with that of the President. The Director shall report directly to the Secretary and be compensated at Level V of the Executive schedule. The conferees intend that the Director be given substantial latitude to insure that Bureau data and information are not biased in any way by political considerations, and that release of data shall not be subject to policy review.

Data collected by the Bureau shall not be disclosed publicly in a manner that would reveal the personal identity of an individual, consistent with the Privacy Act of 1974 (5 U.S.C. 552a), or to reveal trade secrets and commercial or financial information provided by any person to be identified with such person. The conferees recognize that statistics may become biased if the very fact that a datum is being measured causes the object of measurement to change its characteristics or behavior. This may happen if data collected for the purpose of describing a system also can be used to cause harm to someone by legal or economic means. If this happens people may take great pains to conceal the true characteristics of the object. In order to avoid such bias, the conferees intend that the Director establish such procedures as necessary to ensure that all Bureau data are collected and stored in such a way that they cannot be used to prosecute individuals or reveal business information that could harm persons or corporations. The conferees intend that the Director consult with officials involved in other Federal data collection activities to identify the most appropriate means to meet the criteria.

The Director shall produce annual reports on transportation statistics and submit them to Congress, the states, and other interested parties. These reports shall compare transportation statistics among the states and regions, as well as reporting on trends at the state, regional, and national level. The conferees intend that if the statistics are based on estimates, rather than complete censuses, quantitative estimates of precision and statistical significance of trends and changes also shall be provided. The report shall include such indicators as are enumerated in section 303(b), indicators developed under section 115(a)(3), and other indicators, as appropriate for conducting cost-benefit analyses, prioritizing transportation system problems, and analyzing proposed solutions. In the estimation of costs and benefits, the conferees intend that it is not acceptable to set a cost or benefit at zero only because it cannot be quantified precisely. The conferees also intend that opportunity costs and costs such as decreased property values next to rights-of-way should be included, as well as benefits associated with increased reliability, more enjoyable travel, and other social costs and benefits.

The Director should, wherever feasible, use data already collected by the modal Administrators or other agencies. The Director should identify any additional specifications or quality assurance that must be applied to such data to ensure that it meets the needs of the Bureau.

$90 million is authorized to conduct the work of the Bureau. The conferees intend that the Bureau be funded at a minimum of $4 million during fiscal year 1992, plus $500,000 to begin the National Academy of Sciences study. It is the intent of the conferees that the Bureau be funded at no less than $25 million per year in the last year of this authorization.

ADVISORY COUNCIL ON TRANSPORTATION STATISTICS

House bill

No comparable provision.

Senate amendment

The House amendment provides for the establishment of an Advisory Council on Transportation Statistics to advise the Director of the Bureau of Transportation Statistics.

The Conference substitute is the Senate provision.

DOT DATA NEEDS

House bill

The House bill requires the Secretary to enter into an agreement with the National Academy of Sciences to conduct a study on the adequacy of data collection procedures and capabilities of the Department of Transportation.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment requires a similar data needs study but requires the Secretary to consult with the Director of the Bureau of Transportation Statistics in entering into the agreement with the National Academy of Sciences.

Conference substitute

The Conference substitute is the Senate provision.

SURFACE TRANSPORTATION RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT PLANNING

House bill

The Secretary is instructed to develop and submit to Congress an annual integrated national surface transportation research and development plan.

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute includes the annual surface research and development plan from the House version. The plan's purpose is to more sharply focus research and development activities within the Department. It is to include all ongoing research and development activities throughout the Department, as well as those planned for future years. The plan shall also include a 10-year projection of Department-funded long-term research and development. A plan modelled after the Experimental Program to Stimulate Competitive Research (EPSCoR) at the National Science Foundation should be included to assure that university research efforts are broadly based geographically. Major contracts must be described. Through the plan, specific objectives are to be followed leading to advanced technologies being commercially developed by U.S.-based companies. The plan is being commercially developed by U.S.-based companies. The plan is to be complete, identifying specific scopes of work, organization of personnel, milestone schedules, estimated costs by phase of activity, current state-of-the-art, and accomplishments. Plans and organization for future activities should also be included. For new systems, broad scope preliminary cost estimates are acceptable the first year if followed a year later with firm cost estimates the Congress can use in making informed budget decisions.

NATIONAL COUNCIL ON SURFACE TRANSPORTATION RESEARCH

House bill

The House bill establishes a seven-member National Council on Surface Transportation Research, with three members appointed by the President and one each by the Speaker of the House minority leader, the Senate majority leader and the Senate minority leader, to investigate and study current surface transportation research and technology developments in the United States and internationally.

The Council is to identify gaps and duplication in current surface transportation research efforts, determine research and development areas which may increase efficiency, productivity, safety and durability in the nation's surface transportation systems, and develop a national surface transportation research and development plan for immediate implementation.

The Council is to survey current surface transportation research efforts in the United States and internationally, examine factors causing fragmentation of surface transportation research and determine how to achieve increased coordination, compare the role of the Federal Government with the role of foreign governments in promoting surface transportation, identify barriers to innovation in surface transportation research, examine funding arrangements for surface transportation research and the level of resources currently available and identify surface transportation research areas and opportunities, including opportunities for international cooperation, to develop a short-range and long-range national surface transportation research and development plan.

Council members are to be appointed from among individuals involved in surface transportation research, including all levels of government, other public agencies, colleges and universities, public, private and non-profit research organizations, and organizations representing transportation providers, shippers, labor, and the financial community. One member appointed by the President shall serve as an international research advisor for the Council.

The conference substitute contains the House bill provision.

RESEARCH ADVISORY COMMITTEE

House bill

The Research Advisory Committee (RAC) is established in the House bill to ensure that the Department takes maximum advantage of available outside advice in planning and evaluating its research program and projects, especially the long-term efforts. The Department's research must both feed and be fed by the research programs of other organizations and the results of the Department's research must serve the interests of the surface transportation community of the United States. Both these objectives will be furthered by the establishment of the RAC which is to be formed after the report by the National Council on Surface Transportation Research is submitted September 30, 1993.

Appointees to the RAC should be selected on the basis of their technical knowledge of the state-of-the-art and the requirements for the research, rather than as representatives of organizations, but inclusion of a representative sample of major Department constituencies is desirable. Members are to include representatives from labor and universities that have experience in developing the surface transportation technologies that are being examined by RAC. RAC members are not to be paid for their service, but in some instances, individuals can be reimbursed for the transportation and other expenses necessary to participate. The application of certain limitations clauses is intended to make appropriate staffing available to the RAC. There will be a need for certain research advice which is too specialized to be effectively considered by the full RAC. Subordinate committees composed of experts with specialized backgrounds may be used to deal with such issues.

COMMEMORATION OF EISENHOWER NATIONAL SYSTEM OF INTERSTATE AND DEFENSE HIGHWAYS

House bill

The House bill requires that a study be conducted to determine an appropriate emblem to be placed on highway signs referring to the Interstate System to commemorate the vision of President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute is the provision in the House bill.

STATE LEVEL OF EFFORT

House bill

The House bill directs the Secretary to begin a comprehensive study of the most appropriate and accurate methods of calculating State level of effort in funding surface transportation programs.

The study shall examine data relating to state and local revenues collected and spent on surface transportation programs, including fuel taxes, toll revenue, sales taxes, general fund appropriations, property taxes, bonds, administrative fees, taxes on commercial vehicles, and other state and local revenue sources.

The Secretary is to report to Congress within 12 months of enactment with recommendations.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment is similar to the House provision except that it requires the study to be conducted jointly by the Secretary and the Director of the Bureau of Transportation Statistics. The report is to be submitted to Congress within nine months of enactment.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute contains the Senate amendment.

EVALUATION OF STATE PROCUREMENT PRACTICES

House bill

The House bill directs the Secretary to conduct a study of whether current procurement practices used by state departments and agencies are adequate to ensure the highest quality of materials and cost-effectiveness of projects. The Secretary is directed to report to Congress within two years with an assessment of the need for a national policy on quality assurance.

Senate amendment

BORDER CROSSINGS

House bill

The House bill provides for improvement and integration of intermodal transportation facilities, including methods of achieving the optimum yield from such systems.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment directs the Secretary to assess the need for transportation infrastructure improvements to facilitate U.S. to Mexico and U.S. to Canada trade. The Senate amendment also directs the Secretary to determine whether U.S. to Canada border crossing are designed for future growth and expansion and whether they will accommodate greater commercial traffic resulting from free trade agreements and increased tourism traffic.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute combines the provisions of the House bill and Senate amendment.

FUNDAMENTAL PROPERTIES OF ASPHALTS AND MODIFIED ASPHALTS

House bill

No comparable provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment requires the Federal Highway Administration to enter into a contract with a nonprofit organization for studies of the fundamental chemical properties and physical properties of petroleum asphalts and modified asphalts used in highway construction. Authorizations of $3 million per fiscal year are provided to fund the studies. A test strip must be implemented to demonstrate energy and environmental advantages of shale oil modified asphalts under extreme climatic conditions. Funds for the test strip are to be made available from funds for parks and park highway.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute directs the Administrator of the Federal Highway Administration to undertake fundamental studies of the performance of petroleum asphalts and modified asphalts used in highway construction. The conferees direct the Administrator to contract with the Western Research Institute, located in Laramie, Wyoming, a nonprofit organization, for purposes of complying with this section, as the prime organization responsible for carrying-out the technical and analytical support and related research. Based on previous research and the volume of performance data that must be considered, the conferees direct the Administrator to provide at least $3 million each year. This funding level will ensure that there is alignment between field performance characteristics of petroleum asphalts with diagnostic chemical and physical property tests designed to predict performance of petroleum asphalts. The conferees further direct the Administrator to enter into such contracts on the basis of the Western Reseach Institute's demonstrated expertise and experience in such related research programs in addition to the organization's past research activities on behalf of the Strategic Highway Research Program.

The Administrator is further directed, in coordination with the Western Research Institute, to implement a test strip of a shale oil-modified asphalt in Yellowstone National Park. The conferees direct this demonstration to be constructed with the expressed purpose of providing findings on whether such shale oil modified asphalt will provide a domestic asphalt feedstock alternative that provides enhanced performance characteristics, economic, and environmental advantages over current technologies. The conferees directed the selection of the demonstration site to ensure that such a test strip is subjected to severe and extreme climate conditions. Because of the importance of this demonstration, the conferees have directed a final report on the findings of this demonstration to be submitted to Congress not later than November 30, 1995.

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT AUTHORITY OF SECRETARY OF TRANSPORTATION

House bill

Title 49 of the U.S. Code, subtitle I, lists the purposes of the Department of Transportation (DOT). The Department purposes should also include basic research if DOT is to promote and undertake research and development related to transportation. The House bill adds the requirement to ". . . include basic automotive highway vehicle science." This provides DOT with a mandate to conduct research in long-term, high-risk basic highway vehicle science.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment contains no comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The Conferees adopt the House provision.

PURPOSES OF DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION

House bill

This House bill amends Title 49, USC subchapter I on the duties of the Secretary of the Department of Transportation to include that the Department will stimulate technological advances in transportation "through research and development." Both basic scientific research and research in long-term, high-risk highway vehicle sciences, are very important. Accordingly, the House bill authorizes research to be included in the fundamental mandates of the Department.

Senate amendment

The Senate version contains no comparable House provision.

Conference substitute

The Conference substitute includes the House provision.

ADVANCED AUTOMOTIVE RESEARCH CONFERENCE AND AWARD

House bill

The House bill establishes an Advanced Automotive Research Conference and a National Award for the Advancement of Motor Vehicle Research. It does so through the Stevenson-Wydler Technology Innovation Act of 1980, which established a program to support industry's technology development efforts. The Act also established a National Technology Medal for companies that have made outstanding contributions to the promotion of technology.

In order to examine and analyze the strengths and weaknesses of the U.S. motor vehicle industry, a conference on advanced automotive research and development should be convened. Accordingly, the House bill amends the Stevenson-Wydler Act to mandate that the Department of Commerce convene a conference of automotive experts including representatives of labor and academia to examine ways in which technology transfer of research results from the federal laboratories can improve U.S. motor vehicle industrial competitiveness. The results of the conference would be published and submitted to Congress. The recommendations of the conference should focus on further research necessary to improve U.S. competitiveness in automotive technology. The House bill also amends the Stevenson-Wydler Act to establish a National Award for the Advancement of Motor Vehicle Research. The award consisting of a medal, and potentially a privately supported cash prize, will honor domestic motor vehicle manufacturers, suppliers, or Federal laboratory personnel who have substantially improved the domestic motor vehicle in safety, energy savings, or environmental impact.

BUS TESTING

House bill

Subsection (a) amends Section 12(h) of the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964 to clarify that new bus models required to be tested under that Act include buses using alternative fuels.

Subsection (b) amends 317(b)(1) of the Surface Transportation and Uniform Relocation Assistance Act of 1987 to require braking performance and emissions tests be conducted on new bus models. Funding of $1.5 million is provided to the bus testing center to purchase and install new testing equipment in accordance with new testing requirements.

Subsection (c) establishes a revolving loan fund of $2.5 million to fund bus testing facility operations and maintenance. In programming the use of the revolving loan fund, it is intended to allow the operators of the testing facility to borrow from the fund only to cover operating expenses brought on by a lack of vehicles to be tested.

Senate amendment

The Senate has no comparable provision.

Conference substitute

Same as House bill.

NATIONAL TRANSIT INSTITUTE

House bill

The House bill directs the Secretary to make grants for the establishment of a national transit institute to develop and administer training programs on a broad range of transit matters, techniques and procedures for Federal, state and local transportation employees engaged or to be engaged in Federal-aid transit work.

The Secretary is to make available $3 million per fiscal year for carrying out national transit institute activities.

States and public transit agencies may use up to one-half percent of section 3 and 9 funds for up to 80 percent of tuition and direct education and training expenses for state and local transportation department employees.

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute contains the House bill provision, with a modification to provide that the National Transit Institute will be funded equally from the State and national research programs under section 26 of the Federal Transit Act of 1969.

UNIVERSITY TRANSPORTATION CENTERS

House bill

The House bill amends Section 11(b)(2) of the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964 to include transportation safety as an area of responsibility for University Transportation Centers. Section 11 is also amended to designate three new centers: a national center for transportation management, research, and development at Morgan State University; a center for transportation and industrial productivity at New Jersey Institute of Technology; and a national rural transportation study center at the University of Arkansas. The Secretary also is directed to make a grant of $2.42 million in fiscal year 1992 to Monmouth College for the James and Marlene Howard Transportation Information Center. Provisions of the 1964 Act requiring a National Advisory Council are deleted and replaced by a requirement that the Centers' studies be coordinated and disseminated by the Secretary. Up to one percent of funds provided for the University Transportation Center program are made available to the Secretary for its administration.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment calls for the establishment of three new additional National Centers for Transportation Management, Research, and Development to accelerate involvement and participation on the part of minority individuals and women in transportation-related professions.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute in the House provision with the addition of a provision establishing a grant for a National Center for Advanced Transportation Technology at the University of Idaho.

This center shall be similar to the other national centers established under this section but it shall not be subject to all of the provisions of 49 U.S.C. 1607(b) such as the federal share. It shall be specifically funded for three fiscal years at 80% federal share and the funds shall not be subject to any obligation limitation.

UNIVERSITY RESEARCH INSTITUTES

House bill

Section 11 of the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964 is amended by the House bill to require the Secretary to make grants to establish and operate an institute for national surface transportation policy studies at San Jose State University, an infrastructure technology institute at Northwestern University, an Urban Transit Institute with the University of South Florida, and an Institute for Intelligent Vehicle Highway Concepts at the University of Minnesota. Funding of $250,000 per fiscal year is authorized for the Institute for National Surface Transportation Policy Studies; $3 million per fiscal year is authorized for the Infrastructure Technology Institute; and $1 million per fiscal year is authorized for each of the Urban Transit Institute and the Institute for Intelligent Vehicle Highway concepts.

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute adopts the House provision and establishes at the University of North Carolina an Institute for Transportation Research and Education (ITRE). To support minority participation in urban transit research, grants will be made to North Carolina A&T State University in conjunction with the University of South Florida and a consortium of Florida A&M, Florida State University, and Florida International University for Interdisciplinary Study to address the diverse transportation problems of urban areas experiencing significant and rapid growth.

INTELLIGENT VEHICLE HIGHWAY SYSTEMS

House bill

The house bill establishes a program to research, develop, operationally test, and implement intelligent vehicle/highway systems. The bill requires development and implementation of a strategic plan and provides for planning grants to states and local governments, as well as assistance for operational technical projects. The bill establishes a program of financial and technical assistance for implementation of IVHS corridors.

Senate amendment

The Senate provisions are similar to those in the House bill, but establishes a "Congested Corridors" program for implementation of IVHS Technology.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute combines the provisions of the House bill and Senate amendment. Requirements for development of a prototype by 1997 may be satisfied through a test track, and implementation of IVHS technology in corridors and other areas must make a potential contribution to the Secretary's strategic plan.

ADVANCED TRANSPORTATION SYSTEMS

House bill

The House bill authorizes the Department of Transportation to award grants, matched on the state or local level, to set up capital manufacturing consortia dedicated to the development of cleaner transit systems and electric vehicles. The program provides seed money needed by small and medium size suppliers, larger manufacturers, universities and other research and manufacturing groups to collaborate on pushing an idea from laboratory to market. The program will give states maximum freedom in fostering public/private partnerships based on their own unique situations and recognizes the public benefits of solving mobility and energy problems with cleaner vehicles.

Senate amendment

No comparable provision.

Conference substitute

The conference substitute is the provision in the House bill.

TITLE VII—AIRPORT AUTHORITY

Conference substitute

The Conference Substitute enacts the Metropolitan Washington Airports Act Amendments of 1991. The substitute is the same as H.R. 3762, passed by the House on November 18, 1991. The substitute restores the full authority of the Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority which operates Washington National and Dulles Airports.

The legislation is necessary because of the Supreme Court's decision in Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority v. Citizens for the Abatement of Aircraft Noise, holding unconstitutional the provisions in the MWA Act of 1986 which established a Board of Review of nine Members of Congress with veto power over specified major decisions of MWAA's Board of Directors. As a result of this decision, MWAA, which runs National and Dulles Airports, is unable to take the actions over which the Board of Review held veto power, including adoption of a budget and authorization of the issuance of bonds for airport development.

The Conference Substitute makes the following changes in the 1986 Act and develops a constitutionally acceptable structure[1] which will ensure that decisions of the Airports Authority will take account of the interests of users of the airports.

(1) Under the 1986 Act, the Board of Review members were selected by the Airports Authority from lists provided by the Speaker of the House and the President pro tempore of the Senate. In its decision that the Board of Review procedure was unconstitutional, the Supreme Court criticized the requirements in the 1986 Act that the Board members must be Representatives and Senators from the authorizing and appropriating committees; the absence of a specific authorization for the Airports Authority to reject a list and request additional nominations; the absence of a requirement that the Board members be users of the airport; and the absence of power in the Airports Authority to remove Members of the Board of Review.

The Conference substitute continues the requirements for a Board of Review by directing the Airports Authority to establish a Board of Review of nine members; four from a list provided from the Speaker of the House; four from a list provided by the President pro tempore of the Senate, and one chosen alternately from a list provided by the Speaker and the President pro tempore. However, in response to the matters raised by the Supreme Court, the Conference substitute makes a number of changes in the requirements for the Board. The substitute gives the Airports Authority the right to reject a list and request additional recommendations. The individuals on the list submitted by the Speaker and the President pro tempore do not have to be Senators or Representatives. They are required to have experience in aviation matters and be frequent users of the Metropolitan Washington Airports. The Airports Authority Board of Directors is given authority to remove members of the Board of Review for cause by a two thirds vote.

(2) The 1986 Act requires the Airports Authority to submit to the Board of Review, at least 30 days before their effective dates (60 days in the case of a budget), the Authority's budget, authorizations for the issuance of bonds, actions on an airport master plan, actions on regulations, and appointment of a chief executive officer. The substitute continues the requirements that these actions be submitted to the Board of Review and requires that the following additional matters to be submitted to the Board of Review: amendments to the Airports Authority's annual budget; an annual plan for issuance of bonds and any amendments to such plan; the award of a contract (other than a contract in connection with the issuance or sale of bonds) which has been approved by the Board of Directors of the Airports Authority; any action of the Board of Directors approving terminal design or airport layout or modifications thereof; and an authorization for disposal of land or the grant of an easement.

(3) The 1986 Act is modified to end the Board of Review's authority to disapprove

[1] See, for example, the opinion of the American Law Division of the Congressional Research Service that the legislation is constitutional. Congressional Record of November 18, 1991 at pp. H10347-10349.

actions submitted by the Airports Authority. Instead, the Board of Review would have authority to recommend changes in an action submitted by the Airports Authority (including recommendations that the Authority not take the proposed action). The time for Board of Review action would be changed from 30 days in existing law, to 30 calendar days or 10 legislative days, whichever period is longer.

If the Board of Review made a recommendation, the Authority could not take the proposed action until the Authority had evaluated and responded in writing to the recommendation of the Board of Review. If the Authority's proposed action followed the recommendations of the Board of Review, the action could be taken. If the Authority did not follow the Board of Review's recommendations, the proposed action could not be taken until the proposal had been submitted to the Congress and sixty legislative days had passed. During this period, Congress would be able to consider a joint resolution (which would have to be signed by the President) disapproving the proposed action.

The substitute establishes special Congressional procedures to ensure that procedural difficulties would not prevent Congress from passing a resolution of disapproval during the sixty day period. The special procedures for resolutions of disapproval are modeled on those in the D.C. Home Rule legislation. Under the procedures in the substitute, a resolution of disapproval of an action of the Airports Authority would be referred to the House Committee on Public Works and Transportation and the Senate Committee on Commerce Science and Technology. If the Committee to which a resolution had been referred had not reported it at the end of twenty calendar days, it would be in order to move to discharge the Committee from further consideration of the joint resolution. A motion to discharge would be highly privileged, and debate would be limited to not more than one hour. An amendment would not be in order, nor would it be in order to move to reconsider. Additional procedures are established for consideration by the Senate of resolutions of disapproval which have been reported or discharged. Debate on a resolution would be limited to not more than ten hours and amendments or motions to recommit would not be in order.

(4) The substitute includes a provision ratifying actions of the Airports Authority which were submitted to the Board of Review before the Supreme Court's decision. This provision basically clarifies existing law on the effect of an adverse court order on the Board of Review's powers.

(5) The substitute includes a provision that until the Airports Authority establishes a new Board of Review, and at any time the Airport Authority fails to fill more than four vacancies on the Board of Review, the Airports Authority will have no power to take the actions which must be submitted to the Board of Review. This will protect against the Airports Authority failing to comply with the statutory requirement that it appoint a Board of Review.

(6) A new provision is added to existing law directing the Comptroller General to review the Airports Authority's contracting procedures for consistency with sound government contracting principles and the provisions of existing law requiring the Authority to use competitive bidding procedures. The Comptroller General would be required to file periodic reports with the House and Senate Aviation committees.

(7) To supplement the new authority given the Board of Review to review contracts of the Airports Authority, the substitute adds a new requirement that every contract must include a provision that no member of the Board of Review may benefit from the contract.

(8) The substitute authorizes the Secretary of Transportation to amend the lease of the airports to the Authority to incorporate the new Board of Review procedures.

Several provisions in the Conference Substitute should be clarified; the exception in section 6007(f)(4)(B)(vi) which states that "a contract in connection with the issuance or sale of bonds" is not subject to review by the Board of Review. It should be clear that this exception applies only to those documents necessary for the bond issuance and not to any contract relating to the selection of underwriters or to contracts funded by the bond proceeds.

Section 6007(h) has been amended to clarify its original intent. Any interruption in the Airports Authority's power was meant to be prospective; actions taken before a court order were not to be invalidated by such an order.

In addition, the Conferees believe that an objective in the redesign of the Metropolitan Washington Airports should be to minimize walking distances between terminals and between terminals and parking facilities. At National Airport, the Authority should make every reasonable effort to construct a permanent system for transporting people between the new North Terminal, the principal on-airport public parking facilities and the southern-most passenger terminal facilities, using a continuous loop system or a system of moving sidewalks. The Authority should periodically report to the Board of Review on the progress of its efforts.

The Conferees have been concerned with the difficulties which new entrants and limited incumbents have faced in obtaining slots at National Airport. In recognition of these difficulties, the Federal Aviation Administration, on February 24, 1984, awarded an exemption to Braniff Airlines to conduct four daily operations at National. These operations were being conducted at the time of passage of the Metropolitan Washington Airports Act of 1986. On January 12, 1990, after Braniff had ceased operations, FAA awarded America West an exemption to operate the slots previously held by Braniff. The rationale for the exemption was "the Department's policy of promoting competition in the airline industry."

The original America West exemption was granted for 6 months. Since then, the exemption has been extended for two one-year periods.

The Conferees agree with the FAA's decision to award four slots to America West in the interest of competition. However, we are concerned that the relatively short term of each renewal of the exemption makes it difficult for the carrier to engage in long-term planning, and may limit the willingness of creditors to advance funds to America West. With the decline in competition and the financial difficulties of the airline industry, the survival of major carriers such as America West is of great importance. Accordingly, we urge FAA to consider a long-term exemption to America West to operate the four slots, subject, of course, to the same rights FAA retains for any of the slots at National Airport.

Another matter of concern to the Conferees has been the expiration of provisions in the 1986 Act guaranteeing to airport employees, for five years, continuation of the rates of pay and other employee benefits which were in effect on the date the airports were leased to the regional Airports Authority. Notwithstanding the expiration of these provisions we expect the Authority to continue to afford employees fair treatment with respect to wages and other conditions of employment. We expect to monitor employee relations at the Airport, and to take appropriate corrective action if necessary.

TITLE VIII—REVENUE-RELATED PROVISIONS

A. HIGHWAY-RELATED EXCISE TAX PROVISIONS

1. TAX RATES

Present law

Current highway motor fuels and other highway excise taxes (the "HTF taxes") are scheduled to expire after September 30, 1995. These taxes include: 11.5 cents per gallon on gasoline and special motor fuels (including motorboat and small engine fuels); 17.5 cents per gallon on highway diesel fuel; 12 percent of retail price on heavy trucks and truck trailers; graduated rates on heavy highway vehicle tires; and a graduated annual use tax on heavy highway vehicles. All revenues from these tax rates are deposited in the Highway Trust Fund ("HTF"), except that revenues from taxes on motorboat and small engine gasoline fuels deposited in the HTF are transferred to the Aquatic Resources Trust Fund ("Aquatic Fund").

Gasoline, special motor fuels, and diesel fuel (including diesel fuel used in trains) are taxed at 2.5 cents per gallon through September 30, 1995. Revenues from these taxes are retained in the General Fund. Further, a separate 0.1-cent-per-gallon tax applies to these fuels to finance the Leaking Underground Storage Trust Fund ("LUST fund").

House bill

The House bill extends current HTF taxes (and exemptions from these taxes) for four years, through September 30, 1999. Also, the House bill extends current trust fund taxes on motorboat and small engine fuels for that period.

The current 2.5 cents-per-gallon deficit reduction rate on motor fuels, including the train diesel fuel tax, is not extended beyond the current 1995 expiration. Thus, from October 1, 1995, through September 30, 1999, the motor fuels tax rates (not including the LUST fund rate) will be 11.5 cents per gallon for gasoline and special motor fuels and 17.5 cents per gallon for highway diesel fuel.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

2. DEPOSITS AND TRANSFERS OF REVENUES

Present law

Gross revenues from the HTF taxes are transferred to the HTF through September 30, 1995. Gross revenues from the 11.5 cents-per-gallon taxes on certain motorboat fuels and small-engine gasoline fuel are transferred from the HTF to the Aquatic Fund through September 30, 1995.

House bill

The House bill extends the transfers of gross revenues from the current HTF taxes to the HTF through September 30, 1999. The House bill also extends transfers from the HTF to the Aquatic Fund of the fuels taxes currently transferred to the Aquatic Fund through September 30, 1997 (to conform to the HTF expenditure authority termination date).

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

B. HIGHWAY TRUST FUND PROVISIONS

1. TRUST FUND EXPENDITURE AUTHORITY

HTF expenditure authority is scheduled to expire on October 1, 1993.

The Aquatic Fund consists of two accounts: the Sport Fish Restoration Account for which there is no scheduled expiration date of expenditure authority and the Boat Safety Account for which expenditure authority is scheduled to expire after March 31, 1994.

House bill

The House bill extends HTF expenditure authority through September 30, 1997. Expenditure authority for the Aquatic Fund's Boat Safety Account is extended through March 31, 1998.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

2. TRUST FUND EXPENDITURE PURPOSES

a. Highway Account Generally

Present law

HTF Highway Account amounts are available, as provided in appropriations acts, to funds obligations incurred under the Highway Revenue Act of 1956, the Surface Transportation Act of 1982, the Surface Transportation and Uniform Relocation Act of 1987 ("1987 Act"), or for amounts for a general purpose authorized under these acts as in effect on the date of enactment of the 1987 Act.

House bill

The House bill adds to the permissible HTF expenditure purposes expenditures for purposes provided under the Intermodal Surface Transportation Infrastructure Act (H.R. 2950).

The House bill further provides that the permissible HTF expenditure purposes include only those specified in each Act cited above, as those Acts are in effect on the date of enactment of H.R. 2950.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

b. Mass Transit Account

Present law

Amounts in the Mass Transit Account of the HTF are available through September 30, 1993, as provided in appropriation acts, for making capital expenditures under section 21(a)(2) of the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964 ("UMTA"). UMTA section 21(a)(2) authorizes Mass Transit Account expenditures for construction and purchase of facilities and rolling stock, innovative techniques in public transportation services, planning and technical studies, and grants to assist elderly and handicapped needs.

House bill

The House bill provides that Mass Transit Account amounts are to be available for "capital" and "capital-related" purposes under UMTA sections 21 (a)(2), (b), (c), (g)(2), (h), or (j)(1), as in effect on the date of enactment of H.R. 2950.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

c. Highway Tax Compliance

Present law

Internal Revenue Service ("IRS") highway tax compliance expenditures are financed from General Fund appropriations.

House bill

Provisions contained in the non-revenue titles of the House bill authorize HTF amounts for grants to the IRS and/or States for motor fuels and other highway use tax enforcement activities. These provisions also provide for an Advisory Committee to the Secretary of Transportation (from the Federal Highway Administration, IRS, and the States) to prepare and coordinate the highway tax enforcement projects, with semi-annual reports to be made to the House and Senate authorizing committees ("Public Works") on the expenditure of such monies.

The House bill's revenue title provides that Department of Transportation may not impose any conditions on the use of any funds allocated to the IRS, and that the IRS must submit a report to the Ways and Means and Finance Committees at least 60 days before the start of each fiscal year (after FY 1992) on the projected use of any such funds it receives. Further, the revenue title provides that the semi-annual reports by the Advisory Committee also are to be made to these tax-writing committees.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment authorizes HTF amounts for grants to the IRS and/or States, to be used only to expand motor fuel tax enforcement activities and to reduce other highway use tax evasion. Semi-annual reports are to be made to the House and Senate Public Works committees on the expenditure of these monies.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill's restrictions on monies allocated to the IRS.

C. NATIONAL RECREATIONAL TRAILS TRUST FUND

Present law

Gasoline used in off-highway business uses is exempt from the HTF and deficit reduction rates of the gasoline excise tax. Off-highway recreational (i.e., nonbusiness) use is not exempt.

Revenues generated at the HTF tax rate that are attributable to nonbusiness off-highway uses are transferred to the HTF. Revenues attributable to the HTF rate on gasoline in a nonbusiness use of small-engine outdoor power equipment are then transferred from the HTF to the Aquatic Fund's Sport Fish Restoration Account.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Establishment of trust fund and transfer of revenues

The Senate amendment establishes a National Recreational Trails Trust Fund ("Trails Fund") in the Trust Fund Code of the Internal Revenue Code (the "Code"). For the first year of the new Fund's existence, amounts equivalent to 0.3 percent of total HTF receipts and, after the first year, revenues corresponding to those received from "nonhighway recreational fuel taxes," are to be transferred annually from the HTF to the Trails Fund.

Nonhighway recreational fuel taxes are defined as those imposed on gasoline, diesel, and special motor fuels (at the HTF rates) for (1) fuel used in vehicles and equipment on recreational trails or back country terrain (including highway vehicles when used on recreational trails, trail access roads not eligible for Federal highway funding, or back country terrain) and (2) fuel used in camp stoves and other outdoor recreational equipment.

Expenditures from trust fund

The Senate amendment authorizes general expenditure purposes from the Trails Fund by cross-referencing Public Works' provisions of the bill.

The Public Works' provisions in the Senate amendment set specific rules for allocating monies to the States for use on trails and trail-related projects. Among the authorized uses of the funds are (1) acquisition of new trails and access areas, (2) maintenance and restoration of existing trails, (3) State environmental protection education programs, and (4) program administrative costs.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with the following modifications:

(1) The conference agreement provides that the annual revenue transfers to the Trails Fund may not exceed the annual obligation ceilings contained in the bill; the Treasury Department must report annually the amount of revenues it determines to be attributable to nonhighway recreational fuels taxes to the Committees on Ways and Means and Finance;

(2) The conference agreement clarifies that revenues transferred to the Trails Fund do not include revenues currently transferred to the Aquatic Fund; and

(3) The conference agreement sunsets revenue transfers to and expenditure authority from the Trails Fund on October 1, 1997.

(4) The agreement also includes additional technical modifications to conform the Trails Fund to the Code trust funds.

D. NATIONAL HIGHWAY INSTITUTE FUNDING AND FEES

Present law

There is a National Highway Institute which (among its activities) conducts training programs for Federal, State, and local highway employees.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment expands the Institute's charter to authorize training programs for employees of private agencies. The Institute also is authorized to establish and collect fees from any entity and to place such fees in a special account to fund its operations.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with the modification limiting fees that may be assessed to amounts charged to users of the Institute's training programs, not to exceed the costs of services provided.

E. RURAL TOURISM DEVELOPMENT FOUNDATION

Present law

The Code provides tax-exempt status for any corporation which is organized under an Act of Congress and is an instrumentality of the U.S., but only if the corporation is exempt from Federal income tax under (1) provisions contained in the Code (including sec. 501(e)), (2) the corporation's organizing Act (as in effect before July 18, 1984) or (3) a revenue Act enacted after July 17, 1984.

Contributions and gifts to or for the use of the United States for exclusively public purposes are deductible for Federal income, estate, and gift tax purposes.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Public Works' provisions in the Senate amendment establish a charitable, nonprofit corporation to be known as the Rural Tourism Development Foundation to plan and implement projects and programs to attract foreign visitors to rural America. The provisions specifically provide that the Foundation and any income or property received or owned by it, and all transactions relating to such income or property, are exempt from all Federal, State, and local taxation.

The provisions also provide that contributions, gifts, and other transfers made to or for the use of the Foundation are regarded as contributions, gifts, or transfers to or for the use of the United States.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

F. Sense of the Congress Relating to Commute-To-Work Benefits

Present law

Present law allows employers to provide employee benefits excludible from gross income of up to $21 per month (recently raised from $15 by the IRS) for mass transit use.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment includes a "Sense of Congress" resolution that the current dollar limit on the exclusion for employer-provided transit benefits unduly penalizes employer efforts to encourage mass transit use by employees. The Senate amendment urges that the amount excludible from employee gross income be increased.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

G. Budget Act Compliance

Present law

The 1990 Budget Enforcement Act provides "spending caps" for certain expenditures and a "pay-as-you-go" requirement for net increases in direct spending and revenues during FY 1991–1995. If net direct spending increases are not offset, a sequester (automatic across-the-board reduction) in non-exempt direct spending programs will occur.

House bill

The House bill provides that notwithstanding any other provision of the House bill, no new direct spending would be created by the bill. The bill requires a proportional reduction in highway and transit obligations for FY 1992 in the event that outlays pursuant to the FY 1992 obligations under the House bill exceed those contained in any transportation appropriations bill for FY 1992.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the rule, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 2950) to develop a national intermodal surface transportation system, to authorize funds for construction of highways, for highway safety programs, and for mass transit programs, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to request, if I may, the balance of the time that is allocated to both sides.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Roe] under his unanimous-consent request has 18 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Hammerschmidt] has 17 minutes remaining.

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Oberstar].

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the indefatigable chairman of our committee, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Roe] whose relentless pursuit of this legislation has brought us to the successful conclusion we celebrate this morning.

Mr. Speaker, the key word and the key concept in this bill is intermodal. This is the first time in the history of transportation legislation that one bill brings together, knits and threads together in one conceptual and detailed piece of legislation, the several modes by which we move people and goods in this country.

As this legislation unfolds and is put into place in the many programs authorized under it, a person will be able to take a ride to an airport, unload his bicycle from the trunk, get aboard that airplane, fly to the destination, mount that bicycle on a car, take a drive on a scenic byway, dismount, and ride that bicycle on a bike path or on to an abandoned railroad bed that has been paved over for bicycling, dismount the bike and walk a beautiful vista along that pathway, get back into the car, and drive to his final destination and enjoy the beauty of this country through the several modes of transportation made possible.

Mr. Speaker, we chart a whole new course with this legislation. We will relieve urban congestion, we will improve rural transportation, we will improve the highways of this country, we will develop new concepts through the maglev that is included in this legislation, and we will indeed chart the course for transportation now through the beginning of the next century.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 2950, the Intermodal Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991, and urge its passage. I also commend, in the strongest meaning of that word possible, the leadership of the House Committee on Public Works and Transportation, the indefatigable gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Roe], the gentleman from California [Mr. Mineta], the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Hammerschmidt], and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Shuster], as well as the staff of the Subcommittee on Surface Transportation, for the truly heroic effort they have put into this bill over the last 6 months and more.

Along with its other landmark provisions, directing our Nation's transportation policy for the remainder of this century and into the next. H.R. 2950 contains two programs which I initiated, and in which I am particularly interested.

SCENIC BYWAYS

Section 147 of H.R. 2950 authorizes a Scenic Byways Program incorporating a substantial portion of my own bill, H.R. 2957, which my colleague, the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. DeFazio], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. Rockfeller], and I developed in cooperation with a broad range of groups to meet the need of recreational Americans, particularly the recreational driver, as well as the bicyclist and hiker.

Growing numbers of recreational drivers, particularly, long to escape the fast lanes funded by most of this and past legislation, and to tour slowly the backways and byways of America, savoring at a leisurely pace the richness of America's scenic, recreational, historic, cultural, and archaeological treasures and bringing economic diversity to small towns bypassed by the mainarteries of our highway system.

Many States already have their own Scenic Byways Programs, such as the Blue Ridge Parkway in Virginia, or the 10-State Great River Road, which crisscrosses the mighty Mississippi River along its 2,000-mile course from Minnesota to the Gulf of Mexico.

H.R. 2950 authorizes $80 million, over 6 years, from the highway trust fund under contract authority, for scenic byways.

While the provision of our scenic byways bill authorized an Office of Scenic Byways, this provision was not adopted into H.R. 2950. A complete office may not be necessary, but I would insist that the Department of Transportation and the Federal Highway Administration devote adequate staff to administering this $80 million program. This is a substantial amount of public funds, but more important, the program needs the sensitivity, judgment, and time of a staff dedicated solely to it. If it simply becomes a part-time job, imposed on already overworked staff, the program will not be the success it could be.

Section 147 of H.R. 2950 establishes a Scenic Byways Advisory Committee, to develop and present to the Secretary of Transportation recommendations regarding minimum criteria for use by State and Federal agencies in designating highways as scenic byways and as All-American Roads. The section recognizes the need for flexibility in this Federal program, to accommodate State programs, some of which have existed for many years. At the same time, it is important to establish these minimum criteria, so that people's expectations are not disappointed when they make the long trip to travel a road with the scenic byways designation.

The advisory committee has 18 months to develop these minimum criteria and present their recommendations to the Congress and the Department of Transportation. I would expect the Secretary to take these recommendations fully into account in approving funding for projects on State-designated scenic byways. This is especially important because section 147, unlike our bill, makes no provision for the States to nominate, or the Secretary to designate, highways for the scenic byways and All-American Roads systems.

Section 147 does not define All-American Roads, but I would expect the Secretary to adopt the definition contained in H.R. 2957: "those highways designated as scenic byways * * * which are of national significance, are of outstanding natural beauty, are in areas of quintessential scenery, are of high cultural interest, or are of exceptional or unique value."

Section 147 also establishes a 3-year Interim Scenic Byways Program. Under this interim program, the Secretary is required to give priority consideration to certain projects. These priorities are designed to protect the scenic, historical, recreational, cultural, and archeological characteristics for which the byway is designated, while assuring the appropriate local and private roles in project funding. The section gives priority to projects with corridor management plans designed to protect scenic byway values, and to those with a strong local commitment to implementing the management plans and protecting the scenic and other characteristics.

Priority is also accorded to those eligible projects which are included in programs that can serve as models for other States to follow, and to eligible projects in multi-State corridors where the States submit joint applications.

Eligible projects are clearly spelled out. The conference added a provision permitting 10 percent of the funds to be used for billboard removal.

Mr. Speaker, I want to stress, as strongly as possible, that the purpose of the Scenic Byways Program is to maintain and enhance the values associated with scenic byways. These byways are more than concrete and asphalt; more than paving and pothole fixing. The Scenic Byways Program is to be an adjunct to, rather than a replacement for or duplication of, other programs in H.R. 2950.

Finally, section 147 provides specific protections for byways, by stipulating that the Secretary shall not fund any project that would not protect the scenic, historic, recreational, cultural, natural, and archeological integrity of the highway and adjacent area.

H.R. 2950 provides for a mid-term review of many programs. It is my clear understanding that scenic byways will be one of those programs reviewed, with the purpose of following the interim program with a full-fledged, adequately funded, permanent Scenic Byways Program.

BICYCLE AND PEDESTRIAN FACILITIES

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 2950 also contains important provisions to assure the construction of many more bicycle lanes, paths and trails, and more pedestrian walkways in urban and rural areas. Many of these provisions are patterned on H.R. 2267, my bicycle and pedestrian facilities bill.

Strategically placed throughout the highway provisions of H.R. 2950 are provisions relating to planning and location of bicycle and pedestrian facilities.

Section 132, bicycle transportation and pedestrian walkways, provides further direction to State Departments of Transportation to use funds apportioned under the National Highway System, the urban and rural mobility programs, the flexible program, and the Federal lands highway programs, for these facilities.

Section 132 also creates the position of State Bicycle and Pedestrian Coordinator in each State Department of Transportation. The coordinator would be responsible for promoting and facilitating the increased use of nonmotorized modes of transportation, including developing facilities for the use of pedestrians and bicyclists and public education, promotional, and safety programs for using such facilities. It is vitally important to have an advocate for bicyclists and pedestrians within each State DOT, providing the critical focal point for contact between bicycle and pedestrian groups and their agency.

The same section would provide that any bridge deck replacement or rehabilitating project would have to accommodate bicycles if they, the bikes, are permitted to operate at both ends of the bridge, as long as such accommodation can be provided at reasonable cost.

Finally, the use of motorized vehicles would be prohibited on these trails and walkways, unless State or local regulations permit snowmobiles and motorized wheelchairs, and under other circumstances as the Secretary deems appropriate.

The point I wish to stress is that Congress intends that more trails and walkways be built in conjunction with projects funded under this bill, and independent of these projects, to accommodate the legitimate needs of bicyclists and walkers—who are, for the most part, also drivers who contribute their fair share to the highway trust fund.

Section 217 of title XXIII, which this section amends, has for many years permitted the States to use highway funds for bicycle and pedestrian paths and trails, yet few have been built. It is thus highly appropriate, in the Intermodal Transportation Efficiency Act, to add provisions requiring accommodation of these modes which provide energy efficient, environmentally protective, cost-saving and congestion-lessening transportation to this bill.

As the bicycle and pedestrian provisions are implemented, I will observe closely how well State DOT's respond to citizen demands for bike lanes and trails, and pedestrian walkways. They have had a hard time being heard under the existing, voluntary, construction program. I hope the program established under H.R. 2950 will go much farther toward answering their needs, and toward providing the relief the Nation needs from transportation congestion, pollution, and costs to the taxpayer and the individual commuter.

Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CLINGER].

Mr. CLINGER. Mr. Speaker, first of all, I want to commend the leadership of our committee for the outstanding job that they have done in crafting this legislation which has taken weeks and months and endless hours of work to get to this point. It is absolutely imperative that we pass this bill tonight and get it to the President for signature.

Let me just give you about 34 reasons why we need to pass it tonight. Ten of them are the 10 States that have already run out of money for their highway programs, which means that the jobs involved in those programs are no longer there. The 10 States are Alabama, Arkansas, Connecticut, Florida, Nebraska, North Dakota, Oregon, Tennessee, Virginia, and Wisconsin. So those States at present are doing no highway construction because their funds have dried up. About 24 other States, if we do not pass this bill and move it to the President tonight, will run out of money within the next 3 weeks, and that means that their Highway programs will shut down. They consist of Delaware, the District of Columbia, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Michigan, Missouri, Nevada, New Mexico, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Texas, Utah, and Washington.

My colleagues, these States are going to be out of business as of the 1st of January, if we do not pass this bill.

This is, as it has been said before, a jobs bill. It is a safety bill. It is a competition bill. It is a transit bill. It is all of these things. But most importantly, it is the only bill that we have before us and are going to have before us that really offers some measure of economic recovery and economic development, one that can go onstream immediately. It is going to put people to work. It is going to keep people working.

This is our economic growth bill that we can deal with in this session of this Congress right here, right now, and I urge support for this bill.

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], the chairman of the Committee on Energy and Commerce.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of conference report on this bill, H.R. 2950, and particularly in support of those portions of the legislation on which our committee participated as conferees.

I want to especially commend chairman ROE and ranking Republican member HAMMERSCHMIDT of the full committee, as well as chairman MINETA and ranking Republican member SHUSTER of the subcommittee, for their extraordinary leadership in the House and in the conference on this bill and this agreement today.

I also want to thank them and the other members of the Committee on Public Works and Transportation, as well as the Public Works staff on both sides of the aisle, for their great cooperation in ensuring that matters of concern to the Committee on Energy and Commerce were fully protected and properly addressed by our committee.

In addition, I want to commend our committee members, particularly Mr. SWIFT, Mr. LENT, Mr. SIKORSKI, Mr. ECKART, Mr. RITTER, and Mr. OXLEY for their help in developing this compromise. I also want to thank Senators HOLLINGS, BRYAN, DANFORTH, EXON, and GORTON and their staff.

Mr. Speaker, this is a good bill. It preserves the agreements reached between our two committees and the Senate in the last Congress regarding the Clean Air Act and highways.

The conformity provisions of section 176(c) of the Clean Air Act will continue to apply in the same manner and to the same extent as the House and Senate conferees expected when we adopted the 1990 amendments to the Clean Air Act. I expect the Secretary of Transportation, the Environmental Protection Agency, the States, and metropolitan planning organizations to comply fully with section 176(c). In addition, I expect the congestion management program to be carried out in a way to further the purposes of the Clean Air Act.

Importantly, the Senate receded from two energy provisions that would have been inconsistent with our resolution in the Clean Air Act, last year of the reformulated gasoline and oxygenated fuels issues.

The conference report also gives a tremendous boost to high speed rail and magnetic levitation technologies and will help the United States catch up to—and hopefully surpass—the Germans, French, and Japanese in this field. By combining the best elements of Senator MOYNIHAN's maglev provisions and the provisions of our committee's high speed rail bill, H.R. 1087, authored by Mr. SWIFT and Mr. RITTER, the chairman and ranking Republican member of our Subcommittee on Transportation and Hazardous Materials, the Congress has for the first time demonstrated a genuine financial commitment to high speed ground transportation.

One important provision of this demonstration program prohibits grants and contracts from going to support high speed ground transportation projects or systems located in States that by virtue of their own State laws have prohibited State funds or revenues from contributing to the construction or operation of such projects or systems. It is not necessary that a State actually have a present commitment to funding such projects or systems; however, it would be grossly unfair to use the tax dollars of my constituents in Michigan for this purpose, or of taxpayers in any State for that matter, when the State in which the project is located affirmatively prohibits its own State taxpayer dollars from being used for that project.

In support of these efforts, the legislation also includes a new high speed ground transportation research and development program, based on the excellent work of the House Science Committee in this area. This program is authorized to expend $25 million and, coupled with the economic, financial, and technical assessments required by the bill, will provide a sound basis for future decisionmaking in this area. Putting a package of this magnitude required the cooperation of five congressional committees working within very tight time constraints, and I applaud the chairmen and members of all those committees, as well as their staffs, for working so well together.

Mr. Speaker, the House and Senate bills both contained provisions dealing with asphalt rubber paving. The United States discards approximately 242 million tires each year, which are presenting enormous disposal problems and health hazards for local governments. In addition, 2 billion discarded tires have accumulated in piles or dumps throughout the country. This legislation establishes a minimum utilization requirement on procuring agencies, as they are defined in section 1004(17) of the Solid Waste Disposal Act to use recycled rubber in asphalt pavement. This will help consume millions of old tires which are fouling our landscape and consuming valuable landfill capacity. Much more, however, needs to be done to develop markets for scrap tires. According to an October 1991 EPA report, the total usage of tires for recycling currently is estimated to be less than 7 percent of the annual generation. In the reauthorization of the Solid Waste Disposal Act, the Committee on Energy and Commerce will be pursuing further opportunities to address this troublesome health and environmental problem.

Mr. Speaker, as you know, the Senate added a non-germane amendment to this bill in the form of S. 1012, which the Senate had earlier passed separately and which relates to the activities of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, which is under the jurisdiction of this committee. There was no companion House provision.

The Senate committee report on S. 1012 notes that "no legislation" authorizing NHTSA funding has been enacted since 1982, which is true. It also points out that the Senate passed bills since 1986, authorizing such appropriations. That is also true. But those bills covered more than such authorizations. They made significant changes in the basic statutes administered by NHTSA. Until very recently, no similar House bills were introduced.

The lack of annual authorization has not affected NHTSA's duties and obligations under existing law. Moreover, Congress, through the appropriations process, has annually funded NHTSA.

As the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation report on S. 1012 observes, in 1986 both Houses passed separate versions of NHTSA authorization bills (S. 863 and H.R. 2248). Each also included significant changes in the existing NHTSA statutes. Efforts to reconcile informally the differences between the Senate and House proved unsuccessful before the 99th Congress adjourned sine die.

The bills introduced and passed in the Senate in subsequent Congresses did not include any of the provisions where agreements were reached in 1986. Indeed, they were nearly identical to the Senate version in the 99th Congress, which the House had rejected. They did not reflect any of the House view as expressed in H.R. 2248.

Because oversight is often quicker and more effective than legislation, our Committee, including the Subcommittee on Transportation and Hazardous Materials and the Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations, worked closely with the Subcommittee on Transportation appropriations to commit NHTSA and the DOT to utilize in a timely fashion existing statutory authority to accomplish many of the safety objectives or requirements of S. 863 and H.R. 2248. Our view then and today was that the existing statutes—the National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1966 and the Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act—provided broad authority that needed to be used in a more timely and effective manner to resolve safety concerns expressed by both Houses in the 99th Congress. This could be done through rulemaking and other means, whether or not legislation was considered. We also urged the industry to be supportive of such rulemaking and its early resolution.

As the Senate committee report observes, much has been done since 1986 by NHTSA or is underway within timeframes that have proved realistic and sensible. I also note that more and more vehicle safety features are being heavily advertised by the manufacturers and dealers, which I applaud. Safety has become important from a competitive standpoint. That is good and should continue.

Indeed, I urge that the industry adopt this same approach for fuel economy and emissions. The industry has achieved much since 1975, in improving fuel economy. They are continuing to do so. I believe that fuel economy needs attention in light of the global warming debate. We need to continue to improve fuel economy without further mandates.

I believe that the House and Senate committees and subcommittees just mentioned, as well as NHTSA and the DOT, deserve credit for these achievements under existing law. Nevertheless, while there are successes, there is always more to be done, and I expect DOT and NHTSA to carry out their commitments to our committee. This conference agreement is in furtherance of them.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is appropriate that at this time I briefly addressed some of the activities of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration since 1986.

At the outset, I want to make it very clear that the conference agreement today does not provide any new authority for NHTSA. All of the activities covered by this bill relative to auto safety can be carried out and are being carried out under existing law. We are not ploughing new ground. Indeed, in some respects the foreign and domestic manufacturers are being penalized for volunteering to install safety related devices. I am concerned that we not dampen that voluntary approach which stems from competition and good sense.

The conference agreement today which included the provision of S. 1012 when it passed the Senate authorizes appropriations for NHTSA.

In response to my inquiry about this background, NHTSA in its letter to me of November 7, 1991 said:

> It is NHTSA's view that the National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1966 (Vehicle Safety Act) and the Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act (Cost Savings Act) give the agency ample regulatory authority to carry out the statutory purposes. Differences of opinion will inevitably arise as to whether a particular regulation should or should not be issued, but the existing statutory framework provides adequate means for interested parties to express their views and to ensure that the agency is acting in accordance with the statutory criteria. The committee oversight process has often helped to focus attention on specific issues and has influenced the general direction of agency rulemaking. We believe that the regulatory process has evolved satisfactorily within the existing statutory framework and that it is proved responsive to matters of Congressional concern.
> We believe the responsiveness of the regulatory process is evident in the case of the side impact rulemaking, which was the principal regulatory action debated during consideration of S. 863 and H.R. 2248 in the 99th Congress.
> Section 302 of S. 863 would have required the agency to: (1) establish performance criteria for improved occupant protection in side impacts for occupants of passenger cars; and (2) extend the applicability of such a standard to light trucks, vans, and multipurpose passenger vehicles. The agency has completed the following actions under FMVSS No. 214, Side Door Strength:
> May 28–29, 1986—Public meeting on upgrading side impact protection for passenger cars.
> January 27, 1988—NPRM proposing dynamic side impact test procedure and performance requirements for passenger cars.
> January 27, 1988—NPRM proposing side impact test dummy.
> August 19, 1988—ANPRM requesting comment on side impact protection for occupants of light trucks and multipurpose passenger vehicles.
> December 12, 1989—NPRM to include light trucks and multipurpose passenger vehicles with a gross vehicle weight rating of 10,000 pounds or less in the existing FMVSS No. 214 static test requirements.
> October 24, 1990—Final rules: (1) establishing dynamic side impact requirements for passenger cars; (2) reporting and record keeping for phase-in requirements; (3) specifications for side impact test dummy; and (4) specifications for side impact moving deformable barrier.
> June 14, 1991—Final rule extending FMVSS No. 214 static test requirements to light trucks and multipurpose passenger vehicles with a gross vehicle weight rating of 10,000 pounds or less.
> The agency estimates that once all passenger cars meet the dynamic side impact test requirements of FMVSS No. 214, the benefits will be a reduction of 512 fatalities per year, and a reduction of 2,636 moderate to critical (AIS 2–5) non-fatal injuries each year. The average consumer cost impact of this dynamic test requirement is estimated to be $51 per passenger car. This cost estimate includes lifetime fuel costs and secondary weight impacts.
> In extending the static test requirements of FMVSS No. 214 to light trucks and multipurpose passenger vehicles, the agency esti> mates that once all such vehicles complied with the requirements, the benefits would be a reduction of 58 to 82 fatalities per year and 1,569 to 1,889 hospitalized non-fatal injuries per year. The average consumer cost is estimated to be $47 to $59 per vehicle. These cost estimates include lifetime fuel costs and secondary weight impacts.

Mr. Speaker, I want to now discuss the provisions adopted by your conferees regarding NHTSA, as well as some of the Senate provisions not included in the final agreement before us today.

NHTSA APPROPRIATIONS

The bill adopts for fiscal years 1992 through 1994 the Senate dollar amounts. It adds another year, fiscal year 1995, and provides an increase. I note that in discussing the Senate's funding levels, NHTSA's November 7, 1991 letter to me said:

> Funding would not be a significant problem with the implementation of these bills, if they allowed the agency to proceed with the research and rulemaking schedule outlined in its priority plan. The authorization levels would provide adequate funds to carry out the plan. The difficulty arises in the imposition of fixed rulemaking schedules, most of which would distort the agency's current plans and require it to redistribute its research and regulatory resources. The agency would not have the manpower or contract research resources to complete the rulemaking actions dictated by the bills within the timeframes allowed.
> For example, the bills do not authorize funds to carry out the National Academy of Sciences study of automobile crashworthiness mandated by Section 202. The estimated $1 million required to conduct this study, whose value we question, would seriously compromise other projects that we believe to have a greater value for motor vehicle safety. Other research and regulatory actions dictated by the bills would have similar effects.

The conferees agreed not to include these crashworthiness provisions of the Senate bill in part due to this funding issue. As to the fixed rulemaking schedules of the Senate bill. I believe the conference agreement is more realistic and provides NHTSA with greater flexibility and should help to avoid deferral of other matters. I commend the Senators for this approach.

As to other funding concerns by our Committee, the NHTSA letter states:

> The article in the August 3, 1991 edition of Status Report discusses NHTSA's research and development budget in relation to a 5-year program plan developed by the agency and published in late 1990. * * *
> The article suggests that NHTSA's research and development budget is not sufficient for carrying out the research program described in the plan. This is not the case. The program plan describes the research needed to support the agency's priority safety initiatives. Further, the research budget requests to Congress are based on the funding needed for the research to support these priorities. Neither the safety initiatives nor the research to support them are constrained by any funding limitations. There are no important projects that are lying dormant as the article suggests.
> If there were a need to ask for increased funding to support a new safety initiative, the agency would not hesitate to make the request. An example is the request for increased research funding to support the new Intelligent Vehicle/Highway Systems program. We envision that the crash avoidance capability of motor vehicles can be improved substantially through the application of emerging electronics technology. Based on this opportunity, and the recognition of this opportunity by the automotive industry and the safety community, the agency has asked for large increases in its research budget. The agency has also asked for significant increases in other areas where it identifies a need.
> The dramatic increase in funding recommended in the Transportation Research Board report on Safety Research for a Changing Highway Environment referred to in the article is based on the research needs perceived by members of the committee rather than on any systematic development of safety initiatives and supporting research needs. The agency's priority safety initiatives and the research to support them were developed from such a systematic approach. While the agency endorses the report's recommendation that increased funding may be needed, the agency disagrees that increases of the magnitude recommended in the report are needed.
> Finally, the agency does not envision a drastic change in emphasis from crash protection to crash avoidance. The agency's priority plan and its research plan describe ambitious crash protection, crash avoidance, highway safety, and data collection and analysis activities. The balance between the areas as reflected in budget requests may change from time to time as programs end and new initiatives are needed, but the agency's commitment to all areas remains undiminished.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Before proceeding to discuss the bill further, I take note of the fact that the motor vehicle is principally regulated by two agencies, namely the NHTSA and the Environmental Protection Agency. When I inquired about this legislation, I asked:

> As we try to resolve one problem relating to safety or emissions, we should not, at the same time, create by statute or regulation a new program that relates to an equally important regulated activity. How does Congress help to ensure that the Federal Government's regulatory actions under the various laws are not counterproductive in the area of emissions, safety, energy, and fuel economy? What are the priorities?

The NHTSA reply was:

> NHTSA is in full agreement with your view that the method used to resolve one problem should not create another. In our view, the appropriate means of resolving potential conflicts between regulatory activities is to include in the statutory authority for each activities a requirement that the regulatory agency must consider the effects of its activity on other problems. The corporate average fuel economy law offers a good example of this, since it requires the Secretary to "consider the effect of other Federal motor vehicle standards on fuel economy." (15 U.S.C. 2002(e)(4)) This requirement obliges the agency to consider safety and environmental issues in its fuel economy rulemaking, and has afforded persons objecting to the agency's action a basis for seeking corrective action in court.
> We believe that statutory criteria such as that cited above can be used effectively by Congress in the oversight process. If the Congress has plainly indicated that the agency should consider the effects of its actions in one area on other areas, Congress can act to ensure that the agency does so. In the particular case of fuel economy rulemaking, the agency has consistently taken safety into account in determining the appropriate fuel economy level. It is this experience that underlies our concern about efforts to legislate drastically higher fuel economy levels, since we believe that these levels will not be achieved except through size and weight reductions that will compromise the safety of vehicle occupants.

I fully agree that such a legislative provision could be helpful. But there was none in the Senate bill and of course, there was no House bill.

It is clear, however, that NHTSA, through its memorandum of understanding with the EPA, has the capability now to consider "the effects of its actions in one area on other areas." None of the laws administered by NHTSA preclude that. The Energy and Commerce Committee intends to ensure that NHTSA does this at all times.

The conference substitute provides in lieu of the above mentioned provisions a process for conducting rulemakings in accordance with the National Traffic and Motor Safety Act of 1966. It also provides that any resulting standards be enforced in accordance with the 1966 statute. The process includes procedure for initiating a rulemaking either as an Advanced Notice as Proposed Rulemaking (ANPRM) or a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) at the discretion of the Secretary of Transportation. It also provides for completion of the rulemakings consistent with the 1966 statute and the Administrative Procedures Act. Completion could include promulgation of a rule with or without changes, abandonment of the rule, a deferral of the rule, or starting all over at some future time. The Department cannot, however, terminate the rule because it lacked time to complete the rule. Whatever action is taken it must be published in the Federal Register in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act and the 1966 Act and must include the reasons for that action.

Section 2503 lists four priority matters for which the Secretary must initiate a rulemaking in accordance with these general procedures. They are as follows:

First, unreasonable risk of rollovers for cars, light duty trucks and multipurpose passenger vehicles;

Second, extension of passenger car side impact protection to multi-purpose passenger vehicles and light duty trucks;

Third, safety of child booster seats in passenger cars; and Fourth, improve design for safety belts.

The listing of these matters for initiating rulemaking decisions is not to be construed as a determination by Congress as to whether or not a rule shall be finalized or if it is finalized what it should contain. The objective of the conferees is to require that the Secretary give priority consideration to these matters without affecting other rulemakings or decisions pending at the Department.

For these four matters, the conferees expect the Secretary to initiate either an ANPRM or a NPRM by May 31, 1992. If the Secretary cannot begin any one of these by that date, he must give notice of the decision to initiate them and provide a date certain for the initiation of either an ANPRM or a NPRM but which date certain shall not extend beyond January 31, 1993. He must also explain the reasons for this delay. A decision to provide a new date for that decision will not be reviewable.

Once a rulemaking is initiated, the Secretary must complete the rulemaking within 26 months after initiation, in the case of an ANPRM, and within 18 months after initiation, in the case of an NPRM. However, in the case of an ANPRM, the Secretary may decide not to proceed to an NPRM after issuing the ANPRM if based on the ANPRM he decides and publishes this decision against publication of a rule. He must do this in a manner consistent with the APA and the 1966 act. The Secretary may in the case of an NPRM extend the 18–month period for an additional 6 months. That extension is not reviewable.

In the case of section 2503 which provides for improved head injury protection regarding interior components of passenger cars, that is, roofs, pillars, and front headers there is a special rule. Under that special rule the Secretary must complete the rulemaking and issue a final rule within 24 months after the date of publication of the ANPRM or the NPRM. That publication must occur either by May 31, 1992 or, as indicated above, by January 31, 1993. If the Secretary determines that there is a need for delay and if the public comment period is closed, the Secretary may extend the date of completion by an additional 6 months and publish a notice thereof in the Federal Register. The conferees emphasize that in the case of this special provision that a final rule is to be promulgated within the timeframe specified. The bill does not set forth the content of the rule or what is to be covered. DOT must decide that.

Thus, with exception of the head injury protection issue, the conferees do not predetermine the outcome of these rulemakings. The Secretary is free to conclude the rulemaking in any manner consistent with the APA and the 1966 Act. The conferees expect the Secretary to act on these matters in accordance with the time schedule provided.

The conferees also expect NHTSA to move quickly on these matters and give preference to rollover protection, and to extension of passenger car side impact protection to light duty trucks and multipurpose passenger vehicles. In the case of rollovers, the conferees note that in a November 7, 1991 letter to the Committee on Energy and Commerce, the Secretary said:

> The rulemaking process will develop an advanced notice of proposed rulemaking (ANPRM) which will be published late this year. This will be followed by a notice of proposed rulemaking. If the comments and other information in the rulemaking record support the issuance of a final rule, the agency would adopt such a rule. * * *
> Since the late 1980s, the agency has conducted research to determine if vehicle attributes exist which are related to vehicle rollover. In a multi-contract effort, the agency has collected engineering data on approximately 60 different vehicles, including MPVs, vans, trucks, and passenger cars. In addition, the agency has collected and analyzed over 100,000 accidents associated with rollover and non-rollover crashes of these vehicles. These two data sets, the physical measurements of the vehicles and the rollover propensity of the vehicles as measured by their actual accident history, were analyzed to determine correlations between vehicle rollover propensity and accident involvement. Correlations were found when controlling for variations in the individual crashes, such as driver demographics, weather conditions, and road conditions. This analysis was completed in the spring of 1991 and will provide the basis for the forthcoming ANPRM.

The conferees would expect NHTSA to issue an ANPRM before May 31, 1992. Indeed, the conferees understand that an ANPRM has recently been submitted to the Office of Management and Budget.

In addition to the special provisions regarding head injuries just discussed, the conferees require a study and report to the Congress requiring additional types of protection against head injury which the Secretary is currently researching, including head injury prevention to occupants in various types of crashes, such as side impact. This report must also outline the Secretary's plans for initiating a rulemaking in these areas in fiscal year 1994 and 1995. Again, the conferees do not require a final rule or indicate what the rule, if any, would cover or do.

RECALL OF CERTAIN MOTOR VEHICLES

This provision was recommended by NHTSA. Indeed, in its November letter, NHTSA said:

> The Department requested the provision concerning reminder notices in recall campaigns on the basis of experience with campaigns in which such notices had significantly improved the percentage of vehicles returned for repair. We continue to believe that a second notice would be useful in campaigns where the response rate is particularly low. Other measures, such as newspaper publicity, have been attempted without appreciable success.
> The forwarding of copies of recall notices by lessors to their lessees will help ensure that leased vehicles are returned for repair. This will be of value not only to the lessees, who might not otherwise learn of a potential safety hazard, but to the subsequent purchasers of the leased vehicles. We do not regard the requirement as burdensome to the lessors, since they would routinely know the whereabouts of their lessees and could readily notify of any recall. From past recalls, NHTSA has noted that leased vehicles have a lower rate of return than other vehicles. This provision would help improve the rate.
> The provision relating to the remedy of defects and noncompliances in new vehicles and vehicle equipment before sale or lease also arises from the agency's experience with situations in which vehicles subject to recall were sold to consumers without remedying the condition that led to the recall. While the agency does not believe that this is a frequent occurrence, the potential consequences for a new car buyer could be serious. Section 108(a)(1)(A) of the Vehicle Safety Act currently prohibits the sale of a new vehicle that does not comply with all applicable standards, but there is no corresponding provisions for vehicles that have been determined to contain a safety-related defect. This provision would correct that situation. The provision would apply only to new cars held by dealers before the first sale or lease, and not to used cars, thereby addressing a concern voiced by dealers.

We note that subsection (b) includes an important disclaimer regarding "offers" for sale or lease as opposed to actual sale or lease.

STANDARDS OF COMPLIANCE TEST PROGRAM

This Senate provision was, in the view of our committee and NHTSA, unnecessary, NHTSA said:

> At this time, there are 50 Federal motor vehicle safety standards in effect. Of these, 40 are capable of being tested in a laboratory environment. The other 10 are evaluated by visual inspection. The attached table presents the 5-year plan for the 40 "testable" standards (41 standards are included, since FMVSS 131 will go into effect in September 1992).
> It is important to emphasize that we believe all testable standards should be selected for testing over a period of time. We construe this section as permitting us to consider a number of factors in determining the priority of standards for testing, and thus do not strongly oppose it. Beginning with fiscal year 1987, NHTSA revised its testing schedule to respond to recommendations in a General Accounting Office (GAO) report on NHTSA's enforcement program. A legislative remedy to impose the same revisions would be moot.
> You asked whether this provision is needed and if it is objectionable. We believe the provision is unnecessary, since we already have such a schedule. Based on test results for a given standard, however, our schedule may change in order to address important safety issues. For example, a compliance failure may dictate that we reallocate compliance test funds to address a critically important compliance problem that has a substantial real-world safety impact. A legislated test schedule would preclude this necessary flexibility. Accordingly, a rigid test schedule is objectionable.

The conferees listened to NHTSA. The conference substitute does not require a "rigid test schedule." The flexibility NHTSA wanted is provided.

REAR SEATBELTS

NHTSA's letter states:

VOL

NO

JA

UMI

> NHTSA has undertaken a number of efforts to make the public aware of the benefits of retrofitting vehicles with rear seat lap/shoulder belts. These efforts include requiring information in owners manuals; encouraging manufacturers though direct telephone, letter, and personal contact to make retrofit kits widely available, publishing information directly; providing information to consumer and highway safety groups through NHTSA Regional Offices and State highway offices on the subject; and responding to consumer inquiries through the agency's toll-free Auto Safety Hotline.
> However, we must point out that lap-only belts in the rear seat are proven safety devices. Studies of occupant protection from 1968 forward show that the lap-only safety belts installed in rear seating positions are effective in reducing the risk of death and injury, when worn properly. We estimate that there is a much larger potential safety benefit to be gained through working to increase belt usage than would be obtained through working to replace current equipment at today's usage rates. Thus, while lap/shoulder belts offers some increase in safety benefits over lap-only belts, we believe the greatest safety gain will be realized by increasing usage of whatever belt system is available.
> In addition, no additional funds are authorized to the agency to cover the cost of an expanded effort in informing the public of the availability of rear seat lap/shoulder belts. In consideration of our current funding level, we believe that the agency is doing an effective job to inform the public of the availability of retrofitting vehicles with rear seat lap/shoulder belts.

Once again, the conferees listened. The program is for fiscal year 1993 only.

BRAKE PERFORMANCE STANDARDS FOR PASSENGER CARS

This is an area where the auto and truck manufacturers are voluntarily installing safety equipment. It is in the area of antilock braking systems or ABS. This bill recognizes this fact. ABS is already standard equipment, or at least available on all domestically produced light duty trucks. ABS is also being installed on many passenger cars today—including low-priced autos—as standard or optional equipment. The conference substitute recognizes this fact and requires the NHTSA Administrator to initiate an Advanced Notice of Proposed Rulemaking [ANPRM] to investigate the need for any additional brake performance standards for passenger cars, taking into account manufacturer's voluntary early application of economical and effective anti-lock brake systems on new cars.

AUTOMOTIVE CRASH PROTECTION AND SAFETY BELT USE

It is important to again note that the vast majority of the NHTSA authorization bill puts into law what the domestic auto and truck manufacturers are already doing. In a very real sense the old adage about never volunteering proves out to be true. This is even truer in the case of airbags.

This legislation mandates airbags for cars and light duty trucks and multipurpose passenger vehicles—while the automakers are now voluntarily installing airbags in such vehicles. Consumers already have a wide range of choices in showrooms today of vehicles equipped with airbags.

All of the domestic manufacturers and many of the foreign manufacturers have announced plans for voluntarily installing airbags in their vehicles during this decade. As noted many have already done so and have taken advantage of that effort in their advertising. They have done so, in accordance with their plans which takes into consideration many factors that affect the well-being of their business which in turn effects the well-being of the people who work in this industry. It also reflects the fact that there have been considerable problems with insuring adequate supply of airbags to meet the need. According to a recent Ford paper, Ford suppliers "have gone from producing 70,000 airbags for the 1989 model year to over one million for the 1991 model year." Ford states that the "supply base is still fragile and will be for some time."

The Senate bill attempted to suggest to the manufacturers that Congress knows better and is going to tell the manufacturer exactly how to run their operation. I believe that, particularly in this time of great distress that the auto industry is in because of the economic recession in this country, that such an approach by the Congress is ill-conceived. This industry is faced with enormous problems, including significant regulations under the Clean Air Act and the potential of tighter requirements in the case of fuel economy. In short, this industry is under siege. We need to "let up" and allow the industry and its workers to survive and be productive and profitable.

There were a couple of major concerns with the Senate provisions.

First, there is the problem of a design standard. It is believed to be the first time under the Safety Act, which spans the last quarter of a century, that Congress has told automakers what equipment they must put on their vehicles. Congress has, in the past, told them what we wanted manufacturers to accomplish—we have required performance standards—leaving room innovative technologies to evolve and be installed to meet performance criteria.

Second, the Senate bill failed to address the issue of seat belts.

Third, the Senate bill did not address supply problems.

While I continue to be concerned about any mandate regarding airbags, I believe that the joint conference substitute we are adopting today is reasonable and doable, although not without difficulties for the foreign and domestic industry.

While the conference agreement provides, in essence, a design standard it is not intended to be precedent setting. It is a unique situation. It should be treated accordingly.

I remain concerned that with the installation of airbags, people will become complacent and fail to consistently use their safety belts. Domestic automakers, NHTSA, and others have spent millions of dollars since the mid 1980's to encourage people to wear their safety belts. It has been a tremendous success as we have seen belt use increase from 12 percent to almost 60 percent. That is still not enough.

I emphasize that Congress has a responsibility to ensure that safety belt use continues to increase. Airbags are not substitute for felt use and the conference substitute makes that clear. I applaud that.

Safety belts are needed to hold the occupants in the proper or correct seating position in order for an airbag to be most effective and to provide restraint in the type of accidents where airbags do not work. For example, airbags may not be effective in side and rear impact and rollover accidents.

I am also pleased that this bill does not undo the light truck passive restraint rulemaking that NHTSA promulgated this past March. The new airbag requirement of this conference report recognizes that the manufacturers' product plants have been developed based on the March 1991 Federal rulemaking. This is why it is important to recognize that manufacturers are already installing airbags—both driver and passenger—in many of their vehicles. But just as the rule provided for some limited flexibility by providing for the carrying forward of credits until all light duty trucks must have passive restraints for both the driver and the outboard front seat passenger, this law will provide that those same credits be extended until 100 percent airbags are required on and after September 1, 1998, for both the driver and outboard front seat passenger.

The conference substitute calls for the amendment of the FVMSS 208. That amendment will provide a schedule for passenger cars and for light duty trucks, buses, and multi-purpose vehicles to meet regarding the installation of airbags on both the driver side and the right front seat passenger side of the vehicle. That schedule is reasonable but certainly difficult. It is reasonable, particularly in the case of light duty trucks and multi-purpose vehicles because in amending FVMSS 208, it provides that the credits or incentives available under the rule today will continue to be available until the companies are required to achieve 100 percent front seat inflatable restraints. That is a significant and important provision because it provides the flexibility for the industry to achieve the goal within reasonable bounds. I commend my colleagues in both bodies for agreeing to this provision.

I am also quite pleased to see that the conference substitute recognizes fully that the airbag is only a supplemental device and that it does not suffice for the properly worn lap and shoulder belt. The manufacturers can provide protection and they try to do so in the development of the vehicle. However, if the occupants, including the driver, fail to avail themselves of the means to achieve such protection, they, in effect, endanger themselves and make it more likely that in an accident death or injury could occur. I believe that is sad and I am pleased to see that the Congress agrees that we cannot afford to not recognize the primary benefits of seatbelts.

I am also pleased to see that the conference substitute contains a finding of a need for States to adopt mandatory seat belt use laws. It is my hope that all the remaining States will, in the very near future, adopt such a law. It is also my hope that they will do so in a manner that ensures that they will be enforced on a primary basis. In this regard, I note from the NHTSA letter of November 7, 1991, that at least one State, namely Connecticut, has a rule that if the vehicle is equipped with an airbag the occupant does not have to wear seatbelts. The letter indicates that Connecticut plans to change that law. I certainly think such a change is urgently needed.

The conference substitute also finds that the Federal Government should universally adopt seatbelt use rules. Again, this is a good provision and is consistent with the efforts of this committee to require such rules by the National Park Service, the Bureau of Land Management and the Defense Department.

Subsection (d) contains two disclaimers. The first, in essence, recognizes that the provisions of this section establish a design standard but in doing so the Congress does not intend to alter or affect the existing statutes the Secretary administers regarding the safety of passenger cars, trucks, buses and multipurpose vehicles. It also is intended that this particular design standard provision does not establish any precedent regarding the development and promulgation of any Federal motor vehicle safety standard.

The second indicates that nothing in this section, or in the amendments made by this section, by FMVSS 208 is intended to be construed by anyone to affect, change, or modify in any way existing or future court decisions or other applicable law in regards to vehicles with or without airbags.

The substitute also provides a program regarding the purchase by the Federal Government of airbag-equipped vehicles.

HEAD INJURY IMPACT STUDY

The conferees understand that there are other head injury protection matters which are the subject of research at NHTSA and which are not covered by section 2503(5) of this bill. This could include head injury protection matters from various types of crashes, such as side impact.

This section of the bill directs the Secretary to report on the need for rulemaking regarding this research and the extent of that research. The report would be provided by the end of fiscal year 1993 and would identify research matters and their status. It would also include a statement of any actions planned by the DOT toward initiating rulemaking not later than fiscal year 1994 or 1995. Such a rulemaking would be either an ANPRM or NPRM and would be completed as soon as possible after proposal.

The conferees agreed not to include several provisions regarding such matters as bumpers, crashworthiness, and pedestrian safety that were in the Senate amendment.

In the case of pedestrian safety, NHTSA said:

> About 7,000 fatalities and an additional 21,000 serious injuries occur annually to pedestrians as a result of collisions with motor vehicles. In order of severe injury frequency, the extremities (arms and legs) are injured most frequently (49% of severe injuries), followed by the head/neck/face combined (34%) and the chest/pelvis/abdomen/back combined (17%).
> The agency currently is pursuing research activities in the pedestrian protection area. On April 10, 1991, the agency terminated rulemaking on pedestrian leg protection that it had begun in 1981. Based on research results, the agency determined that there were no workable techniques to improve pedestrian leg protection and that the proposal would therefore not lead to improved pedestrian protection.
> The agency held a public meeting on August 20, 1991 on the agency's pedestrian head impact protection research. Written comments on the subject of pedestrian head impact protection will be accepted by the agency until November 15, 1991. As noted in our priority plan, we will reach a decision on whether to pursue rulemaking further in this area by the end of this year.
> Research on pedestrian thorax protection is continuing and will probably not be completed until sometime in 1993. If the agency decides to pursue rulemaking in this area, a two-year timeframe now for completion is unrealistic.
> In activities under the Highway Safety Act, it should be noted that the agency, by notice of October 4, 1991, has expanded the list of most effective program areas under the Section 402 Program to include bicycle and pedestrian safety. The effect of this decision will be to provide simplified funding procedures for these programs.

I believe this is an important issue and observe that the Senate Appropriations Committee said recently:

> The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration Authorization Act of 1991, as passed by the Senate, requires NHTSA to complete a rulemaking in this area within 2 years of enactment. The Committee requests, therefore, that NHTSA submit a report on data it has collected and research conducted regarding ways of reducing pedestrian deaths and injuries through making vehicles more forgiving by removing sharp edges, softening the hood and cowl area, increasing the space between the hood and engine components, and other approaches, the cost of such designs in new cars, and on the numbers of deaths and injuries currently by type of injury and by vehicle type causing the injuries. The report shall include information on vehicle designs for pedestrian protection in other countries.

Although we have not adopted the Senate provision mentioned by the Senate Committee, I believe such a report could be helpful. I look forward to the NHTSA report. I expect, however, that the report will also identify and explain the relevant issues regarding the development and issuance of any possible future rule applicable to pedestrians. This would include the problems, costs and benefits in applying such a rule to passenger cars and light duty and heavy duty trucks, taking into account the extent to which the front end of such a vehicle would need to be changed or modified and the problems and costs of such change or modification, including effects on all actions taken by vehicle manufacturers to meet various Federal safety, fuel economy and emission requirements. The report should also explain the extent to which the Secretary's research and applicable dummy research adequately represents various children and adults and represents accidents that occur between motor vehicles and pedestrians and the extent to which head injuries are attributable, not to the vehicle, but to impacts (occurring after the pedestrian is struck by the vehicle) against roadways, curbs, sidewalks, fences, or other hard surfaces. I will be expecting such information.

In the case of bumpers, NHTSA said:

> Our view on the bumper system labeling disclosure provision of S. 1012 is that it would not be useful to consumers and might be misleading. Relating bumper performance only to impact speed does not account for accident frequency or the cost, including replacement costs, of any added protection attributed to higher speed damage-free bumper systems. In addition, a correlation between low-speed bumper impact tests and real world accident experience is not achievable because data sources for low speed accidents and costs do not exist, and would be extremely difficult, if not impossible, to develop. Data on low-speed damageability have failed to indicate that a viable consumer information program on bumpers could be developed, and the type of labeling proposed would not address the consumer costs associated with higher levels of bumper protection.
> With regard to the amendment to the impact speed of the bumper standard as proposed in S. 1012 and H.R. 1967, the bumper standard was lowered from 5 mph to 2.5 mph in 1982, based on extensive analysis of the costs and benefits of 5-mph bumpers. While the agency recognized that 2.5 mph bumpers would lead to more vehicle damage in low-speed crashes, it found that this increase would be more than offset by consumer savings in the original and replacement costs of such bumpers and in fuel savings due to lighter weight.
> Subsequently, in 1987 the agency conducted an extensive study comparing the benefits and costs to consumers of 5-mph and 2.5-mph bumper requirements. The study compared the collision damage experience and bumper system costs of post-1982 passenger vehicles to bumpers on preamendment vehicles.

Among the conclusions of this agency study were that the net costs to consumers have not increased as a result of the modification of the standard from 5.0 mph impact resistance to 2.5 mph, and that the changed standard has not affected the protection of safety related parts. While a 2.5 mph bumper clearly gives a vehicle less protection than a 5 mph bumper in certain low-speed crashes, not every vehicle is involved in such low-speed crashes during its lifetime. Thus, only some car owners, particularly those in urban areas where low-speed crashes are more frequent, benefit from having 5 mph bumper requirements. A standard more stringent than the existing one would cause many passenger car owners to pay for protection that they would not need.

Accordingly, the agency determined that the modified 2.5 mph bumper standard best satisfies the Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act's mandate to "obtain the maximum feasible reduction of costs to the public and consumers," while considering other statutory factors. We are not aware of any data that would lead us to change this conclusion.

Question 16 also requested an explanation as to the safety nature of these provisions. Passenger car bumpers provide for a minimum level of damageability protection in low-speed impacts. (The bumper standard specifies no sheet metal damage or damage to safety systems when the vehicle is impacted at 2.5 mph.) However, this protection does not contribute significantly to reducing occupant injuries. At the higher crash speeds at which injuries are likely to occur, it is the structural performance of the vehicle as well as safety belts and/or other occupant crash protection equipment which provides occupant protection—not the bumper.

Next, question 16 asks to what extent the proposed amendments are related to insurance issues. The Insurance Institute for Highway Safety expends considerable effort to evaluate bumpers and report their findings in their Status Report. However, at the present time, insurance companies do not extend discounts to owners of vehicles with bumper systems that exceed our bumper standards' impact requirements, nor do they charge higher rates for bumper systems that just meet these requirements. This is an issue between the insurance industry and the auto manufacturers; the consumer, on average, is not affected.

Clearly in any consideration of bumpers, all of these matters must be considered.

In the case of crashworthiness, I think both NHTSA and the National Academy of Sciences have indicated that a study of the nature suggested by the Senate would be extremely costly and not provide the kind of information that all believe would be necessary in this area. However, as the conference report indicated this is a matter that should continue to be evaluated taking into consideration the above correspondence.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that the conferees have done a good job in coming up with a reasonable bill that is a vast improvement over the ones proposed in the Senate. I think it is important that we resolve these matters and put them behind us in the name of safety, and the need to provide some certainty and stability for the auto industry and its workers. I reiterate that this is an industry that is in difficulty. Many of its workers have lost their jobs. Today we know that plants are closed, some temporarily, some indefinitely. All of that has an impact not only on the manufacturers themselves but on the suppliers, who I dare say are located in all of your congressional districts.

I am pleased to be a supporter of this proposal. It will provide greater safety and while that will be costly to the consumer I think it is in the public interest.

I expect NHTSA to administer this program fairly and responsibly and I expect to maintain oversight over the agency in this regard.

Mr. Speaker, I urge adoption.

Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. BENTLEY], a distinguished member of the committee.

Mrs. BENTLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the conference report on the transportation reauthorization bill.

I want to commend Messrs. ROSE and HAMMERSCHMIDT, the chairman and ranking minority member of the full Public Work and Transportation Committee, and Messrs. MINETA and SHUSTER, the chairman and ranking minority member of the Subcommittee on Surface Transportation, as well as all of my fellow conferees and the staff for their hard work and diligence during the past several weeks.

I want to assure all of our colleagues in this body, as well as the public, who will benefit from this legislation, that first and foremost, the conferees sought to achieve a compromise between the House and Senate versions of the transportation reauthorization bill that would be fair and equitable to all. I believe we accomplished that goal.

Mr. Speaker, the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act indeed is a piece of Federal legislation for America.

It is, without question, the most significant and important public works bill this Congress has considered in the past two decades.

This transportation conference report provides an invaluable boost to the American economy, having an economic impact of $1.5 trillion; it will enable the return to the economy additional billions of dollars now lost to inefficiencies of our transportation network, and, more importantly, it will create almost 2 million jobs for Americans.

Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, the Buy-American clause—again providing many more jobs for Americans.

Improved safety features also are included—one of which I requested—namely to require installation of reflector lane markers so drivers know where their lane is on dark rainy nights.

Maryland is one of the 34 reasons which Mr. CLINGER cited as the reason why this should be approved.

The conference report, Mr. Speaker, will serve as the blueprint for America's transportation system that, in turn, will greatly aid America's productivity, efficiency, and competitiveness in the global arena.

Without its enactment, American businesses will continue to suffer, productivity will continue to stagnate, and gridlock will continue to cripple the movement of commerce and individual travel.

This Congress has invested billions of dollars in foreign aid at a time when our economy and budget deficit can ill afford it. With the use of Federal gas tax revenue and a spend down of the highway trust fund, now is the time for this Congress to invest in America. That is what this conference report does.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly urge my colleagues to vote for this conference report.

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI].

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the conference report on H.R. 2950, the Surface Transportation Act, including the financing title.

America needs renewed investment in infrastructure, and H.R. 2950 is a strong and welcome response to that need. It provides for much needed construction and repair of our Nation's roads and bridges, and strengthens America's mass transit network. It allows considerable transferability among the different transportation accounts, thus providing crucial flexibility for State and local officials to decide the best use of funding in their own locales. It funds infrastructure programs adequately over the next 6 years, but exhibits fiscal responsibility by spending only as fast as the funding allows.

The Public Works and Transportation conferees, under the able chairmanship of chairman ROBERT ROE, have labored long and hard over the last several weeks to present to this Congress a responsible, effective, fully-funded highway authorization bill.

It has been a difficult conference. But, in the end I believe they have successfully satisfied the competing goals of completing construction of the Nation's Interstate Highway System and repairing and maintaining our older well-used highways. They have balanced the needs of our wide-open rural areas with our heavily-populated urban areas. They have addressed safety, congestion, and pollution problems associated with surface transportation. They have produced an excellent bill. They deserve our praise and our thanks.

The Ways and Means conferees, along with those of the Senate Finance Committee, are happy to join our Public Works colleagues in completing this bill by adding a financing title that will ensure that the necessary funding is available for the improvements in our transportation system provided by H.R. 2950.

The tax conferees' financing title would extend the expiration date of current highway fuels taxes and allow for continued transfers into, and authority to spend out of, the highway trust fund. The financing title would also provide an anti-sequester safeguard mechanism to reduce 1992 obligations from the bill in the event that the official scoring of H.R. 2950 would otherwise create a pay-as-you-go sequester.

Currently, all highway trust fund taxes, as well as the taxes on motorboat and small engine fuels, are scheduled to expire on September 30, 1995. The financing title would extend these taxes through September 30, 1999, to fully fund this bill's new 6-year authorization. The full amount of gross revenues from these existing trust fund taxes would continue to be deposited into the fund.

The 2½-cent deficit reduction tax on motor fuels, enacted last year, is also scheduled to expire on September 30, 1995. The deficit reduction tax is not extended in the financing title.

Mr. Speaker, I believe this bill is important for our country. I also believe it is important for my city, Chicago. I believe this bill will bring jobs to the people of my district. It will allow completion of the badly needed reconstruction of the Kennedy Expressway, which is only a stone's throw from my home. It will fund many important local projects like the State Street Mall redesign and several bridge repair programs.

Mass transit, important to Chicago, will finally be funded at a reasonable level. For Chicago, this will mean the central city circulator can be built to move people around the loop.

Mr. Speaker, I urge that H.R. 2950, including the financing title, be enacted because it is a good, responsible bill that will provide needed improvements in America's transportation system. My colleagues, I strongly urge your support for H.R. 2950 including its fiscally responsible financing provisions.

Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New York [Mr. LENT], the ranking member of the Committee on Energy and Commerce and a conferee.

Mr. LENT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the conference report and congratulate the Chairman, Mr. ROE, the vice-chairman, Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT, and all members of the Committee on Public Works, for coming together on a bill that will most probably be signed into law by President Bush. While my colleagues have concentrated their remarks on the highway and transit portions of this bill, I would like to address my remarks to title II.

Highway safety is of great importance to each of us. Every day, hundreds of Americans die on our Nation's highways. I am pleased to report that our annual fatality rate is declining, but we still have much to do.

Title II reauthorizes the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, which was last reauthorized in 1982. It also calls for the initiation of rulemakings designed to save lives. Under the terms of this legislation, by 1997, all automobiles sold in this country will be equipped with airbags. Head injury protection will be improved, and the National Highway Traffic Administration will undertake a major study for the improvement of braking systems.

While I realize that our domestic automobile industry is currently experiencing financial difficulty, I believe that the provisions of title II have been crafted in such a way as to avoid undue or burdensome regulation.

Mr. Speaker, both majority and minority staff have worked diligently to bring an agreement to us this morn. The balance struck is good for both those who use our highways, and those who make our cars. The legislation is overdue, but is before us tonight. I urge my colleagues to join with me in supporting the bill.

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Washington [Mr. SWIFT].

Mr. SWIFT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, this is a historic day. We are considering critical legislation that will be the single most important blow Congress will strike against the recession this year. If approved, we will invest $150 billion in improving the Nation's productivity, start rebuilding our once mighty transportation facilities, and create at least 2 million jobs.

We will also be looking ahead. In addition to caring for highway and mass transit needs, this bill takes the extraordinary step of contemplating transportation systems of the future. The conferees have agreed on a package of high-speed ground transportation programs that, if carefully developed, should link major metropolitan areas and transportation hubs of all regions together in a coherent, accessible matrix.

We've all known for some time that high-speed trains, both magnetic levitation and steel-wheel, pose solutions to traditional energy-gulping, polluting forms of transportation. The Transportation Research Board, Office of Technology Assessment, National Research Council, and even the Department of Transportation have all concluded that high-speed trains will move people quickly, safely, and competitively while minimizing pollution and energy consumption.

The package we have crafted ensures the balanced pursuit of both maglev and high-speed, steel-wheel technologies. We are creating a three-phase competitive design program culminating in the construction of a third-generation maglev prototype. We are amending an existing program to make high-speed, steel-wheel development projects eligible for Federal loan guarantees up to $1 billion. And we are creating a basic research and technology demonstration program that will draw together all available knowledge to help advance both technologies.

Industry and Wall Street have indicated significant interest in high-speed ground transportation. They have been waiting for Congress to give the word. Well, I'm pleased to say that Congress has put money where its mouth is: The total package is funded by a $1.8 billion combination of direct financial support and loan guarantees. Indeed, we can now say to States and consortia waiting to make high speed rail inventment decisions, "the word is given."

I am also pleased that we have been able to include some very important, very necessary automobile safety measures within this reauthorization of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. Rarely do we have the opportunity to pass a measure that will have such direct and immediate impact upon the health and welfare of the American public. But that is the case here. This legislation will save lives. Many men, women, and children in the future will survive otherwise serious accidents on the Nation's highways because of requirements in this legislation to mandate airbags, to improve head injury protection, to direct NHTSA to target resources to make child booster seats safer, to lower the risk of vehicle rollover, to protect against side impact collisions, and to improve the design of safety belts.

This legislation was crafted with the care and concern that it deserved by Members from both Houses, from both sides of the aisle. Very early in the process there was a unanimous acknowledgment by all conferees that this was an opportunity to pass important reauthorization legislation that has eluded us for many years. I think all conferees can take a great deal of pride in the work we have accomplished, but I would particularly like to single out Chairman DINGELL of the Energy and Commerce Committee for his commitment to this process, and to Senator GORTON for his consistent support for conference efforts to find practicable answers to difficult problems.

There are issues we deal with around here that are arcane or very narrowly crafted; there are issues where the anticipated results are far in the future or difficult to quantify. This legislation affects everyone, and the results will be seen every time someone walks away from a crash where before they would have suffered serious injury or death. Highway safety—protecting the public from injury and death—is one of the most important issues that can be addressed, and I think Congress should take a great deal of pride that we have addressed it in this legislation in a direct, effective, and responsible way. We will save lives because this legislation is on the books.

Finally, I would like to commend the conferees for including provisions in the conference report that address the specific congestion problems on the Interstate 5 corridor north of Seattle. The Marysville/Tulalip interchange and the Snohomish County HOV lanes will provide necessary—and long overdue—relief for commuters and businesses who have endured endless frustrations in I–5 snarls.

I would like to conclude by recognizing the herculean efforts that have formed the bedrock of this legislation. The chairman of the committee, Mr. Roe, the subcommittee chairman, Mr. Mineta, and the ranking Republican members, Messrs. Hammerschmidt and Shuster, have done a tremendous job pulling together the Nation's transportation policy for the next 6 years. I thank them for their efforts, and for working with me and the members of my committee in assuring that our repective jurisdictional concerns were addressed in a constructive and productive manner.

Mr. Speaker, the staff of the Committee on Public Works and Transportation has been particularly helpful, and for myself and my staff I want to let them know how much we appreciate that.

Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. Packard], a very able member of our conference and our committee.

Mr. PACKARD. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I want to rise in strong support of this piece of legislation and start by congratulating my committee leadership for their magnificent work, the committee members, the conferees, and particularly the staff members. They have done a magnificent job in working this bill for the last several months.

Mr. Speaker, let me touch upon several macropolicy changes that are going to take place in transportation policy in this legislation. No. one, this will be $151 billion into a sagging economy in the next 6 years, over 40 percent more than we have spent in transportation in any other year. This is a magnificent effort in rebuilding this country's infrastructure.

Mr. Speaker, for the last 10 years I and our committee have been looking for the money and the will to start rebuilding the sagging and crumbling infrastructure in this country. This bill starts that process for the first time in the 10 years I have served on the committee. For the last 10 years we have been trying to spend down the highway trust fund and not been successful. This bill will start the process. During the next 8 years we will spend down the highway trust fund down to a safety net level.

This bill for the first time puts flexibility in the spending of our transportation dollars. I served at the local level on one of the local metropolitan planning organizations. We never had the flexibility to make our own decisions and develop our own priorities as to where transportation dollars go. This bill provides that flexibility and sends money directly, not through the States, but directly to the metropolitan and local planning agencies. This is the first time we have ever done that. That will be a magnificent effort.

Mr. Speaker, this bill provides the necessary dollars to fulfill the requirements of the Clean Air Act.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly urge my colleagues to support this bill and vote it into law.

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Florida [Mr. Bennett].

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. Speaker, before us tonight is the most comprehensive highway bill this Congress has considered in 35 years. I remember being in this Chamber in 1956 when we overwhelmingly supported and passed President Eisenhower's plan to build a national Interstate System. Some people say that that was the most effective piece of legislation in the Eisenhower administration; still others say it was one of the most important pieces of domestic legislation ever enacted into law.

In pursuit of President Eisenhower's dream, we established the Federal highway trust fund in which States contributed according to ability and received according to need. Such a system meant that large, growing States would contribute more in order to supplement those less populated States that could not fund their own interstates alone.

Those States that contribute more than their fair share have become known as donor States. Mr. Speaker, my State of Florida is one of those, and I am here to tell you that we are proud of the contribution Florida has made in helping other States to complete the Interstate System.

But as proud as we are of our efforts, we are as adamant about the need to modernize the distribution formulas. You see, in 1956, we faced unique needs and we developed a unique solution, but no longer does that same need exist, and the solution must be changed. Unfortunately, this conference report does not do that. Instead, it attempts to address modern transportation needs through antiquated formulas.

We are stuck with a formula in this legislation that distributes money, in part, based on rural mail carrier route miles and a State's land area. This is not the way to distribute transportation money to States who are trying to maintain and construct eight-lane superhighways and high-capacity bridges.

Even more unfortunate is the fact that this legislation disregards the formulas we included in the House bill. So many of us from donor States fought vigorously for the inclusion of the so-called FAST formula, which distributed Federal highway trust funds on the basis of modern transportation needs. The new formula analyzed vehicle miles traveled per State, lane miles per State, and State-wide diesel fuel use—factors that truly reflect need. Donor States had high hopes going into conference that our formula would be protected, but that is not the case and I must oppose this conference report and urge my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. Speaker, over the last 48 hours, I have reviewed all available information from the conference and am not pleased by what I've learned. The conference report before us will mean only 82 cents per dollar for my State. That is unacceptable for its unfairness, especially when you consider that we will do worse under the conference report than we did under the Senate and House bills. Many of my colleagues from donor States can make the same claim.

I have been criticized by some Members for distributing inaccurate numbers. They are not. They just tell the whole story. Until 2 o'clock this last afternoon, there was confusion as to what the conference report said. Even now, we have tables produced by the Federal Highway Administration that I am told exceed the level we can spend. Even more disheartening is the fact that few, if any, of us have had the opportunity to read the report language, yet we are expected to vote on the bill. If there is confusion as to what this conference report says or how various States are treated, it's understandable. Because, Mr. Speaker, there has not been enough time to analyze what is before us.

It is my sincere understanding that this conference report is not good for donor States and does not establish a policy which is fair, equitable, or forward thinking. Claims to the contrary are simply an overeager attempt to pass this bill. I am not that eager, Mr. Speaker, to lock my State into a formula for the next 6 years which will force us to contribute so much more to the trust fund than we will receive and which does not address the equity issue which donor States have fought for so earnestly.

I urge the defeat of this bill, not in an effot to be belligerent or to keep our Nation from funding its transportation system. Rather than looking out for the short-term needs of this country, I am looking out for the long-term needs for the greater good. Mr. Speaker, if we are successful in defeating this legislation, I would support a temporary extension of current law so that time would be available to try to work out a bill that is more fair to donor States. The bill will do a lot of good even if enacted in its present form but it is not fair to donor States.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I have to say that the debate has been overwhelming and creates a strong urge to vote for this bill. But my colleague from Florida [Mr. Bennett] earlier this morning made quite an eloquent statement as to the formulas used in the distribution of these funds.

It is important to me as one who is going to be called upon to vote and one who is concerned about fair treatment for a growth State like the State of Florida to know just exactly what the figures are.

The eloquent statement of the gentleman from Florida [Mr. Bennett] was very convincing. I am wondering if one of the managers of the bill could respond to the issue of just how is a growth State like Florida treated in this regard?

Mr. SHUSTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BENNETT. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SHUSTER. Mr. Speaker, first, I have before me a document published yesterday by the Federal Highway Administration which reports that Florida, for the past 5 years, in the existing law received 77 cents of return on dollars paid into the highway account for every dollar paid in.

In this conference report Florida will receive return on dollars paid in highway account, 92 cents, according to the Federal Highway Administration. So it is a very substantial increase.

Beyond that, Florida for the past 5 years received $2,471,000,000. Under this legislation Florida will receive $4,637,000,000 or an 87 percent increase in dollars.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, as I expressed before, the 92 percent is really very inaccurate. Actually the return is about 82 cents on the dollar. That is because of where the money is applied. The formula, the percentages are applied not across the board in this bill, and it is actually 82 cents, according to the information coming to me from the Department of Transportation.

Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Zimmer].

Mr. ZIMMER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this conference report. It is a tremendous investment in America's future. It will enable us to be competitive in the year 2000. It is going to create over 2 million jobs.

Mr. Speaker, we have talked for the last several weeks and today particularly of progrowth. This is progrowth. It will help us get our economy moving again. It will have a strong economic impact.

Mr. Speaker, I urge Members to vote in support of this conference report. It is progrowth, it is projobs, it is pro-America. Let us get moving. Let us pass it.

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. Rahall], a member of our committee.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Intermodal Surface Transportation Act of 1991. I commend the bionic leadership of our chairman, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Roe], and his partners in intermodalism, the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Hammerschmidt], the gentleman from California [Mr. Mineta], and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Shuster]. This is truly an intermodal transportation act of profound ramifications for this country, well into the next century.

It has been said this morning that this bill may well be the most important piece of legislation of this Congress. I think it may be the most important piece of legislation in this decade.

This legislation will certainly cover this country as far as the concerns of the backpackers to the high tech mag lift projects, from the pedestrian walkways to high speed trains. It is indeed intermodal in its ramifications. It will have profound impact upon the workers of this country, providing, as we have already heard, over 2 million jobs over the next 6 years.

Mr. Speaker, I also reminded my colleagues, especially the gentleman from Florida [Mr. Bennett], who just spoke before me, as well as those from donor States, that it is important to look at all of the ramifications of this legislation. Do not just look at the column in regard to highway legislation, because this is not a highway bill. It is a transportation bill. Look at the transit columns as well. Look at all of the formulas. Look at all of the transportation effects that this bill will have on your State before making any harsh judgments.

The transit funding, as the chairman of the subcommittee [Mr. Mineta] has so well said, is the highest transit spending that this country has ever embarked upon.

Mr. Speaker, I urge passage of the pending legislation.

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Applegate].

Mr. APPLEGATE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to just join in some of the accolades and say that I have never been so proud in 30 elected years of serving with such leadership as the gentleman from New Jersey, Bob Roe; the gentleman from Arkansas, Paul Hammerschmidt; the gentleman from California, Norm Mineta; and the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Bud Shuster, the staffs who did an outstanding job, tremendous, and the conferees that I had a chance to work with.

Democrats and Republicans are sparring around a little bit like Holyfield and Tyson. They are not getting anywhere either, as far as an economic growth package is concerned.

We are talking about tax cuts from the Democrat side, tax breaks from the Republican side. I tell my colleagues, if one does not have a job, one cannot get a tax break. One cannot get a tax cut.

Americans want jobs; they do not want the handouts.

This transportation bill, if my colleagues will listen to me, is the jump-start that the Nation's economy needs, and they need it now. It is $151 billion, 6 years, 2 million jobs, and I am not talking about these Wendy's jobs. I am talking about meat and potato jobs, jobs that will put something on the table.

It is a bill for all Americans, and it is one that I understand that the President is going to sign.

As America grows a million and a half people each year, by the year 2000 we are going to have a lot of people. And we will need the better roads of transportation. We will need the better infrastructure. We will need the building of our bridges to bring together everything to move into the 21st century.

I say this: That every State, every State is going to benefit by this to a great amount of money, much more than they have over previous years. Forty to fifty percent more money, we will be able to do a lot of things that we have not been able to do in the past.

America's economy needs this. The people want it. I say to my colleagues, do not go home without it.

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. Oakar].

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the chairman. I want to thank him and his fantastic staff for doing such a great job, along with the minority side and others.

I am only sorry that we are debating this wonderful all-American job bill that will repair our infrastructures and provide transportation for the American people. And in Ohio alone, create about 40,000 jobs and sustain jobs for the people in my State and throughout the country.

Mr. Speaker, I want to tell my colleagues what it will do for Ohio because we are a donor State, but I will tell my colleagues with all of the discretionary funds that we anticipate getting, we think we are not going to be a donor State.

Over a 5-year period from 1987–91, we got $2.28 billion. Under this bill, we will have a 47-percent increase to $4.174 billion for the people of Ohio, return of their tax dollars that will generate into a new all-American spirit.

Congratulations, Mr. Chairman. You are terrific.

Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute.

I would not want this debate on this conference report to go by without acknowledging the great hope that we receive from the Department of Transportation under Secretary Sam Skinner, especially through Dr. Tom Larson, the Federal Highway Administrator and Bryan Clymer, the Administrator of the Federal Transit Administration.

They gave us invaluable help. They did computer run after computer run. I wanted to acknowledge that in this debate.

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise to support this bill, although I agree with the gentleman from Florida [Mr. BENNETT] and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. YOUNG]. We still are really not fully satisfied.

If we add the trust fund money that will be spent to the money that Florida will add in and get back, we think it reduces it. But there is an overriding concern beyond that alone. The discretionary money which the gentlewoman from Ohio just talked about that Florida will get, which will create jobs and the rest of that.

People in Florida, like everywhere else in this country, are mobile. People in Florida expect when they drive to other States that there will be a better infrastructure in those States as well. They want the bridges and the roads and the tunnels and the highways to be good in other States, as they drive. They have paid their tax dollars in. They want to see other roads where they are participants, where they are users, to be safe and in satisfactory condition, not only for their residents but for us as well.

This will create jobs. In Florida the unemployment rate is over 8 percent. We need this as well.

We will come back and try to get parity on the formula eventually, but in the mean while America needs this bill. And so does Florida.

I urge my colleagues' support.

Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Kansas [Mr. NICHOLS], a member of the committee.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the intermodal transportation bill. This bill is properly regarded as an investment, not an expense, in America.

The multiplier effect of the moneys ranging from 2 to 10 times as the dollars bounce around will move all of our States in a progress direction. It will help gear us all up for the 21st century.

I strongly urge its passage.

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SLATTERY].

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for yielding time to me, and it is a pleasure to rise at this early hour and express my strong support for the work of the chairman and the gentleman from California [Chairman MINETA] and the ranking minority members.

I strongly urge my colleagues to support this legislation, which in my view is one of the great highlights of this session.

There has been a lot of talk about economic growth packages, but my friends, this is the economic growth package that this Congress is going to pass, $151 billion over a 6-year period that will create 2 million jobs, according to the White House 4 million jobs, that is good news for all Americans.

In addition to that, the correction in this legislation as it affects donor States is also good news for many donor States who in the past have contributed a lot more to the highway trust fund than they got back. So that is another very important change in the highway bill as far as I am concerned.

The last point I would make, that I think is very important, is that for the first time we are giving the States the flexibility they need to most efficiently utilize the money that this legislation will provide them.

I urge strong support for this legislation, and I commend all the Members who have worked to move this legislation through the process.

Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HASTERT], a distinguished member of the committee.

Mr. HASTERT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, will gentleman yield?

Mr HASTERT. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, the merits of this bill will be told for years to come through the improved infrastructure it will provide. More importantly, thousands of people will participate in implementing the provisions of the law, and that is very welcome. This is a real jobs bill for real people addressing real needs in making America more competitive.

Mr. HASTERT. Mr. Speaker, I want to extend my congratulations to the ranking member and the ranking member of the subcommittee and certainly the chairman of both the subcommittee and the committee for the great work that they have done. I think it is important that we say the statements in this bill, too, that will change the competitiveness of this country for decades to come, because it sets up a streamlining for our transportation industry, a one-stop shopping and something that will save consumers and shippers billions of dollars as well as the fine work that has gone in to work the highway system and the infrastructure of the country.

I commend the chairman and the ranking member and urge strong support of this bill.

□ 1530

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, but I want to do something in honor of the staff who have worked, Members just have no idea of the extraordinary job that the staff on both sides of the aisle and also in the Senate have done to contribute to this effort. I am going to do something unusual and I am going to name them, and I hope Members will indulge me and give them a response.

They are:

Bob Bergman, John Doyle, Maureen Dubia, Cindy Elliot, Sante Esposito, Jack Fryer, Eunice Goldring, Kathy Guilfoy, Kathy Hoffman, Ken House, Pam Keller, Sheila Lockwood.

Cheryl McCullough, Jimmy Miller, Toby Mullvain, George Noblin, Pepper Riley, Caryll Rinehard, Jack Schenendorf, Jeff Shoaf, Roger Slagle, Dave Smallen, Suzanne Sullivan, Becky Weber, and Susan Byneder.

Mr. Speaker, I think we should give them a big hand.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, this is an anxious time of year in Washington. As Congress rushes to complete action on unfinished legislation before we adjourn, I remain gravely concerned that the people of Florida and other donor States are being taken for a ride by the Transportation conference report without serious consideration of its consequences. Florida has historically been badly shortchanged by the funding formula, leaving us to export millions of dollars in jobs and transportation project to other States.

The conference report, brought to the floor sight-unseen and in the middle of the night, does nothing to improve Florida's situation and that of other donor States. Legislators were asked to take at face value committee assurances that the new bill would treat our States fairly, but in light of Florida's past treatment, and the fact that Florida transportation will receive no more than 83 cents for every $1 the Florida taxpayer pays into the highway trust fund, I could not support the bill. These decisions are simply too important to be railroaded through with no ability to analyze and verify the information we were asked to approve. Supposedly, the bill is good for America. We've been down that road before with the now infamous budget agreement, and unfortunately we can all now see what good that did the American people.

Make no mistake, there are some encouraging provisions in this legislation, and perhaps given time and some sleep, the negotiations could have produced a truly good bill. However, the long-term well being of Florida's transportation infrastructure cannot be traded for one-shot buyoffs, but requires a stable, fair funding formula that reflects Florida's position as one of the most populous, fastest-growing States in the country. By voting for this bill, I would have contributed to an effort to lock Florida and other donor States into 6 years of exporting close to $1 billion to pay for transportation projects in other States. This money is desperately needed within our own borders. It has been said that this is a jobs bill, but I fail to see much benefit for Florida in sending Florida dollars to pay for jobs in the District of Columbia, Alaska, and Hawaii over the next 6 years.

Am I frustrated? You better believe it. Once again rational, fairminded legislation was derailed by middle-of-the-night, backroom dealmaking. When I voted against this bill last month, I said Florida seemed to be choosing between getting hit by a Mack truck or a Honda. Well, this morning we got hit by the Mack truck after all, a Mack truck driven by the business-as-usual group in Washington. No wonder the American people are fed up with Congress.

Mr. DE LUGO. I rise to congratulate the distinguished chairman of the House Public Works and Transportation Committee for his efforts in bringing this Transportation conference report on H.R. 2950 to successful passage. As Senator MOYNIHAN said of Chairman ROE during the House-Senate conference proceedings of the last 2 weeks, "This man's energy and dedication are nothing short of a miracle." As a member of the conference I can personally attest to this as well as his extraordinary patience under incredible pressure.

I also want to commend the ranking minority member of the committee, JOHN PAUL HAMMERSCHMIDT, for his extraordinary efforts on this bill, as well as NORM MINETA, the chairman of the Surface Transportation Subcommittee, and its ranking minority member, BUD SHUSTER.

Indeed, this is landmark transportation legislation which will chart a new economic course in this country as it will in my own district, the U.S. Virgin Islands. The entire country owes a tremendous debt of gratitude to these gentlemen for their leadership and vision in enacting this legislation which will benefit the Nation for many years to come.

Finally, the staff of the House Public Works and Transportation Committee deserves special commendation. Their extraordinary skill and talent in working on this most complex bill was trully remarkable. During the final days of the conference on this bill, they performed in an outstanding manner literally around the clock.

Mr. Speaker, it was a privilage to serve as a conferee on this bill and to work with the leadership and staff of the House Public Works and Transportation Committee.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I strongly support the conferees' deletion from the Intermodal Surface Transportation Infrastructure Act of 1991, H.R. 2950, of the Senate's provision that would have permitted the Attorney General to block any Government agency from issuing regulations if the Attorney General were to decide that the agency does not have adequate procedures for assessing whether its regulations may result in the taking of private property within the meaning of the fifth amendment of the Constitution. This proposal would unwisely give the Attorney General radically new veto powers without any attention given to the processes of openness and accountability that are now required by the Administrative Procedure Act [APA].

This proposal is just the latest saga in the effort by the administration to delay and block health and safety and other critical regulations that Congress has mandated and to do this in secret, behind closed doors, and out of public view contrary to the intent of the APA. In 1981 President Reagan established the Presidential Task Force on Regulatory Relief, which was headed by then-Vice President Bush. In June 1990 President Bush created the Council on Competitiveness to carry on the same functions as the task force and designated Vice President QUAYLE as its chairman.

Vice President QUAYLE has played an active role in orchestrating the current campaign to enact a proposal to permit the Attorney General to delay, perhaps indefinitely, any regulation of any agency. Documents supplied this spring to the Committee on Government Operations by the Council indicate that the Council considered this proposal at least twice. At its September 27, 1990 meeting the Council approved administration support for a "private property amendment." The Council explained that the bill is "an extension of Executive Order 12630—governmental actions and interference with constitutionally protected property rights that was developed by the task force on regulatory relief, chaired by then-Vice President Bush, and signed by President Reagan in 1988." At its December 19 meeting the Council reported that it "is working with the Department of Justice and OMB to develop a legislative initiative to protect constitutional property rights. * * * The Council requested that the legislation be expanded to include all agencies and be codified to define the nature of the individual right of action that would be provided."

Senator SYMMS introduced the Private Property Rights Act, S. 50, incorporating the principles articulated by the Council, and on June 12, 1991 he said that the Vice President had called him that morning and asked him to offer his bill as an amendment to the highway bill. The Senate adopted the bill as title IV of the highway bill.

Title IV affects the regulations of every agency. It would permit the Attorney General to delay indefinitely any regulation of an agency until the Attorney General certifies that the agency has established adequate procedures for assessing the potential of its regulations constituting a taking within the meaning of the fifth amendment.

Under this proposal, the Attorney General could, for example, block a regulation of the Department of Housing and Urban Development [HUD] helping low-income families acquire housing if the Attorney General determined that HUD did not have adequate procedures for deciding whether the loss of revenue to builders was a taking. Or the Attorney General could block Environmental Protection Agency [EPA] regulations dealing with the cleanup of Superfund sites to protect public health because the Attorney General had not approved EPA's procedures for assessing whether the disruption of business was a taking.

The Attorney General would exercise this veto power even if Congress has mandated the regulation. Moreover, the Attorney General would exercise this veto power exempt from the procedures for openness and accountability that Congress has carefully crafted in the APA. No Court would be able to determine whether the Attorney General's decision to block an agency's regulations was based on the public record or on a private telephone call.

Concerned about the sweeping implications of this proposal, the Committee on Government Operations asked the Office of Management and Budget [OMB] for information on the extent to which Government regulations have in fact been held by a court to be a taking within the meaning of the fifth amendment. OMB referred the committee's July 18 request to the Department of Justice [DOJ], which responded on October 11.

The DOJ data show that since January 1, 1988 DOJ has closed 106 cases involving an alleged regulatory taking. In only 27 of these 106 cases—(or 25 percent)—was money paid to the property owner, and the total amount of money awarded over this 3½-year period in these 27 takings cases was only about $28 million, excluding interest, or less than $9 million a year.

Moreover, these 27 cases involved only five Federal agencies: the Department of Agriculture, three cases; the Army, nine cases; the Department of Energy, one case; the General Services Administration, one case; and the Department of the Interior, 13 cases.

The $28 million awarded during the last 3½ years in these 27 regulatory cases is, of course, important to the particular property owners involved in the disputes, and we all want to ensure that regulatory actions pursuant to congressional action minimize encroachments on private property whenever possible.

But the information supplied by the administration makes it clear that there is no basis for believing that there is a significant risk that all regulations of all Federal agencies constitute a taking. It already takes far too long to implement health and safety regulations that Congress has authorized.

Title IV of the Senate highway bill was a radical solution in search of a problem at enormous cost to the protection of the health and safety of Americans, and I strongly support its deletion from the final bill.

Mr. LIGHTFOOT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report.

I am not happy with the circumstances in which we find ourselves tonight. It is frustrating when this body constantly finds itself considering major legislation in the dead of night, with perhaps one copy available to the Members. How can we be surprised that the public is disenchanted with our performance. And I cannot help but think we would not be in this situation if we had not wasted months trying to raise gas taxes another 5 cents a gallon.

In late July and early August I joined the majority of this body in not supporting efforts to raise gas taxes by another 5 cents a gallon. Tonight we have to be prepared to accept the consequences of our decision. States are not going to get as much highway money as they would like. Nor will our projects receive as much funding as they deserve. But I believe sacrificing some highway dollars is better than the potentially devastating effect raising gas prices would have on our economy.

Having said that, let's look at the conference report.

Unlike some bills before this House in the last few weeks, it is not loaded with accounting gimmicks to raise the deficit. We spend what we have and no more.

The State of Iowa will receive approximately $1.456 billion in highway funds over the life of the bill. Iowa receives funding for projects of major importance to southeastern and southwestern Iowa. The completion of Iowa Highway 2 from Sydney, IA, to Interstate 29, will stimulate economic development and increase safety in southwest Iowa. The Valley View Drive project in Council Bluffs, IA, will allow the community to safely expand in the only viable direction.

Finally, the bill recognizes the Avenue of the Saints as a corridor of national significance. Funding provided in the bill will be a great help toward the completion of this major transportation project for eastern Iowa. I appreciate the leadership of the Public Works Committee for recognizing the importance of the Avenue of the Saints. But I would also like to pay tribute to the entire Iowa delegation. We worked as a team to keep the avenue where it belongs, in Iowa. All Iowa Members, from both sides of the aisle, gave this serious challenge their maximum effort. It just goes to show what we can do as a team.

I am disappointed the House did not recede to Senate language granting States the authority to waive commercial drivers license requirements for agribusiness. There is not one bit of evidence to indicate agribusiness drivers are any more of a safety hazard than the custom harvesters who did receive an exemption in the bill. This is an important issue in rural America and I will not give up the effort for agribusinesses to receive this commonsense waiver.

My friends, I had the honor to serve on the Public Works Committee for 7 years. No doubt in a week or two we will find provisions in this bill that need correction. But America cannot wait any longer for this major infrastructure bill. I know BOB ROE, JOHN PAUL HAMMERSCHMIDT, NORM MINETA, and BUD SHUSTER. They have worked hard and in a truly bipartisan fashion. They are trying to do right for America and this House and deserve our support tonight. I urge my colleagues to support the bill.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report on the Intermodal Surface Transportation Act.

This conference report is a product of months of hard work by the chairman of the Committee on Public Works, Mr. ROE, his ranking member Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT, the chairman of the Subcommittee on Surface Transportation Mr. MINETA, and his ranking member, Mr. SCHUSTER. I commend them for their leadership and perseverance in bringing his massive and complex piece of legislation to the floor. On the whole I believe the conference report is an important measure which will help repair our Nation's ailing infrastructure, stimulate economic growth and meet our surface transportation needs into the next century. The mass transit provisions and funding of this bill are particularly worthy.

I rise to express my concerns about a provision in this bill which would establish a new National Recreational Trails Trust Fund. I and several other members of the Interior Committee were conferees on this section of the bill since the recreational trail trust fund provision directly deals with matters under the jurisdiction of the Interior Committee. While I strongly support the overall conference report, I was not able to sign the conference report because of the outcome of the conference with regard to this recreational trail provision. This provision was not contained in the House-passed version of the surface transportation bill. The language adopted in the conference report was not even in the Senate-passed bill, and goes beyond the scope of the Senate bill. While well-intentioned, the trails fund as contained in the conference report is not responsive to the majority of trail users in the country, is administratively inefficient, and could have a negative impact on the natural resource values of out Nation's public lands. Alternatives were presented during the conference which would have resulted in greater funding for trails, greater flexibility for States and greater responsiveness to actual trail use and demand than the proposal finally adopted by the conferees.

As chairman of the Subcommittee on National Parks and Public Lands, I have been involved in recreational trail issues for a number of years. The subcommittee has jurisdiction over the National Trails System Act, the National Wilderness Preservation System Act, the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act and a number of other provisions of law dealing with trails and recreation. Our committee has worked for a number of years on expanding all outdoor recreation opportunities, and has taken a particular interest in trails as a form of outdoor recreation. In addition to bring the committee which authorizes all national scenic, historic and recreational trails, our committee has taken a lead role in investigating trail issues and working for increased funding for trail land acquisition, construction and maintenance.

The Subcommittee on National Parks and Public Lands held a joint hearing on recreational trails in America with the Subcommittee on Energy and the Environment on October 31, 1991. This hearing brought in witnesses representing the National Park Service, the Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management, State recreation officials, State trails coordinators, trail researchers and a number of motorized and nonmotorized trail user groups. Although all of these witnesses were pleased about the prospect of new trails funding, a number of these witnesses expressed concerns about the specific provisions of the National Recreational Trail Trust Fund in the Senate-passed surface transportation bill. Based on the testimony at this hearing and other communications received regarding this provision, I and Chairman KOSTMAYER of the Energy and Environment Subcommittee began drafting an alternative proposal to address the many concerns that had been raised about this bill. This proposal was the basis for the bipartisan Interior Committee proposal discussed by the conferees on the surface transportation bill. This proposal contained several important advantages over the Senate-passed provision, including:

Requiring funds from the National Recreational Trails Trust Fund to go through the existing Land and Water Conservation Fund, thus providing substantial savings on administrative costs, a 50–50 Federal-State match for all trail projects and a process for prioritizing the recreational trail needs of each State through the State comprehensive outdoor recreation planning [SCORP] process. This approach was strongly favored by the National Park Service.

It allocated funds for recreational trails directly to the Federal land management agencies rather than having them go through States as in the Senate bill. This was appropriate since much motorized and nonmotorized recreational trail use occurs on Federal lands, and since there is a tremendous backlog of trail maintenance needs on Federal lands.

Rather than allocating funds along arbitrary percentages which had little to do with actual trail usage, the Interior proposal provided that funds were to be spent for the use and benefit of safer, more enjoyable and more environmentally sound trail opportunities for motorized and nonmotorized users alike. Trail research demonstrates that the vast majority of trail use is by hikers, bicyclists, horseback riders and other nonmotorized users. Data from the public area recreation visitor study [PARVS] suggest that of the 525 million trail uses on public lands which occur each year, 468 million or 89 percent are nonmotorized and 57 million or 11 percent are motorized. Because the Interior proposal left the allocation of trail funds up to the priorities of each State, it was more respective of States rights than the Senate-passed provision which imposed a mandatory percentage for spending funds on motorized and nonmotorized trail projects. I would have preferred language which would have allowed each State to decide its own trail priorities.

The Interior proposal also contained more strict language regarding construction and reconstruction of motorized trails through potential wilderness areas than the Senate proposal. This language was needed to prevent this legislation from prejudicing future congressional decisions about wilderness designation.

For these and a host of other reasons, the bipartisan Interior Committee proposal for a Recreational Trails Trust Fund was preferred over the Senate version by a number of trail and conservation organizations including the American Hiking Society, the Sierra Club, the National Wildlife Federation, the Wilderness Society, the National Parks and Conservation Association, the Rails to Trails Conservancy, the National Recreation and Parks Association and the National Association of State Outdoor Recreation Liaison Officers.

I would like to express my appreciation to the conferees on the surface transportation bill for their patience in discussing this matter which dealt with a relatively small level of funding in comparison to other programs in the bill. However, in the rush to complete the conference and the confusion which accompanied the vote on this matter in the conference I believe the conferees missed an opportunity to develop a recreational trails program that would have better served the needs of all recreational trails users.

I am particularly concerned that the conferees went beyond the scope of the bill passed by the Senate by designating the Secretary of Transportation to administer the recreational trails program. The Secretary of Interior is the appropriate Secretary to administer a program dealing with recreational trails. The surface transportation bill passed by the Senate designated the Secretary of Interior as the administrator of this program. The conferees recognized the importance of direct involvement of the Secretary of the Interior in this program by requiring the Secretary of Transportation to consult with the Secretary of the Interior. It is the clear intent of the conferees that the Secretary of Interior be consulted on all matters relating to the National Recreational Trails Trust Fund, including the appointments of the National Recreational Trails Advisory Committee, the establishment of the program for allocating money to the States and the review of the utilization of all funds allocated under this program.

Given the fact that funds can be used to construct and maintain trails on Federal public lands under this jurisdiction of the Interior Committee, I intend to exercise vigorous oversight of the program to ensure that Federal laws governing the management of these lands are fully complied with. Furthermore, I will work to ensure that no funds will be allocated under this Act in a manner that will prejudice the prerogative of Congress to designate as wilderness lands administered by the Forest Service, National Park Service or Bureau of Land management. It is my interpretation of the conference report language that funds made available by this report may not be used in a manner that will in any way impair the suitability of lands which are being reviewed for wilderness designation or which have been reviewed for such designation and have not been released for nonwilderness uses by act of Congress.

The Interior Committee will also be conducting close oversight of this program to ensure that the States shall not implement any shared trails use which may create unsafe conditions for any of the intended trail users. Corridor sharing referred to in the conference report may refer to corridor sharing among various types of nonmotorized trail users, and the States shall attempt to provide corridor sharing on fair and equitable fashion which is not prejudicial to the various user communities. Although the new trail trust fund is denominated "recreational" in nature, the conferees recognize that many bicycle and hiking trails serve important commuting objectives, especially in urban and suburban areas. Further, comparable trails in many parks and recreational areas can serve to reduce air pollution and foster similar environmental goals.

Mr. Speaker, as I previously stated the conferees had several alternatives which could have made this recreational trails proposal more environmentally sound and responsive to the diverse trail user needs which exist in this country. Besides this provision, I support the conference report and urge its prompt passage.

Mrs. BYRON. Mr. Speaker, last year, Americans spent more than $600 billion on health care. If we continue at this rate, we will spend $1.5 trillion on health care by the year 2000. I'm not so sure we can go on like this. As it stands, more than 33 million people have no health insurance, while millions more are underinsured. Those with insurance may be tempted to think that the problem doesn't affect us, well, it does. It is reflected not only in higher insurance premiums each year, but higher Medicaid costs—at the expense of other programs we enjoy. Rising infant mortality rates, and real-life problems with access to health services, are key problems.

I began talking about our health care system more than a year ago. During the summer of 1990, I sponsored four health care forums across my district. Frankly, I was surprised to see so little interest in health care. Beyond the 20 to 30 senior citizens at each stop, very few people seemed to care. Now that it's an election year, health care reform is the issue. I'm pleased to see this. We are fortunate enough to live in a country with one of the best health care systems in the world, but there are recognized shortfalls in access and affordability. We can do a better job here, and I am pleased to be able to participate in bringing it about.

As a member of the rural health care coalition, I have strongly supported efforts to improve preventive health care services. Staying healthy is the key to controlling health care costs. For example, I have cosponsored bills to establish a comprehensive, preventive, health program for Medicare beneficiaries, require States to cover breast and cervical screening for poor women, provide incentives for physicians to locate in rural areas, and encourage medical schools to have departments of family medicine.

I feel very strongly about our Nation's commitment to primary care. Beyond these legislative initiatives, this year I was able to resolve a bureaucratic tangle with the Appalachian Regional Commission to bring about the placement of a pediatrician in Washington County. We are very pleased to have Dr. (Maria) Younes in western Maryland and know that she is doing her part to keep our children healthy.

I also serve on the Leadership's AIDS Task Force and the Task Force on Health. We cannot ignore the impact of AIDS on our health care system. Several years ago, I worked very closely with my colleagues in bringing about the adoption of the Ryan White C.A.R.E. bill on AIDS. Education, prevention, research and development are essential in combatting this fatal disease. My efforts in this area will continue as we confront a rising number of AIDS cases in our cities as well as increases in our rural communities.

The health care discussions that are taking place give us a basis for health care reform to come. Before we simply dismantle what we have, however, we need to understand what shape our health care policy should take. What are we willing to pay for? We need to recognize that a government solution directly involves the taxpayers. We are the payers; and finally, we need to make sure that any reform takes into account the special circumstances of those seeking health care in rural areas. I am committed to finding acceptable changes in our health care system that will best meet the needs and budget of our Nation.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, this bill's creation of a National Scenic Byways Program is an important step toward recognizing and protecting the scenic and historic values of qualified highways across America. Driving is one of our great national passions. At one time or another, we have all felt the pull of the open road, enjoyed driving along a curving byway under the canopy of vibrantly green trees, with clouds hovering overhead and a stream bubbling off the side of the road. Designation and protection of national scenic byways is environmentally sound policy and will provide economic benefits as well through increased tourism potential.

Equally important here is the conferees' decision that the Highway Beautification Act's provisions be modified to require a ban on new billboard construction along designated scenic roads. It is most appropriate that the public investment in designated scenic roads be protected by prohibiting the construction of large intrusive signs which would detract from scenic views. The billboard ban on interstate and primary scenic roads is a minimum response, of course. Nothing in this bill will limit States from enacting stronger controls on billboards on State designated scenic byways which are not on interstate and primary roads.

Finally, I am pleased that this bill will amend the Highway Beautification Act provisions to require illegal billboards to come down within 90 days of enactment. Some 33,000 of these illegal billboards line the Nation's highways, but have never been removed due to lax enforcement of the law. I would urge the Federal Highway Administration to structure its rulemaking to ensure that this requirement to remove illegal billboards is closely monitored and strongly enforced.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this highway bill.

If America is to be competitive, we must make sure that our transportation system is up to the task.

Without an efficient transportation system, we will lose the race to countries such as Japan and Germany.

This legislation will begin the process of seeing that America does not fall behind.

Projects in my State are certainly badly needed.

In my State, money in this bill will begin construction planning for a bridge at DeValls Bluff, interchanges on the Highway 63 bypass in Jonesboro and it also identifies Highway 412 as a high priority corridor.

The bridge at DeValls Bluff is dangerous and it's replacement will eliminate one of the major traffic bottlenecks in this area.

The Highway 63 bypass program at Jonesboro has saved lives and made travel in that fast growing city much more efficient.

There is currently no four-lane system running east-to-west across the northern part of Arkansas. This inhibits growth in the area.

Improving the highway system in the area will foster economic growth.

Also, Mr. Speaker, in addition to its other benefits, this bill will create jobs—jobs which are badly needed to stimulate economic growth.

Mr. GALLO. Mr. Speaker, I want to voice my support for this 6 year national transportation blueprint.

In particular, I am pleased that the House was successful in protecting its $32 billion funding level for mass transit—$11 billion more than the Senate version of the bill.

We have to take the long-term view and I believe this bill does just that. It paves the way for major improvements in our Nation's mass transit systems and gives States greater flexibility to use these funds for projects of particular importance within each State.

In addition to providing increased mass transit funding, this bill also stimulates our nation economy by creating more than 4 million jobs. At a time when our economy is in need of a jump start, it is reassuring to support a piece of legislation that will help us to revitalize our Nation.

This $151 billion authorization provides about $5.5 billion for New Jersey highway and mass transit projects, including $634 million for the New Jersey urban core project for mass transit.

This bill represents a balanced approach. It identifies future needs and addresses them. But it also recognizes our more immediate priorities and allows for improvements in our current highway system, where they are needed.

I am also very pleased that the final bill contains funding to build new ramps to ease the flow of traffic on I–280 in Parsippany.

Mr. Speaker, today marks an important day for the future of transportation policy in America, and I am pleased to offer my support for the conference committee's bill.

This bill authorizes many programs and initiatives that will provide the flexibility to meet changes that have been occuring within our society. As a nation we have set a number of important priorities in order to clean up the air, to relieve traffic congestion, to promote mass transit, and to develop basic ways of providing for a healthier environment.

Last year, Congress passed the Clean Air Act which put in place new air quality standards that States must begin to meet by 1995. This will not be easy unless the Federal Government provides some type of guidance. It is my belief that H.R. 2950 will do just that.

Specifically, the House surface transportation bill includes $32 billion for mass transit construction and expansion programs—which is $11 billion more than the other body's bill. This increased funding will not only relieve traffic congestion that has become so prevalent in the Northeast corridor it will promote cleaner air by offering alternative modes of transportation.

This bill contains a number of demonstration projects designed to alleviate traffic problems. In my State of New Jersey we must concentrate on mass transit programs, but we must also find ways to relieve traffic bottlenecks. These projects will provide such relief and allow traffic to move easier.

In addition, we must have a bipartisan commitment to improve mass transit in New Jersey. This bill makes a major contribution to that effort.

As the author of H.R. 193, I have been pushing legislation in Congress to provide incentives for commuters to use mass transit, but these incentives must be accompanied by improvements in service, if we are to be successful in getting commuters to leave their cars at home.

A decade ago, New Jersey Transit inherited a fragmented and poorly maintained commuter rail network from Conrail and the goal since that time has been to complete missing links and upgrade current service. The New Jersey urban core project, including the Kearny Connection is the most critical part of those efforts.

Mr. Speaker, I commend Chairman ROE and all of the conferees for their dedication and hard work, and urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report on Intermodal Surface Transportation Infrastructure Act of 1991. I want to congratulate the chairman of the Public Works Committee on his tenacity in processing this difficult piece of legislation which will reinforce our infrastructure and strengthen our economy in the forthcoming years.

I want to thank the chairman of the Public Works Committee for accommodating the Committee on Science, Space, and Technology by incorporating many of the research and development provisions reported by the committee which I believe will become assets to future generations.

I also want to thank the gentleman from North Carolina, chairman of the Subcommittee on Technology and Competitiveness, Mr. TIM VALENTINE, for his work in bringing together a carefully constructed program for near- and long-term R&D in the field of surface transportation.

Mr. Speaker, this bill marks a turning point in transportation technology which will provide future generations with models of travel we never dreamed of.

The bill includes research and development in intelligent vehicle highway systems. The objective of this R&D is to build and test a fully automated prototype of the highway of the future, one that cars would travel on between cities under automated guidance systems that would maintain safe spacing and speed control without driver assistance.

The bill also includes a number of other long-term and short-term research and development objectives, including research and development in the area of high frequency dynamic loadings on bridges. These loadings will result from high-speed rail and magnetically levitated systems. The research will also include the use of new data collection and computation methods. These methods will facilitate the design of structures to accommodate these new modes of transportation.

The bill includes the creation of an advisory board composed of members outside the government to assure that industry and Government can work together in rebuilding U.S. transportation systems.

High-speed rail is one of the most promising technologies to alleviate overcrowding at airports. It is technology that can put the United States back in the business of manufacturing its own rail systems. High-speed rail systems have attained speeds of 300 miles per hour, and a 200-mile-an-hour commercial system is achievable through the R&D program called for in this bill.

The bill also includes magnetically levitated train research and development which we hope will bring this technology to practicality by developing levitation and guidance systems which employ superconducting magnets. These systems will require shielding against electromagnetic forces, and we therefore plan to undertake R&D in this area as well as in aerodynamics to assure the stability of magnetically levitated trains under all wind conditions.

As a potential replacement for diesel buses we have called for a short-haul passenger transportation system to be powered by batteries or fuel cells. It is to be trackless, running on pneumatic tires with the capability of being recharged every few miles.

The R&D is also intended to extend the life of the surface transportation infrastructure. New concepts in radiography are expected to facilitate more thorough examination on bridge and highway structures.

The bill also contains provisions for advancements in research to protect the infrastructure against severe damage from earthquakes, and it calls for transportation research centers where minority students can enter the professions to design and build tomorrow's transportation systems.

Mr. Speaker, the R&D provisions in this act are intended to put U.S. industry back on the road to innovation and quality in transportation.

Mr. BLACKWELL. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 2950, the surface transportation bill. This legislation marks a true turning point for the urban centers of America. For the first time in nearly a decade, our Nation's mass transit systems will receive the funding that they so desperately need.

As a Representative from one of America's largest—and oldest—cities, I firmly believe that mass transportation systems are the backbone of our great cities. The problem is our backs are almost broken. Bridges are crumbling. Tracks are rusting. Our choice has never been more clearcut. We can pass this comprehensive bill that will benefit those in both rural and urban areas and secure the future of mass transit for our cities, or we can continue to watch these vital systems rot before our eyes.

I do not need to recite the advantages of mass transportation for you tonight—the environmental benefits, the service it provides for the disabled and for those who cannot afford to own cars, the jobs it provides, and so forth. But I will not remain silent while Congress has this prime opportunity to begin rebuilding our Nation's cities, starting with this most important service. I urge my colleagues to save our cities, and pass H.R. 2950.

Mr. HAMMERSCHMIDT. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HOYER). Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the conference report.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the conference report.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. SHUSTER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 372, nays 47, not voting 15, as follows:

So the conference report was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. PASTOR. Mr. Speaker, During rollcall vote No. 440 conference report to accompany the bill H.R. 2950 I was unavoidably detained, had I been present I would have voted "Yea."

AUTHORIZING CLERK TO MAKE CORRECTIONS IN ENGROSSMENT OF CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 2950

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Clerk have the authority to make the necessary technical, clerical, and clarifying changes in the conference report just adopted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. HOYER). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks on the conference report just adopted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 3371, OMNIBUS CRIME CONTROL ACT OF 1991

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 301 and, pursuant to House Resolution 294, I ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 301

Resolved, That upon adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to consider the conference report on the bill (H.R. 3371) to control and prevent crime. All points of order against the conference report and against its consideration are hereby waived. The conference report shall be considered as having been read when called up for consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. DERRICK] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON]. Pending that, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, during debate on House Resolution 301, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 301 is the rule providing for the consideration of the conference report on H.R. 3371, the Omnibus Crime Control Act. The rule waives all points of order against the conference report and against its consideration. The rule also provides that the conference report will be considered as read. Mr. Speaker, this conference agreement is a comprehensive legislative response to the many facets of criminal activity in our society.

The agreement that the House will consider tonight would expand the Federal death penalty to 53 crimes—including murders in connection with terrorism, assassination of Federal officials, genocide, kidnapping resulting in death, and major drug trafficking offenses.

The conference agreement reforms the habeas corpus procedures by requiring prisoners under death sentences to file habeas corpus petitions within 1 year of their direct appeal; adopts the Seante's 5-day waiting period for handgun purchases; and authorizes $3 billion for hiring law enforcement officials on the Federal, State and local levels.

Mr. Speaker, this conference report is not without controvesy, there are provisions that Members have concerns about. However, I believe this agreement provides a strong Federal commitment to crime control, and I urge my colleagues to adopt this resolution and allow the House to proceed with this vitally important conference report.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to this rule and to the conference report on the crime bill it makes in order.

First, at the rules meeting that produced this rule there had not been adequate time for Members to become familiar with the provisions of the conference report.

At the time of the Rules Committee meeting on this conference report, no copy of the text was even available to Members.

This is a major bill and Members should have at least a reasonable opportunity to be aware of what they are going to have to vote on.

At the time of the Rules Committee meeting, I put into the RECORD a letter from the Attorney General, William Barr, which described this conference report as a significant step backwards.

The conference agreement actually overrules several recent Supreme Court decisions favorable to law enforcement.

According to the Attorney General, this conference report does more for those convicted of crime than it does for those victimized by crime.

Mr. Speaker, the current system allows those guilty of the most serious crimes to avoid punishment by filing frivolous habeas corpus petitions that drag on for years. The conference agreement now provides new loopholes by which convicted criminals evade punishment.

The conference agreement would make the current situation worse by overruling certain reasonable limitations recently established by the Supreme Court on successive habeas corpus provisions.

The conference agreement also is a step in the wrong direction on reasonable reform of the exclusionary rule. By rolling back Court decisions which allow for the admissibility of evidence when police have acted on good faith, the conference agreement will handicap police and increase the number of real criminals who avoid punishment because of legal technicalities. The conference agreement rejects the proposal overwhelmingly adopted by the House 247–165.

Mr. Speaker, the conference agreement authorizes $3 billion for law enforcement programs, but the authorization is meaningless without appropriation.

The Congress failed this year to fully fund the President's request for law enforcement.

Congress cut 64 percent of the increases requested by the President. Making promises which are almost certain not to be fulfilled is not the right way to legislate.

Mr. Speaker, backing up the U.S. Attorney General's position, the National District Attorneys Association has also written to oppose this bill. Let me quote briefly from their letter, signed by prominent Democrats and Republicans: "The Nation's prosecutors strongly oppose the so-called "crime control" bill approved in Sunday's conference and urge both House and Senate to reject it."

They say, "This bill does far more to advance the interests of convicted criminals than it does to protect victims and law-abiding citizens."

Who else is opposed to this procriminal bill: Federal judges across this country, including those in the Northern District of New York.

☐ 0600

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I have been handed a letter from President Bush stating that he will veto this conference report if it is presented in its current form. I would ask unanimous consent that the President's letter be inserted in the RECORD at this point.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. HOYER). It there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The letter from the President of the United States is as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, DC, November 25, 1991.

Hon. ROBERT H. MICHEL,
Republican Leader, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR BOB: Since March, I have been calling on the Congress to pass a tough crime bill that will remove the handcuffs from law enforcement and end needless delays in the criminal justice system. For too long, the scales of justice have been tipped in favor of criminals instead of law-abiding Americans. The American people want a crime bill that will make the system tougher on criminals than it is on law enforcement and crime victims.

After months of delay, the Congress is now presented with a conference report drafted in the last hours of this session. Once again, just as they did last year, Democrat conferees from the Senate and House have demonstrated that they are willing to overlook the will of their colleagues and the American people. Clearly, the American people deserve better.

The crime bill produced by the Democrat-controlled conference is unacceptable. The bill rejects many of the primary goals the Administration set forth as necessary for an acceptable crime bill. One essential goal of our proposal is to end frivolous post-appeal challenges brought by convicted criminals, particularly death row inmates, through meaningful habeas corpus reform. By overturning critical Supreme Court decisions that have reduced the abuse of habeas corpus, the conference bill actually weakens current law by expanding a criminal's ability to frustrate the system.

Another goal of the Administration's bill is to ensure that criminals do not go free on legal technicalities when a police officer is acting in good faith. This conference report does just the opposite. Again, it retreats from current law by throwing out court decisions that recognize the legitimacy of such a good faith exception to the exclusionary rule.

Finally, although this bill purports to permit imposition of the death penalty for several new Federal offenses, it adopts procedures that virtually ensure the death penalty will never be imposed.

I will not accept any effort by the Congress to turn the clock back on the progress we have made in the courts on criminal justice reform. If this bill is presented to me, I will veto it and insist that Congress pass a crime bill that will strengthen our criminal justice system.

Sincerely,

GEORGE BUSH.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to cite just the opening paragraph of the President's letter:

"I have been calling on the Congress to pass a tough crime bill that will remove the handcuffs from law enforcement and end needless delays in the criminal justice system. For too long, the scales of justice have been tipped in favor of criminals instead of law-abiding Americans."

Mr. Speaker, that is the first paragraph. This letter goes on to cite all of his objections, but let me just read the last paragraph to my colleagues because this is what really gets to me.

"Finally," the President says, 'although this bill purports to permit imposition of the death penalty for several new Federal offenses, it adopts procedures that virtually ensure the death penalty will never be imposed.

"I will not accept any effort by the Congress to turn the clock back on the progress we have made in the courts on criminal justice reform. If this bill is presented to me, I will veto it"* * *

Mr. Speaker, this bill should never reach the President; it ought to be sent back to the committee, and let us do it right.

For all these reasons, Mr. Speaker, I must oppose this rule and the conference report it makes in order.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SOLOMON. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON], my friend, for yielding, and I would simply like to underscore a point that my friend made at the opening of his statement, that being the fact that in the Committee on Rules; now keep in mind we are considering the crime bill under martial law at this point in the House; we got to the point where there was not a single paper that was before us when we were considering this rule, and I was told by members of the conference that they were operating under the exact same circumstance as they were trying to report this conference report to us.

So, it seems to me it is absolutely ludicrous to think we can move ahead with something when we did not even have the papers up in the Committee on Rules to consider it.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. CUNNINGHAM].

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the rule, and my colleague paid reference to the National District Attorneys Association. I would like to read the letter, and not only this, but I say to the chairman on the other aisle, "The eyes of Texas are on you." The attorney general from Texas, along with 31 other attorneys general, have signed a letter saying what a bad bill in its present form that this is, and this is, I quote, and I wish these were my words because they are so eloquent, but this is from the National District Attorneys Association:

The American people have been mugged again, this time by the leadership of the leadership of the United States Congress. The Nation's prosecutors strongly oppose this so-called crime control bill approved in Sunday's conference and urge both House and Senate to reject it. This bill does far more to advance the interests of convicted criminals than it does to protect victims and law-abiding citizens. In fact, passage of this bill is tantamount to handing the jail house keys to thousands of convicted State and Federal prisoners. The conference committee has nearly in every incidence chosen the weakest provisions with respect to law enforcement. It rejects the House Limitation on House application of the exclusionary rule. It overturns the Supreme Court Decision Arizona versus Fulminante through the provision that may have far-reaching effects and which was not even the subject of hearings. Finally, the conference chose the weakest provision on death penalty provisions and procedures.

Mr. Speaker, we have tried time and time again to even pass rules on drug testing for this House and Federal employees, and every single attempt has been turned down. Let us pay attention. Let us get tough on criminals. Let us defeat the rule.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS].

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I say to my colleagues that I fully support the rule, and I appreciate the courtesy and the trouble that the leadership and the Committee on Rules has gone to to get this brought to the floor at this time.

Mr. Speaker, as the Members well know, the rule before us provides for the consideration of the conference report on H.R. 3371, the Crime Control Act. This is a matter that has been before this body for weeks now, and the Members should be familiar with its provisions. Just 6 weeks ago, this body spent long hours considering in detail the provisions of the House bill, the abundant majority of which are reflected in the conference agreement before us this morning. The major issues in contention—habeas corpus, the death penalty, the exclusionary rule—have been debated throughout this process, and the Members have had the opportunity to become fully informed about the points of contention.

Mr. Speaker, if we are going to back up our rhetoric about crime with action, we must move H.R. 3371 through the process expeditiously. Everyone in this body feels that the status quo is inadequate for our citizens—that punishment and deterrence must be increased for abhorrent criminal activity. To take no action at this time is to validate the current state of affairs on the streets and on the books. I reject that, as I reject all the dilatory efforts on the other side of the aisle—from blocking the naming of conferees for weeks in the Senate to attempts to derail the conference.

Let us adopt this rule and pass the conference report on this effective and tough piece of anticrime legislation.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. SCHIFF].

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Speaker, what I have to say is, "Good morning, America. Wait until you see what the Congress of the United States and the House of Representatives has stayed up all night to bring you today, a bill that will make worse the criminal laws, a bill that will make worse the present criminal laws in the United States of America, and this was all done on Sunday in one conference committee meeting which I attended as a conferee, and I want to tell you it was done with another Hail Mary pass, a Hail Mary pass from the Democrats in the House to the Democrats in the Senate."

Mr. Speaker, the bill before my colleagues is what the Democrats agreed between themselves. We brought it to the House floor, and it is walking into a veto. Why? Because it selects provisions which, not only do not improve current law, they send current law back.

Now I want to say that I have heard on the news the outrageous statements that the President of the United States has threatened to veto this bill because it contains some gun control language. Now the President is a skeptic about the effectiveness of gun control. Who can blame him? New York and Washington, DC have the toughest gun control laws in the Nation, and my colleagues have all seen how much that has done for them. Nevertheless, let me debunk that nonsense right now.

Mr. Speaker, let us amend this bill to change the habeas corpus provisions. Let us amend this bill to change the exclusionary rule provision. Let us amend this bill to amend the confession provisions and see then if the President of the United States will veto the bill. I do not think so. These are the key provisions that have been added, that have been selected for the bill. These are the key provisions that weaken it.

Mr. Speaker, I urge defeat of the rule, defeat of the bill.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. GLICKMAN].

Mr. GLICKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I do not want the impression to be given that the people in the front line of fighting crime, the police officers of this country, are against this bill. They are not. They are for it. Almost unanimously.

Mr. Speaker, I want to read from some supportive statements by police organizations and people who are responsible for fighting crime in this country in every State of America.

The Fraternal Order of Police:

"We call on the Congress to adopt, and for the President to sign, this bill. It is the toughest anti-crime legislation to emerge from Congress in recent memory and should become law."

The National Association of Police Organizations:

"NAPO believes the version which has been reported out of conference to be tough anti-crime legislation. We urge you to enact this badly needed anti-crime legislation immediately."

The International Brotherhood of Police Officers:

"America needs a crime bill now—in this session, passed by the Congress and signed by the President. IBPO represents rank and file officers on the front lines in the war on crime and drugs and we urge you to adopt the conference report and pass this important legislation."

The International Union of Police Officers:

"We recognized the real need for enactment of the conference committee version of the crime legislation and support it fully."

The same thing with the National Troopers Coalition, the Police Executive Research Forum, the National Association of Black Law Enforcement Executives.

Mr. Speaker, every police organization that is out there on the front lines in the State and local communities of this country say, "Pass this legislation."

I say to my colleagues, "It's tough on crime. Don't be mislead by this red herring of district attorneys appointed by the President or the Justice Department being against this bill. This is one of the most effective anticrime pieces of legislation that has ever passed this Congress. It is time to vote yes on this bill."

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California [Mr. RIGGS] to speak on this farcical piece of legislation. He is a real policeman who just finished serving as a policeman and now is a Member of this House.

☐ 0610

Mr. RIGGS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

I have listened to the last speaker with some amusement.

Granted, those law enforcement fraternal organizations which are for the most part labor organizations that I am very familiar with are looking for any kind of support from the U.S. Congress whatsoever in fighting the crime problem. My colleague, the gentleman from Kansas, knows full well that those ladies and men in uniform who, indeed, are in the front lines in the fight against crime, have no idea whatsoever of what is in this conference report.

Let me bring to the gentleman's attention a letter my office received yesterday from the California District Attorneys' Association, and unlike the sort of barbed or thinly veiled reference to attorneys appointed by the President, these are district attorneys for the counties in California who are the elected officials and who represent the people of the State of California in bringing prosecutions against law violators in the State of California.

This is a letter written to the Speaker and to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL]. It says:

CALIFORNIA DISTRICT
ATTORNEYS ASSOCIATION,
Sacramento, CA, November 26, 1991.

Hon. THOMAS S. FOLEY,
Hon. ROBERT H. MICHEL,
U.S. House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

GENTLEMEN: The members of our association were appalled to read the latest version of the Omnibus Crime Control Bill approved in Sunday's conference. We urge the House to reject it.

The habeas corpus "reform" package reported out by the conference committee represents a gigantic step backwards. The adoption of this measure, which basically overturns Teague v. Lane, (1989) 489 U.S. 288, would have disastrous consequences to the interests of public safety and the criminal justice system.

We note with great concern the expansion of retroactivity, the expansion of the time period for the filing of writs for those under the sentence of death, and the expansion of the right to file multiple successive writs alleging technical defects having nothing to do with guilt or innocence. We note also the unbelievable qualification standards for appointed counsel in state capital cases.

Clearly, the present bill now serves only to further the interests of convicted criminals and opponents of the death penalty. We urge you to vote no on the present version of the Omnibus Crime Control Bill.

Very truly yours,
EDWARD R. JAGELS,
President.

Believe me, ladies and gentlemen, it is not the rhetoric of the U.S. Congress that the men and women, again, in uniform on the front lines in the fight against crime are going to listen to. It is this kind of very specific guidance and advice from the local prosecutors in California and in other States across the Union that will guide them in their ultimate determination as to whether or not this is good legisltion.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes, for purposes of debate only, to the gentleman from California [Mr. EDWARDS].

Mr. EDWARDS of California. Mr. Speaker, I am sure we are going to hear more from the opponents of this bill about the prosecutors being so strongly against the bill. Of course, most prosecutors are against this bill.

In our hearings, we found that in capital cases, 40 percent of the convictions of these prosecutors, the same prosecutors that are against this bill, are overturned in habeas corpus because they are defective. Nobody is released from prison, but their prosecutions are so defective that they have to be remanded or returned to the courts for rehearing, or retrial in some cases.

Of course, do not expect prosecutors to be for this bill, but ask your local bar association, I say to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON]; ask your county bar, and I say to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON], ask your State bar association.

Ninety percent of the State bar associations of this country are in favor of this bill. Ask the judicial conference of the United States. They have come out four-square against the President's bill and especially against the President's habeas corpus proposal which would eliminate habeas corpus altogether. That is a little bit like eliminating the Magna Carta, to eliminate it altogether. That is what they want to do.

Let us not hear any more about retroactivity. Section 204 of this conference report specifically prohibits retroactivity. Do not keep saying it does. Do not confuse it with a provision that was turned down in the committee. It happened to be the Berman proposal which did allow a certain amount of retroactivity.

So I really wish the opponents of this bill would look at the bill. As I sat here and listened, and I have read the bill. We wrote the bill.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE], a member of the Committee on the Judiciary, and I would hope that at some time we would be enlightened as to what has happened to the gun provision. We understand that they may have changed since the bill left the Committee on Rules. I hope the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS] could enlighten us.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I just want to address at this point in the proceedings the policemen's letter.

If you want to know about the law, do not ask the prosecutors. Do not ask lawyers. Ask the policemen.

I do not quite follow that logic. I do know that in the bill there is $3 billion in grants to law enforcement. Now, that is a pot of money, and they want that money, because in this letter from the International Association of Chiefs of Police, that was sent to the distinguished junior Senator from Delaware, they applaud, "Additional funding support for State and local law enforcement." That is an attractive feature. However, they damn the bill by faint praise in the next-to-the-last paragraph. They say, "We recognize it does contain some elements that could be strengthened."

By the way, the Fraternal Order of Police says: "The NFOP certainly would have preferred certain language not presently found in the conference agreement such as the Senate provisions on habeas corpus reform, the police officers' bill of rights, semiautomatic assault weapons as well as the House language on good faith warrantless searches by police." That is some limp endorsement.

The problem is that they think they are going to get $3 billion. They say so.

I would point out that the Attorney General of the United States says: "Finally, in authorizing $3 billion for law enforcement, the bill offers only a mirage. Authorization of this funding when there is no appropriation is essentially meaningless. The irony here is that the Congress failed this year to fully fund the President's budget request for law enforcement, slashing it by $472 million, a 64-percent cut in the increase sought by the President."

So I suggest to the Members that the policemen are misled by the illusory carrot of $3 billion.

It is the lawyers, it is the States' attorneys general, and I might say Mary Sue Terry of the State of Virginia, no raving Republican, has signed the letter that says that this bill is an atrocity.

We will have more of that later. But do not be misled by the policemen's union who think they are going to get $3 billion when they are not.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Let me just say this before I yield.

You know, the policemen have been accused of not knowing what they are writing about and not knowing what the bill is about; let me tell you something: I know that the attorneys general do not either. They came into my office, several of them, and I found out they did not know what they were talking about either. After I talked to them and explained the bill to them, the habeas corpus provisions, they said, well, they thought that was fine, and they had no objections to it, so there are a lot of people who do not know about the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. SCHUMER].

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, you know, it seems to be a fashion on the other side tonight, because police organizations do not agree with them, to knock them, to say they do not know what they are doing, et cetera, et cetera.

I think that the gentleman from Illinois correctly quoted the FOP. They said, and I will quote the same thing he did, "The NFOP would certainly have preferred certain language not currently found in the conference agreement." So would we all.

Every one of us, every one of the 435 of us, could look at this large bill that does so many different things and say, "I might change this, and I might change that, and I might change this."

☐ 0620

But unlike us, who have the luxury of sitting here safely in this chamber, the police officers of the FOP and NAPO have their lives on the line every day. They do not have the luxury of playing political games. And if they see a bill, admittedly not perfect in anybody's eyes, that will do a heck of a lot of good to make them safer and make our streets safer and make our citizens safer, then they cannot afford to play the political games, and they step up to the plate and they say, "I am voting for this bill."

I would say that their cue is the one we should take in this body. They say it is not perfect. But the perfect is not going to be the enemy of the good, not when bullets are flying, not when people are being mugged, not when we are not doing enough against crime.

So I urge my colleagues, listen to the wisdom of that average cop on the beat, and vote for this rule and this bill.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. COUGHLIN].

Mr. COUGHLIN. Mr. Speaker, here we go again denying the American people laws they want to protect public safety and prevent more victims of crime.

The Democrat-run Congress plays this game year after year. We send a crime bill to conference and the Senate sends a crime bill to conference that at least reflects the will of the bodies. What comes back from conference does not reflect the will of the bodies or of the American people.

The conference is not a negotiation between the House and the Senate. It is a negotiation between the ACLU Democrats in the House and the ACLU Democrats in the Senate to get the most pro-criminal bill possible.

Doesn't someone, someone care about public safety or the victims of crime?

It is not a question of providing a death penalty which will never be enforced for a smorgasbord of crimes. It is a question of providing a death penalty which will be enforced for a few crimes.

It is not a question of putting in prison minor first time offenders. It is a question of putting in prison serious and repeat offenders and keeping them there.

It is not a question of handcuffing our police and freeing our criminals. It is a question of freeing our police and handcuffing our criminals.

It is not a question of providing expensive new courts. It is a question of unclogging our existing courts.

Victims of crime are crying out, "Help us." Frightened Americans are crying out, "Help us." Let's send this bill back to conference and respond to those cries.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. JACOBS].

Mr. JACOBS. Mr. Speaker, one of our colleagues whom I like very much made a statement a moment ago that there is $3 billion in this bill for police organizations—that is for law enforcement, actually—and, naturally, the police would be for it because of the $3 billion.

Well, it happens that I am a former police officer also, and I think that what the gentleman is saying in essence is ill-considered. I do not think that it honors our police to suggest that they have sold out.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER].

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, a moment ago, I asked you a question over here in the aisle whether or not this bill had been changed at all since it left the conference. You told me no. I certainly believed you at that point, but we have had a number of rumors around the floor that this has been changed. Particularly, we heard it may have been changed with respect to the firearms provision.

The concern we have is this: Out of the conference came a bill that set up a national registration, not of handguns, but of all firearms. That is a major concern, I think, for all of us who have listened to the rhetoric over the last several weeks and several months that we are only touching assault weapons or only touch handguns, that there was certainly not any intention on behalf of anyone to make this a massive sweep to all firearms.

Yet when we read this bill, when you move from the Brady provisions of the 5-day registration period to the instantaneous check provisions, all of a sudden the language changed. It is no longer handgun language. In the instantaneous check provisions in the bill it goes to all firearms, and throughout that provision it says all firearms.

So the fact is that we moved to a national registration system, a computerized registration system, not of handguns, but of all firearms.

If that is the same provision that left conference, it is at this point then a major change in everything that we had heard was the intent here in the Congress, and I think something which is a serious flaw in the bill.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS].

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I just want to say, in reply to my distinguished friend on that, that the gun provisions have not changed since it came out of the Committee on Rules. Obviously I like guns, too. Absolutely no change on ban on assault weapons is in this bill. That part of it is just like it came out of the House, out. That is where I wanted it. That is where this House wanted it. That is how you all voted for it.

The NRA and Senator BOB DOLE, a very distinguished friend of mine and yours in this other body, wrote the language on the Brady language that we did retain, that you are familiar with. I do not know whether you like it or not. I did not vote for it in the House, but the House did pass it.

We adopted the Senate language. They insisted on their language. They were cleared with the NRA. They looked at the McCollum amendment that had been put in the 1988 drug bill.

So you do not have to worry about that. That language is going to suit them all and suit me.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BROOKS. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I have great respect for the gentleman. You say no changes were made. We really are concerned about this. We are just trying to get it cleared up. There were no changes made after it left the Committee on Rules. Were there any changes, not only on the guns, but anywhere in the bill after it left the conference on its way to the Committee on Rules and on its way to the floor here?

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. SOLOMON, that is a little bit insulting. I did not change a damn thing, and nobody else did.

Mr. SOLOMON. Well, I just wanted to make sure your staff did not, my friend. We just tried to clear it up.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. SYNAR].

Mr. SYNAR. Mr. Speaker, with all due respect to both sides of the aisle, both my colleagues in the Democrat Party and the Republican Party, let me just say two things.

First, I do not think it serves our purpose today to try to accuse either side of being weak or strong on crime. I have never met a colleague on the floor of the House, Republican or Democrat, who does not want to provide for the best protection of every citizen in this country. Though we may disagree on how that is accomplished, all of us believe that one of our major responsibilities is to provide safe streets. Second, I do not think it furthers the debate arguing who is for or against this bill. No one outside this Chamber has really read this bill.

That said, let me direct my attention to what you will have an opportunity to support compared to what the President offered in his own crime bill.

If you vote for this crime bill in the next hour, you will have an opportunity to apply the death penalty to 56 crimes, versus only 46 in the President's bill.

If you vote for this bill, in the violent drug area you will establish 10 regional prisons for Federal and State drug criminals. There were no similar provisions in the President's bill.

If you are from a rural area with rural crime and drugs, you will have an opportunity to add rural law enforcement and drug treatment prevention. There were no similar provisions in the President's bill.

With respect to drug emergency areas, you will have opportunity to authorize aid to cities in the hardest hit drug areas. There were no similar provisions in the President's bill.

With respect to drunk driving, you will have an opportunity to boost penalties for drunk driving when a child is in the vehicle, including common carrier vehicles. There were no provisions in the President's bill to do that.

With respect to child abuse, this bill will establish a system for background checks to prevent child abusers from working with children. Again, the President had no provisions to deal with this.

We will create programs and grants to aid in the fight, including safe schools and anticrime, certain punishments for young offenders, community substance abuse, trauma centers, cops on the beat, midnight basketball, the police corps, law enforcement scholarships, and a variety of other things. Not one of those provisions were available in the President's bill.

If you vote for this bill in the next hour, you will have an opportunity to authorize $1.2 billion to aid State and local law enforcement, where 95 percent of the battle is being fought. There were no moneys in the President's bill. And for those who are very concerned about victims, this bill will boost aid to victims of crime and require victim impact statements. None of these provisions were available in the President's bill.

My colleagues, if you truly are committed to providing for safer streets and giving local law enforcement the tools by which to fight this battle, you will have only one opportunity and that is to support this conference report.

It is not only a good deal, it is a better deal than the one offered by the President of the United States. I urge my colleagues to support this conference report.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. The gentleman who just spoke said there are 56 instances in which the death penalty is imposed by this legislation. The President says, in his letter, and I will repeat it again: "Although this bill purports to permit imposition of the death penalty for several new Federal offenses, it adopts procedures that virtually ensure the death penalty will never be imposed."

I believe the President.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GEKAS].

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I wish we all had been present at the conference that took place between the Senate members and the House members of the Committee on the Judiciary. It was illuminating. I had my mouth drop open when I saw the fiercest opponents of the death penalty that this Chamber has ever seen sitting with me on the House side, on the Democratic side, and lifelong opponents of the death penalty on the Senate side almost enthusiastically support this death penalty bill, without a murmur, without a contest. They very suspiciously voted for this death penalty bill.

They did so because they knew that it was a meaningless piece of legislation. They were committing legicide. They were killing the bill by voting for a death penalty. And that is an important feature of what this argument is about.

Does this death penalty bill do what the American public really wants to happen to convict someone of murder who has viciously gunned down somebody in the street and then allow this man or woman to file appeal after appeal to avoid the final justice? If we want that kind of scenario, vote for this bill. If we want to try again for a crime bill that works, vote against the rule and the bill.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. KOPETSKI].

Mr. KOPETSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this compromise piece of legislation. In this bill is an increase of $345 million for Federal law enforcement, an increase in authorization of $1 billion for the Safe Streets Act. There is more moneys authorized for the Cop on the Beat Program. We are going to put police officers back in hometown America. There is certainty of punishment for youthful offenders with alternative kinds of sentencing from boot camp to electronic monitoring to vocational and educational programs.

There is more dollars to train better police officers. There is 21st century tools to fight crime or to establish standards for the use of DNA identification.

There is substance abuse rehabilitation programs for people in prison so that when they get out they will not be robbing and burglarizing to support their drug habits.

Yes, there is reform to the habeas corpus laws of the United States, a compromise that was developed by the American Bar Association, developed and debated in the committee of the House and the Senate.

Essentially what it does, it is very simple. It says, if one is a criminal and has been convicted of a crime, they get one good fair shot under their Federal rights as a citizen in this country, you get one appeal and you only get 1 year.

Mr. EDWARDS of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KOPETSKI. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. EDWARDS of California. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Oregon is a valued, able member of the subcommittee, and the gentleman in the well heard the previous speaker talking about multiple petitions. As a matter of fact, the opponents of the bill seem hipped on that idea that there are multiple applications for habeas corpus in this bill.

Let me ask the gentleman this: In the subcommittee we were careful to allow how many petitions?

Mr. KOPETSKI. Mr. Speaker, one.

Mr. EDWARDS of California. One, and the petition has a statute of limitations; is that correct?

Mr. KOPETSKI. Mr. Speaker, that is correct.

Mr. EDWARDS of California. One year?

Mr. KOPETSKI. Mr. Speaker, it is 1 year.

Mr. EDWARDS of California. So no petitions after 1 year?

Mr. KOPETSKI. Mr. Speaker, that is absolutely correct.

Mr. EDWARDS of California. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will continue to yield, how many again?

Mr. KOPETSKI. One appeal. There is 1 year to bring this petition. This is a compromise. If we vote against this bill, what we are saying is, "I am willing to continue the rights of unlimited appeals to criminals in this country."

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. ALLEN], a new Member of the House.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. Speaker, I have just become a Member in a few weeks and we have been going all night long into the morning. Here we are at 6:30 in the morning, and I know we are tired. And we have had some tempers flaring and people all across America, or at least in the eastern standard time, are waking up. And I know we are tired, but we need to be awakened to this bill.

This is not a crime bill. This is a criminal bill.

In fact, what this bill ought to be called is the Criminal Relief Act of 1991.

We have heard the evidence. The evidence is that the prosecutors are opposed to it but the defense attorneys are in favor of it. I am not going to repeat all the allegations and so forth about habeas corpus, but there may be a few more cases in this which capital punishment may be imposed. But this conference committee report protects too many criminals and generally works against the law enforcement officials and law-abiding citizens.

I will not repeat all the various cumulative arguments we have heard on habeas corpus, the good faith exclusions, exceptions to the exclusionary rule, and other matters. But the bill does contain the continued gimmickry that would unnecessarily infringe upon the rights of law-abiding citizens to purchase a firearm, to protect themselves or for sport.

Finally, this bill also struck enhanced penalties for repeat rapists and child molesters. If we look at the recidivist rate, the repeat offenders rates are the highest among rapists. And to me that should not have been removed from the bill as it passed the House.

So this bill, Mr. Speaker, does more harm in this Criminal Relief Act of 1991, and certainly the harm outweighs whatever crumbs of good may come from it.

I respectfully request that we reject this rule and reject this bill.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. MOLINARI].

Ms. MOLINARI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to speak in opposition to the conference report. I urge colleagues to vote against the rule.

This bill, as reported by the House and Senate conferees, is no longer deserving of the title that contains the words "crime control" or "crime prevention." In fact, to at least two segments of our society this bill is criminal. The two groups in our society who have no say in this conference on this crime bill: women and children.

Why am I not surprised by this, Mr. Speaker? Why am I not surprised that this came back from a conference essentially driven by the Committee on the Judiciary of the other Chamber? They will just do not get it.

The conferees have stripped key provisions which would have increased the penalties that could be applied to recidivist sex offenders. The House bill contains provisions which would have doubled the maximum penalty that Federal courts can impose for repeat sex offenders.

The conference report also deletes provisions for HIV testing of sex offenders. The conference report deletes provisions that authorized an increase in the compensation paid to victims of crime. These provisions would have expanded eligibility for compensation to different types of victims and would have covered additional types of expenses that were accrued during the criminal proceeding.

Again, the conference report sides with the accused. Also deleted in conference was an amendment I introduced to the Public Safety Officers Benefit Act that would have extended an entitlement to death and disability benefits to retired public safety officers who died or who were permanently and totally disabled while attempting to rescue or responding to a fire or other police emergency. This is a simple extension of an entitlement designed to provide relief for the families of those brave retirees who did not abandon their instincts or their training when a life-threatening situation presented itself and who unselfishly responded to that situation in the interest of public safety.

Mr. Speaker, I cannot go home and look into the eyes of a widow and tell her that her husband's courageous act will not be recognized by the U.S. Congress. I am not prepared to stand face to face with a victim of a sexual attack and tell her that I would not vote to keep her attacker in jail longer, and that I had a civil obligation not to test the attacker for AIDS.

I will not acknowledge the pain of a survivor of violent crime and say that America will not compensate you for your struggle, for your anguish.

Mr. Speaker, if this bill were to pass I do not believe our streets would be any safer or our children any more secure or our women any more liberated from the fear of sexual assault. I urge my colleagues to defeat this rule and defeat this conference report.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, that is the best argument I have heard all night, the best reason to defeat this rule.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SENSENBRENNER].

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I think we ought to analyze just exactly what happened in the conference. In the death penalty the Senate passed the weaker provision and the conference adopted it. In the exclusionary rule the Senate passed the weaker provision and the conference adopted it. In habeas corpus the House passed the weaker provision and the conference adopted it.

Many key provisions that were accepted either in committee or on the floor without objection were stricken in the conference, such as enhanced penalties for recidivist sex offenders stricken by the conference, provisions strengthening the law on public corruption, which the Senate introduced into the bill were stricken in conference, a package of victims' rights provisions which the House put in the bill without debate in the Committee on the Judiciary were stricken in conference, and in each and every instance the conference went to the weaker provision relating to law enforcement and the stronger provision relating to criminals' rights.

It is no surprise that the gentleman from California [Mr. EDWARDS], said, "Talk to your bar associations, your State bars and your county bars and your local bars. They support this bill," and they do. But who comprises the bar association? It is the defense lawyers, whose job it is to keep people out of jail. The prosecutors, the district attorneys, and the attorneys general whose job it is to put the guilty in jail are all against this bill.

The Members should decide who to vote for, Mr. Speaker, the people who want to throw those who have violated the laws, who have mugged our constituents, in jail, or those whose job it is to keep people out of jail. I will cast my vote for the prosecutors, for the attorneys general, for the district attorneys by voting against this rule and by voting against this flawed, fatally flawed conference report.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. BRYANT].

Mr. BRYANT. Mr. Speaker, I think perhaps we need a crime bill, if for no other reason than to address the crime that is being committed on this floor today, and that is the gross misrepresentation of this bill by the other side, for obvious political purposes.

Let me just read a quick list. I want to be quick about this because I would like us to proceed to a vote. You have misrepresented to this House, many of you, what this bill does with regard to the death penalty. I cannot imagine how you can sleep at night, or in the middle of the morning, after having done that. Let me read to you what some of the death penalty offenses that have been added to this bill are, and there are 56 of them: Killings by drug kingpins, that is not now in the law but it would be if this bill passed; killing law enforcement officials in connection with drug offenses, and that is not in the law now but it would be if this bill passed; murder in Federal jurisdiction, that is not in the law now but it will be if this bill passes; aircraft destruction where a death results; mailing dangerous articles where a death results; bank robbery where a death results. That is not now in the law but it would be if this bill passes.

I can go on and on and on. Murder for hire, murder in aid or racketeering, murder of an American national abroad, genocide, killing a juror or a court officer to obstruct justice, on and on and on, and even some nonhomicide offenses which have never been the subject of the death penalty: Espionage, treason, attempts to kill a President, attempts to kidnap a President, drug kingpins, based on the amount of drugs or money involved.

I submit that those kinds of people ought to face the death penalty. If the Members agree, vote for this bill and stop this demagoguery.

I urge the Members to vote for this rule and vote for this bill, and let us get on with it.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I am surprised at the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BRYANT] using the words "political" and "demagoguery." Let me show you a good Democrat from the State of Texas. His name is Dan Morales, attorney general of the State of Texas, and he is opposed to this bill. Here is his signature. Here is your so-called demagoguery.

Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. GINGRICH].

Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Speaker, as we try to debate this at 6:45 in the morning, I think the most striking thing that hits me, and it has been just driven deeper and deeper every time I watch the evening news, is that this is an incredibly tragic time for America and for Americans. In virtually every major city the evening news increasingly could be called "Death Watch." We tune in, and all of us have done it, and we watch a 16-year-old killed in a drug gunfight; we watch a 3-year-old who dies in a drive-by killing; we see tragedy after tragedy after tragedy. We see violent criminal after violent criminal, people whose brutality and willingness to prey on other human beings is extraordinary.

Then we come with this bill, which I have to confess, until it came out of conference, I would not have thought possible. This bill manages to, if I may quote from the Department of Justice's analysis of it: "With remarkable consistency the conference committee has rejected the better option and has opted instead for provisions that harm law enforcement and reduce the public security against crime."

Now, what are people talking about? Why do district attorneys who prosecute criminals and the State attorney generals who try the cases and who make sure that the death penalty is applied, why do they matter? Why does the average citizen out here care what a prosecuting attorney says?

Let me give an example, a case that is going to become very famous in 1992. In 1987, a parole board prematurely released Arthur Shaw Cross, who was in prison for sexually molesting and killing two children, ages 8 and 10. This release occurred in spite of his parole officer's warnings against premature release. The parole officer wrote that Shaw Cross is a psychosexual maniac for whom prison walls could not be erected thick enough. Previous reports said he was a homicidal schizoid personality of abnormal character with psychosexual difficulties, including pedophilic fetishes.

The State first moved Shaw Cross secretly to Binghamton, where he was run out of town by outraged citizens. Then they deposited him secretly in Rochester, never alerting the local police. Then during 1988 and 1989, Shaw Cross murdered 11 women in Rochester in a killing spree that terrorized the community.

Now, why are citizens upset? They are upset because in this bill the liberals in this Congress on the House and Senate side gathered together to perpetrate a hoax, the death penalty, written deliberately so it will never be used, written in such a way that every opponent of the death penalty can gleefully vote yes, because they have managed to perpetrate upon the citizenry an absolute hoax.

Who says it is a hoax? Well, let me give you a couple examples. The National District Attorneys Association—by the way, one of our earlier speakers said appointed by the President. Nonsense. I do not know what that person knows about how district attorneys are created, but in most places they are elected, elected by the people, Democrat or Republican.

What do they say? Let me read the text:

> DEAR GENTLEMEN: The American people have been mugged again—this time by the leadership of the United States Congress. The nation's prosecutors strongly oppose the so-called "crime control" bill approved in Sunday's conference and urge both House and Senate to reject it. This bill does far more to advance the interests of convicted criminals than it does to protect victims and law-abiding citizens.

Let me repeat that sentence so that no one who votes today has any doubt about what the district attorney says:

> This bill does far more to advance the interests of convicted criminals than it does to protect victims and law-abiding citizens. In fact, passage of this bill is tantamount to handing the jail house keys to thousands of convicted state and federal prisoners.
> The bill advances the rights of convicted criminals by providing golden opportunities for them to use new case law to overturn old convictions. This is accomplished through the repeal of several Supreme Court precedents in the habeas corpus provision approved by the conference. It also provides unworkable counsel standards in death penalty cases that violate the most basic tenets of federalism.
> The conference committee in nearly every instance chose the wealthiest provisions with respect to law enforcement. It rejected the House limitations on application of the exclusionary rule. It overturns the Supreme Court decision in Arizona v. Fulminante through a provision that may have far reaching effects and which was not even the subject of hearings. Finally, the conference chose the weaker provisions on death penalty offenses and procedure.
> It is a sad day when the will of American people to enact tougher criminal laws is so completely thwarted. We urge you to reject this poor excuse for a crime control bill.
> Signed: Thomas J. Charron, District Attorney, President, National District Attorneys Association.

So if you want to vote as seen by the elected district attorneys whose job it is to prosecute the Arthur Shawcrosses of the world, if you want to vote in favor of helping the criminals, of releasing convicted State and Federal prisoners, putting back on the street the kind of people who kill, who rape, who maim, then vote yes; but understand clearly that in the judgment of the district attorneys, Democrat and Republican, you are voting on behalf of the criminals if you vote yes.

Mr. Speaker, I urge you to vote no.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. ENGEL].

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of the conference report on H.R. 3371, the Omnibus Crime Control Act of 1991. As a Representative from New York, I can attest that the growing scourge of crime in our Nation's cities cannot be tolerated any longer. Too many innocent people have lost their lives in random acts of violence, too many guns are in the hands of dangerous people, and too many criminals, guilty of repeated offenses, walk the streets freely.

According to the U.S. Bureau of Justice, last year 5 percent of the Nation's households, or about 4.5 million households, had at least one family member who was the victim of a violent crime. Almost 6.9 million households, or about 1 in 14, were affected by a rape, robbery, or an assault by a stranger or burglar during 1990.

We have a responsibility to the American people to pass the conference report on the omnibus crime control bill. This conference report will provide over $3 billion for much needed crime control programs. One of the most important parts of this conference report is the additional funding it provides for hiring more law enforcement officers on the Federal, State, and local levels.

The conference report on H.R. 3371 also takes a step in the right direction by including a 5 day waiting period for the purchase of handguns. This provision will give law enforcement officials the necessary time to run a background check to determine whether or not the prospective buyer holds a criminal record. This provision alone, will go a long way in helping to prevent the senseless murders that occur everyday.

I want to say to my colleagues, that we would be making a terrible mistake if we fail to pass this bill. Admittedly, this bill is not perfect. Many of us feel that there are provisions in the bill with which we are not happy, and others wish the bill contained some provisions which have been excluded in the final version. However, this is a good compromise bill. It moves in the right direction in terms of trying to combat crime, and sends a clear message to our constituents that we are aware of their concerns and are as troubled as they are by the rising crime rate in our country.

Mr. Speaker, in the past 2 years I have personally heard gunshots outside both my residence in my home district and my apartment here in Washington. Both gunshots resulted in murders, one drug-related and the other a street robbery. There's hardly an American who hasn't been affected one way or the other by violent crime. This bill strengthens the statutes in dealing with crime. Let's look at some of the other provisions that this bill offers:

It will provide 10 regional prisons for Federal and State drug criminals.

H.R. 3371 authorizes aid for cities hardest hit by the drug crisis.

It establishes new programs including grants for safe schools and antigang programs, and appropriates funding for prevention programs like additional cops on the beat, trauma centers, and law enforcement scholarships.

The legislation authorizes $1.2 billion in aid to State and local law enforcement agencies.

It boosts aid to victims of crime; requiring victim impact statements.

And finally, H.R. 3371 toughens penalties for gun use during violent crimes.

I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of the conference report on the omnibus crime control bill. The future safety of millions of Americans is riding on its passage.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, let me say before I move the previous question that it was not necessary for me to get a report from the DA's and so forth and so on. I have tried a number of cases in my career as an attorney. I prosecuted and I also defended many cases, capital cases and all other cases.

I have followed this bill very closely. We all know the matter of the death penalty does not really amount to a great deal, because we are talking about a very small part of the criminal case jurisdiction in this country; although it is important, it is not as major as many of our speakers would make it out.

Mr. Speaker, this is a strong crime bill, and if for no other reason, I recommend as a trial attorney this legislation, based on the habeas corpus provisions alone. This is the strongest reform that we have had of habeas corpus in modern times.

What it is going to mean to the American people is these people who run us all up a wall and we wonder why, what is going on in the legal system, when we see people 10 years after a conviction has been rendered in a lower court before the final execution of that conviction is brought about 10 years later.

This is going to be put to an end. There is going to be 1 petition and 1 year.

Mr. Speaker, if for no other reason, this is the reason to vote for this bill.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HOYER). The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 232, nays 160, answered "present" 1, not voting 41, as follows:

Mr. VALENTINE and Mr. SIKORSKI change their vote from "nay" to "yea."

So the resolution was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. FLAKE. Mr. Speaker, on rollcall 427, the rule for the supplemental; rollcall 428, the conference report on dire emergency supplemental; and 429, tax extensions, I was unavoidably absent and missed those votes. If I had been present, I would have voted in the affirmative on all three.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 3371, OMNIBUS CRIME CONTROL ACT OF 1991

Mr. BROOKS submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (H.R. 3371) to control and prevent crime:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. 102-405)

The Committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 3371), to control and prevent crime, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Houses recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment, insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1991".

TITLE I—DEATH PENALTY

SEC. 101. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Federal Death Penalty Act of 1991".

SEC. 102. CONSTITUTIONAL PROCEDURES FOR THE IMPOSITION OF THE SENTENCE OF DEATH.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part II of title 18 of the United States Code is amended by adding the following new chapter after chapter 227:

"CHAPTER 228—DEATH SENTENCE

"Sec.
"3591. Sentence of death.
"3592. Mitigating and aggravating factors to be considered in determining whether a sentence of death is justified.
"3593. Special hearing to determine whether a sentence of death is justified.
"3594. Imposition of a sentence of death.
"3595. Review of a sentence of death.
"3596. Implementation of a sentence of death.
"3597. Use of State facilities.
"3598. Special provisions for Indian country.

"§3591. Sentence of death

"A defendant who has been found guilty of—

"(1) an offense described in section 794 or section 2381 of this title;

"(2) an offense described in section 1751(c) of this title, if the offense, as determined beyond a reasonable doubt at the hearing under section 3593, constitutes an attempt to kill the President of the United States and results in bodily injury to the President or comes dangerously close to causing the death of the President; or

"(3) any other offense for which a sentence of death is provided, if the defendant, as determined beyond a reasonable doubt at the hearing under section 3593—

"(A) intentionally killed the victim;

"(B) intentionally inflicted serious bodily injury that resulted in the death of the victim;

"(C) intentionally participated in an act, contemplating that the life of a person would be taken or intending that lethal force would be used in connection with a person, other than one of the participants in the offense, and the victim died as a direct result of the act; or

"(D) intentionally and specifically engaged in an act, knowing that the act created a grave risk of death to a person, other than one of the participants in the offense, such that participation in the act constituted a reckless disregard for human life and the victim died as a direct result of the act, shall be sentenced to death if, after consideration of the factors set forth in section 3592 in the course of a hearing held pursuant to section 3593, it is determined that imposition of a sentence of death is justified, except that no person may be sentenced to death who was less than 18 years of age at the time of the offense.

"§3592. Mitigating and aggravating factors to be considered in determining whether a sentence of death is justified

"(a) MITIGATING FACTORS.—In determining whether a sentence of death is to be imposed on a defendant, the finder of fact shall consider any mitigating factor, including the following:

"(1) IMPAIRED CAPACITY.—The defendant's capacity to appreciate the wrongfulness of the defendant's conduct or to conform conduct to the requirements of law was significantly impaired, regardless of whether the capacity was so impaired as to constitute a defense to the charge.

"(2) DURESS.—The defendant was under unusual and substantial duress, regardless of whether the duress was of such a degree as to constitute a defense to the charge.

"(3) MINOR PARTICIPATION.—The defendant is punishable as a principal (as defined in section 2 of title 18 of the United States Code) in the offense, which was committed by another, but the defendant's participation was relatively minor, regardless of whether the participation was so minor as to constitute a defense to the charge.

"(4) FORSEEABILITY.—The defendant could not reasonably have foreseen that the defendant's conduct in the course of the commission of murder, or other offense resulting in death for which the defendant was convicted, would cause, or would create a grave risk of causing, death to any person.

"(5) NO PRIOR CRIMINAL RECORD.—The defendant did not have a significant prior history of other criminal conduct.

"(6) DISTURBANCE.—The defendant committed the offense under severe mental or emotional disturbance.

"(7) VICTIM'S CONSENT.—The victim consented to the criminal conduct that resulted in the victim's death.

"(8) OTHER FACTORS.—Other factors in the defendant's background, record, or character or any other circumstance of the offense that mitigate against imposition of the death sentence.

"(b) AGGRAVATING FACTORS FOR ESPIONAGE AND TREASON.—In determining whether a sentence of death is justified for an offense described in section 3591(1), the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider each of the following aggravating factors for which notice has been given and determine which, if any, exist:

"(1) PRIOR ESPIONAGE OR TREASON OFFENSE.—The defendant has previously been convicted of another offense involving espionage or treason for which a sentence of either life imprisonment or death was authorized by law.

"(2) GRAVE RISK TO NATIONAL SECURITY.—In the commission of the offense the defendant knowingly created a grave risk of substantial danger to the national security.

"(3) GRAVE RISK OF DEATH.—In the commission of the offense the defendant knowingly created a grave risk of death to another person.

The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, may consider whether any other aggravating factor for which notice has been given exists.

"(c) AGGRAVATING FACTORS FOR HOMICIDE AND FOR ATTEMPTED MURDER OF THE PRESIDENT.—In determining whether a sentence of death is justified for an offense described in section 3591 (2) or (6), the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider each of the following aggravating factors for which notice has been given and determine which, if any, exist:

"(1) DEATH DURING COMMISSION OF ANOTHER CRIME.—The death, or injury resulting in death, occurred during the commission or attempted commission of, or during the immediate flight from the commission of, an offense under section 32 (destruction of aircraft or aircraft facilities), section 33 (destruction of motor vehicles or motor vehicle facilities), section 36 (violence at international airports), section 351 (violence against Members of Congress, Cabinet officers, or Supreme Court Justices), an offense under section 751 (prisoners in custody of institution or officer), section 794 (gathering or delivering defense information to aid foreign government), section 844(d) (transportation of explosives in interstate commerce for certain purposes), section 844(f) (destruction of Government property in interstate commerce by explosives), section 1118 (prisoners serving life term), section 1201 (kidnaping), section 844(i) (destruction of property affecting interstate commerce by explosives), section 1116 (killing or attempted killing of diplomats), section 1203 (hostage taking), section 1992 (wrecking trains), section 2280 (maritime violence), section 2281 (maritime platform violence), section 2332 (terrorist acts abroad against United States nationals), section 2339 (use of weapons of mass destruction), or section 2381 (treason) of this title, or section 902 (i) or (n) of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 (49 U.S.C. 1472 (i) or (n)) (aircraft piracy).

"(2) INVOLVEMENT OF FIREARM OR PREVIOUS CONVICTION OF VIOLENT FELONY INVOLVING FIREARM.—For any offense, other than an offense for which a sentence of death is sought on the basis of section 924(c) of this title, as amended by this Act, the defendant—

(A) during and in relation to the commission of the offense or in escaping or attempting to escape apprehension used or possessed a firearm as defined in section 921 of this title; or

(B) has previously been convicted of a Federal or State offense punishable by a term of imprisonment of more than one year, involving the use of attempted or threatened use of a firearm, as defined in section 921 of this title, against another person.

"(3) PREVIOUS CONVICTION OF OFFENSE FOR WHICH A SENTENCE OF DEATH OR LIFE IMPRISONMENT WAS AUTHORIZED.—The defendant has previously been convicted of another Federal or State offense resulting in the death of a person, for which a sentence of life imprisonment or a sentence of death was authorized by statute.

"(4) PREVIOUS CONVICTION OF OTHER SERIOUS OFFENSES.—The defendant has previously been convicted of two or more Federal or State offenses, punishable by a term of imprisonment of more than one year, committed on different occasions, involving the infliction of, or attempted infliction of, serious bodily injury or death upon another person.

"(5) GRAVE RISK OF DEATH TO ADDITIONAL PERSONS.—The defendant, in the commission of the offense, or in escaping apprehension for the violation of the offense, knowingly created a grave risk of death to one or more persons in addition to the victim of the offense.

"(6) HEINOUS, CRUEL, OR DEPRAVED MANNER OF COMMITTING OFFENSE.—The defendant committed the offense in an especially heinous, cruel, or depraved manner in that it involved torture or serious physical abuse to the victim.

"(7) PROCUREMENT OF OFFENSE BY PAYMENT.—The defendant procured the commission of the offense by payment, or promise of payment, of anything of pecuniary value.

"(8) PECUNIARY GAIN.—The defendant committed the offense as consideration for the receipt, or in the expectation of the receipt, of anything of pecuniary value.

"(9) SUBSTANTIAL PLANNING AND PREMEDITATION.—The defendant committed the offense after substantial planning and premeditation to cause the death of a person or commit an act of terrorism.

"(10) CONVICTION FOR TWO FELONY DRUG OFFENSES.—The defendant has previously been convicted of two or more State or Federal offenses punishable by a term of imprisonment of more than one year, committed on different occasions, involving the distribution of a controlled substance.

"(11) VULNERABILITY OF VICTIM.—The victim was particularly vulnerable due to old age, youth, or infirmity.

"(12) CONVICTION FOR SERIOUS FEDERAL DRUG OFFENSES.—The defendant had previously been convicted of violating title II or title III of the Controlled Substances Act for which a sentence of 5 or more years may be imposed or had previously been convicted of engaging in a continuing criminal enterprise.

"(13) CONTINUING CRIMINAL ENTERPRISE INVOLVING DRUG SALES TO MINORS.—The defendant committed the offense in the course of engaging in a continuing criminal enterprise in violation of section 408(c) of the Controlled Substances Act and that violation involved the distribution of drugs to persons under the age of 21 in violation of section 418 of such Act.

"(14) HIGH PUBLIC OFFICIALS.—The defendant committed the offense against—

"(A) the President of the United States, the President-elect, the Vice President, the Vice-President-elect, the Vice-President-designate, or, if there is no Vice President, the officer next in order of succession to the office of the President of the United States, or any person who is acting as President under the Constitution and laws of the United States;

"(B) a chief of state, head of government, or the political equivalent, of a foreign nation;

"(C) a foreign official listed in section 1116(b)(3)(A) of this title, if the official is in the United States on official business; or

"(D) a Federal public servant who is a judge, a law enforcement officer, or an employee of a United States penal or correctional institution—

"(i) while he is engaged in the performance of his official duties;

"(ii) because of the performance of his official duties; or

"(iii) because of his status as a public servant. For purposes of this subparagraph, a 'law enforcement officer' is a public servant authorized by law or by a Government agency or Congress to conduct or engage in the prevention, investigation, or prosecution or adjudication of an offense, and includes those engaged in corrections, parole, or probation functions.

The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, may consider whether any other aggravating factor for which notice has been given exists.

"§3593. Special hearing to determine whether a sentence of death is justified

"(a) NOTICE BY THE GOVERNMENT.—If, in a case involving an offense described in section 3591, the attorney for the government believes that the circumstances of the offense are such that a sentence of death is justified under this chapter, the attorney shall, a reasonable time before the trial or before acceptance by the court of a plea of guilty, sign and file with the court, and serve on the defendant, a notice—

"(1) stating that the government believes that the circumstances of the offense are such that, if the defendant is convicted, a sentence of death is justified under this chapter and that the government will seek the sentence of death; and

"(2) setting forth the aggravating factor or factors that the government, if the defendant is convicted, proposes to prove as justifying a sentence of death.

The factors for which notice is provided under this subsection may include factors concerning the effect of the offense on the victim and the victim's family, and may include oral testimony, a victim impact statement that identifies the victim of the offense and the extent and scope of the injury and loss suffered by the victim and the victim's family, and any other relevant information. The court may permit the attorney for the government to amend the notice upon a showing of good cause.

"(b) HEARING BEFORE A COURT OR JURY.—If the attorney for the government has filed a notice as required under subsection (a) and the defendant is found guilty of or pleads guilty to an offense described in section 3591, the judge who presided at the trial or before whom the guilty plea was entered, or another judge if that judge is unavailable, shall conduct a separate sentencing hearing to determine the punishment to be imposed. The hearing shall be conducted—

"(1) before the jury that determined the defendant's guilt;

"(2) before a jury impaneled for the purpose of the hearing if—

"(A) the defendant was convicted upon a plea of guilty;

"(B) the defendant was convicted after a trial before the court sitting without a jury;

"(C) the jury that determined the defendant's guilt was discharged for good cause; or

"(D) after initial imposition of a sentence under this section, reconsideration of the sentence under this section is necessary; or

"(3) before the court alone, upon the motion of the defendant and with the approval of the attorney for the government.

A jury impaneled pursuant to paragraph (2) shall consist of twelve members, unless, at any time before the conclusion of the hearing, the parties stipulate, with the approval of the court, that it shall consist of a lesser number.

"(c) PROOF OF MITIGATING AND AGGRAVATING FACTORS.—Notwithstanding rule 32(c) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, when a defendant is found guilty or pleads guilty to an offense under section 3591, no presentence report shall be prepared. At the sentencing hearing, information may be presented as to any matter relevant to the sentence, including any mitigating or aggravating factor permitted or required to be considered under section 3592. Information presented may include the trial transcript and exhibits if the hearing is held before a jury or judge not present during the trial. The defendant may present any information relevant to a mitigating factor. The government may present any information relevant to an aggravating factor. The government and the defendant shall be permitted to rebut any information received at the hearing, and shall be given fair opportunity to present argument as to the adequacy of the information to establish the existence of any aggravating or mitigating factor, and as to the appropriateness in the case of imposing a sentence of death. The government shall open the argument. The defendant shall be permitted to reply. The government shall then be permitted to reply in rebuttal. The burden of establishing the existence of any aggravating factor is on the government, and is not satisfied unless the existence of such a factor is established beyond a reasonable doubt. The burden of establishing the existence of any mitigating factor is on the defendant, and is not satisfied unless the existence of such a factor is established by a preponderance of the information.

"(d) RETURN OF SPECIAL FINDINGS.—The jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider all the information received during the hearing. It shall return special findings identifying any aggravating factor or factors set forth in section 3592 found to exist and any other aggravating factor for which notice has been provided under subsection (a) found to exist. A finding with respect to a mitigating factor may be made by one or more members of the jury, and any member of the jury who finds the existence of a mitigating factor may consider such factor established for purposes of this section regardless of the number of jurors who concur that the factor has been established. A finding with respect to any aggravating factor must be unanimous. If no aggravating factor set forth in section 3592 is found to exist, the court shall impose a sentence other than death authorized by law.

"(e) RETURN OF A FINDING CONCERNING A SENTENCE OF DEATH.—If, in the case of—

"(1) an offense described in section 3591(1), an aggravating factor required to be considered under section 3592(b) is found to exist; or

"(2) an offense described in section 3591 (2) or (3), an aggravating factor required to be considered under section 3592(c) is found to exist, the jury, or if there is no jury, the court, shall consider whether all the aggravating factor or factors found to exist sufficiently outweigh all the mitigating factor or factors found to exist to justify a sentence of death, or, in the absence of a mitigating factor, whether the aggravating factor or factors alone are sufficient to justify a sentence of death. Based upon this consideration, the jury by unanimous vote, or if there is no jury, the court, shall recommend whether a sentence of death shall be imposed rather than a lesser sentence. The jury or the court, if there is no jury, regardless of its findings with respect to aggravating and mitigating factors, is never required to impose a death sentence.

"(f) SPECIAL PRECAUTION TO ENSURE AGAINST DISCRIMINATION.—In a hearing held before a jury, the court, prior to the return of a finding under subsection (e), shall instruct the jury that, in considering whether a sentence of death is justified, it shall not consider the race, color, religious beliefs, national origin, or sex of the defendant or of any victim and that the jury is not to recommend a sentence of death unless it has concluded that it would recommend a sentence of death for the crime in question no matter what the race, color, religious beliefs, national origin, or sex of the defendant or of any victim may be. The jury, upon return of a finding under subsection (e), shall also return to the court a certificate, signed by each juror, that consideration of the race, color, religious beliefs, national origin, or sex of the defendant or any victim was not involved in reaching his or her individual decision and that the individual juror would have made the same recommendation regarding a sentence for the crime in question no matter what the race, color, religious beliefs, national origin, or sex of the defendant or any victim may be.

"§3594. Imposition of a sentence of death

"Upon a finding under section 3593(e) that a sentence of death is justified, the court shall sentence the defendant to death. Otherwise, the court shall impose any sentence other than death that is authorized by law. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, if the maximum term of imprisonment for the offense is life imprisonment, the court may impose a sentence of life imprisonment without parole.

"§3595. Review of a sentence of death

"(a) APPEAL.—In a case in which a sentence of death is imposed, the sentence shall be subject to review by the court of appeals upon appeal by the defendant. Notice of appeal must be filed within the time specified for the filing of a notice of appeal. An appeal under this section may be consolidated with an appeal of the judgment of conviction and shall have priority over all other cases.

"(b) REVIEW.—The court of appeals shall review the entire record in the case, including—

"(1) the evidence submitted during the trial;

"(2) the information submitted during the sentencing hearing;

"(3) the procedures employed in the sentencing hearing; and

"(4) the special findings returned under section 3593(d).

"(c) DECISION AND DISPOSITION.—

"(1) The court of appeals shall address all substantive and procedural issues raised on the appeal of a sentence of death, and shall consider whether the sentence of death was imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor and whether the evidence supports the special finding of the existence of an aggravating factor required to be considered under section 3592.

"(2) Whenever the court of appeals finds that—

"(A) the sentence of death was imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor;

"(B) the admissible evidence and information adduced does not support the special finding of the existence of the required aggravating factor; or

"(C) the proceedings involved any other legal error requiring reversal of the sentence that was properly preserved for appeal under the rules of criminal procedure, the court shall remand the case for reconsideration under section 3593 or imposition of a sentence other than death.

"(3) The court of appeals shall state in writing the reasons for its disposition of an appeal of a sentence of death under this section.

"§3596. Implementation of a sentence of death

"(a) IN GENERAL.—A person who has been sentenced to death pursuant to the provisions of this chapter shall be committed to the custody of the Attorney General until exhaustion of the procedures for appeal of the judgment of conviction and for review of the sentence. When the sentence is to be implemented, the Attorney General shall release the person sentenced to death to the custody of a United States marshal, who shall supervise implementation of the sentence in the manner prescribed by the law of the State in which the sentence is imposed. If the law of such State does not provide for implementation of a sentence of death, the court shall designate another State, the law of which does provide for the implementation of a sentence of death, and the sentence shall be implemented in the latter State in the manner prescribed by such law.

"(b) PREGNANT WOMAN.—A sentence of death shall not be carried out upon a woman while she is pregnant.

"(c) MENTAL CAPACITY.—A sentence of death shall not be carried out upon a person who is mentally retarded. A sentence of death shall not be carried out upon a person who, as a result of mental disability, lacks the mental capacity to understand the death penalty and why it was imposed on that person.

"§3597. Use of State facilities

"(a) IN GENERAL.—A United States marshal charged with supervising the implementation of a sentence of death may use appropriate State or local facilities for the purpose, may use the services of an appropriate State or local official or of a person such an official employs for the purpose, and shall pay the costs thereof in an amount approved by the Attorney General.

"(b) EXCUSE OF AN EMPLOYEE ON MORAL OR RELIGIOUS GROUNDS.—No employee of any State department of corrections, the United States Department of Justice, the Federal Bureau of Prisons, or the United States Marshals Service, and no employee providing services to that department, bureau, or service under contract shall be required, as a condition of that employment or contractual obligation, to be in attendance at or to participate in any prosecution or execution under this section if such participation is contrary to the moral or religious convictions of the employee. For purposes of this subsection, the term 'participation in executions' includes personal preparation of the condemned individual and the apparatus used for execution and supervision of the activities of other personnel in carrying out such activities.

"§3598. Special provisions for Indian country.

"Notwithstanding sections 1152 and 1153, no person subject to the criminal jurisdiction of an Indian tribal government shall be subject to a capital sentence under this chapter for any offense the Federal jurisdiction for which is predicated solely on Indian country as defined in section 1151 of this title, and which has occurred within the boundaries of such Indian country, unless the governing body of the tribe has elected that this chapter have effect over land and persons subject to its criminal jurisdiction.".

(b) AMENDMENT OF CHAPTER ANALYSIS.—The chapter analysis of part II of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding the following new item after the item relating to chapter 227:

"228. Death sentence................3591".

SEC. 103. SPECIFIC OFFENSES FOR WHICH DEATH PENALTY IS AUTHORIZED.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 153 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§2257. Counsel in capital cases; State court

"(a) A State in which capital punishment may be imposed shall provide legal services to—

"(1) indigents charged with offenses for which capital punishment is sought;

"(2) indigents who have been sentenced to death and who seek appellate, collateral, or unitary review in State court; and

"(3) indigents who have been sentenced to death and who seek certiorari review of State court judgments in the United States Supreme Court.

"(b) The State shall establish an appointing authority, which shall be—

"(1) a statewide defender organization;

"(2) a resource center; or

"(3) a committee appointed by the highest State court, comprised of members of the bar with substantial experience in, or commitment to, criminal justice.

"(c) The appointing authority shall—

"(1) publish a roster of attorneys qualified to be appointed in capital cases, procedures by which attorneys are appointed, and standards governing qualifications and performance of counsel, which shall include—

"(A) knowledge and understanding of pertinent legal authorities regarding issues in capital cases;

"(B) skills in the conduct of negotiations and litigation in capital cases, the investigation of capital cases and the psychiatric history and current condition of capital clients, and the preparation and writing of legal papers in capital cases;

"(C) in the case of counsel appointed for the trial or sentencing stages, 5 years of experience as a prosecutor or defense counsel in criminal felony cases; and

"(D) in the case of counsel appointed for the appellate, postconviction, or unitary review stages, 3 years of experience as a prosecutor or defense counsel in criminal felony cases;

"(2) monitor the performance of attorneys appointed and delete from the roster any attorney who fails to meet qualification and performance standards; and

"(3) appoint a defense team, which shall include at least 2 attorneys, to represent a client at the relevant stage of proceedings, promptly upon receiving notice of the need for the appointment from the relevant State court.

"(d) An attorney who is not listed on the roster shall be appointed only on the request of the client concerned and in circumstances in which the attorney requested is able to provide the client with quality legal representation.

"(e) No counsel appointed pursuant to this section to represent a prisoner in State postconviction proceedings shall have previously represented the prisoner at trial or on direct appeal in the case for which the appointment is made, unless the prisoner and counsel expressly request continued representation.

"(f) The ineffectiveness or incompetence of counsel appointed pursuant to this section during State or Federal postconviction proceedings shall not be a ground for relief in a proceeding arising under section 2254 of this title. This limitation shall not preclude the appointment of different counsel at any phase of State or Federal postconviction proceedings.

"(g) Upon receipt of notice from the appointing authority that an individual entitled to the appointment of counsel under this section has declined to accept such an appointment, the court requesting the appointment shall conduct, or cause to be conducted, a hearing, at which the individual and counsel proposed to be appointed under this section shall be present, to determine the individual's competency to decline the appointment, and whether the individual has knowingly and intelligently declined it.

"(h) Attorneys appointed from the private bar shall be compensated on an hourly basis and at a reasonable rate in light of the attorney's qualifications and experience and the local market for legal representation in cases reflecting the complexity and responsibility of capital cases and shall be reimbursed for expenses reasonably incurred in representing the client, including the costs of law clerks, paralegals, investigators, experts, or other support services.

"(i) Support services for staff attorneys of a defender organization or resource center shall be equal to the services listed in subsection (h).

"(j) If a State fails to provide counsel in a proceeding specified in subsection (a), or counsel appointed for such a proceeding fails substantially to meet the qualification standards specified in subsections (c)(1) or (d), or the performance standards established by the appointing authority, the court, in an action under this chapter, shall neither presume findings of fact made in such proceeding to be correct nor decline to consider a claim on the ground that it was not raised in such proceeding at the time or in the manner prescribed by State law.".

"2257. Counsel in capital cases; State court.".

(1) by inserting "(1)" after "(b)";

(2) by inserting ", in the case of an applicant not under sentence of death," after "When"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

"(2) In the case of an applicant under sentence of death, a claim presented in a second or successive application, that was not presented in a prior application under this chapter, shall be dismissed unless—

"(A) the applicant shows that—

"(i) the basis of the claim could not have been discovered by the exercise of reasonable diligence before the applicant filed the prior application; or

"(ii) the failure to raise the claim in the prior application was due to action by State officials in violation of the Constitution of the United States; and

"(B) the facts underlying the claim would be sufficient, if proven, to undermine the court's confidence in the applicant's guilt of the offense or offenses for which the capital sentence was imposed, or in the validity of that sentence under Federal law.".

SEC. 207. CERTIFICATES OF PROBABLE CAUSE.

The third paragraph of section 2253, title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"An appeal may not be taken to the court of appeals from the final order in a habeas corpus proceeding where the detention complained of arises out of process issued by a State court, unless the justice or judge who rendered the order or a circuit justice or judge issues a certificate of probable cause. However, an applicant under sentence of death shall have a right of appeal without a certification of probable cause, except after denial of a second or successive application.".

"Evidence which is obtained as a result of search or seizure shall not be excluded in a proceeding in a court of the United States on the ground that the search or seizure was in violation of the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, if the search or seizure was carried out in reasonable reliance on a warrant issued by a detached and neutral magistrate ultimately found to be invalid, unless—

"(1) the judicial officer in issuing the warrant was materially misled by information in an affidavit that the affiant knew was false or would have known was false except for his reckless disregard of the truth;

"(2) the judicial officer provided approval of the warrant without exercising a neutral and detached review of the application for the warrant;

"(3) the warrant was based on an affidavit so lacking in indicia of probable cause as to render official belief in its existence entirely unreasonable; or

"(4) the warrant is so facially deficient that the executing officers could not reasonably presume it to be valid.".

(b) AMENDMENT TO CHAPTER ANALYSIS.—The table of chapters at the beginning of chapter 109 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"2237. Evidence obtained by invalid warrant."

TITLE IV—COERCED CONFESSIONS

SEC. 401. COERCED CONFESSIONS.

The admission into evidence of a coerced confession shall not be considered harmless error.

For the purposes of this section, a confession is coerced if it is elicited in violation of the fifth or fourteenth articles of amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

TITLE V—FIREARMS

Subtitle A—Brady Handgun Violence Prevention Act

SEC. 501. FEDERAL FIREARMS LICENSEE REQUIRED TO CONDUCT CRIMINAL BACKGROUND CHECK BEFORE TRANSFER OF FIREARM TO NONLICENSEE.

(a) Interim Provision.—

(1) In general.—Section 922 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(s)(1) Beginning on the date that is 90 days after the date of enactment of this subsection and ending on the day before the date that the Attorney General certifies under section 512(d)(1) of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1991 that the national instant criminal background check system is established (except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3) of such section), it shall be unlawful for any licensed importer, licensed manufacturer, or licensed dealer to sell, deliver, or transfer a handgun to an individual who is not licensed under section 923, unless—

"(A) after the most recent proposal of such transfer by the transferee—

"(i) the transferor has—

"(I) received from the transferee a statement of the transferee containing the information described in paragraph (3);

"(II) verified the identity of the transferee by examining the identification document presented;

"(III) within 1 day after the transferee furnishes the statement, provided notice of the contents of the statement to the chief law enforcement officer of the place of residence of the transferee; and

"(IV) within 1 day after the transferee furnishes the statement, transmitted a copy of the statement to the chief law enforcement officer of the place of residence of the transferee; and

"(ii)(I) 5 business days (as defined by days in which State offices are open) have elapsed from the date the transferor furnished notice of the contents of the statement to the chief law enforcement officer, during which period the transferor has not received information from the chief law enforcement officer that receipt or possession of the handgun by the transferee would be in violation of Federal, State, or local law; or

"(II) the transferor has received notice from the chief law enforcement officer that the officer has no information indicating that receipt or possession of the handgun by the transferee would violate Federal, State, or local law;

"(B) the transferee has presented to the transferor a written statement, issued by the chief law enforcement officer of the place of residence of the transferee during the 10-day period ending on the date of the most recent proposal of such transfer by the transferee, stating that the transferee requires access to a handgun because of a threat to the life of the transferee or of any member of the household of the transferee;

"(C)(i) the transferee has presented to the transferor a permit that—

"(I) allows the transferee to possess a handgun; and

"(II) was issued not more than 5 years earlier by the State in which the transfer is to take place; and

"(ii) the law of the State provides that such a permit is to be issued only after an authorized government official has verified that the information available to such official does not indicate that possession of a handgun by the transferee would be in violation of law;

"(D) the law of the State requires that, before any licensed importer, licensed manufacturer, or licensed dealer completes the transfer of a handgun to an individual who is not licensed under section 923, an authorized government official verify that the information available to such official does not indicate that possession of a handgun by the transferee would be in violation of law, except that this subparagraph shall not apply to a State that, on the date of certification pursuant to section 502(d) of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1991, is not in compliance with the timetable established pursuant to section 502(c) of such Act;

"(E) the Secretary has approved the transfer under section 5812 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; or

"(F) on application of the transferor, the Secretary has certified that compliance with subparagraph (A)(i)(III) is impracticable because—

"(i) the ratio of the number of law enforcement officers of the State in which the transfer is to occur to the number of square miles of land area of the State does not exceed 0.0025;

"(ii) the business premises of the transferor at which the transfer is to occur are extremely remote in relation to the chief law enforcement officer; and

"(iii) there is an absence of telecommunications facilities in the geographical area in which the business premises are located.

"(2) A chief law enforcement officer to whom a transferor has provided notice pursuant to paragraph (1)(A)(i)(III) shall make a reasonable effort to ascertain within 5 business days whether the transferee has a criminal record or whether there is any other legal impediment to the transferee's receiving a handgun, including research in whatever State and local recordkeeping systems are available and in a national system designated by the Attorney General.

"(3) The statement referred to in paragraph (1)(A)(i)(I) shall contain only—

"(A) the name, address, and date of birth appearing on a valid identification document (as defined in section 1028(d)(1)) of the transferee containing a photograph of the transferee and a description of the identification used;

"(B) a statement that transferee—

"(i) is not under indictment for, and has not been convicted in any court of, a crime punishable by imprisonment for a term exceeding 1 year;

"(ii) is not a fugitive from justice;

"(iii) is not an unlawful user of or addicted to any controlled substance (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act);

"(iv) has not been adjudicated as a mental defective or been committed to a mental institution;

"(v) is not an alien who is illegally or unlawfully in the United States;

"(vi) has not been discharged from the Armed Forces under dishonorable conditions; and

"(vii) is not a person who, having been a citizen of the United States, has renounced such citizenship;

"(C) the date the statement is made; and

"(D) notice that the transferee intends to obtain a handgun from the transferor.

"(4) Any transferor of a handgun who, after such transfer, receives a report from a chief law enforcement officer containing information that receipt or possession of the handgun by the transferee violates Federal, State, or local law shall immediately communicate all information the transferor has about the transfer and the transferee to—

"(A) the chief law enforcement officer of the place of business of the transferor; and

"(B) the chief law enforcement officer of the place of residence of the transferee.

"(5) Any transferor who receives information, not otherwise available to the public, in a report under this subsection shall not disclose such information except to the transferee, to law enforcement authorities, or pursuant to the direction of a court of law.

"(6)(A) Any transferor who sells, delivers, or otherwise transfers a handgun to a transferee shall retain the copy of the statement of the transferee with respect to the handgun transaction, and shall retain evidence that the transferor has complied with subclauses (III) and (IV) of paragraph (1)(A)(i) with respect to the statement.

"(B) Unless the chief law enforcement officer to whom a statement is transmitted under paragraph (1)(A)(i)(IV) determines that a transaction would violate Federal, State, or local law—

"(i) the officer shall, within 20 business days after the date the transferee made the statement on the basis of which the notice was provided, destroy the statement and any record containing information derived from the statement;

"(ii) the information contained in the statement shall not be conveyed to any person except a person who has a need to know in order to carry out this subsection; and

"(iii) the information contained in the statement shall not be used for any purpose other than to carry out this subsection.

"(7) A chief law enforcement officer or other person responsible for providing criminal history background information pursuant to this subsection shall not be liable in an action at law for damages—

"(A) for failure to prevent the sale or transfer of a handgun to a person whose receipt or possession of the handgun is unlawful under this section; or

"(B) for preventing such a sale or transfer to a person who may lawfully receive or possess a handgun.

"(8) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'chief law enforcement officer' means the chief of police, the sheriff, or an equivalent officer or the designee of any such individual.

"(9) The Secretary shall take necessary actions to ensure that the provisions of this subsection are published and disseminated to licensed dealers, law enforcement officials, and the public.".

(2) Handgun defined.—Section 921(a) of such title is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(29) The term 'handgun' means—

"(A) a firearm which has a short stock and is designed to be held and fired by the use of a single hand; and

"(B) any combination of parts from which a firearm described in subparagraph (A) can be assembled.".

(b) Permanent Provision.—Section 922 of title 18, United States Code, as amended by subsection (a)(1) of this section, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(t)(1) Beginning on the date that the Attorney General certifies under section 502(d)(1) of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1991 that the national instant criminal background check system is established (except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3) of such section), a licensed importer, licensed manufacturer, or licensed dealer shall not transfer a firearm to any other person who is not such a licensee, unless—

"(A) before the completion of the transfer, the licensee contacts the national instant criminal background check system established under section 503 of such Act;

"(B) the system notifies the licensee that the system has not located any record that demonstrates that the receipt of a firearm by such other person would violate subsection (g) or (n) of this section or any State or local law; and

"(C) the transferor has verified the identity of the transferee by examining a valid identification document (as defined in section 1028(d)(1) of this title) of the transferee containing a photograph of the transferee.

"(2) Paragraph (1) shall not apply to a firearm transfer between a licensee and another person if—

"(A)(i) such other person has presented to the licensee a permit that—

"(I) allows such other person to possess a firearm; and

"(II) was issued not more than 5 years earlier by the State in which the transfer is to take place; and

"(ii) the law of the State provides that such a permit is to be issued only after an authorized government official has verified that the information available to such official does not indicate that possession of a firearm by such other person would be in violation of law;

"(B) the Secretary has approved the transfer under section 5812 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; or

"(C) on application of the transferor, the Secretary has certified that compliance with paragraph (1)(A) is impracticable because—

"(i) the ratio of the number of law enforcement officers of the State in which the transfer is to occur to the number of square miles of land area of the State does not exceed 0.0025;

"(ii) the business premises of the licensee at which the transfer is to occur are extremely remote in relation to the chief law enforcement officer (as defined in subsection (u)(8)); and

"(iii) there is an absence of telecommunications facilities in the geographical area in which the business premises are located.

"(3) If the national instant criminal background check system notifies the licensee that the information available to the system does not demonstrate that the receipt of a firearm by such other person would violate subsection (g) or (n), and the licensee transfers a firearm to such other person, the licensee shall include in the record of the transfer the unique identification number provided by the system with respect to the transfer.

"(4) In addition to the authority provided under section 923(e), if the licensee knowingly transfers a firearm to such other person and knowingly fails to comply with paragraph (1) of this subsection with respect to the transfer and, at the time such other person most recently proposed the transfer, the national instant criminal background check system was operating and information was available to the system demonstrating that receipt of a firearm by such other person would violate subsection (g) or (n) of this section, the Secretary may, after notice and opportunity for a hearing, suspend for not more than 6 months or revoke any license issued to the licensee under section 923, and may impose on the licensee a civil fine of not more than $5,000.

"(5) Neither a local government nor an employee of the Federal Government or of any State or local government, responsible for providing information to the national instant criminal background check system shall be liable in an action at law for damages—

"(A) for failure to prevent the sale or transfer of a handgun to a person whose receipt or possession of the handgun is unlawful under this section; or

"(B) for preventing such a sale or transfer to a person who may lawfully receive or possess a handgun.".

(c) Penalty.—Section 924(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking "paragraph (2) or (3) of"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(5) Whoever knowingly violates subsection (s) or (t) of section 922 shall be fined not more than $1,000, imprisoned for not more than 1 year, or both.".

SEC. 502. NATIONAL INSTANT CRIMINAL BACKGROUND CHECK SYSTEM.

(a) Establishment of System.—The Attorney General of the United States shall establish a national instant criminal background check system that any licensee may contact for information on whether receipt of a firearm by a prospective transferee thereof would violate subsection (g) or (n) of section 922 of title 18, United States Code, or any State or local law.

(b) Expedited Action by the Attorney General.—The Attorney General shall expedite—

(1) the upgrading and indexing of State criminal history records in the Federal criminal records system maintained by the Federal Bureau of Investigation;

(2) the development of hardware and software systems to link State criminal history check systems into the national instant criminal background check system established by the Attorney General pursuant to this section; and

(3) the current revitalization initiatives by the Federal Bureau of Investigation for technologically advanced fingerprint and criminal records identification.

(c) Provision of State Criminal Records to the National Instant Criminal Background Check System.—(1) Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall—

(A) determine the type of computer hardware and software that will be used to operate the national instant criminal background check system and the means by which State criminal records systems will communicate with the national system;

(B) investigate the criminal records system of each State and determine for each State a timetable by which the State should be able to provide criminal records on an on line capacity basis to the national system;

(C) notify each State of the determinations made pursuant to subparagraphs (A) and (B).

(2) The Attorney General shall require as a part of the State timetable that the State achieve, by the end of 5 years after the date of enactment of this Act, at least 80 percent currency of case dispositions in computerized criminal history files for all cases in which there has been an event of activity within the last 5 years and continue to maintain such a system.

(d) National System Certification.—(1) On the date that is 30 months after the date of enactment of this Act, and at any time thereafter, the Attorney General shall determine whether—

(A) the national system has achieved at least 80 percent currency of case dispositions in computerized criminal history files for all cases in which there has been an event of activity within the last 5 years on a national average basis; and

(B) the States are in compliance with the timetable established pursuant to subsection (c), and, if so, shall certify that the national system is established.

(2) If, on the date of certification in paragraph (1) of this subsection, a State is not in compliance with the timetable established pursuant to subsection (c) of this section, section 922(s) of title 18, United States Code, shall remain in effect in such State and section 922(t) of such title shall not apply to the State. The Attorney General shall certify if a State subject to the provisions of section 922(s) under the preceding sentence achieves compliance with its timetable after the date of certification in paragraph (1) of this subsection, and section 922(s) of title 18, United States Code, shall not apply to such State and section 922(t) of such title shall apply to the State.

(3) Six years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall certify whether or not a State is in compliance with subsection (c)(2) of this section and if the State is not in compliance, section 922(s) of title 18, United States Code, shall apply to the State and section 922(t) of such title shall not apply to the State. The Attorney General shall certify if a State subject to the provisions of section 922(s) under the preceding sentence achieves compliance with the standards in subsection (c)(2) of this section, and section 922(s) of title 18, United States Code, shall not apply to the State and section 922(t) of such title shall apply to the State.

(e) Notification of Licensees.—On establishment of the system under this section, the Attorney General shall notify each licensee and the chief law enforcement officer of each State of the existence and purpose of the system and the means to be used to contact the system.

(f) Administrative Provisions.—

(1) Authority to obtain official information.—Notwithstanding any other law, the Attorney General may secure directly from any department or agency of the United States such information on persons for whom receipt of a firearm would violate subsection (g) or (n) of section 922 of title 18, United States Code, or any State or local law, as is necessary to enable the system to operate in accordance with this section. On request of the Attorney General, the head of such department or agency shall furnish such information to the system.

(2) Other authority.—The Attorney General shall develop such computer software, design and obtain such telecommunications and computer hardware, and employ such personnel, as are necessary to establish and operate the system in accordance with this section.

(g) Correction of Erroneous System Information.—If the system established under this section informs an individual contacting the system that receipt of a firearm by a prospective transferee would violate subsection (g) or (n) of section 922 of title 18, United States Code, or any State or local law, the prospective transferee may request the Attorney General to provide the prospective transferee with the reasons therefor. Upon receipt of such a request, the Attorney General shall immediately comply with the request. The prospective transferee may submit to the Attorney General information that to correct, clarify, or supplement records of the system with respect to the prospective transferee. After receipt of such information, the Attorney General shall immediately consider the information, investigate the matter further, and correct all erroneous Federal records relating to the prospective transferee and give notice of the error to any Federal department or agency or any State that was the source of such erroneous records.

(h) Regulations.—After 90 days notice to the public and an opportunity for hearing by interested parties, the Attorney General shall prescribe regulations to ensure the privacy and security of the information of the system established under this section.

(i) Prohibitions Relating to Establishment of Registration Systems with Respect to Firearms.—No department, agency, officer, or employee of the United States may—

(1) require that any record or portion thereof maintained by the system established under this section be recorded at or transferred to a facility owned, managed, or controlled by the United States or any State or political subdivision thereof; or

(2) use the system established under this section to establish any system for the registration of firearms, firearm owners, or firearm transactions or dispositions, except with respect to persons prohibited by section 922(g) or (n) of title 18, United States Code, from receiving a firearm.

(j) Definitions.—As used in this section:

(1) Licensee.—The term "licensee" means a licensed importer, licensed manufacturer, or licensed dealer under section 923 of title 18, United States Code.

(2) OTHER TERMS.—The terms "firearm", "licensed importer", "licensed manufacturer", and "licensed dealer" have the meanings stated in section 921(a) (3), (9), (10), and (11), respectively, of title 18, United States Code.

SEC. 503. FUNDING FOR IMPROVEMENT OF CRIMINAL RECORDS.

(a) IMPROVEMENTS IN STATE RECORDS.—

(1) USE OF FORMULA GRANTS.—Section 509(b) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3759(b)) is amended—

(A) in paragraph (2) by striking "and" after the semicolon;

(B) in paragraph (3) by striking the period and inserting "; and"; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4) the improvement of State record systems and the sharing with the Attorney General of all of the records described in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) of this subsection and the records required by the Attorney General under section 502 of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1991, for the purpose of implementing such Act.".

(2) ADDITIONAL FUNDING.—

(A) GRANTS FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF CRIMINAL RECORDS.—The Attorney General, through the Bureau of Justice Statistics, shall, subject to appropriations and with preference to States that as of the date of enactment of this Act have the lowest percent currency of case dispositions in computerized criminal history files, make a grant to each State to be used—

(i) for the creation of a computerized criminal history record system or improvement of an existing system;

(ii) to improve accessibility to the national instant criminal background system; and

(iii) upon establishment of the national system, to assist the State in the transmittal of criminal records to the national system.

(B) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for grants under subparagraph (A) a total of $100,000,000 for fiscal year 1992 and all fiscal years thereafter.

(b) WITHHOLDING STATE FUNDS.—Effective on the date of enactment of this Act the Attorney General may reduce by up to 50 percent the allocation to a State for a fiscal year under title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 of a State that is not in compliance with the timetable established for such State under section 502(c) of this Act.

(c) WITHHOLDING OF DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE FUNDS.—If the Attorney General does not certify the national instant criminal background check system pursuant to section 502(d)(1) by—

(1) 30 months after the date of enactment of this Act the general administrative funds appropriated to the Department of Justice for the fiscal year beginning in the calendar year in which the date that is 30 months after the date of enactment of this Act falls shall be reduced by 5 percent on a monthly basis; and

(2) 42 months after the date of enactment of this Act the general administrative funds appropriated to the Department of Justice for the fiscal year beginning in the calendar year in which the date that is 42 months after the date of enactment of this Act falls shall be reduced by 10 percent on a monthly basis.

"(A) declared war;

"(B) armed conflict, whether or not war has been declared, between two or more nations; or

"(C) armed conflict between military forces of any origin.";

(4) by adding immediately after section 2332 as redesignated the following new sections:

"§2333. Civil remedies

"(a) ACTION AND JURISDICTION.—Any national of the United States injured in his person, property, or business by reason of an act of international terrorism, or his estate, survivors, or heirs, may sue therefor in any appropriate district court of the United States and shall recover threefold the damages he sustains and the cost of the suit, including attorney's fees.

"(b) ESTOPPED UNDER UNITED STATES LAW.—A final judgment or decree rendered in favor of the United States in any criminal proceeding under section 1116, 1201, 1203, or 2332 of this title or section 1472 (i), (k), (l), (n), or (r) of title 49 App. shall estop the defendant from denying the essential allegations of the criminal offense in any subsequent civil proceeding under this section.

"(c) ESTOPPED UNDER FOREIGN LAW.—A final judgment or decree rendered in favor of any foreign state in any criminal proceeding shall, to the extent that such judgment or decree may be accorded full faith and credit under the law of the United States, estop the defendant from denying the essential allegations of the criminal offense in any subsequent civil proceeding under this section.

"§2334. Jurisdiction and venue

"(a) GENERAL VENUE.—Any civil action under section 2333 of this title against any person may be instituted in the district court of the United States for any district where any plaintiff resides or where any defendant resides or is served, or has an agent. Process in such a civil action may be served in any district where the defendant resides, is found, or has an agent.

"(b) SPECIAL MARITIME OR TERRITORIAL JURISDICTION.—If the actions giving rise to the claim occurred within the special maritime and territorial jurisdiction of the United States, as defined in section 7 of this title, then any civil action under section 2333 of this title against any person may be instituted in the district court of the United States for any district in which any plaintiff resides or the defendant resides, is served, or has an agent.

"(c) SERVICE ON WITNESSES.—A witness in a civil action brought under section 2333 of this title may be served in any other district where the defendant resides, is found, or has an agent.

"(d) CONVENIENCE OF THE FORUM.—The district court shall not dismiss any action brought under section 2333 of this title on the grounds of the inconvenience or inappropriateness of the forum chosen, unless—

"(1) the action may be maintained in a foreign court that has jurisdiction over the subject matter and over all the defendants;

"(2) that foreign court is significantly more convenient and appropriate; and

"(3) that foreign court offers a remedy which is substantially the same as the one available in the courts of the United States.

"§2335. Limitation of actions

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subsection (b), a suit for recovery of damages under section 2333 of this title shall not be maintained unless commenced within 4 years from the date the cause of action accrued.

"(b) CALCULATION OF PERIOD.—The time of the absence of the defendant from the United States or from any jurisdiction in which the same or a similar action arising from the same facts may be maintained by the plaintiff, or any concealment of his whereabouts, shall not be reckoned within this period of limitation.

"§2336. Other limitations

"No action shall be maintained under section 2333 of this title for injury or loss by reason of an act of war.

"§2337. Suits against Government officials

"No action shall be maintained under section 2333 of this title against—

"(1) the United States, an agency of the United States, or an officer or employee of the United States or any agency thereof acting within his official capacity or under color of legal authority; or

"(2) a foreign state, an agency of a foreign state, or an officer or employee of a foreign state or an agency thereof acting within his official capacity or under color of legal authority.

"§2338. Exclusive Federal jurisdiction

"The district courts of the United States shall have exclusive jurisdiction over an action brought under this chapter."; and

(5) by amending the table of sections at the beginning of the chapter to read as follows:

"CHAPTER 113A—TERRORISM

"Sec.

(b) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of chapters at the beginning of part I, title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking:

"113A. Extraterritorial jurisdiction over terrorist acts abroad against United States nationals .... 2331" and inserting in lieu thereof:

"113A. Terrorism .... 2331".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This subtitle and the amendments made by this subtitle shall apply to any pending case or any cause of action arising on or after 4 years before the date of enactment of this Act.

Subtitle B—Maritime Navigation and Fixed Platforms

SEC. 803. OFFENSES OF VIOLENCE AGAINST MARITIME NAVIGATION OR FIXED PLATFORMS.

Chapter 111 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§2280. Violence against maritime navigation

"(a) Whoever unlawfully and intentionally—

"(1) seizes or exercises control over a ship by force or threat thereof or any other form of intimidation;

"(2) performs an act of violence against a person on board a ship if that act is likely to endanger the safe navigation of that ship;

"(3) destroys a ship or causes damage to a ship or to its cargo which is likely to endanger the safe navigation of that ship;

"(4) places or causes to be placed on a ship, by any means whatsoever, a device or substance which is likely to destroy that ship, or cause damage to that ship or its cargo which endangers or is likely to endanger the safe navigation of that ship;

"(5) destroys or seriously damages maritime navigational facilities or seriously interferes with their operation, if such act is likely to endanger the safe navigation of a ship;

"(6) communicates information, knowing the information to be false and under circumstances in which such information may reasonably be believed, thereby endangering the safe navigation of a ship;

"(7) injures or kills any person in connection with the commission or the attempted commission of any of the offenses set forth in paragraphs (1) through (6); or shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than twenty years, or both; and if the death of any person results, from conduct prohibited by this subsection, shall be punished by death or imprisoned for any term of years or for life.

"(8) attempts to do any act prohibited under paragraphs (1) through (7);

"(b) Whoever threatens to do any act prohibited under paragraphs (2), (3) or (5) of subsection (a), with apparent determination and will to carry the threat into execution, if the threatened act is likely to endanger the safe navigation of the ship in question, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.

"(c) There is jurisdiction over the prohibited activity in subsections (a) and (b)—

"(1) in the case of a covered ship, if—

"(A) such activity is committed—

"(i) by a person engaged in terrorism or who acts on behalf of a terrorist group;

"(ii) against or on board a ship flying the flag of the United States at the time the prohibited activity is committed;

"(iii) in the United States and the activity is not prohibited as a crime by the State in which the activity takes place; or

"(iv) the activity takes place on a ship flying the flag of a foreign country or outside the United States, by a national of the United States or by a stateless person whose habitual residence is in the United States;

"(B) during the commission of such activity, a national of the United States is seized, threatened, injured or killed; or

"(C) the offender is later found in the United States after such activity is committed;

"(2) in the case of a ship navigating or scheduled to navigate solely within the territorial sea or internal waters of a country other than the United States, if the offender is later found in the United States after such activity is committed; and

"(3) in the case of any vessel, if such activity is committed in an attempt to compel the United States to do or abstain from doing any act.

"(d) As used in this section, the term—

"(1) the term 'ship' means a vessel of any type whatsoever not permanently attached to the sea-bed, including dynamically supported craft, submersibles or any other floating craft; but such term does not include a warship, a ship owned or operated by a government when being used as a naval auxiliary or for customs or police purposes, or a ship which has been withdrawn from navigation or laid up;

"(2) the term 'covered ship' means a ship that is navigating or is scheduled to navigate into, through or from waters beyond the outer limit of the territorial sea of a single country or a lateral limit of that country's territorial sea with an adjacent country;

"(3) the term 'national of the United States' has the meaning given such term in section 101(a)(22) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(22));

"(4) the term 'territorial sea of the United States' means all waters extending seaward to 12 nautical miles from the baselines of the United States determined in accordance with international law; and

"(5) the term 'United States', when used in a geographical sense, includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas Islands and all territories and possessions of the United States.

"§2281. Violence against maritime fixed platforms

"(a) Whoever unlawfully and intentionally—

"(1) seizes or exercises control over a fixed platform by force or threat thereof or any other form of intimidation;

"(2) performs an act of violence against a person on board a fixed platform if that act is likely to endanger its safety;

"(3) destroys a fixed platform or causes damage to it which is likely to endanger its safety;

"(4) places or causes to be placed on a fixed platform, by any means whatsoever, a device or substance which is likely to destroy that fixed platform or likely to endanger its safety;

"(5) injures or kills any person in connection with the commission or the attempted commission of any of the offenses set forth in paragraphs (1) through (4); or shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than twenty years, or both; and if death results to any person from conduct prohibited by this subsection, shall be punished by death or imprisoned for any term of years or for life.

"(6) attempts to do anything prohibited under paragraphs (1) through (5);

"(b) Whoever threatens to do anything prohibited under paragraphs (2) or (3) of subsection (a), with apparent determination and will to carry the threat into execution, if the threatened act is likely to endanger the safety of the fixed platform, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.

"(c) There is jurisdiction over the prohibited activity in subsections (a) and (b) if—

"(1) such activity is committed against or on board a fixed platform—

"(A) that is located on the continental shelf of the United States, if—

"(i) by a person engaged in terrorism or who acts on behalf of a terrorist group; or

"(ii) if the activity is not prohibited as a crime by the State in which the activity takes place;

"(B) that is located on the continental shelf of another country, by a national of the United States or by a stateless person whose habitual residence is in the United States; or

"(C) in an attempt to compel the United States to do or abstain from doing any act;

"(2) during the commission of such activity against or on board a fixed platform located on a continental shelf, a national of the United States is seized, threatened, injured or killed; or

"(3) such activity is committed against or on board a fixed platform located outside the United States and beyond the continental shelf of the United States and the offender is later found in the United States.

"(d) As used in this section, the term—

"(1) 'continental shelf' means the sea-bed and subsoil of the submarine areas that extend beyond a country's territorial sea to the limits provided by customary international law as reflected in Article 76 of the 1982 Convention on the Law of the Sea;

"(2) 'fixed platform' means an artificial island, installation or structure permanently attached to the sea-bed for the purpose of exploration or exploitation of resources or for other economic purposes;

"(3) 'national of the United States' has the meaning given such term in section 101(a)(22) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(22));

"(4) 'territorial sea of the United States' means all waters extending seaward to 12 nautical miles from the baselines of the United States determined in accordance with international law; and

"(5) 'United States', when used in a geographical sense, includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas Islands and all territories and possessions of the United States.".

"(i) who the Attorney General determines (I) is in possession of critical reliable information concerning a criminal organization or enterprise, and (II) is willing to supply such information to Federal or State law enforcement authorities or a Federal or State court of law, and

"(ii) whose presence in the United States the Attorney General determines is essential to the success of an authorized criminal investigation or the successful prosecution of an individual involved in the criminal organization or enterprise, and the spouse and minor children of the alien if accompanying, or following to join, the alien.".

(b) CONDITIONS OF ENTRY.—

(1) WAIVER OF GROUNDS FOR EXCLUSION.—Section 212(d) of such Act (8 U.S.C. 1182(d)) is amended by inserting at the beginning the following new paragraph:

"(1) The Attorney General may, in his discretion, waive the application of subsection (a) (other than paragraph (3)(E) thereof) in the case of a nonimmigrant described in section 101(a)(15)(S), if the Attorney General deems it in the national interest. Any such waiver shall be deemed a waiver of any comparable ground for deportation under section 241(a)(1)(A).".

(2) NUMERICAL LIMITATIONS; PERIOD OF ADMISSION; ETC..—Section 214 of such Act (8 U.S.C. 1184) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(j)(1) The number of aliens who may be provided a visa as nonimmigrants under section 101(a)(15)(S) in any fiscal year may not exceed 100.

"(2) No alien may be admitted into the United States as such a nonimmigrant more than 5 years after the date of the enactment of this subsection.

"(3) The period of admission of an alien as such a nonimmigrant may not exceed 3 years. Such period may not be extended by the Attorney General.

"(4) As a condition for the admission, and continued stay in lawful status, of such a nonimmigrant, the nonimmigrant (A) shall report not less often than quarterly to the Commissioner such information concerning the alien's whereabouts and activities as the Attorney General may require, (B) may not be convicted of any criminal offense in the United States after the date of such admission, and (C) must have executed a form that waives the nonimmigrant's right to contest, other than on the basis of an application for withholding of deportation, any action for deportation of the alien instituted before the alien obtains lawful permanent resident status.

"(5) The Attorney General shall submit a report annually to the Committees on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives and of the Senate concerning (A) the number of such nonimmigrants admitted, (B) the number of successful criminal prosecutions or investigations resulting from cooperation of such aliens, (C) the number of such nonimmigrants whose admission has not resulted in successful criminal prosecution or investigation, and (D) the number of such nonimmigrants who have failed to report quarterly (as required under paragraph (4)) or who have been convicted of crimes in the United States after the date of their admission as such a nonimmigrant.".

(3) PROHIBITION OF CHANGE OF STATUS.—Section 248(1) of such Act (8 U.S.C. 1258(1)) is amended by striking "or (K)" and inserting "(K), or (S)".

(c) ADJUSTMENT TO PERMANENT RESIDENT STATUS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 245 of such Act (8 U.S.C. 1255), as amended by section 2(c) of the Armed Forces Immigration Adjustment Act of 1991, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(h)(1) If, in the opinion of the Attorney General—

"(A) a nonimmigrant admitted into the United States under section 101(a)(15)(S) has supplied information described in clauses (i) and (ii) of such section, and

"(B) the provision of such information has substantially contributed to the success of an authorized criminal investigation or the successful prosecution of an individual described in clause (ii) of such section, the Attorney General may adjust the status of the alien (and the spouse and child of the alien if admitted under such section) to that of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence if the alien is not described in section 212(a)(3)(E).

"(2) Upon the approval of adjustment of status under paragraph (1), the Attorney General shall record the alien's lawful admission for permanent residence as of the date of such approval and the Secretary of State shall reduce by one the number of visas authorized to be issued under section 201(d) and 203(b)(4) for the fiscal year then current.".

(2) EXCLUSIVE MEANS OF ADJUSTMENT.—Section 245(c) of such Act (8 U.S.C. 1255(c)) is amended by striking "or" before "(4)" and by inserting before the period at the end the following: "; or (5) an alien who was admitted as a nonimmigrant described in section 101(a)(15)(S)".

(d) EXTENDING PERIOD OF DEPORTATION FOR CONVICTION OF A CRIME.—Section 241(a)(2)(A)(i)(I) of such Act (8 U.S.C. 1251(a)(2)(A)(i)(I)) is amended by inserting "(or 10 years in the case of an alien provided lawful permanent resident status under section 245(h))" after "five years".

(iii) who has or may have unsupervised access to a child to whom the qualified entity provides child care; and

(B) a person who—

(i) seeks to be employed by or volunteer with a qualified entity;

(ii) seeks to own or operate a qualified entity; or

(iii) seeks to have or may have unsupervised access to a child to whom the qualified entity provides child care;

(15) the term "qualified entity" means a business or organization, whether public, private, for-profit, not-for-profit, or voluntary, that provides child care or child care placement services, including a business or organization that licenses or certifies others to provide child care or child care placement services;

(16) the term "sex crime" means an act of sexual abuse that is a criminal act;

(17) the term "sexual abuse" includes the employment, use, persuasion, inducement, enticement, or coercion of a child to engage in, or assist another person to engage in, sexually explicit conduct or the rape, molestation, prostitution, or other form of sexual exploitation of children or incest with children; and

(18) the term "State" means a State, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, American Samoa, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and the Trust Territories of the Pacific.

SEC. 914. REPORTING BY THE STATES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—An authorized criminal justice agency of a State shall report child abuse crime information to, or index child abuse crime information in, the national criminal background check system.

(b) PROVISION OF STATE CHILD ABUSE CRIME RECORDS THROUGH THE NATIONAL CRIMINAL BACKGROUND CHECK SYSTEM.—(1) Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall—

(A) investigate the criminal records of each State and determine for each State a timetable by which the State should be able to provide child abuse crime records on an on-line capacity basis through the national criminal background check system;

(B) establish guidelines for the reporting or indexing of child abuse crime information, including guidelines relating to the format, content, and accuracy of child abuse crime information and other procedures for carrying out this Act; and

(C) notify each State of the determinations made pursuant to subparagraphs (A) and (B).

(2) The Attorney General shall require as a part of the State timetable that the State—

(A) achieve, by not later than the date that is 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act, at least 80 percent currency of final case dispositions in computerized criminal history files for all identifiable child abuse crime cases in which there has been an event of activity within the last 5 years;

(B) continue to maintain at least 80 percent currency of final case dispositions in all identifiable child abuse crime cases in which there has been an event of activity within the preceding 5 years; and

(C) take steps to achieve full disposition reporting, including data quality audits and periodic notices to criminal justice agencies identifying records that lack final dispositions and requesting those dispositions.

(c) LIAISON.—An authorized agency of a State shall maintain close liaison with the National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect, the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, and the National Center for the Prosecution of Child Abuse for the exchange of technical assistance in cases of child abuse.

(d) ANNUAL SUMMARY.—(1) The Attorney General shall publish an annual statistical summary of the child abuse crime information reported under this subtitle.

(2) The annual statistical summary described in paragraph (1) shall not contain any information that may reveal the identity of any particular victim or alleged violator.

(e) ANNUAL REPORT.—The Attorney General shall publish an annual summary of each State's progress in reporting child abuse crime information to the national criminal background check system.

(f) STUDY OF CHILD ABUSE OFFENDERS.—(1) Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention shall begin a study based on a statistically significant sample of convicted child abuse offenders and other relevant information to determine—

(A) the percentage of convicted child abuse offenders who have more than 1 conviction for an offense involving child abuse;

(B) the percentage of convicted child abuse offenders who have been convicted of an offense involving child abuse in more than 1 State;

(C) whether there are crimes or classes of crimes, in addition to those defined as background check crimes in section 3, that are indicative of a potential to abuse children; and

(D) the extent to which and the manner in which instances of child abuse form a basis for convictions for crimes other than child abuse crimes.

(2) Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall submit a report to the Chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate and the Chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives containing a description of and a summary of the results of the study conducted pursuant to paragraph (1).

SEC. 915. BACKGROUND CHECKS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) A State may have in effect procedures (established by or under State statute or regulation) to permit a qualified entity to contact an authorized agency of the State to request a nationwide background check for the purpose of determining whether there is a report that a provider is under indictment for, or has been convicted of, a background check crime.

(2) The authorized agency shall access and review State and Federal records of background check crimes through the national criminal background check system and shall respond promptly to the inquiry.

(b) GUIDELINES.—(1) The Attorney General shall establish guidelines for State background check procedures established under subsection (a), which guidelines shall include the requirements and protections this subtitle.

(2) The guidelines established under paragraph (1) shall require—

(A) that no qualified entity may request a background check of a provider under subsection (a) unless the provider first completes and signs a statement that—

(i) contains the name, address, and date of birth appearing on a valid identification document (as defined by section 1028(d)(1) of title 18, United States Code) of the provider;

(ii) the provider is not under indictment for, and has not been convicted of, a background check crime and, if the provider is under indictment for or has been convicted of a background check crime, contains a description of the crime and the particulars of the indictment or conviction;

(iii) notifies the provider that the entity may request a background check under subsection (a);

(iv) notifies the provider of the provider's rights under subparagraph (B); and

(v) notifies the provider that prior to the receipt of the background check the qualified entity may choose to deny the provider unsupervised access to a child to whom the qualified entity provides child care;

(B) that each State establish procedures under which a provider who is the subject of a background check under subsection (a) is entitled—

(i) to obtain a copy of any background check report and any record that forms the basis for any such report; and

(ii) to challenge the accuracy and completeness of any information contained in any such report or record and obtain a prompt determination from an authorized agency as to the validity of such challenge;

(C) that an authorized agency to which a qualified entity has provided notice pursuant to subsection (a) make reasonable efforts to complete research in whatever State and local recordkeeping systems are available and in the national criminal background check system and respond to the qualified entity within 15 business days;

(D) that the response of an authorized agency to an inquiry pursuant to subsection (a) inform the qualified entity that the background check pursuant to this section—

(i) may not reflect all indictments or convictions for a background check crime; and

(ii) may not be the sole basis for determining the fitness of a provider;

(E) that the response of an authorized agency to an inquiry pursuant to subsection (a) be limited to the conviction or pending indictment information reasonably required to accomplish the purposes of this Act;

(F) that the qualified entity may choose to deny the provider unsupervised access to a child to whom the qualified entity provides child care on the basis of a background check under subsection (a) until the provider has obtained a determination as to the validity of any challenge under subparagraph (B) or waived the right to make such challenge; and

(G) that each State establish procedures to ensure that any background check under subsection (a) and the results thereof shall be requested by and provided only to—

(i) qualified entities identified by States;

(ii) authorized representatives of a qualified entity who have a need to know such information;

(iii) the provider who is the subject of a background check;

(iv) law enforcement authorities; or

(v) pursuant to the direction of a court of law;

(H) that background check information conveyed to a qualified entity pursuant to subsection (a) shall not be conveyed to any person except as provided under subparagraph (G);

(I) that an authorized agency shall not be liable in an action at law for damages for failure to prevent a qualified entity from taking action adverse to a provider on the basis of a background check;

(J) that a State employee or a political subdivision of a State or employee thereof responsible for providing information to the national criminal background check system shall not be liable in an action at law for damages for failure to prevent a qualified entity from taking action adverse to a provider on the basis of a background check; and

(K) that a State or Federal provider of criminal history records, and any employee thereof, shall not be liable in an action at law for damages for failure to prevent a qualified entity from taking action adverse to a provider on the basis of a criminal background check, or due to a criminal history record's being incomplete.

(c) EQUIVALENT PROCEDURES.—(1) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in this section, the Attorney General may certify that a State licensing or certification procedure that differs from the procedures described in subsections (a) and (b) shall be deemed to be the equivalent of such procedures for purposes of this Act, but the procedures described in subsections (a) and (b) shall continue to apply to those qualified entities, providers, and background check crimes that are not governed by or included within the State licensing or certification procedure.

(2) The Attorney General shall by regulation establish criteria for certifications under this subsection. Such criteria shall include a finding by the Attorney General that the State licensing or certification procedure accomplishes the purposes of this Act and incorporates a nationwide review of State and Federal records of background check offenses through the national criminal background check system.

(d) REGULATIONS.—(1) The Attorney General may by regulation prescribe such other measures as may be required to carry out the purposes of this Act, including measures relating to the security, confidentiality, accuracy, use, misuse, and dissemination of information, and audits and recordkeeping.

(2) The Attorney General shall, to the maximum extent possible, encourage the use of the best technology available in conducting background checks.

SEC. 916. FUNDING FOR IMPROVEMENT OF CHILD ABUSE CRIME INFORMATION.

(a) USE OF FORMULA GRANTS FOR IMPROVEMENTS IN STATE RECORDS AND SYSTEMS.—Section 509(b) of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3759(b)) is amended—

(A) in paragraph (2) by striking "and" after the semicolon;

(B) in paragraph (3) by striking the period and inserting "; and"; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4) the improvement of State record systems and the sharing of all of the records described in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) and the records required by the Attorney General under section 914 of the National Child Protection Act of 1991 with the Attorney General for the purpose of implementing the National Child Protection Act of 1991.".

(b) ADDITIONAL FUNDING GRANTS FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF CHILD ABUSE CRIME INFORMATION.—(1) The Attorney General shall, subject to appropriations and with preference to States that as of the date of enactment of this Act have the lowest percent currency of case dispositions in computerized criminal history files, make a grant to each State to be used—

(A) for the computerization of criminal history files for the purposes of this subtitle;

(B) for the improvement of existing computerized criminal history files for the purposes of this subtitle;

(C) to improve accessibility to the national criminal background check system for the purposes of this subtitle; and

(D) to assist the State in the transmittal of criminal records to, or the indexing of criminal history record in, the national criminal background check system for the purposes of this subtitle.

(2) There are authorized to be appropriated for grants under paragraph (1) a total of $20,000,000 for fiscal years 1992, 1993, and 1994.

(c) WITHHOLDING STATE FUNDS.—Effective 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General may reduce by up to 10 percent the allocation to a State for a fiscal year under title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 of a State that is not in compliance with the timetable established for that State under section 914 of this Act.

Subtitle C—Crimes Against Children

SEC. 921. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Jacob Wetterling Crimes Against Children Registration Act".

SEC. 922. ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) STATE GUIDELINES.—The Attorney General shall establish guidelines for State programs requiring any person who is convicted of a criminal offense against a victim who is a minor to register a current address with a designated State law enforcement agency for 10 years after release from prison, being placed on parole, or being placed on supervised release.

(2) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "criminal offense against a victim who is a minor" includes—

(A) kidnapping of a minor, except by a noncustodial parent;

(B) false imprisonment of a minor, except by a noncustodial parent;

(C) criminal sexual conduct toward a minor;

(D) solicitation of minors to engage in sexual conduct;

(E) use of minors in a sexual performance; or

(F) solicitation of minors to practice prostitution.

(b) REGISTRATION REQUIREMENT UPON RELEASE, PAROLE, OR SUPERVISED RELEASE.—An approved State registration program established by this section shall contain the following requirements:

(1) NOTIFICATION.—If a person who is required to register under this section is released from prison, paroled, or placed on supervised release, a State prison officer shall—

(A) inform the person of the duty to register;

(B) inform the person that if the person changes residence address, the person shall give the new address to a designated State law enforcement agency in writing within 10 days;

(C) obtain fingerprints and a photograph of the person if these have not already been obtained in connection with the offense that triggers registration; and

(D) require the person to read and sign a form stating that the duty of the person to register under this section has been explained.

(2) TRANSFER OF INFORMATION TO STATE AND THE F.B.I.—The officer shall, within 3 days after receipt of information described in paragraph (1), forward it to a designated State law enforcement agency. The State law enforcement agency shall immediately enter the information into the appropriate State law enforcement record system and notify the appropriate law enforcement agency having jurisdiction where the person expects to reside. The State law enforcement agency shall also immediately transmit the conviction data and fingerprints to the Identification Division of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

(3) ANNUAL VERIFICATION.—On each anniversary of a person's initial registration date during the period in which the person is required to register under this section, the designated State law enforcement agency shall mail a nonforwardable verification form to the last reported address of the person. The person shall mail the verification form to the officer within 10 days after receipt of the form. The verification form shall be signed by the person, and state that the person still resides at the address last reported to the designated State law enforcement agency. If the person fails to mail the verification form to the designated State law enforcement agency within 10 days after receipt of the form, the person shall be in violation of this section unless the person proves that the person has not changed his or her residence address.

(4) NOTIFICATION OF LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES OF CHANGES IN ADDRESS.—Any change of address by a person required to register under this section reported to the designated State law enforcement agency shall immediately be reported to the appropriate law enforcement agency having jurisdiction where the person is residing.

(c) REGISTRATION FOR 10 YEARS.—A person required to register under this section shall continue to comply with this section until 10 years have elapsed since the person was released from imprisonment, or placed on parole or supervised release.

(d) PENALTY.—A person required to register under a State program established pursuant to this section who knowingly fails to so register and keep such registration current shall be subject to criminal penalties in such State. It is the sense of Congress that such penalties should include at least 6 months imprisonment.

(e) PRIVATE DATA.—The information provided under this section is private data on individuals and may be used for law enforcement purposes and confidential background checks conducted with fingerprints for child care services providers.

SEC. 923. STATE COMPLIANCE.

(a) COMPLIANCE DATE.—Each State shall have 3 years from the date of the enactment of this Act in which to implement the provisions of this subtitle.

(b) INELIGIBILITY FOR FUNDS.—The allocation of funds under section 506 of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3756) received by a State not complying with this subtitle 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act shall be reduced by 25 percent and the unallocated funds shall be reallocated to the States in compliance with this section.

TITLE X—CRIME VICTIMS

SEC. 1001. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Victims' Rights and Restitution Act of 1991".

SEC. 1002. AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.

Section 1402 of the Victims of Crime Act of 1984, as amended, is amended—

(a) by striking subsection (c) and redesignating (d), (e), (f) and (g) as subsections (c), (d), (e), and (f), respectively; and

(b) by adding a new subsection (c) to read as follows:

"(c) Availability of funds for expenditure; grant program percentages

"(1) Sums deposited in the Fund shall remain in the Fund and be available for expenditure under this subsection for grants under this chapter without fiscal year limitation.

"(2) The Fund shall be available as follows:

"(A) The first $6,200,000 deposited in the Fund in each of the fiscal years 1992 through 1995 and the first $3,000,000 in each fiscal year thereafter shall be available to the judicial branch for administrative costs to carry out the functions of the judicial branch under sections 3611 and 3612 of title 18, United States Code.

"(B) Of the first $100,000,000 deposited in the Fund in a particular fiscal year—

"(i) 49.5 percent shall be available for grants under section 10602 of this title;

"(ii) 45 percent shall be available for grants under section 10603(a) of this title;

"(iii) 1 percent shall be available for grants under section 10603(c) of this title; and

"(iv) 4.5 percent shall be available for grants as provided in section 10603a of this title.

"(C) The next $5,500,000 deposited in the Fund in a particular fiscal year shall be available for grants as provided in section 10603a of this title.

"(D) The next $4,500,000 deposited in the Fund in a particular fiscal year shall be available for grants under section 10603(a) of this title.

"(E) Any deposits in the Fund in a particular fiscal year that remain after the funds are distributed under subparagraphs (A) through (D) shall be available as follows:

"(i) 47.5 percent shall be available for grants under section 10602 of this title;

"(ii) 47.5 percent shall be available for grants under section 10603(a) of this title; and

"(iii) 5 percent shall be available for grants under section 10603(c)(1)(B) of this title.".

SEC. 1003. RELATIONSHIP OF CRIME VICTIM COMPENSATION TO CERTAIN FEDERAL PROGRAMS.

Section 1403 of the Victims of Crime Act of 1984 (42 U.S.C. 10602) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(e) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, if the compensation paid by an eligible crime victim compensation program would cover costs that a Federal program, or a federally financed State or local program, would otherwise pay, then—

"(1) such crime victim compensation program shall not pay that compensation; and

"(2) the other program shall make its payments without regard to the existence of the crime victim compensation program.".

SEC. 1004. VICTIM'S RIGHT OF ALLOCUTION IN SENTENCING.

Rule 32 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure is amended by—

(1) striking "and" following the semicolon in subdivision (a)(1)(B);

(2) striking the period at the end of subdivision (a)(1)(C) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and";

(3) inserting after subdivision (a)(1)(C) the following:

"(D) if sentence is to be imposed for a crime of violence or sexual abuse, address the victim personally if the victim is present at the sentencing hearing and determine if the victim wishes to make a statement and to present any information in relation to the sentence.";

(4) in the second to last sentence of subdivision (a)(1), striking "equivalent opportunity" and inserting in lieu thereof "opportunity equivalent to that of the defendant's counsel";

(5) in the last sentence of subdivision (a)(1) inserting "the victim," before "or the attorney for the Government."; and

(6) adding at the end the following:

"(f) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this rule—

"(1) 'victim' means any individual against whom an offense for which a sentence is to be imposed has been committed, but the right of allocution under subdivision (a)(1)(D) may be exercised instead by—

"(A) a parent or legal guardian in case the victim is below the age of eighteen years or incompetent; or

"(B) one or more family members or relatives designated by the court in case the victim is deceased or incapacitated;

if such person or persons are present at the sentencing hearing, regardless of whether the victim is present; and

"(2) 'crime of violence or sexual abuse' means a crime that involved the use or attempted or threatened use of physical force against the person or property of another, or a crime under chapter 109A of title 18, United States Code.".

TITLE XI—STATE AND LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT

Subtitle A—Safer Streets and Neighborhoods

SEC. 1101. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Safer Streets and Neighborhoods Act of 1991".

SEC. 1102. GRANTS TO STATE AND LOCAL AGENCIES.

Paragraph (5) of section 1001(a) of part J of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 is amended to read as follows:

"(5) There are authorized to be appropriated $1,000,000,000 for fiscal year 1992 and such sums as may be necessary in fiscal years 1993 and 1994 to carry out the programs under parts D and E of this title.".

SEC. 1103. CONTINUATION OF FEDERAL-STATE FUNDING FORMULA.

Section 504(a)(1) of part E of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968, as amended by section 211 of the Department of Justice Appropriations Act, 1990 (Public Law 101–162) and section 601 of the Crime Control Act of 1990 (Public Law 101–647), is amended by striking "1991" and inserting "1992".

SEC. 1104. GRANTS FOR MULTI-JURISDICTIONAL DRUG TASK FORCES.

Section 504(f) of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3754(f)), is amended to delete the first word and insert the following: "Except for grants awarded to State and local governments for the purpose of participating in multi-jurisdictional drug task forces, no".

SEC. 1105. FEDERAL SHARE.

Section 504(a) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3754(a)) is amended by striking "not—" and all that follows through "per centum;" the last place it appears, and inserting the following: "not for any fiscal year be expended for more than 75 percent".

SEC. 1106. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 1001(a) of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3793(a)) is amended by striking paragraph (7) as redesignated by section 1153 of this Act and inserting the following:

"(7) There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 1991 and $200,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1992, 1993, and 1994 to carry out chapter B of subpart 2 of part E of this title.".

SEC. 1107. LIMITATION ON GRANT DISTRIBUTION.

(a) AMENDMENT.—Section 510(b) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3760(b)) is amended by inserting "non-Federal" after "with".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on October 1, 1991.

Subtitle B—DNA Identification

SEC. 1121. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "DNA Identification Act of 1991".

SEC. 1122. FUNDING TO IMPROVE THE QUALITY AND AVAILABILITY OF DNA ANALYSES FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT IDENTIFICATION PURPOSES.

(a) DRUG CONTROL AND SYSTEM IMPROVEMENT GRANT PROGRAM.—Section 501(b) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3751(b)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (20) by striking "and" at the end,

(2) in paragraph (21) by striking the period at the end and inserting "; and", and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

"(22) developing or improving in a forensic laboratory a capability to analyze deoxyribonucleic acid (hereinafter in this title referred to as 'DNA') for identification purposes.".

(b) STATE APPLICATIONS.—Section 503(a) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3753(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(12) If any part of a grant made under this part is to be used to develop or improve a DNA analysis capability in a forensic laboratory, a certification that—

"(A) DNA analyses performed at such laboratory will satisfy or exceed then current standards for a quality assurance program for DNA analysis, issued by the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation under section 1123 of the DNA Identification Act of 1991;

"(B) DNA samples obtained by, and DNA analyses performed at, such laboratory will be accessible only—

"(i) to criminal justice agencies for law enforcement identification purposes;

"(ii) for criminal defense purposes, to a defendant, who shall have access to samples and analyses performed in connection with the case in which such defendant is charged; or

"(iii) if personally identifiable information is removed, for a population statistics database, for identification research and protocol development purposes, or for quality control purposes; and

"(C) such laboratory, and each analyst performing DNA analyses at such laboratory, will undergo, at regular intervals of not to exceed 180 days, external proficiency testing by a DNA proficiency testing program meeting the standards issued under section 1123 of the DNA Identification Act of 1991.".

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATION.—For each of the fiscal years 1992 through 1996, there are authorized to be appropriated $10 million for grants to the states for DNA analysis.

SEC. 1123. QUALITY ASSURANCE AND PROFICIENCY TESTING STANDARDS.

(a) PUBLICATION OF QUALITY ASSURANCE AND PROFICIENCY TESTING STANDARDS.—(1) Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation shall appoint an advisory board on DNA quality assurance methods. The Director shall appoint members of the board from among nominations proposed by the head of the National Academy of Sciences and professional societies of crime laboratory directors. The advisory board shall include as members scientists from state and local forensic laboratories, molecular geneticists and population geneticists not affiliated with a forensic laboratory, and a representative from the National Institute of Standards and Technology. The advisory board shall develop, and if appropriate, periodically revise, recommended standards for quality assurance, including standards for testing the proficiency of forensic laboratories, and forensic analysts, in conducting analyses of DNA.

(2) The Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, after taking into consideration such recommended standards, shall issue (and revise from time to time) standards for quality assurance, including standards for testing the proficiency of forensic laboratories, and forensic analysts, in conducting analyses of DNA.

(3) The standards described in paragraphs (1) and (2) shall specify criteria for quality assurance and proficiency tests to be applied to the various types of DNA analyses used by forensic laboratories. The standards shall also include a system for grading proficiency testing performance to determine whether a laboratory is performing acceptably.

(4) Until such time as the advisory board has made recommendations to the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Director has acted upon those recommendations, the quality assurance guidelines adopted by the technical working group on DNA analysis methods shall be deemed the Director's standards for purposes of this section.

(b) ADMINISTRATION OF THE ADVISORY BOARD.—For administrative purposes, the advisory board appointed under subsection (a) shall be considered an advisory board to the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Section 14 of the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5. U.S.C. App.) shall not apply with respect to the advisory board appointed under subsection (a). The board shall cease to exist on the date 5 years after the initial appointments are made to the board, unless the existence of the board is extended by the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

SEC. 1124. INDEX TO FACILITATE LAW ENFORCEMENT EXCHANGE OF DNA IDENTIFICATION INFORMATION

(a) The Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation may establish an index of—

(1) DNA identification records of persons convicted of crimes;

(2) analyses of DNA samples recovered from crime scenes; and

(3) analyses of DNA samples recovered from unidentified human remains.

(b) Such index may include only information on DNA identification records and DNA analyses that are—

(1) based on analyses performed in accordance with publicly available standards that satisfy or exceed the guidelines for a quality assurance program for DNA analysis, issued by the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation under section 1123 of the DNA Identification Act of 1991;

(2) prepared by laboratories, and DNA analysts, that undergo, at regular intervals of not to exceed 180 days, external proficiency testing by a DNA proficiency testing program meeting the standards issued under section 1123 of the DNA Identification Act of 1991; and

(3) maintained by Federal, State, and local criminal justice agencies pursuant to rules that allow disclosure of stored DNA samples and DNA analyses only—

(A) to criminal justice agencies for law enforcement identification purposes;

(B) for criminal defense purposes, to a defendant, who shall have access to samples and analyses performed in connection with the case in which such defendant is charged; or

(C) if personally identifiable information is removed, for a population statistics database, for identification research and protocol development purposes, or for quality control purposes.

(c) The exchange of records authorized by this section is subject to cancellation if the quality control and privacy requirements described in subsection (b) of this section are not met.

SEC. 1125. FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

(a) PROFICIENCY TESTING REQUIREMENTS.—

(1) GENERALLY.—Personnel at the Federal Bureau of Investigation who perform DNA analyses shall undergo, at regular intervals of not to exceed 180 days, external proficiency testing by a DNA proficiency testing program meeting the standards issued under section 1123(b). Within one year of the date of enactment of this Act, the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation shall arrange for periodic blind external tests to determine the proficiency of DNA analysis performed at the Federal Bureau of Investigation laboratory. As used in this paragraph, the term "blind external test" means a test that is presented to the laboratory through a second agency and appears to the analysts to involve routine evidence.

(2) REPORT.—For five years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation shall submit to the Committees on the Judiciary of the House and Senate an annual report on the results of each of the tests referred to in paragraph (1).

(b) PRIVACY PROTECTION STANDARDS.—

(1) GENERALLY.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the results of DNA tests performed for a Federal law enforcement agency for law enforcement purposes may be disclosed only—

(A) to criminal justice agencies for law enforcement identification purposes; or

(B) for criminal defense purposes, to a defendant, who shall have access to samples and analyses performed in connection with the case in which such defendant is charged.

(2) EXCEPTION.—If personally identifiable information is removed, test results may be disclosed for a population statistics database, for identification research and protocol development purposes, or for quality control purposes.

(c) CRIMINAL PENALTY.—(1) Whoever—

(A) by virtue of employment or official position, has possession of, or access to, individually identifiable DNA information indexed in a database created or maintained by any Federal law enforcement agency; and

(B) willfully discloses such information in any manner to any person or agency not entitled to receive it; shall be fined not more than $100,000.

(2) Whoever, without authorization, willfully obtains DNA samples or individually identifiable DNA information indexed in a database created or maintained by any Federal law enforcement agency shall be fined not more than $100,000.

SEC. 1126. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated to the Federal Bureau of Investigation $2,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1992 through 1996 to carry out sections 1123, 1124, and 1125 of this Act.

Subtitle C—Department of Justice Community Substance Abuse Prevention

SEC. 1131. SHORT TITLE.

This section may be cited as the "Department of Justice Community Substance Abuse Prevention Act of 1991".

SEC. 1132. COMMUNITY PARTNERSHIPS.

Part E of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"Subpart 4—Community Coalitions on Substance Abuse

"GRANTS TO COMBAT SUBSTANCE ABUSE

"SEC. 531. (a) DEFINITION.—As used in this section, the term 'eligible coalition' means an association, consisting of at least seven organizations, agencies, and individuals that are concerned about preventing substance abuse, that shall include—

"(1) public and private organizations and agencies that represent law enforcement, schools, health and social service agencies, and community-based organizations; and

"(2) representatives of 3 of the following groups: the clergy, academia, business, parents, youth, the media, civic and fraternal groups, or other nongovernmental interested parties.

"(b) GRANT PROGRAM.—The Attorney General, acting through the Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance, and the appropriate State agency, shall make grants to eligible coalitions in order to—

"(1) plan and implement comprehensive long-term strategies for substance abuse prevention;

"(2) develop a detailed assessment of existing substance abuse prevention programs and activities to determine community resources and to identify major gaps and barriers in such programs and activities;

"(3) identify and solicit funding sources to enable such programs and activities to become self-sustaining;

"(4) develop a consensus regarding the priorities of a community concerning substance abuse;

"(5) develop a plan to implement such priorities; and

"(6) coordinate substance abuse services and activities, including prevention activities in the schools or communities and substance abuse treatment programs.

"(c) COMMUNITY PARTICIPATION.—In developing and implementing a substance abuse prevention program, a coalition receiving funds under subsection (b) shall—

"(1) emphasize and encourage substantial voluntary participation in the community, especially among individuals involved with youth such as teachers, coaches, parents, and clergy; and

"(2) emphasize and encourage the involvement of businesses, civic groups, and other community organizations and members.

"(d) APPLICATION.—An eligible coalition shall submit an application to the Attorney General and the appropriate State agency in order to receive a grant under this section. Such application shall—

"(1) describe and, to the extent possible, document the nature and extent of the substance abuse problem, emphasizing who is at risk and specifying which groups of individuals should be targeted for prevention and intervention;

"(2) describe the activities needing financial assistance;

"(3) identify participating agencies, organizations, and individuals;

"(4) identify the agency, organization, or individual that has responsibility for leading the coalition, and provide assurances that such agency, organization or individual has previous substance abuse prevention experience;

"(5) describe a mechanism to evaluate the success of the coalition in developing and carrying out the substance abuse prevention plan referred to in subsection (b)(5) and to report on such plan to the Attorney General on an annual basis; and

"(6) contain such additional information and assurances as the Attorney General and the appropriate State agency may prescribe.

"(e) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants under this section, the Attorney General and the appropriate State agency shall give priority to a community that—

"(1) provides evidence of significant substance abuse;

"(2) proposes a comprehensive and multifaceted approach to eliminating substance abuse;

"(3) encourages the involvement of businesses and community leaders in substance abuse prevention activities;

"(4) demonstrates a commitment and a high priority for preventing substance abuse; and

"(5) demonstrates support from the community and State and local agencies for efforts to eliminate substance abuse.

"(f) REVIEW.—Each coalition receiving money pursuant to the provisions of this section shall submit an annual report to the Attorney General, and the appropriate State agency, evaluating the effectiveness of the plan described in subsection (b)(5) and containing such additional information as the Attorney General, or the appropriate State agency, may prescribe. The Attorney General, in conjunction with the Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance, and the appropriate State agency, shall submit an annual review to the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate and the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives. Such review shall—

"(1) evaluate the grant program established in this section to determine its effectiveness;

"(2) implement necessary changes to the program that can be done by the Attorney General; and

"(3) recommend any statutory changes that are necessary.

"(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out the provisions of this section, $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, and $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1994.".

(c) AMENDMENT TO TABLE OF SECTIONS.—The table of sections of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"SUBPART 4—COMMUNITY COALITION ON SUBSTANCE ABUSE

SEC. 1151. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as "The Community Policing; Cop on the Beat Act of 1991".

SEC. 1152. COMMUNITY POLICING; COP ON THE BEAT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.) is amended—

(1) by redesignating part P as part Q;

(2) by redesignating section 1601 as section 1701; and

(3) by inserting after part O the following:

"PART P—COMMUNITY POLICING; COP ON THE BEAT GRANTS

"SEC. 1601. GRANT AUTHORIZATION.

"(a) GRANT PROJECTS.—The Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance may make grants to units of local government and to community groups to establish or expand cooperative efforts between police and a community for the purposes of increasing police presence in the community, including—

"(1) developing innovative neighborhood-oriented policing programs;

"(2) providing new technologies to reduce the amount of time officers spend processing cases instead of patrolling the community;

"(3) purchasing equipment to improve communications between officers and the community and to improve the collection, analysis, and use of information about crime-related community problems;

"(4) developing policies that reorient police emphasis from reacting to crime to preventing crime;

"(5) creating decentralized police substations throughout the community to encourage interaction and cooperation between the public and law enforcement personnel on a local level;

"(6) providing training and problem solving for community crime problems;

"(7) providing training in cultural differences for law enforcement officials;

"(8) developing community-based crime prevention programs, such as safety programs for senior citizens, community anticrime groups, and other anticrime awareness programs;

"(9) developing crime prevention programs in communities which have experienced a recent increase in gang-related violence; and

"(10) developing projects following the model under subsection (b).

"(b) MODEL PROJECT.—The Director shall develop a written model that informs community members regarding—

"(1) how to identify the existence of a drug or gang house;

"(2) what civil remedies, such as public nuisance violations and civil suits in small claims court, are available; and

"(3) what mediation techniques are available between community members and individuals who have established a drug or gang house in such community.

"SEC. 1602. APPLICATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) To be eligible to receive a grant under this part, a chief executive of a unit of local government, a duly authorized representative of a combination of local governments within a geographic region, or a community group shall submit an application to the Director in such form and containing such information as the Director may reasonably require.

"(2) In such application, one office, or agency (public, private, or nonprofit) shall be designated as responsible for the coordination, implementation, administration, accounting, and evaluation of services described in the application.

"(b) GENERAL CONTENTS.—Each application under subsection (a) shall include—

"(1) a request for funds available under this part for the purposes described in section 1601;

"(2) a description of the areas and populations to be served by the grant; and

"(3) assurances that Federal funds received under this part shall be used to supplement, not supplant, non-Federal funds that would otherwise be available for activities funded under this part.

"(c) COMPREHENSIVE PLAN.—Each application shall include a comprehensive plan which contains—

"(1) a description of the crime problems within the areas targeted for assistance;

"(2) a description of the projects to be developed;

"(3) a description of the resources available in the community to implement the plan together with a description of the gaps in the plan that cannot be filled with existing resources;

"(4) an explanation of how the requested grant shall be used to fill those gaps;

"(5) a description of the system the applicant shall establish to prevent and reduce crime problems; and

"(6) an evaluation component, including performance standards and quantifiable goals the applicant shall use to determine project progress, and the data the applicant shall collect to measure progress toward meeting project goals.

"SEC. 1603. ALLOCATION OF FUNDS; LIMITATIONS ON GRANTS.

"(a) ALLOCATION.—The Director shall allocate not less than 75 percent of the funds available under this part to units of local government or combinations of such units and not more than 20 percent of the funds available under this part to community groups.

"(b) ADMINISTRATIVE COST LIMITATION.—The Director shall use not more than 5 percent of the funds available under this part for the purposes of administration, technical assistance, and evaluation.

"(c) RENEWAL OF GRANTS.—A grant under this part may be renewed for up to 2 additional years after the first fiscal year during which the recipient receives its initial grant, subject to the availability of funds, if the Director determines that the funds made available to the recipient during the previous year were used in a manner required under the approved application and if the recipient can demonstrate significant progress toward achieving the goals of the plan required under section 1602(c).

"(d) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of a grant made under this part may not exceed 75 percent of the total costs of the projects described in the application submitted under section 1602 for the fiscal year for which the projects receive assistance under this part.

"SEC. 1604. AWARD OF GRANTS.

"(a) SELECTION OF RECIPIENTS.—The Director shall consider the following factors in awarding grants to units of local government or combinations of such units under this part:

"(1) NEED AND ABILITY.—Demonstrated need and evidence of the ability to provide the services described in the plan required under section 1602(c).

"(2) COMMUNITY-WIDE RESPONSE.—Evidence of the ability to coordinate community-wide response to crime.

"(3) MAINTAIN PROGRAM.—The ability to maintain a program to control and prevent crime after funding under this part is no longer available.

"(b) GEOGRAPHIC DISTRIBUTION.—The Director shall attempt, to the extent practicable, to achieve an equitable geographic distribution of grant awards.

"SEC. 1605. REPORTS.

"(a) REPORT TO DIRECTOR.—Recipients who receive funds under this part shall submit to the Director not later than March 1 of each year a report that describes progress achieved in carrying out the plan required under section 1602(c).

"(b) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—The Director shall submit to the Congress a report by October 1 of each year that shall contain a detailed statement regarding grant awards, activities of grant recipients, and an evaluation of projects established under this part.

"SEC. 1606. DEFINITIONS.

"For the purposes of this part:

"(1) The term 'community group' means a community-based nonprofit organization that has a primary purpose of crime prevention.

"(2) The term 'Director' means the Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of contents of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.) is amended by striking the matter relating to part P and inserting the following:

"PART P—COMMUNITY POLICING; COP ON THE BEAT GRANTS

SEC. 1153. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 1001(a) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3793) is amended—

(1) by redesignating the last 3 paragraphs as paragraphs (7), (8), and (9); and

(2) by adding after paragraph (9) the following:

"(10) There are authorized to be appropriated $150,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1992, 1993, and 1994 to carry out the projects under part P.".

Subtitle F—Drug Testing of Arrested Individuals

SEC. 1161. DRUG TESTING UPON ARREST.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.), as amended by section 1151 of this Act, is amended—

(1) by redesignating part Q as part R;

(2) by redesignating section 1701 as section 1801; and

(3) by inserting after part P the following:

"PART Q—GRANTS FOR DRUG TESTING UPON ARREST

"SEC. 1701. GRANT AUTHORIZATION.

The Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance is authorized to make grants under this part to States, for the use by States and units of local government in the States, for the purpose of developing, implementing, or continuing a drug testing project when individuals are arrested and during the pretrial period.

"SEC. 1702. STATE APPLICATIONS.

"(a) GENERAL REQUIREMENTS.—To request a grant under this part the chief executive of a State shall submit an application to the Director in such form and containing such information as the Director may reasonably require.

"(b) MANDATORY ASSURANCES.—To be eligible to receive funds under this part, a State must agree to develop or maintain programs of urinalysis or similar drug testing of individuals upon arrest and on a regular basis pending trial for the purpose of making pretrial detention decisions.

"(c) CENTRAL OFFICE.—The office designated under section 507 of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3757)—

"(1) shall prepare the application as required under subsection (a); and

"(2) shall administer grant funds received under this part, including, review of spending, processing, progress, financial reporting, technical assistance, grant adjustments, accounting, auditing, and fund disbursement.

"SEC. 1703. LOCAL APPLICATIONS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) To request funds under this part from a State, the chief executive of a unit of local government shall submit an application to the office designated under section 1702(c).

"(2) Such application shall be considered approved, in whole or in part, by the State not later than 90 days after such application is first received unless the State informs the applicant in writing of specific reasons for disapproval.

"(3) The State shall not disapprove any application submitted to the State without first affording the applicant reasonable notice and an opportunity for reconsideration.

"(4) If such application is approved, the unit of local government is eligible to receive such funds.

"(b) DISTRIBUTION TO UNITS OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT.—A State that receives funds under section 1701 in a fiscal year shall make such funds available to units of local government with an application that has been submitted and approved by the State within 90 days after the Bureau has approved the application submitted by the State and has made funds available to the State. The Director shall have the authority to waive the 90-day requirement in this section upon a finding that the State is unable to satisfy such requirement under State statutes.

"SEC. 1704. ALLOCATION AND DISTRIBUTION OF FUNDS.

"(a) STATE DISTRIBUTION.—Of the total amount appropriated under this part in any fiscal year—

"(1) 0.4 percent shall be allocated to each of the participating States; and

"(2) of the total funds remaining after the allocation under paragraph (1), there shall be allocated to each of the participating States an amount which bears the same ratio to the amount of remaining funds described in this paragraph as the number of individuals arrested in such State bears to the number of individuals arrested in all the participating States.

"(b) LOCAL DISTRIBUTION.—(1) A State that receives funds under this part in a fiscal year shall distribute to units of local government in such State that portion of such funds which bears the same ratio to the aggregate amount of such funds as the amount of funds expended by all units of local government for criminal justice in the preceding fiscal year bears to the aggregate amount of funds expended by the State and all units of local government in such State for criminal justice in such preceding fiscal year.

"(2) Any funds not distributed to units of local government under paragraph (1) shall be available for expenditure by such State for purposes specified in such State's application.

"(3) If the Director determines, on the basis of information available during any fiscal year, that a portion of the funds allocated to a State for such fiscal year will not be used by such State or that a State is not eligible to receive funds under section 1701, the Director shall award such funds to units of local government in such State giving priority to the units of local government that the Director considers to have the greatest need.

"(c) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of a grant made under this part may not exceed 75 percent of the total costs of the projects described in the application submitted under section 1702 for the fiscal year for which the projects receive assistance under this part.

"(d) GEOGRAPHIC DISTRIBUTION.—The Director shall attempt, to the extent practicable, to achieve an equitable geographic distribution of grant awards.

"SEC. 1705. REPORT.

"A State or unit of local government that receives funds under this part shall submit to the Director a report in March of each fiscal year that funds are received under this part regarding the effectiveness of the drug testing project.".

"PART Q—DRUG TESTING FOR INDIVIDUALS ARRESTED

"Sec. 1701. Grant authorization.
"Sec. 1702. State applications.
"Sec. 1703. Local applications.

SEC. 1162. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 1001(a) of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3793), as amended by section 1153 of this Act, is amended by adding after paragraph (10) the following:

"(11) There are authorized to be appropriated $100,000,000 for the fiscal years 1992, 1993, and 1994 to carry out the projects under part Q.".

Subtitle G—Racial and Ethnic Bias Study Grants

SEC. 1171. STUDY GRANTS

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) equality under law is tested most profoundly by whether a legal system tolerates race playing a role in the criminal justice system; and

(2) States should examine their criminal justice systems in order to ensure that racial and ethnic bias has no part in such criminal justice systems.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF GRANT PROGRAM.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Attorney General, through the Bureau of Justice Assistance, is authorized to make grants to States that have established by State law or by the court of last resort a plan for analyzing the role of race in that State's criminal justice system. Such plan shall include recommendations designed to correct any findings that racial and ethnic bias plays such a role.

(2) CRITERIA FOR GRANTS.—Grants under this subsection shall be awarded based upon criteria established by the Attorney General. In establishing the criteria, the Attorney General shall take into consideration the population of the respective States, the racial and ethnic composition of the population of the States, and the crime rates of the States.

(3) REPORTS BY STATES.—Recipients of grants under this subsection shall report the findings and recommendations of studies funded by grants under this subsection to the Congress within reasonable time limits established by the Attorney General.

(4) REIMBURSEMENT OF STATES.—Grants may be made to reimburse States for work started prior to the date of enactment of this Act.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $2,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1992, 1993, 1994, 1995, and 1996 to carry out the provisions of this section.

Subtitle H—Midnight Basketball

SEC. 1181. GRANTS FOR MIDNIGHT BASKETBALL LEAGUE ANTICRIME PROGRAMS.

(a) AUTHORITY.—The Attorney General of the United States, in consultation with the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, shall make grants, to the extent that amounts are approved in appropriations Acts under subsection (m) to—

(1) eligible entities to assist such entities in carrying out midnight basketball league programs meeting the requirements of subsection (d); and

(2) eligible advisory entities to provide technical assistance to eligible entities in establishing and operating such midnight basketball league programs.

(b) ELIGIBLE ENTITIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to paragraph (2), grants under subsection (a)(1) may be made only to the following eligible entities:

(A) Entities eligible under section 520(b) of the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act (42 U.S.C. 11903a(b)) for a grant under section 520(a) of such Act.

(B) Nonprofit organizations providing crime prevention, employment counseling, job training, or other educational services.

(C) Nonprofit organizations providing federally-assisted low-income housing.

(2) PROHIBITION ON SECOND GRANTS.—A grant under subsection (a)(1) may not be made to an eligible entity if the entity has previously received a grant under such subsection, except that the Attorney General may exempt an eligible advisory entity from the prohibition under this paragraph in extraordinary circumstances.

(c) USE OF GRANT AMOUNTS.—Any eligible entity that receives a grant under subsection (a)(1) may use such amounts only—

(1) to establish or carry out a midnight basketball league program under subsection (d);

(2) for salaries for administrators and staff of the program;

(3) for other administrative costs of the program, except that not more than 5 percent of the grant amount may be used for such administrative costs; and

(4) for costs of training and assistance provided under subsection (d)(9).

(d) PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS.—Each eligible entity receiving a grant under subsection (a)(1) shall establish a midnight basketball league program as follows:

(1) The program shall establish a basketball league of not less than 8 teams having 10 players each.

(2) Not less than 50 percent of the players in the basketball league shall be residents of federally assisted low-income housing.

(3) The program shall be designed to serve primarily youths and young adults from a neighborhood or community whose population has not less than 2 of the following characteristics (in comparison with national averages):

(A) A substantial problem regarding use or sale of illegal drugs.

(B) A high incidence of crimes committed by youths or young adults.

(C) A high incidence of persons infected with the human immunodeficiency virus or sexually transmitted diseases.

(D) A high incidence of pregnancy or a high birth rate, among adolescents.

(E) A high unemployment rate for youths and young adults.

(F) A high rate of high school drop-outs.

(4) The program shall require each player in the league to attend employment counseling, job training, and other educational classes provided under the program, which shall be held at or near the site of the games.

(5) The program shall serve only youths and young adults who demonstrate a need for such counseling, training, and education provided by the program, in accordance with criteria for demonstrating need, which shall be established by the Attorney General in consultation with the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development and the Secretary of Labor, and with the Advisory Committee.

(6) Basketball games of the league shall be held between the hours of 10:00 p.m. and 2:00 a.m. at a location in the neighborhood or community served by the program.

(7) The program shall obtain sponsors for each team in the basketball league. Sponsors shall be private individuals or businesses in the neighborhood or community served by the program who make financial contributions to the program and participate in or supplement the employment, job training, and educational services provided to the players under the program with additional training or educational opportunities.

(8) The program shall comply with any criteria established by the Attorney General in consultation with the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development and with the Advisory Committee established under subsection (i).

(9) Administrators or organizers of the program shall receive training and technical assistance provided by eligible advisory entities receiving grants under subsection (h).

(e) GRANT AMOUNT LIMITATIONS.—

(1) PRIVATE CONTRIBUTIONS.—The Attorney General, in consultation with the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, may not make a grant under subsection (a)(1) to an eligible entity that applies for a grant under subsection (f) unless the applicant entity certifies to the Attorney General and the Secretary that the entity will supplement the grant amounts with amounts of funds from non-Federal sources, as follows:

(A) In each of the first 2 years that amounts from the grant are disbursed (under paragraph (4)), an amount sufficient to provide not less than 35 percent of the cost of carrying out the midnight basketball league program.

(B) In each of the last 3 years that amounts from the grant are disbursed, an amount sufficient to provide not less than 50 percent of the cost of carrying out the midnight basketball league program.

(2) NON-FEDERAL FUNDS.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "funds from non-Federal sources" includes amounts from nonprofit organizations, public housing agencies, States, units of general local government, and Indian housing authorities, private contributions, any salary paid to staff (other than from grant amounts under subsection (a)(1)) to carry out the program of the eligible entity, in-kind contributions to carry out the program (as determined by the Attorney General, in consultation with the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development and with the Advisory Committee), the value of any donated material, equipment, or building, the value of any lease on a building, the value of any utilities provided, and the value of any time and services contributed by volunteers to carry out the program of the eligible entity.

(3) PROHIBITION ON SUBSTITUTION OF FUNDS.—Grant amounts under subsection (a)(1) and amounts provided by States and units of general local government to supplement grant amounts may not be used to replace other public funds previously used, or designated for use, under this section.

(4) MAXIMUM AND MINIMUM GRANT AMOUNTS.—The Attorney General, in consultation with the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, may not make a grant under subsection (a)(1) to any single eligible entity in an amount less than $50,000 or exceeding $125,000.

(5) DISBURSEMENT.—Amounts provided under a grant under subsection (a)(1) shall be disbursed to the eligible entity receiving the grant over the 5-year period beginning on the date that the entity is selected to receive the grant, as follows:

(A) In each of the first 2 years of such 5-year period, 23 percent of the total grant amount shall be disbursed to the entity.

(B) In each of the last 3 years of such 5-year period, 18 percent of the total grant amount shall be disbursed to the entity.

(f) APPLICATIONS.—To be eligible to receive a grant under subsection (a)(1), an eligible entity shall submit to the Attorney General an application in the form and manner required by the Attorney General (after consultation the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development and with the Advisory Committee), which shall include—

(1) a description of the midnight basketball league program to be carried out by the entity, including a description of the employment counseling, job training, and other educational services to be provided;

(2) letters of agreement from service providers to provide training and counseling services required under subsection (d) and a description of such service providers;

(3) letters of agreement providing for facilities for basketball games and counseling, training, and educational services required under subsection (d) and a description of the facilities;

(4) a list of persons and businesses from the community served by the program who have expressed interest in sponsoring, or have made commitments to sponsor, a team in the midnight basketball league; and

(5) evidence that the neighborhood or community served by the program meets the requirements of subsection (d)(3).

(g) SELECTION.—The Attorney General, in consultation with the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development and with the Advisory Committee, shall select eligible entities that have submitted applications under subsection (f) to receive grants under subsection (a)(1). The Attorney General, in consultation with the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development and with the Advisory Committee, shall establish criteria for selection of applicants to receive such grants. The criteria shall include a preference for selection of eligible entities carrying out midnight basketball league programs in suburban and rural areas.

(h) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE GRANTS.—Technical assistance grants under subsection (a)(2) shall be made as follows:

(1) ELIGIBLE ADVISORY ENTITIES.—Technical assistance grants may be made only to entities that—

(A) are experienced and have expertise in establishing, operating, or administering successful and effective programs for midnight basketball and employment, job training, and educational services similar to the programs under subsection (d); and

(B) have provided technical assistance to other entities regarding establishment and operation of such programs.

(2) USE.—Amounts received under technical assistance grants shall be used to establish centers for providing technical assistance to entities receiving grants under subsection (a)(1) of this section and section 520(a) of the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act (42 U.S.C. 11903a(a)) regarding establishment, operation, and administration of effective and successful midnight basketball league programs under this subsection.

(3) NUMBER AND AMOUNT.—To the extent that amounts are provided in appropriations Acts under subsection (m)(2) in each fiscal year, the Attorney General, in consultation with the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, shall make technical assistance grants under subsection (a)(2). In each fiscal year that such amounts are available the Attorney General, in consultation with the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, shall make 2 such grants, as follows:

(A) One grant shall be made to an eligible advisory entity for development of midnight basketball league programs in public housing projects.

(B) One grant shall be made to an eligible advisory entity for development of midnight basketball league programs in suburban or rural areas.

Each grant shall be in an amount not exceeding $50,000.

(i) ADVISORY COMMITTEE.—The Attorney General, in consultation with the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, shall appoint an Advisory Committee to assist in providing grants under this subsection. The Advisory Committee shall be composed of not more than 7 members, as follows:

(1) Not fewer than 2 individuals who are involved in managing or administering midnight basketball programs that the Secretary determines have been successful and effective. Such individuals may not be involved in a program assisted under this subsection or a member or employee of an eligible advisory entity that receives a technical assistance grant under subsection (a)(2).

(2) A representative of the Office for Substance Abuse Prevention of the Public Health Service, Department of Health and Human Services, who is involved in administering the grant program for prevention, treatment, and rehabilitation model projects for high risk youth under section 509A of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 290aa–8), who shall be selected by the Secretary of Health and Human Services.

(3) A representative of the Department of Education, who shall be selected by the Secretary of Education.

(4) A representative of the Department of Health and Human Services, who shall be selected by the Secretary of Health and Human Services from among officers and employees of the Department involved in issues relating to high-risk youth.

(5) A representative of the Department of Labor, who shall be selected by the Secretary of Labor.

(j) REPORTS.—The Attorney General, in consultation with the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, shall require each eligible entity receiving a grant under subsection (a)(1) and each eligible advisory entity receiving a grant under subsection (a)(2) to submit for each year in which grant amounts are received by the entity, a report describing the activities carried out with such amounts.

(k) STUDY.—To the extent amounts are provided under appropriation Acts pursuant to subsection (m)(3), the Attorney General, in consultation with the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, shall make a grant to one entity qualified to carry out a study under this subsection. The entity shall use such grant amounts to carry out a study of the effectiveness of midnight basketball league programs at reducing crime and increasing employability under subsection (d) of eligible entities receiving grants under subsection (a)(1). The Attorney General, in consultation with the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, shall require such entity to submit a report describing the study and any conclusions and recommendations resulting from the study to the Congress and the Attorney General and the Secretary not later than the expiration of the 2-year period beginning on the date that the grant under this subsection is made.

(l) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:

(1) The term "Advisory Committee" means the Advisory Committee established under subsection (i).

(2) The term "eligible advisory entity" means an entity meeting the requirements under subsection (h)(1).

(3) The term "eligible entity" means an entity described under subsection (b)(1).

(4) The term "federally assisted low-income housing" has the meaning given the term in section 5126 of the Public and Assisted Housing Drug Elimination Act of 1990.

(m) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated—

(1) for grants under subsection (a)(1), $2,500,000 in each of fiscal years 1992 and 1993;

(2) for technical assistance grants under subsection (a)(2), $100,000 in each of fiscal years 1992 and 1993; and

(3) for a study grant under subsection (k), $250,000 in fiscal year 1992.

"FORMULA GRANTS

"SEC. 231. (a) The Administrator is authorized to make grants to States and units of general local government or combinations thereof to assist them in planning, establishing, operating, coordinating, and evaluating projects directly or through grants and contracts with public and private agencies for the development of more effective programs including education, prevention, treatment and enforcement programs to reduce—

"(1) the formation or continuation of juvenile gangs; and

"(2) the use and sale of illegal drugs by juveniles.

"(b) The grants made under this section can be used for any of the following specific purposes:

"(1) To reduce the participation of juveniles in drug related crimes (including drug trafficking and drug use), particularly in and around elementary and secondary schools;

"(2) To reduce juvenile involvement in organized crime, drug and gang-related activity, particularly activities that involve the distribution of drugs by or to juveniles;

"(3) To develop within the juvenile justice system, including the juvenile corrections system, new and innovative means to address the problems of juveniles convicted of serious, drug-related and gang-related offenses;

"(4) To reduce juvenile drug and gang-related activity in public housing projects;

"(5) To provide technical assistance and training to personnel and agencies responsible for the adjudicatory and corrections components of the juvenile justice system to identify drug-dependent or gang-involved juvenile offenders and to provide appropriate counseling and treatment to such offenders;

"(6) To promote the involvement of all juveniles in lawful activities, including in-school and after-school programs for academic, athletic or artistic enrichment that also teach that drug and gang involvement are wrong;

"(7) To facilitate Federal and State cooperation with local school officials to develop education, prevention and treatment programs for juveniles who are likely to participate in the drug trafficking, drug use or gang-related activities;

"(8) To prevent juvenile drug and gang involvement in public housing projects through programs establishing youth sports and other activities, including girls and boys clubs, scout troops, and little leagues;

"(9) To provide pre- and post-trial drug abuse treatment to juveniles in the juvenile justice system; with the highest possible priority to providing drug abuse treatment to drug-dependent pregnant juveniles and drug-dependent juvenile mothers; and

"(10) To provide education and treatment programs for youth exposed to severe violence in their homes, schools or neighborhoods.

"(11) To establish sports mentoring and coaching programs in which athletes serve as role models for youth to teach that athletics provide a positive alternative to drug and gang involvement.

"(c) Of the funds made available to each State under this section (Formula Grants) 50 per centum of the funds made available to each State in any fiscal year shall be used for juvenile drug supply reduction programs and 50 per centum shall be used for juvenile drug demand reduction programs.

"SPECIAL EMPHASIS DRUG DEMAND REDUCTION AND ENFORCEMENT GRANTS

"SEC. 232. (a) The purpose of this section is to provide additional Federal assistance and support to identify promising new juvenile drug demand reduction and enforcement programs, to replicate and demonstrate these programs to serve as national, regional or local models that could be used, in whole or in part, by other public and private juvenile justice programs, and to provide technical assistance and training to public or private organizations to implement similar programs. In making grants under this section, the Administrator shall give priority to programs aimed at juvenile involvement in organized gang- and drug-related activities, including supply and demand reduction programs.

"(b) The Administrator is authorized to make grants to, or enter into contracts with, public or private non-profit agencies, institutions, or organizations or individuals to carry out any purpose authorized in section 231. The Administrator shall have final authority over all funds awarded under this subchapter.

"(c) Of the total amount appropriated for this subchapter, 20 per centum shall be reserved and set aside for this section in a special discretionary fund for use by the Administrator to carry out the purposes specified in section 231 as described in section 232(a). Grants made under this section may be made for amounts up to 100 per centum of the costs of the programs or projects.

"SPECIAL INTERNATIONAL PORTS OF ENTRY JUVENILE CRIME AND DRUG DEMAND REDUCTION GRANTS

"SEC. 233. (a) The purpose of this section is—

"(1) to provide additional Federal assistance and support to promising new programs that specifically and effectively address the unique crime and drug and alcohol related challenges faced by juveniles living at or near International Ports of Entry and in other international border communities, including rural localities;

"(2) to replicate and demonstrate these programs to serve as models that could be used, in whole or in part, in other similarly situated communities; and

"(3) to provide technical assistance and training to public or private organizations to implement similar programs.

"(b) The Administrator is authorized to make grants to, or enter into contracts with, public or private non-profit agencies, institutions, or organizations or individuals to carry out any purpose authorized in section 231, if the beneficiaries of the grantee's program are juveniles living at or near International Port of Entry or in other international border communities, including rural localities. The Administrator shall have final authority over all funds awarded under this section.

"(c) Of the total amount appropriated for this subchapter, 5 per centum shall be reserved and set aside for this section in a special discretionary fund for use by the Administrator to carry out the purposes specified in section 231 as described in section 233(a). Grants made under this section may be made for amounts up to 100 per centum of the costs of the programs.

"AUTHORIZATION

"SEC. 234. There is authorized to be appropriated $100,000,000 in fiscal year 1992 and such sums as may be necessary in fiscal year 1993 to carry out the purposes of this subpart.

"ALLOCATION OF FUND

"SEC. 235. Of the total amounts appropriated under this subpart in any fiscal year the amount remaining after setting aside the amounts required to be reserved to carry out section 232 (Discretionary Grants) shall be allocated as follows:

"(1) $400,000 shall be allocated to each of the participating States;

"(2) Of the total funds remaining after the allocation under paragraph (a), there shall be allocated to each of the participating States an amount which bears the same ratio to the amount of remaining funds described in this paragraph as the population of juveniles of such State bears to the population of juveniles of all the participating States.

"APPLICATION

"SEC. 236. (a) Each State applying for grants under section 231 (Formula Grants) and each public or private entity applying for grants under section 232 (Discretionary Grants) shall submit an application to the Administrator in such form and containing such information as the Administrator shall prescribe.

"(b) To the extent practical, the Administrator shall prescribe regulations governing applications for this subpart that are substantially similar to the applications required under part I (general juvenile justice formula grant) and part C (special emphasis prevention and treatment grants), including the procedures relating to competition.

"(c) In addition to the requirements prescribed in subsection (b), each State application submitted under section 231 shall include a detailed description of how the funds made available shall be coordinated with Federal assistance provided in parts B and C of title II of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 and by the Bureau of Justice Assistance under the Drug Control and System Improvement Grant program.

"REVIEW AND APPROVAL OF APPLICATIONS

"SEC. 237. The procedures and time limits imposed on the Federal and State Governments under sections 505 and 508, respectively, of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 relating to the review of applications and distribution of Federal funds shall apply to the review of applications and distribution of funds under this subpart.".

Subtitle I—Trauma Centers

SEC. 1195. TRAUMA CENTERS AND CRIME-RELATED VIOLENCE.

Title XII of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 300d et seq.), as added by section 3 of Public Law 101–590 (104 Stat. 2915), is amended by adding at the end the following new part:

"PART D—REIMBURSEMENT FOR UNCOMPENSATED TRAUMA CARE

"SEC. 1241. GRANTS FOR CERTAIN TRAUMA CENTERS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may make grants for the purpose of providing for the operating expenses of trauma centers that have incurred substantial uncompensated costs in providing trauma care in geographic areas with a significant incidence of violence due to crime. Grants under this subsection may be made only to such trauma centers.

"(b) MINIMUM QUALIFICATIONS OF CENTERS.—

"(1) SIGNIFICANT INCIDENCE OF TREATING PENETRATION WOUNDS.—

"(A) The Secretary may not make a grant under subsection (a) to a trauma center unless the trauma center demonstrates a significant incidence of uncompensated care debt as a result of treating a population of patients that has been served by the center for the period specified in subparagraph (B) for trauma, including a significant number of patients who were treated for wounds resulting from the penetration of the skin by knives, bullets, or other weapons.

"(B) The period specified in this subparagraph is the 2-year period preceding the fiscal year for which the trauma center involved is applying to receive a grant under subsection (a).

"(2) PARTICIPATION IN TRAUMA CARE SYSTEM OPERATING UNDER CERTAIN PROFESSIONAL GUIDELINES.—The Secretary may not make a grant under subsection (a) unless the trauma center involved is a participant in a system that—

"(A) provides comprehensive medical care to victims of trauma in the geographic area in which the trauma center involved is located;

"(B) is established by the State or political subdivision in which such center is located; and

"(C) has adopted guidelines for the designation of trauma centers, and for triage, transfer, and transportation policies, equivalent to (or more protective than) the applicable guidelines developed by the American College of Surgeons or utilized in the model plan established under section 1213(c).

"SEC. 1242. PRIORITIES IN MAKING GRANTS.

"In making grants under section 1241(a), the Secretary shall give priority to any application—

"(1) made by a trauma center that, for the purpose specified in such section, will receive financial assistance from the State or political subdivision involved for each fiscal year during which payments are made to the center from the grant, which financial assistance is exclusive of any assistance provided by the State or political subdivision as a non-Federal contribution under any Federal program requiring such a contribution; or

"(2) made by a trauma center that, with respect to the system described in section 1241(b)(2) in which the center is a participant—

"(A) is providing trauma care in a geographic area in which the availability of trauma care has significantly decreased as a result of a trauma center in the area permanently ceasing participation in such system as of a date occurring during the 5-year period specified in section 1241(b)(1)(B); or

"(B) will, in providing trauma care during the 1-year period beginning on the date on which the application for the grant is submitted, incur uncompensated costs in an amount rendering the center unable to continue participation in such system, resulting in a significant decrease in the availability of trauma care in the geographic area.

"SEC. 1243. COMMITMENT REGARDING CONTINUED PARTICIPATION IN TRAUMA CARE SYSTEM.

"The Secretary may not make a grant under subsection (a) of section 1241 unless the trauma center involved agrees that—

"(1) the center will continue participation in the system described in subsection (b) of such section throughout the two fiscal years immediately succeeding the fiscal year for which a grant is received;

"(2) if the agreement made pursuant to paragraph (1) is violated by the center, the center will be liable to the United States for an amount equal to the sum of—

"(A) the amount of assistance provided to the center under subsection (a) of such section; and

"(B) an amount representing interest on the amount specified in subparagraph (A); and

"(3) the center will establish a trauma registry not later than 6 months from the date on which the grant is received that shall include such information as the Secretary shall require.

"SEC. 1244. GENERAL PROVISIONS.

"(a) APPLICATION.—The Secretary may not make a grant under section 1241(a) unless an application for the grant is submitted to the Secretary and the application is in such form, is made in such manner, and contains such agreements, assurances, and information as the Secretary determines to be necessary to carry out this part.

"(b) LIMITATION ON DURATION OF SUPPORT.—The period during which a trauma center receives payments under section 1241(a) may not exceed 3 fiscal years, except that the Secretary may waive such requirement for the center and authorize the center to receive such payments for 1 additional fiscal year.

"(c) LIMITATION ON AMOUNT OF GRANT.—The Secretary may not make a grant to any single trauma center in an amount that exceeds $2,000,000 in any fiscal year.

"(d) CONSULTATION.—Grants shall be awarded under section 1241(a) only after the Secretary has consulted with the state official responsible for emergency medical services, or another appropriate state official, in the State of the prospective grantee.

"SEC. 1245. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

"For the purpose of carrying out this part, there are authorized to be appropriated $50,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, and such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1993 and 1994.".

SEC. 1196. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.

Title XII of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 300d et seq.), as added by section 3 of Public Law 101–590 (104 Stat. 2915), is amended—

(1) in the heading for part C, by inserting "REGARDING PARTS A AND B" after "PROVISIONS";

(2) in section 1231, in the matter preceding paragraph (1), by striking "this title" and inserting "this part and parts A and B"; and

(3) in section 1232(a), by striking "this title" and inserting "parts A and B".

Subtitle J—Certainty of Punishment for Young Offenders

SEC. 1198. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Certainty of Punishment for Young Offenders Act of 1991".

SEC. 1199. CERTAINTY OF PUNISHMENT FOR YOUNG OFFENDERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.), as amended by section 1161 of this Act, is amended—

(1) by redesignating part R as part S;

(2) by redesignating section 1801 as section 1901; and

(3) by inserting after part Q the following:

"PART R—ALTERNATIVE PUNISHMENTS FOR YOUNG OFFENDERS

"SEC. 1801. GRANT AUTHORIZATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance (referred to in this part as the 'Director') may make grants under this part to States, for the use by States and units of local government in the States, for the purpose of developing alternative methods of punishment for young offenders to traditional forms of incarceration and probation.

"(b) ALTERNATIVE METHODS.—The alternative methods of punishment referred to in subsection (a) should ensure certainty of punishment for young offenders and promote reduced recidivism, crime prevention, and assistance to victims, particularly for young offenders who can be punished more effectively in an environment other than a traditional correctional facility, including—

"(1) alternative sanctions that create accountability and certainty of punishment for young offenders;

"(2) boot camp prison programs;

"(3) technical training and support for the implementation and maintenance of State and local restitution programs for young offenders;

"(4) innovative projects;

"(5) correctional options, such as community-based incarceration, weekend incarceration, and electric monitoring of offenders;

"(6) community service programs that provide work service placement for young offenders at nonprofit, private organizations and community organizations;

"(7) demonstration restitution projects that are evaluated for effectiveness; and

"(8) innovative methods that address the problems of young offenders convicted of serious substance abuse, including alcohol abuse, and gang-related offenses, including technical assistance and training to counsel and treat such offenders.

"SEC. 1802. STATE APPLICATIONS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) To request a grant under this part, the chief executive of a State shall submit an application to the Director in such form and containing such information as the Director may reasonably require.

"(2) Such application shall include assurances that Federal funds received under this part shall be used to supplement, not supplant, non-Federal funds that would otherwise be available for activities funded under this part.

"(b) STATE OFFICE.—The office designated under section 507 of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3757)—

"(1) shall prepare the application as required under section 1802; and

"(2) shall administer grant funds received under this part, including, review of spending, processing, progress, financial reporting, technical assistance, grant adjustments, accounting, auditing, and fund disbursement.

"SEC. 1803. REVIEW OF STATE APPLICATIONS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Bureau shall make a grant under section 1801(a) to carry out the projects described in the application submitted by such applicant under section 1802 upon determining that—

"(1) the application is consistent with the requirements of this part; and

"(2) before the approval of the application, the Bureau has made an affirmative finding in writing that the proposed project has been reviewed in accordance with this part.

"(b) APPROVAL.—Each application submitted under section 1802 shall be considered approved, in whole or in part, by the Bureau not later than 45 days after first received unless the Bureau informs the applicant of specific reasons for disapproval.

"(c) RESTRICTION.—Grant funds received under this part shall not be used for land acquisition or construction projects, other than alternative facilities described in section 1801(b) for young offenders.

"(d) DISAPPROVAL NOTICE AND RECONSIDERATION.—The Bureau shall not disapprove any application without first affording the applicant reasonable notice and an opportunity for reconsideration.

"SEC. 1804. LOCAL APPLICATIONS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) To request funds under this part from a State, the chief executive of a unit of local government shall submit an application to the office designated under section 1802(b).

"(2) Such application shall be considered approved, in whole or in part, by the State not later than 45 days after such application is first received unless the State informs the applicant in writing of specific reasons for disapproval.

"(3) The State shall not disapprove any application submitted to the State without first affording the applicant reasonable notice and an opportunity for reconsideration.

"(4) If such application is approved, the unit of local government is eligible to receive such funds.

"(b) DISTRIBUTION TO UNITS OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT.—A State that receives funds under section 1801 in a fiscal year shall make such funds available to units of local government with an application that has been submitted and approved by the State within 45 days after the Bureau has approved the application submitted by the State and has made funds available to the State. The Director shall have the authority to waive the 45-day requirement in this section upon a finding that the State is unable to satisfy such requirement under State statutes.

"SEC. 1805. ALLOCATION AND DISTRIBUTION OF FUNDS.

"(a) STATE DISTRIBUTION.—Of the total amount appropriated under this part in any fiscal year—

"(1) 0.4 percent shall be allocated to each of the participating States; and

"(2) of the total funds remaining after the allocation under paragraph (1), there shall be allocated to each of the participating States an amount which bears the same ratio to the amount of remaining funds described in this paragraph as the number of young offenders of such State bears to the number of young offenders in all the participating States.

"(b) LOCAL DISTRIBUTION.—(1) A State that receives funds under this part in a fiscal year shall distribute to units of local government in such State for the purposes specified under section 1801 that portion of such funds which bears the same ratio to the aggregate amount of such funds as the amount of funds expended by all units of local government for criminal justice in the preceding fiscal year bears to the aggregate amount of funds expended by the State and all units of local government in such State for criminal justice in such preceding fiscal year.

"(2) Any funds not distributed to units of local government under paragraph (1) shall be available for expenditure by such State for purposes specified under section 1801.

"(3) If the Director determines, on the basis of information available during any fiscal year, that a portion of the funds allocated to a State for such fiscal year will not be used by such State or that a State is not eligible to receive funds under section 1801, the Director shall award such funds to units of local government in such State giving priority to the units of local government that the Director considers to have the greatest need.

"(c) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of a grant made under this part may not exceed 75 percent of the total costs of the projects described in the application submitted under section 1802(a) for the fiscal year for which the projects receive assistance under this part.

"SEC. 1806. EVALUATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Each State and local unit of government that receives a grant under this part shall submit to the Director an evaluation not later than March 1 of each year in accordance with guidelines issued by the Director and in consultation with the National Institute of Justice.

"(2) The Director may waive the requirement specified in subsection (a) if the Director determines that such evaluation is not warranted in the case of the State or unit of local government involved.

"(b) DISTRIBUTION.—The Director shall make available to the public on a timely basis evaluations received under subsection (a).

"(c) ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS.—A State and local unit of government may use not more than 5 percent of funds it receives under this part to develop an evaluation program under this section.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of contents of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.), as amended by section 1162 of this Act, is amended by striking the matter relating to part R and inserting the following:

"PART R—ALTERNATIVE PUNISHMENTS FOR YOUNG OFFENDERS

"Sec. 1801. Grant authorization.
"Sec. 1802. State applications.
"Sec. 1803. Review of State applications.
"Sec. 1804. Local applications.
"Sec. 1805. Allocation and distribution of funds.
"Sec. 1806. Evaluation.

"PART S—TRANSITION; EFFECTIVE DATE; REPEALER

"Sec. 1901. Continuation of rules, authorities, and proceedings.".

(c) DEFINITION.—Section 901(a) of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3791(a)), as amended by section 1421 of this Act, is amended by adding after paragraph (24) the following:

"(25) The term 'young offender' means an individual 28 years of age or younger.".

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

Section 1001(a) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3793) is amended by adding after paragraph (11) the following:

"(12) There are authorized to be appropriated $200,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1992, 1993, and 1994 to carry out the projects under part R.".

TITLE XII—PROVISIONS RELATING TO POLICE OFFICERS

Subtitle A—Law Enforcement Family Support

SEC. 1201. LAW ENFORCEMENT FAMILY SUPPORT.

Title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.), as amended by section 1199 of this Act is amended—

(1) by redesignating part S as part T;

(2) by redesignating section 1901 as 2001; and

(3) by inserting after part R the following:

"PART S—FAMILY SUPPORT

"SEC. 1901. DUTIES OF DIRECTOR.

"The Director shall—

"(1) establish guidelines and oversee the implementation of family-friendly policies within law enforcement-related offices and divisions in the Department of Justice;

"(2) study the effects of stress on law enforcement personnel and family well-being and disseminate the findings of such studies to Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies, related organizations, and other interested parties;

"(3) identify and evaluate model programs that provide support services to law enforcement personnel and families;

"(4) provide technical assistance and training programs to develop stress reduction and family support to State and local law enforcement agencies;

"(5) collect and disseminate information regarding family support, stress reduction, and psychological services to Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies, law enforcement-related organizations, and other interested entities; and

"(6) determine issues to be researched by the Bureau and by grant recipients.

"SEC. 1902. GENERAL AUTHORIZATION.

"The Director is authorized to make grants to States and local law enforcement agencies to provide family support services to law enforcement personnel.

"SEC. 1903. USES OF FUNDS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—A State or local law enforcement agency that receives a grant under this Act shall use amounts provided under the grant to establish or improve training and support programs for law enforcement personnel.

"(b) REQUIRED ACTIVITIES.—A law enforcement agency that receives funds under this Act shall provide at least one of the following services:

"(1) Counseling for law enforcement family members.

"(2) Child care on a 24-hour basis.

"(3) Marital and adolescent support groups.

"(4) Stress reduction programs.

"(5) Stress education for law enforcement recruits and families.

"(c) OPTIONAL ACTIVITIES.—A law enforcement agency that receives funds under this Act may provide the following services:

"(1) Post-shooting debriefing for officers and their spouses.

"(2) Group therapy.

"(3) Hypertension clinics.

"(4) Critical incident response on a 24-hour basis.

"(5) Law enforcement family crisis telephone services on a 24-hour basis.

"(6) Counseling for law enforcement personnel exposed to the human immunodeficiency virus.

"(7) Counseling for peers.

"(8) Counseling for families of personnel killed in the line of duty.

"(9) Seminars regarding alcohol, drug use, gambling, and overeating.

"SEC. 1904. APPLICATIONS.

"A law enforcement agency desiring to receive a grant under this part shall submit to the Director an application at such time, in such manner, and containing or accompanied by such information as the Director may reasonably require. Such application shall—

"(1) certify that the law enforcement agency shall match all Federal funds with an equal amount of cash or in-kind goods or services from other non-Federal sources;

"(2) include a statement from the highest ranking law enforcement official from the State or locality applying for the grant that attests to the need and intended use of services to be provided with grant funds; and

"(3) assure that the Director or the Comptroller General of the United States shall have access to all records related to the receipt and use of grant funds received under this Act.

"SEC. 1905. AWARD OF GRANTS; LIMITATION.

"(a) GRANT DISTRIBUTION.—In approving grants under this part, the Director shall assure an equitable distribution of assistance among the States, among urban and rural areas of the United States, and among urban and rural areas of a State.

"(b) DURATION.—The Director may award a grant each fiscal year, not to exceed $100,000 to a State or local law enforcement agency for a period not to exceed 5 years. In any application from a State or local law enforcement agency for a grant to continue a program for the second, third, fourth, or fifth fiscal year following the first fiscal year in which a grant was awarded to such agency, the Director shall review the progress made toward meeting the objectives of the program. The Director may refuse to award a grant if the Director finds sufficient progress has not been made toward meeting such objectives, but only after affording the applicant notice and an opportunity for reconsideration.

"(c) LIMITATION.—Not more than 10 percent of grant funds received by a State or a local law enforcement agency may be used for administrative purposes.

"SEC. 1906. DISCRETIONARY RESEARCH GRANTS.

"The Director may reserve 10 percent of funds to award research grants to a State or local law enforcement agency to study issues of importance in the law enforcement field as determined by the Director.

"SEC. 1907. REPORTS.

"(a) REPORT FROM GRANT RECIPIENTS.—A State or local law enforcement agency that receives a grant under this Act shall submit to the Director an annual report that includes—

"(1) program descriptions;

"(2) the number of staff employed to administer programs;

"(3) the number of individuals who participated in programs; and

"(4) an evaluation of the effectiveness of grant programs.

"(b) REPORT FROM DIRECTOR.—(1) The Director shall submit to the Congress a report not later than March 31 of each fiscal year.

"(2) Such report shall contain—

"(A) a description of the types of projects developed or improved through funds received under this Act;

"(B) a description of exemplary projects and activities developed;

"(C) a designation of the family relationship to the law enforcement personnel of individuals served; and

"(D) the number of individuals served in each location and throughout the country.

"SEC. 1908. DEFINITIONS.

"For purposes of this part—

"(1) the term 'family-friendly policy' means a policy to promote or improve the morale and well being of law enforcement personnel and their families; and

"(2) the term 'law enforcement personnel' means individuals employed by Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of contents of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.), as amended by section 1199 of this Act, is amended by striking the matter relating to part V and inserting the following:

SEC. 1202. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 1001(a) of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.), as amended by section 1199 of this Act, is amended by adding after paragraph (11) the following:

"(12) There are authorized to be appropriated $5,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1992, 1993, 1994, 1995, and 1996. Not more than 20 percent of such funds may be used to accomplish the duties of the Director under section 1901 in part S of this Act, including administrative costs, research, and training programs.".

Subtitle B—Police Pattern or Practice

SEC. 1211. PATTERN OR PRACTICE CASES; CAUSE OF ACTION.

Chapter 21 of title 42, United States Code, is amended by adding the following new section:

"SECTION 1998. PATTERN OR PRACTICE CASES.

"(a) UNLAWFUL CONDUCT.—It shall be unlawful for any governmental authority, or any agent thereof, or any person acting on behalf of a governmental authority, to engage in a pattern or practice of conduct by law enforcement officers that deprives persons of rights, privileges, or immunities, secured or protected by the Constitution or laws of the United States.

"(b) CIVIL ACTION BY ATTORNEY GENERAL.—Whenever the Attorney General has reasonable cause to believe that a violation of paragraph (1) has occurred, the Attorney General, for or in the name of the United States, may in a civil action obtain appropriate equitable and declaratory relief to eliminate the pattern or practice.".

SEC. 1212. DATA ON USE OF EXCESSIVE FORCE.

(a) ATTORNEY GENERAL TO COLLECT.—The Attorney General shall, through the victimization surveys conducted by the Bureau of Justice Statistics, acquire data about the use of excessive force by law enforcement officers.

(b) LIMITATION ON USE OF DATA.—Data acquired under this section shall be used only for research or statistical purposes and may not contain any information that may reveal the identity of the victim or any law enforcement officer.

(c) ANNUAL SUMMARY.—The Attorney general shall publish an annual summary of the data acquired under this section.

Subtitle C—Police Corps and Law Enforcement Officers Training and Education

SEC. 1221. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Police Corps and Law Enforcement Training and Education Act".

SEC. 1222. PURPOSES.

The purposes of this title are to—

(1) address violent crime by increasing the number of police with advanced education and training on community patrol;

(2) provide educational assistance to law enforcement personnel and to students who possess a sincere interest in public service in the form of law enforcement; and

(3) assist State and local law enforcement efforts to enhance the educational status of law enforcement personnel both through increasing the educational level of existing officers and by recruiting more highly educated officers.

SEC. 1223. ESTABLISHMENT OF OFFICE OF THE POLICE CORPS AND LAW ENFORCEMENT EDUCATION.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established in the Department of Justice, under the general authority of the Attorney General, an Office of the Police Corps and Law Enforcement Education.

(b) APPOINTMENT OF DIRECTOR.—The Office of the Police Corps and Law Enforcement Education shall be headed by a Director (referred to in this title as the "Director") who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

(c) RESPONSIBILITIES OF DIRECTOR.—The Director shall be responsible for the administration of the Police Corps program established in subtitle A and the Law Enforcement Scholarship program established in subtitle B and shall have authority to promulgate regulations to implement this title.

SEC. 1224. DESIGNATION OF LEAD AGENCY AND SUBMISSION OF STATE PLAN.

(a) LEAD AGENCY.—A State that desires to participate in the Police Corps program under subtitle A or the Law Enforcement Scholarship program under subtitle B shall designate a lead agency that will be responsible for—

(1) submitting to the Director a State plan described in subsection (b); and

(2) administering the program in the State.

(b) STATE PLANS.—A State plan shall—

(1) contain assurances that the lead agency shall work in cooperation with the local law enforcement liaisons, representatives of police labor organizations and police management organizations, and other appropriate State and local agencies to develop and implement interagency agreements designed to carry out the program;

(2) contain assurances that the State shall advertise the assistance available under this title;

(3) contain assurances that the State shall screen and select law enforcement personnel for participation in the program;

(4) if the State desires to participate in the Police Corps program under subtitle A, meet the requirements of section 1236; and

(5) if the State desires to participate in the Law Enforcement Scholarship program under subtitle B, meet the requirements of section 826.

CHAPTER 1—POLICE CORPS PROGRAM

SEC. 1231. DEFINITIONS.

For the purposes of this subtitle—

(1) the term "academic year" means a traditional academic year beginning in August or September and ending in the following May or June;

(2) the term "dependent child" means a natural or adopted child or stepchild of a law enforcement officer who at the time of the officer's death—

(A) was no more than 21 years old; or

(B) if older than 21 years, was in fact dependent on the child's parents for at least one-half of the child's support (excluding educational expenses), as determined by the Director;

(3) the term "educational expenses" means expenses that are directly attributable to—

(A) a course of education leading to the award of the baccalaureate degree; or

(B) a course of graduate study following award of a baccalaureate degree, including the cost of tuition, fees, books, supplies, transportation, room and board and miscellaneous expenses;

(4) the term "participant" means a participant in the Police Corps program selected pursuant to section 1233;

(5) the term "State" means a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Guam, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands; and

(6) the term "State Police Corps program" means a State police corps program approved under section 1236.

SEC. 1232. SCHOLARSHIP ASSISTANCE.

(a) SCHOLARSHIPS AUTHORIZED.—(1) The Director is authorized to award scholarships to participants who agree to work in a State or local police force in accordance with agreements entered into pursuant to subsection (d).

(2)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B) each scholarship payment made under this section for each academic year shall not exceed—

(i) $7,500; or

(ii) the cost of the educational expenses related to attending an institution of higher education.

(B) In the case of a participant who is pursuing a course of educational study during substantially an entire calendar year, the amount of scholarship payments made during such year shall not exceed $10,000.

(C) The total amount of scholarship assistance received by any one student under this section shall not exceed $30,000.

(4) Recipients of scholarship assistance under this section shall continue to receive such scholarship payments only during such periods as the Director finds that the recipient is maintaining satisfactory progress as determined by the institution of higher education the recipient is attending.

(5)(A) The Director shall make scholarship payments under this section directly to the institution of higher education that the student is attending.

(B) Each institution of higher education receiving a payment on behalf of a participant pursuant to subparagraph (A) shall remit to such student any funds in excess of the costs of tuition, fees, and room and board payable to the institution.

(b) REIMBURSEMENT AUTHORIZED.—(1) The Director is authorized to make payments to a participant to reimburse such participant for the costs of educational expenses if such student agrees to work in a State or local police force in accordance with the agreement entered into pursuant to subsection (d).

(2)(A) Each payment made pursuant to paragraph (1) for each academic year of study shall not exceed—

(i) $7,500; or

(ii) the cost of educational expenses related to attending an institution of higher education.

(B) In the case of a participant who is pursuing a course of educational study during substantially an entire calendar year, the amount of scholarship payments made during such year shall not exceed $10,000.

(C) The total amount of payments made pursuant to subparagraph (A) to any one student shall not exceed $30,000.

(c) USE OF SCHOLARSHIP.—Scholarships awarded under this subsection shall only be used to attend a 4-year institution of higher education, except that—

(1) scholarships may be used for graduate and professional study, and

(2) where a participant has enrolled in the program upon or after transfer to a four-year institution of higher education, the Director may reimburse the participant for the participant's prior educational expenses.

(d) AGREEMENT.—(1) Each participant receiving a scholarship or a payment under this section shall enter into an agreement with the Director. Each such agreement shall contain assurances that the participant shall—

(A) after successful completion of a baccalaureate program and training as prescribed in section 1234, work for 4 years in a State or local police force without there having arisen sufficient cause for the participant's dismissal under the rules applicable to members of the police force of which the participant is a member;

(B) complete satisfactorily—

(i) an educational course of study and receipt of a baccalaureate degree (in the case of undergraduate study) or the reward of credit to the participant for having completed one or more graduate courses (in the case of graduate study);

(ii) Police Corps training and certification by the Director that the participant has met such performance standards as may be established pursuant to section 1234; and

(C) repay all of the scholarship or payment received plus interest at the rate of 10 percent in the event that the conditions of subparagraphs (A) and (B) are not complied with.

(2)(A) A recipient of a scholarship or payment under this section shall not be considered in violation of the agreement entered into pursuant to paragraph (1) if the recipient—

(i) dies; or

(ii) becomes permanently and totally disabled as established by the sworn affidavit of a qualified physician.

(B) In the event that a scholarship recipient is unable to comply with the repayment provision set forth in subparagraph (B) of paragraph (1) because of a physical or emotional disability or for good cause as determined by the Director, the Director may substitute community service in a form prescribed by the Director for the required repayment.

(C) The Director shall expeditiously seek repayment from participants who violate the agreement described in paragraph (1).

(e) DEPENDENT CHILD.—A dependent child of a law enforcement officer—

(1) who is a member of a State or local police force or is a Federal criminal investigator or uniformed police officer,

(2) who is not a participant in the Police Corps program, but

(3) who serves in a State for which the Director has approved a Police Corps plan, and

(4) who is killed in the course of performing police duties, shall be entitled to the scholarship assistance authorized in this section for any course of study in any accredited institution of higher education. Such dependent child shall not incur any repayment obligation in exchange for the scholarship assistance provided in this section.

(f) APPLICATION.—Each participant desiring a scholarship or payment under this section shall submit an application as prescribed by the Director in such manner and accompanied by such information as the Director may reasonably require.

(g) DEFINITION.—For the purposes of this section the term "institution of higher education" has the meaning given that term in the first sentence of section 1201(a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1141(a)).

SEC. 1233. SELECTION OF PARTICIPANTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Participants in State Police Corps programs shall be selected on a competitive basis by each State under regulations prescribed by the Director.

(b) SELECTION CRITERIA AND QUALIFICATIONS.—(1) In order to participate in a State Police Corps program, a participant must—

(A) be a citizen of the United States or an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence in the United States;

(B) meet the requirements for admission as a trainee of the State or local police force to which the participant will be assigned pursuant to section 1235(c)(5), including achievement of satisfactory scores on any applicable examination, except that failure to meet the age requirement for a trainee of the State or local police shall not disqualify the applicant if the applicant will be of sufficient age upon completing an undergraduate course of study;

(C) possess the necessary mental and physical capabilities and emotional characteristics to discharge effectively the duties of a law enforcement officer;

(D) be of good character and demonstrate sincere motivation and dedication to law enforcement and public service;

(E) in the case of an undergraduate, agree in writing that the participant will complete an educational course of study leading to the award of a baccalaureate degree and will then accept an appointment and complete 4 years of service as an officer in the State police or in a local police department within the State;

(F) in the case of a participant desiring to undertake or continue graduate study, agree in writing that the participant will accept an appointment and complete 4 years of service as an officer in the State police or in a local police department within the State before undertaking or continuing graduate study;

(G) contract, with the consent of the participant's parent or guardian if the participant is a minor, to serve for 4 years as an officer in the State police or in a local police department, if an appointment is offered; and

(H) except as provided in paragraph (2), be without previous law enforcement experience.

(2)(A) Until the date that is 5 years after the date of enactment of this title, up to 10 percent of the applicants accepted into the Police Corps program may be persons who—

(i) have had some law enforcement experience; and

(ii) have demonstrated special leadership potential and dedication to law enforcement.

(B)(i) The prior period of law enforcement of a participant selected pursuant to subparagraph (A) shall not be counted toward satisfaction of the participant's 4-year service obligation under section 1235, and such a participant shall be subject to the same benefits and obligations under this subtitle as other participants, including those stated in section (b)(1) (E) and (F).

(ii) Clause (i) shall not be construed to preclude counting a participant's previous period of law enforcement experience for purposes other than satisfaction of the requirements of section 1235, such as for purposes of determining such a participant's pay and other benefits, rank, and tenure.

(3) It is the intent of this Act that there shall be no more than 20,000 participants in each graduating class. The Director shall approve State plans providing in the aggregate for such enrollment of applicants as shall assure, as nearly as possible, annual graduating classes of 20,000. In a year in which applications are received in a number greater than that which will produce, in the judgment of the Director, a graduating class of more than 20,000, the Director shall, in deciding which applications to grant, give preference to those who will be participating in State plans that provide law enforcement personnel to areas of greatest need.

(c) RECRUITMENT OF MINORITIES.—Each State participating in the Police Corps program shall make special efforts to seek and recruit applicants from among members of all racial, ethnic or gender groups. This subsection does not authorize an exception from the competitive standards for admission established pursuant to subsections (a) and (b).

(d) ENROLLMENT OF APPLICANT.—(1) An applicant shall be accepted into a State Police Corps program on the condition that the applicant will be matriculated in, or accepted for admission at, a 4-year institution of higher education (as described in the first sentence of section 1201(a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1141(a)))—

(A) as a full-time student in an undergraduate program; or

(B) for purposes of taking a graduate course.

(2) If the applicant is not matriculated or accepted as set forth in paragraph (1), the applicant's acceptance in the program shall be revoked.

(e) LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—(1) A participant in a State Police Corps program who requests a leave of absence from educational study, training or service for a period not to exceed 1 year (or 18 months in the aggregate in the event of multiple requests) due to temporary physical or emotional disability shall be granted such leave of absence by the State.

(2) A participant who requests a leave of absence from educational study, training or service for a period not to exceed 1 year (or 18 months in the aggregate in the event of multiple requests) for any reason other than those listed in paragraph (1) may be granted such leave of absence by the State.

(3) A participant who requests a leave of absence from educational study or training for a period not to exceed 30 months to serve on an official church mission may be granted such leave of absence.

(f) ADMISSION OF APPLICANTS.—An applicant may be admitted into a State Police Corps program either before commencement of or during the applicant's course of educational study.

SEC. 1234. POLICE CORPS TRAINING.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) The Director shall establish programs of training for Police Corps participants. Such programs may be carried out at up to 3 training centers established for this purpose and administered by the Director, or by contracting with existing State training facilities. The Director shall contract with a State training facility upon request of such facility if the Director determines that such facility offers a course of training substantially equivalent to the Police Corps training program described in this subtitle.

(2) The Director is authorized to enter into contracts with individuals, institutions of learning, and government agencies (including State and local police forces), to obtain the services of persons qualified to participate in and contribute to the training process.

(3) The Director is authorized to enter into agreements with agencies of the Federal Government to utilize on a reimbursable basis space in Federal buildings and other resources.

(4) The Director may authorize such expenditures as are necessary for the effective maintenance of the training centers, including purchases of supplies, uniforms, and educational materials, and the provision of subsistence, quarters, and medical care to participants.

(b) TRAINING SESSIONS.—A participant in a State Police Corps program shall attend two 8-week training sessions at a training center, one during the summer following completion of sophomore year and one during the summer following completion of junior year. If a participant enters the program after sophomore year, the participant shall complete 16 weeks of training at times determined by the Director.

(c) FURTHER TRAINING.—The 16 weeks of Police Corps training authorized in this section is intended to serve as basic law enforcement training but not to exclude further training of participants by the State and local authorities to which they will be assigned. Each State plan approved by the Director under section 1236 shall include assurances that following completion of a participant's course of education each participant shall receive appropriate additional training by the State or local authority to which the participant is assigned. The time spent by a participant in such additional training, but not the time spent in Police Corps training, shall be counted toward fulfillment of the participant's 4-year service obligation.

(d) COURSE OF TRAINING.—The training sessions at training centers established under this section shall be designed to provide basic law enforcement training, including vigorous physical and mental training to teach participants self-discipline and organizational loyalty and to impart knowledge and understanding of legal processes and law enforcement.

(e) EVALUATION OF PARTICIPANTS.—A participant shall be evaluated during training for mental, physical, and emotional fitness, and shall be required to meet performance standards prescribed by the Director at the conclusion of each training session in order to remain in the Police Corps program.

(f) STIPEND.—The Director shall pay participants in training sessions a stipend of $250 a week during training.

SEC. 1235. SERVICE OBLIGATION.

(a) SWEARING IN.—Upon satisfactory completion of the participant's course of education and training program established in section 1234 and meeting the requirements of the police force to which the participant is assigned, a participant shall be sworn in as a member of the police force to which the participant is assigned pursuant to the State Police Corps plan, and shall serve for 4 years as a member of that police force.

(b) RIGHTS AND RESPONSIBILITIES.—A participant shall have all of the rights and responsibilities of and shall be subject to all rules and regulations applicable to other members of the police force of which the participant is a member, including those contained in applicable agreements with labor organizations and those provided by State and local law.

(c) DISCIPLINE.—If the police force of which the participant is a member subjects the participant to discipline such as would preclude the participant's completing 4 years of service, and result in denial of educational assistance under section 1232, the Director may, upon a showing of good cause, permit the participant to complete the service obligation in an equivalent alternative law enforcement service and, if such service is satisfactorily completed, section 1232(d)(1)(C) shall not apply.

(d) LAY-OFFS.—If the police force of which the participant is a member lays off the participant such as would preclude the participant's completing 4 years of service, and result in denial of educational assistance under section 1232, the Director may permit the participant to complete the service obligation in an equivalent alternative law enforcement service and, if such service is satisfactorily completed, section 1232(d)(1)(C) shall not apply.

SEC. 1236. STATE PLAN REQUIREMENTS.

A State Police Corps plan shall—

(1) provide for the screening and selection of participants in accordance with the criteria set out in section 1233;

(2) state procedures governing the assignment of participants in the Police Corps program to State and local police forces (no more than 10 percent of all the participants assigned in each year by each State to be assigned to a statewide police force or forces);

(3) provide that participants shall be assigned to those geographic areas in which—

(A) there is the greatest need for additional law enforcement personnel; and

(B) the participants will be used most effectively;

(4) provide that to the extent consistent with paragraph (3), a participant shall be assigned to an area near the participant's home or such other place as the participant may request;

(5) provide that to the extent feasible, a participant's assignment shall be made at the time the participant is accepted into the program, subject to change—

(A) prior to commencement of a participant's fourth year of undergraduate study, under such circumstances as the plan may specify; and

(B) from commencement of a participant's fourth year of undergraduate study until completion of 4 years of police service by participant, only for compelling reasons or to meet the needs of the State Police Corps program and only with the consent of the participant;

(6) provide that no participant shall be assigned to serve with a local police force—

(A) whose size has declined by more than 5 percent since June 21, 1989; or

(B) which has members who have been laid off but not retired;

(7) provide that participants shall be placed and to the extent feasible kept on community and preventive patrol;

(8) assure that participants will receive effective training and leadership;

(9) provide that the State may decline to offer a participant an appointment following completion of Federal training, or may remove a participant from the Police Corps program at any time, only for good cause (including failure to make satisfactory progress in a course of educational study) and after following reasonable review procedures stated in the plan; and

(10) provide that a participant shall, while serving as a member of a police force, be compensated at the same rate of pay and benefits and enjoy the same rights under applicable agreements with labor organizations and under State and local law as other police officers of the same rank and tenure in the police force of which the participant is a member.

SEC. 1237. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subtitle $100,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1992 and 1993, and $200,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1994, 1995, and 1996.

CHAPTER 2—LAW ENFORCEMENT SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM

SEC. 1241. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Law Enforcement Scholarships and Recruitment Act".

SEC. 1242. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this subtitle—

(1) the term "Director" means the Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance;

(2) the term "educational expenses" means expenses that are directly attributable to—

(A) a course of education leading to the award of an associate degree;

(B) a course of education leading to the award of a baccalaureate degree; or

(C) a course of graduate study following award of a baccalaureate degree; including the cost of tuition, fees, books, supplies, and related expenses;

(3) the term "institution of higher education" has the same meaning given such term in section 1201(a) of the Higher Education Act of 1965;

(4) the term "law enforcement position" means employment as an officer in a State or local police force, or correctional institution; and

(5) the term "State" means a State of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands of the United States, American Samoa, Guam, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands.

SEC. 1243. ALLOTMENT.

From amounts appropriated pursuant to the authority of section 11, the Director shall allot—

(1) 80 percent of such funds to States on the basis of the number of law enforcement officers in each State compared to the number of law enforcement officers in all States; and

(2) 20 percent of such funds to States on the basis of the shortage of law enforcement personnel and the need for assistance under this subtitle in the State compared to the shortage of law enforcement personnel and the need for assistance under this subtitle in all States.

SEC. 1244. PROGRAM ESTABLISHED.

(a) USE OF ALLOTMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Each State receiving an allotment pursuant to section 823 shall use such allotment to pay the Federal share of the costs of—

(A) awarding scholarships to in-service law enforcement personnel to enable such personnel to seek further education; and

(B) providing—

(i) full-time employment in summer; or

(ii) part-time (not to exceed 20 hours per week) employment during a period not to exceed one year.

(2) EMPLOYMENT.—The employment described in subparagraph (B) of paragraph (1) shall be provided by State and local law enforcement agencies for students who are juniors or seniors in high school or are enrolled in an accredited institution of higher education and who demonstrate an interest in undertaking a career in law enforcement. Such employment shall not be in a law enforcement position. Such employment shall consist of performing meaningful tasks that inform such students of the nature of the tasks performed by law enforcement agencies.

(b) PAYMENTS; FEDERAL SHARE; NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—

(1) PAYMENTS.—The Secretary shall pay to each State receiving an allotment under section 823 the Federal share of the cost of the activities described in the application submitted pursuant to section 827.

(2) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share shall not exceed 60 percent.

(3) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—The non-Federal share of the cost of scholarships and student employment provided under this subtitle shall be supplied from sources other than the Federal Government.

(c) LEAD AGENCY.—Each State receiving an allotment under section 823 shall designate an appropriate State agency to serve as the lead agency to conduct a scholarship program, a student employment program, or both in the State in accordance with this subtitle.

(d) RESPONSIBILITIES OF DIRECTOR.—The Director shall be responsible for the administration of the programs conducted pursuant to this subtitle and shall, in consultation with the Assistant Secretary for Postsecondary Education, issue rules to implement this subtitle.

(e) ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.—Each State receiving an allotment under section 823 may reserve not more than 8 percent of such allotment for administrative expenses.

(f) SPECIAL RULE.—Each State receiving an allotment under section 823 shall ensure that each scholarship recipient under this subtitle be compensated at the same rate of pay and benefits and enjoy the same rights under applicable agreements with labor organizations and under State and local law as other law enforcement personnel of the same rank and tenure in the office of which the scholarship recipient is a member.

(g) SUPPLEMENTATION OF FUNDING.—Funds received under this subtitle shall only be used to supplement, and not to supplant, Federal, State, or local efforts for recruitment and education of law enforcement personnel.

SEC. 1245. SCHOLARSHIPS.

(a) PERIOD OF AWARD.—Scholarships awarded under this subtitle shall be for a period of one academic year.

(b) USE OF SCHOLARSHIPS.—Each individual awarded a scholarship under this subtitle may use such scholarship for educational expenses at any accredited institution of higher education.

SEC. 1246. ELIGIBILITY.

(a) SCHOLARSHIPS.—An individual shall be eligible to receive a scholarship under this subtitle if such individual has been employed in law enforcement for the 2-year period immediately preceding the date on which assistance is sought.

(b) INELIGIBILITY FOR STUDENT EMPLOYMENT.—An individual who has been employed as a law enforcement officer is ineligible to participate in a student employment program carried out under this subtitle.

SEC. 1247. STATE APPLICATION.

Each State desiring an allotment under section 823 shall submit an application to the Director at such time, in such manner, and accompanied by such information as the Director may reasonably require. Each such application shall—

(1) describe the scholarship program and the student employment program for which assistance under this subtitle is sought;

(2) contain assurances that the lead agency will work in cooperation with the local law enforcement liaisons, representatives of police labor organizations and police management organizations, and other appropriate State and local agencies to develop and implement interagency agreements designed to carry out this subtitle;

(3) contain assurances that the State will advertise the scholarship assistance and student employment it will provide under this subtitle and that the State will use such programs to enhance recruitment efforts;

(4) contain assurances that the State will screen and select law enforcement personnel for participation in the scholarship program under this subtitle;

(5) contain assurances that under such student employment program the State will screen and select, for participation in such program, students who have an interest in undertaking a career in law enforcement;

(6) contain assurances that under such scholarship program the State will make scholarship payments to institutions of higher education on behalf of individuals receiving scholarships under this subtitle;

(7) with respect to such student employment program, identify—

(A) the employment tasks students will be assigned to perform;

(B) the compensation students will be paid to perform such tasks; and

(C) the training students will receive as part of their participation in such program;

(8) identify model curriculum and existing programs designed to meet the educational and professional needs of law enforcement personnel; and

(9) contain assurances that the State will promote cooperative agreements with educational and law enforcement agencies to enhance law enforcement personnel recruitment efforts in institutions of higher education.

SEC. 1248. LOCAL APPLICATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Each individual who desires a scholarship or employment under this subtitle shall submit an application to the State at such time, in such manner, and accompanied by such information as the State may reasonably require. Each such application shall describe the academic courses for which a scholarship is sought, or the location and duration of employment sought, as appropriate.

(b) PRIORITY.—In awarding scholarships and providing student employment under this subtitle, each State shall give priority to applications from individuals who are—

(1) members of racial, ethnic, or gender groups whose representation in the law enforcement agencies within the State is substantially less than in the population eligible for employment in law enforcement in the State;

(2) pursuing an undergraduate degree; and

(3) not receiving financial assistance under the Higher Education Act of 1965.

SEC. 1249. SCHOLARSHIP AGREEMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Each individual who receives a scholarship under this subtitle shall enter into an agreement with the Director.

(b) CONTENTS.—Each agreement described in subsection (a) shall—

(1) provide assurances that the individual will work in a law enforcement position in the State which awarded such individual the scholarship in accordance with the service obligation described in subsection (c) after completion of such individual's academic courses leading to an associate, bachelor, or graduate degree;

(2) provide assurances that the individual will repay the entire scholarship awarded under this subtitle in accordance with such terms and conditions as the Director shall prescribe, in the event that the requirements of such agreement are not complied with unless the individual—

(A) dies;

(B) becomes physically or emotionally disabled, as established by the sworn affidavit of a qualified physician; or

(C) has been discharged in bankruptcy; and

(3) set forth the terms and conditions under which an individual receiving a scholarship under this subtitle may seek employment in the field of law enforcement in a State other than the State which awarded such individual the scholarship under this subtitle.

(c) SERVICE OBLIGATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.— Except as provided in paragraph (2), each individual awarded a scholarship under this subtitle shall work in a law enforcement position in the State which awarded such individual the scholarship for a period of one month for each credit hour for which funds are received under such scholarship.

(2) SPECIAL RULE.—For purposes of satisfying the requirement specified in paragraph (1), each individual awarded a scholarship under this subtitle shall work in a law enforcement position in the State which awarded such individual the scholarship for not less than 6 months nor more than 2 years.

SEC. 1250. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) GENERAL AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $30,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1992, 1993, 1994, 1995, and 1996 to carry out this subtitle.

(b) USES OF FUNDS.—Of the funds appropriated under subsection (a) for any fiscal year—

(1) 75 percent shall be available to provide scholarships described in section 824(a)(1)(A); and

(2) 25 percent shall be available to provide employment described in sections 1244(a)(1)(B) and 1244(a)(2).

CHAPTER 3—REPORTS

SEC. 1261. REPORTS TO CONGRESS.

(a) ANNUAL REPORTS.—No later than April 1 of each fiscal year, the Director shall submit a report to the Attorney General, the President, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the President of the Senate. Such report shall—

(1) state the number of current and past participants in the Police Corps program authorized by subtitle A, broken down according to the levels of educational study in which they are engaged and years of service they have served on police forces (including service following completion of the 4-year service obligation);

(2) describe the geographic, racial, and gender dispersion of participants in the Police Corps program;

(3) state the number of present and past scholarship recipients under subtitle B, categorized according to the levels of educational study in which such recipients are engaged and the years of service such recipients have served in law enforcement;

(4) describe the geographic, racial, and gender dispersion of scholarship recipients under subtitle B; and

(5) describe the progress of the programs authorized by this title and make recommendations for changes in the programs.

(b) SPECIAL REPORT.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit a report to Congress containing a plan to expand the assistance provided under subtitle B to Federal law enforcement officers. Such plan shall contain information of the number and type of Federal law enforcement officers eligible for such assistance.

Subtitle D—Study Rights of Police Officers

SEC. 1271. STUDY ON OFFICERS' RIGHTS.

The Attorney General, through the National Institute of Justice, shall conduct a study of the procedures followed in internal, noncriminal investigations of State and local law enforcement officers to determine if such investigations are conducted fairly and effectively. The study shall examine the adequacy of the rights available to law enforcement officers and members of the public in cases involving the performance of a law enforcement officer, including—

(1) notice;

(2) conduct of questioning;

(3) counsel;

(4) hearings;

(5) appeal; and

(6) sanctions.

Not later than one year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to the Congress a report on the results of the study, along with findings and recommendations on strategies to guarantee fair and effective internal affairs investigations.

TITLE XIII—FEDERAL LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES

SEC. 1301. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Federal Law Enforcement Act of 1991".

SEC. 1302. AUTHORIZATION FOR FEDERAL LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES.

There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1992, $345,500,000 (which shall be in addition to any other appropriations) to be allocated as follows:

(1) For the Drug Enforcement Administration, $100,500,000, which shall include:

(A) not to exceed $45,000,000 to hire, equip and train not less than 350 agents and necessary support personnel to expand DEA investigations and operations against drug trafficking organizations in rural areas;

(B) not to exceed $25,000,000 to expand DEA State and Local Task Forces, including payment of state and local overtime, equipment and personnel costs; and

(C) not to exceed $5,000,000 to hire, equip and train not less than 50 special agents and necessary support personnel to investigate violations of the Controlled Substances Act relating to anabolic steroids.

(2) For the Federal Bureau of Investigation, $98,000,000, for the hiring of additional agents and support personnel to be dedicated to the investigation of drug trafficking organizations;

(3) For the Immigration and Naturalization Service, $45,000,000, to be further allocated as follows:

(A) $25,000,000 to hire, train and equip no fewer than 500 full-time equivalent Border Patrol officer positions;

(B) $20,000,000, to hire, train and equip no fewer than 400 full-time equivalent INS criminal investigators dedicated to drug trafficking by illegal aliens and to deportations of criminal aliens.

(4) For the United States attorneys, $45,000,000 to hire and train not less than 350 additional prosecutors and support personnel dedicated to the prosecution of drug trafficking and related offenses;

(5) For the United States Marshals Service, $10,000,000;

(6) For the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms, $15,000,000 to hire, equip and train not less than 100 special agents and support personnel to investigate firearms violations committed by drug trafficking organizations, particularly violent gangs;

(7) For the United States courts, $20,000,000 for additional magistrates, probation officers, other personnel and equipment to address the case-load generated by the additional investigative and prosecutorial resources provided in this title; and

(8) For Federal defender services, $12,000,000 for the defense of persons prosecuted for drug trafficking and related crimes.

SEC. 1303. AUTHORIZATION OF FUNDS FOR CONSTRUCTION OF A UNITED STATES ATTORNEYS' OFFICE IN PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA.

There is hereby authorized to be appropriated $35,000,000 to remain available until expended, to plan, acquire a site, design, construct, buildout, equip, and prepare for use an office building to house the United States Attorneys Office in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, notwithstanding any other provision of law: Provided, That the site is at or in close physical proximity to the site selected for the construction of the Philadelphia Metropolitan Detention Center: Provided further, That the site selected for the Philadelphia United States Attorneys Office shall be approved by the Attorney General and notification submitted to the Congress as required by law.

TITLE XIV—PRISONS

Subtitle A—Federal Prisons

SEC. 1401. PRISONER'S PLACE OF IMPRISONMENT.

Paragraph (b) of section 3621 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after subsection (5) the following: "However, the bureau may not consider the social or economic status of the prisoner in designating the place of the prisoner's imprisonment.".

SEC. 1402. PRISON IMPACT ASSESSMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 303 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§4047. Prison impact assessments

"(a) Any submission of legislation by the Judicial or Executive branch which could increase or decrease the number of persons incarcerated or in Federal penal institutions shall be accompanied by a prison impact statement, as defined in subsection (b) of this section.

"(b) The Attorney General shall, in consultation with the Sentencing Commission and the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, prepare and furnish prison impact assessments under subsection (c) of this section, and in response to requests from Congress for information relating to a pending measure or matter that might affect the number of defendants processed through the Federal criminal justice system. A prison impact assessment on pending legislation must be supplied within 7 days of any request. A prison impact assessment shall include—

"(1) projections of the impact on prison, probation, and post prison supervision populations;

"(2) an estimate of the fiscal impact of such population changes on Federal expenditures, including those for construction and operation of correctional facilities for the current fiscal year and 5 succeeding fiscal years;

"(3) an analysis of any other significant factor affecting the cost of the measure and its impact on the operations of components of the criminal justice system; and

"(4) a statement of the methodologies and assumptions utilized in preparing the assessment.

"(c) The Attorney General shall prepare and transmit to the Congress, by March 1 of each year, a prison impact assessment reflecting the cumulative effect of all relevant changes in the law taking effect during the preceding calendar year.".

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 303 is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"4047. Prison impact assessments.".

SEC. 1403. FEDERAL PRISONER DRUG TESTING.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This title may be cited as the "Federal Prisoner Drug Testing Act of 1991".

(b) DRUG TESTING PROGRAM.—(1) Chapter 229 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§3608. Drug testing of Federal offenders on post-conviction release

"The Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, in consultation with the Attorney General and the Secretary of Health and Human Services, shall establish a program of drug testing of Federal offenders on post-conviction release. The program shall include such standards and guidelines as the Director may determine necessary to ensure the reliability and accuracy of the drug testing programs. In each judicial district the chief probation officer shall arrange for the drug testing of defendants on post-conviction release pursuant to a conviction for a felony or other offense described in section 3563(a)(4) of this title.".

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 229 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"3608. Drug testing of Federal offenders on post-conviction release.".

(c) CONDITIONS OF PROBATION.—Section 3563(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2) by striking "and" after the semicolon;

(2) in paragraph (3) by striking the period and inserting "; and";

(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4) for a felony, a misdemeanor, or an infraction, that the defendant refrain from any unlawful use of a controlled substance and submit to one drug test within 15 days of release on probation and at least 2 periodic drug tests thereafter (as determined by the court) for use of a controlled substance, but the condition stated in this paragraph may be ameliorated or suspended by the court for any individual defendant if the defendant's presentence report or other reliable sentencing information indicates a low risk of future substance abuse by the defendant."; and

(4) by adding at the end the following: "The results of a drug test administered in accordance with paragraph (4) shall be subject to confirmation only if the results are positive, the defendant is subject to possible imprisonment for such failure, and either the defendant denies the accuracy of such test or there is some other reason to question the results of the test. A defendant who tests positive may be detained pending verification of a positive drug test result. A drug test confirmation shall be a urine drug test confirmed using gas chromatography/mass spectrometry techniques or such test as the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts after consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services may determine to be of equivalent accuracy. The court shall consider the availability of appropriate substance abuse treatment programs when considering any action against a defendant who fails a drug test administered in accordance with paragraph (4).".

(d) CONDITIONS ON SUPERVISED RELEASE.—Section 3583(d) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the first sentence the following: "The court shall also order, as an explicit condition of supervised release, that the defendant refrain from any unlawful use of a controlled substance and submit to a drug test within 15 days of release on supervised release and at least 2 periodic drug tests thereafter (as determined by the court) for use of a controlled substance. The condition stated in the preceding sentence may be ameliorated or suspended by the court as provided in section 3563(a)(4). The results of a drug test administered in accordance with the preceding subsection shall be subject to confirmation only if the results are positive, the defendant is subject to possible imprisonment for such failure, and either the defendant denies the accuracy of such test or there is some other reason to question the results of the test. A drug test confirmation shall be a urine drug test confirmed using gas chromatography/mass spectrometry techniques or such test as the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts after consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services may determine to be of equivalent accuracy. The court shall consider the availability of appropriate substance abuse treatment programs when considering any action against a defendant who fails a drug test.".

(e) CONDITIONS OF PAROLE.—Section 4209(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the first sentence the following: "In every case, the Commission shall also impose as a condition of parole that the parolee pass a drug test prior to release and refrain from any unlawful use of a controlled substance and submit to at least 2 periodic drug tests (as determined by the Commission) for use of a controlled substance. The condition stated in the preceding sentence may be ameliorated or suspended by the Commission for any individual parolee if it determines that there is good cause for doing so. The results of a drug test administered in accordance with the provisions of the preceding sentence shall be subject to confirmation only if the results are positive, the defendant is subject to possible imprisonment for such failure, and either the defendant denies the accuracy of such test or there is some other reason to question the results of the test. A drug test confirmation shall be a urine drug test confirmed using gas chromatography/mass spectrometry techniques or such test as the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts after consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services may determine to be of equivalent accuracy. The Commission shall consider the availability of appropriate substance abuse treatment programs when considering any action against a defendant who fails a drug test.".

SEC. 1404. DRUG TREATMENT IN FEDERAL PRISONS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This section may be cited as the "Drug Treatment in Federal Prisons Act of 1991".

(b) DEFINITIONS.—

As used in this section—

(1) the term "residential substance abuse treatment" means a course of individual and group activities, lasting between 9 and 12 months, in residential treatment facilities set apart from the general prison population—

(A) directed at the substance abuse problems of the prisoner; and

(B) intended to develop the prisoner's cognitive, behavioral, social, vocational, and other skills so as to solve the prisoner's substance abuse and related problems; and

(2) the term "eligible prisoner" means a prisoner who is—

(A) determined by the Bureau of Prisons to have a substance abuse problem; and

(B) willing to participate in a residential substance abuse treatment program.

(c) IMPLEMENTATION OF SUBSTANCE ABUSE TREATMENT REQUIREMENT.—

(1) In order to carry out the requirement of the last sentence of section 3621(b) of title 18, United States Code, that every prisoner with a substance abuse problem have the opportunity to participate in appropriate substance abuse treatment, the Bureau of Prisons shall provide residential substance abuse treatment—

(A) for not less than 50 percent of eligible prisoners by the end of fiscal year 1993;

(B) for not less than 75 percent of eligible prisoners by the end of fiscal year 1994; and

(C) for all eligible prisoners by the end of fiscal year 1995 and thereafter.

(2) Section 3621 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(d) INCENTIVE FOR PRISONERS' SUCCESSFUL COMPLETION OF TREATMENT PROGRAM.—

"(1) GENERALLY.—Any prisoner who, in the judgment of the Director of the Bureau of Prisons, has successfully completed a program of residential substance abuse treatment provided under subsection (b) of this section, shall remain in the custody of the Bureau for such time (as limited by paragraph (2) of this subsection) and under such conditions, as the Bureau deems appropriate. If the conditions of confinement are different from those the prisoner would have experienced absent the successful completion of the treatment, the Bureau shall periodically test the prisoner for drug abuse and discontinue such conditions on determining that drug abuse has recurred.

"(2) PERIOD OF CUSTODY.—The period the prisoner remains in custody after successfully completing a treatment program shall not exceed the prison term the law would otherwise require such prisoner to serve, but may not be less than such term minus one year.".

(d) REPORT.—The Bureau of Prisons shall transmit to the Congress on January 1, 1993, and on January 1 of each year thereafter, a report. Such report shall contain—

(1) a detailed quantitative and qualitative description of each substance abuse treatment program, residential or not, operated by the Bureau;

(2) a full explanation of how eligibility for such programs is determined, with complete information on what proportion of prisoners with substance abuse problems are eligible; and

(3) a complete statement of to what extent the Bureau has achieved compliance with the requirements of this title.

(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1991 and each fiscal year thereafter such sums as may be necessary to carry out this title.

SEC. 1405. PRISON FOR VIOLENT DRUG OFFENDERS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The total population of Federal, State, and local prisons and jails increased by 84 percent between 1980 and 1988 and currently numbers more than 900,000 people.

(2) More than 60 percent of all prisoners have a history of drug abuse or are regularly using drugs while in prison, but only 11 percent of State prison inmates and 7 percent of Federal prisoners are enrolled in drug treatment programs. Hundreds of thousands of prisoners are not receiving needed drug treatment while incarcerated, and the number of such persons is increasing rapidly.

(3) Drug-abusing prisoners are highly likely to return to crime upon release, but the recidivism rate is much lower for those who successfully complete treatment programs. Providing drug treatment to prisoners during incarceration therefore provides an opportunity to break the cycle of recidivism, reducing the crime rate and future prison overcrowding.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1992, the following amounts:

(1) $600,000,000 for the construction of 10 regional prisons; and

(2) $100,000,000 for the operation of such regional prisons for one year.

Such amounts shall be in addition to any other amounts authorized to be appropriated to the Bureau of Prisons.

(c) LOCATION AND POPULATION.—The regional prisons authorized by this section shall be located in places chosen by the Director of the Bureau of Prisons, after consulting with the Director of National Drug Control Policy, not less than 6 months after the effective date of this section. Each such facility shall be used to accommodate a population consisting of State and Federal prisoners in proportions of 20 percent Federal and 80 percent State.

(d) ELIGIBILITY OF PRISONERS.—The regional prisons authorized by this section shall be used to incarcerate State and Federal prisoners who have release dates of not more than 2 years from the date of assignment to the prison and who have been found to have substance abuse problems requiring long-term treatment.

(e) STATE RESPONSIBILITIES.—(1) The States shall select prisoners for assignment to the regional prisons who, in addition to satisfying eligibility criteria otherwise specified in this section, have long-term drug abuse problems and serious criminal histories. Selection of such persons is necessary for the regional prison program to have the maximum impact on the crime rate and future prison overcrowding, since such persons are the ones most likely to commit new crimes following release. Prisoners selected for assignment to a regional prison must agree to the assignment.

(2) Any State seeking to refer a State prisoner to a regional prison shall submit to the Director of the Bureau of Prisons (referred to as the "Director") an aftercare plan setting forth the provisions that the State will make for the continued treatment of the prisoner in a therapeutic community following release. The aftercare plan shall also contain provisions for vocational job training where appropriate.

(3) The State referring the prisoner to the regional prison (referred to as the "sending State") shall reimburse the Bureau of Prisons for the full cost of the incarceration and treatment of the prisoner, except that if the prisoner successfully completes the treatment program, the Director shall return to the sending State 25 percent of the amount paid for that prisoner. The total amount returned to each State under this paragraph in each fiscal year shall be used by that State to provide the aftercare treatment required by paragraph (2).

(f) POWERS OF THE DIRECTOR.—(1) The Director shall have the exclusive right to determine whether or not a State or Federal prisoner satisfies the eligibility requirements of this section, and whether the prisoner is to be accepted into the regional prison program. The Director shall have the right to make this determination after the staff of the regional prison has had an opportunity to interview the prisoner in person.

(2) The Director shall have the exclusive right to determine if a prisoner in the regional treatment program is complying with all of the conditions and requirements of the program. The Director shall have the authority to return any prisoner not complying with the conditions and requirements of the program to the sending State at any time. The Director shall notify the sending State whenever such prisoner is returned that the prisoner has not successfully completed the treatment program.

SEC. 1406. BOOT CAMPS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall establish within the Bureau of Prisons 10 military-style boot camp prisons (referred to in this section as "boot camps"). The boot camps will be located on closed military installations on sites to be chosen by the Director of the Bureau of Prisons, after consultation with the Director of National Drug Control Policy, and will provide a highly regimented schedule of strict discipline, physical training, work, drill, and ceremony characteristic of military basic training as well as remedial education and treatment for substance abuse.

(b) CAPACITY.—Each boot camp shall be designed to accommodate between 200 and 300 inmates for periods of not less than 90 days and not greater than 120 days. Not more than 20 percent of the inmates shall be Federal prisoners. The remaining inmates shall be State prisoners who are accepted for participation in the boot camp program pursuant to subsection (d).

(c) FEDERAL PRISONERS.—Section 3582 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(e) BOOT CAMP PRISON AS A SENTENCING ALTERNATIVE.—(1) The court, in imposing sentence in the circumstances described in paragraph (2), may designate the defendant as eligible for placement in a boot camp prison. The Bureau of Prisons shall determine whether a defendant so designated will be assigned to a boot camp prison.

"(2) A defendant may be designated as eligible for placement in boot camp prison if—

"(A) the defendant—

"(i) is under 25 years of age;

"(ii) has no prior conviction for which he or she has served more than 10 days incarceration; and

"(iii) has been convicted of an offense involving a controlled substance punishable under the Controlled Substances Act or the Controlled Substances Export and Import Act, or any other offense if the defendant, at the time of arrest or at any time thereafter, tested positive for the presence of a controlled substance in his or her blood or urine; and

"(B) the sentencing court finds that the defendant's total offense level under the Federal sentencing guidelines is level 15 or less.

"(3) If the Director of the Bureau of Prisons finds that an inmate placed in a boot camp prison pursuant to this subsection has willfully refused to comply with the conditions of confinement in the boot camp, the Director may transfer the inmate to any other correctional facility in the Federal prison system.

"(4) Successful completion of assignment to a boot camp shall constitute satisfaction of any period of active incarceration, but shall not affect any aspect of a sentence relating to a fine, restitution, or supervised release.".

(d) STATE PRISONERS.—(1) The head of a State corrections department or the head's designee may apply for boot camp placement for any person who has been convicted of a criminal offense in that State, or who anticipates entering a plea of guilty of such offense, but who has not yet been sentenced. Such application shall be made to the Bureau of Prisons and shall be in the form designated by the Director of the Bureau of Prisons and shall contain a statement certified by the head of the State corrections department or the head's designee that at the time of sentencing the applicant is likely to be eligible for assignment to a boot camp pursuant to paragraph (2). The Bureau of Prisons shall respond to such applications within 30 days so that the sentencing court is aware of the result of the application at the time of sentencing. In responding to such applications, the Bureau of Prisons shall determine, on the basis of the availability of space, whether a defendant who becomes eligible for assignment to a boot camp prison at the time of sentencing will be so assigned.

(2) A person convicted of a State criminal offense shall be eligible for assignment to a boot camp if he or she—

(A) is under 25 years of age;

(B) has no prior conviction for which he or she has served more than 10 days incarceration;

(C) has been sentenced to a term of imprisonment that will be satisfied under the law of the sentencing State if the defendant successfully completes a term of not less than 90 days nor more than 120 days in a boot camp;

(D) has been designated by the sentencing court as eligible for assignment to a boot camp; and

(E) has been convicted of an offense involving a controlled substance (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802)), or any other offense if the defendant is eligible for assignment to a boot camp under State law.

(3) If the Director of the Bureau of Prisons finds that an inmate placed in a boot camp prison pursuant to this subsection has willfully refused to comply with the conditions of confinement in the boot camp, the Director may transfer the inmate back to the jurisdiction of the State sentencing court.

(4) Any State referring a prisoner to a boot camp shall reimburse the Bureau of Prisons for the full cost of the incarceration of the prisoner, except that if the prisoner successfully completes the boot camp program, the Bureau of Prisons shall return to the State 20 percent of the amount paid for that prisoner. The total amount returned to each State under this paragraph in each fiscal year shall be used by that State to provide the aftercare supervision and services required by paragraph (e).

(e) POST-RELEASE SUPERVISION.—(1) Any State seeking to refer a State prisoner to a boot camp prison shall submit to the Director of the Bureau of Prisons an aftercare plan setting forth the provisions that the State will make for the continued supervision of the prisoner following release. The aftercare plan shall also contain provisions for educational and vocational training and drug or other counseling and treatment where appropriate.

(2) The Bureau of Prisons shall develop an aftercare plan setting forth the privisions that will be made for the continued supervision of Federal prisoners following release. The aftercare plan shall also contain provisions for educational and vocational training and drug or other counseling and treatment where appropriate.

(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated $150,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, available until expended, of which not more than $12,500,000 shall be used to convert each closed military base to a boot camp prison and not more than $2,500,000 shall be used to operate each boot camp for one fiscal year. Such amounts shall be in addition to any other amounts authorized to be appropriated to the Bureau of Prisons.

Subtitle B—State Prisons

SEC. 1421. RESIDENTIAL SUBSTANCE ABUSE TREATMENT FOR PRISONERS.

This section may be cited as the "Substance Abuse Treatment in State Prisons Act of 1991".

(a) RESIDENTIAL SUBSTANCE ABUSE TREATMENT FOR PRISONERS.—Title 1 of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.), as amended by section 1201 of this Act, is amended—

(1) by redesignating part T as part U;

(2) by redesignating section 2001 as section 2101; and

(3) by inserting after part S the following:

"PART U—RESIDENTIAL SUBSTANCE ABUSE TREATMENT FOR PRISONERS

"SEC. 2001. GRANT AUTHORIZATION.

"The Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance (referred to in this part as the 'Director') may make grants under this part to States, for the use by States for the purpose of developing and implementing residential substance abuse treatment programs within State correctional facilities.

"SEC. 2002. STATE APPLICATIONS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) To request a grant under this part the chief executive of a State

VOL 137
PT 24
1991
1992

shall submit an application to the Director in such form and containing such information as the Director may reasonably require.

"(2) Such application shall include assurances that Federal funds received under this part shall be used to supplement, not supplant, non-Federal funds that would otherwise be available for activities funded under this part.

"(3) Such application shall coordinate the design and implementation of treatment programs between State correctional representatives and the State Alcohol and Drug Abuse agency.

"(b) DRUG TESTING REQUIREMENT.—To be eligible to receive funds under this part, a State must agree to implement or continue to require urinalysis or similar testing of individuals in correctional residential substance abuse treatment programs. Such testing shall include individuals released from residential substance abuse treatment programs who remain in the custody of the State.

"(c) ELIGIBILITY FOR PREFERENCE WITH AFTER CARE COMPONENT.—

"(1) To be eligible for a preference under this part, a State must ensure that individuals who participate in the drug treatment program established or implemented with assistance provided under this part will be provided with aftercare services.

"(2) State aftercare services must involve the coordination of the prison treatment program with other human service and rehabilitation programs, such as educational and job training programs, parole supervision programs, halfway house programs, and participation in self-help and peer group programs, that may aid in the rehabilitation of individuals in the drug treatment program.

"(3) To qualify as an aftercare program, the head of the drug treatment program, in conjunction with State and local authorities and organizations involved in drug treatment, shall assist in placement of drug treatment program participants with appropriate community drug treatment facilities when such individuals leave prison at the end of a sentence or on parole.

"(d) STATE OFFICE.—The office designated under section 507 of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3757)—

"(1) shall prepare the application as required under section 1902; and

"(2) shall administer grant funds received under this part, including, review of spending, processing, progress, financial reporting, technical assistance, grant adjustments, accounting, auditing, and fund disbursement.

"SEC. 2003. REVIEW OF STATE APPLICATIONS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Bureau shall make a grant under section 1901 to carry out the projects described in the application submitted under section 1902 upon determining that—

"(1) the application is consistent with the requirements of this part; and

"(2) before the approval of the application the Bureau has made an affirmative finding in writing that the proposed project has been reviewed in accordance with this part.

"(b) APPROVAL.—Each application submitted under section 1902 shall be considered approved, in whole or in part, by the Bureau not later than 45 days after first received unless the Bureau informs the applicant of specific reasons for disapproval.

"(c) RESTRICTION.—Grant funds received under this part shall not be used for land acquisition or construction projects.

"(d) DISAPPROVAL NOTICE AND RECONSIDERATION.—The Bureau shall not disapprove any application without first affording the applicant reasonable notice and an opportunity for reconsideration.

"SEC. 2004. ALLOCATION AND DISTRIBUTION OF FUNDS.

"(a) ALLOCATION.—Of the total amount appropriated under this part in any fiscal year—

"(1) 0.4 percent shall be allocated to each of the participating States; and

"(2) of the total funds remaining after the allocation under paragraph (1), there shall be allocated to each of the participating States an amount which bears the same ratio to the amount of remaining funds described in this paragraph as the State prison population of such State bears to the total prison population of all the participating States.

"(b) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of a grant made under this part may not exceed 75 percent of the total costs of the projects described in the application submitted under section 1902 for the fiscal year for which the projects receive assistance under this part.

"SEC. 2005. EVALUATION.

"Each State that receives a grant under this part shall submit to the Director an evaluation not later than March 1 of each year in such form and containing such information as the Director may reasonably require.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of contents of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.), as amended by section 1201 of this Act, is amended by striking the matter relating to part T and inserting the following:

"PART T—RESIDENTIAL SUBSTANCE ABUSE TREATMENT FOR PRISONERS

"Sec. 2001. Grant authorization.
"Sec. 2002. State applications.
"Sec. 2003. Review of State applications.
"Sec. 2004. Allocation and distribution of funds.
"Sec. 2005. Evaluation.

"PART U—TRANSITION; EFFECTIVE DATE; REPEALER

"Sec. 2101. Continuation of rules, authorities, and proceedings.".

(c) DEFINITIONS.—Section 901(a) of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3791(a)) is amended by adding after paragraph (25) the following:

"(26) The term 'residential substance abuse treatment program' means a course of individual and group activities, lasting between 9 and 12 months, in residential treatment facilities set apart from the general prison population—

"(A) directed at the substance abuse problems of the prisoner; and

"(B) intended to develop the prisoner's cognitive, behavioral, social, vocational, and other skills so as to solve the prisoner's substance abuse and related problems.".

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 1001(a) of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3793), as amended by section 1202 of this Act, is amended by adding after paragraph (10) the following:

"(14) There are authorized to be appropriated $100,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1992, 1993, and 1994 to carry out the projects under part T.".

SEC. 1422. MANDATORY LITERACY PROGRAM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The chief correctional officer of each State correctional system may establish a demonstration, or statewide functional literacy program.

(b) PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS.—(1) To qualify for funding under subsection (d), each functional literacy program shall—

(A) to the extent possible, make use of advanced technologies; and

(B) include—

(i) a requirement that each person incarcerated in the system, jail, or detention center who is not functionally literate, except a person described in paragraph (2), shall participate in the program until the person—

(I) achieves functional literacy or in the case of an individual with a disability, achieves functional literacy commensurate with his or her ability;

(II) is granted parole;

(III) completes his or her sentence; or

(IV) is released pursuant to court order;

(ii) a prohibition on granting parole to any person described in clause (i) who refuses to participate in the program, unless the State parole board determines that the prohibition should be waived in a particular case; and

(iii) adequate opportunities for appropriate education services and the screening and testing of all inmates for functional literacy and disabilities affecting functional literacy, including learning disabilities, upon arrival in the system or at the jail or detention center.

(2) The requirement of paragraph (1)(B) shall not apply to a person who—

(A) is serving a life sentence without possibility of parole;

(B) is terminally ill; or

(C) is under a sentence of death.

(c) ANNUAL REPORT.—(1) Within 90 days after the close of the first calendar year in which a literacy program authorized by subsection (a) is placed in operation, and annually for each of the 4 years thereafter, the chief correction officer of each State correctional system shall submit a report to the Attorney General with respect to its literacy program.

(2) A report under paragraph (1) shall disclose—

(A) the number of persons who were tested for eligibility during the preceding year;

(B) the number of persons who were eligible for the literacy program during the preceding year;

(C) the number of persons who participated in the literacy program during the preceding year;

(D) the names and types of tests that were used to determine functional literacy and the names and types of tests that were used to determine disabilities affecting functional literacy;

(E) the average number of hours of instruction that were provided per week and the average number per student during the preceding year;

(F) sample data on achievement of participants in the program, including the number of participants who achieved functional literacy;

(G) data on all direct and indirect costs of the program; and

(H) a plan for implementing a systemwide mandatory functional literacy program, as required by subsection (b), and if appropriate, information on progress toward such a program.

(d) COMPLIANCE GRANTS.—(1) The Attorney General shall make grants to State correctional agencies who elect to establish a program described in subsection (a) for the purpose of assisting in carrying out the programs, developing the plans, and submitting the reports required by this section.

(2) A State corrections agency is eligible to receive a grant under this subsection if the agency agrees to provide to the Attorney General—

(A) such data as the Attorney General may request concerning the cost and feasibility of operating the mandatory functional literacy programs required by subsections (a) and (b); and

(B) a detailed plan outlining the methods by which the requirements of subsections (a) and (b) will be met, including specific goals and timetables.

(3) There are authorized to be appropriated for purposes of carrying out this section $10,000,000 for fiscal year 1992, $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1993, $20,000,000 for fiscal year 1994, and $25,000,000 for fiscal year 1995.

(e) DEFINITION.—For the purposes of this section, the term "functional literacy" means at least an eighth grade equivalence in reading on a nationally recognized standardized test.

(f) LIFE SKILLS TRAINING GRANTS.—(1) The Attorney General is authorized to make grants to State and local correctional agencies to assist them in establishing and operating programs designed to reduce recidivism through the development and improvement of life skills necessary for reintegration into society.

(2) To be eligible to receive a grant under this subsection, a State or local correctional agency shall—

(A) submit an application to the Attorney General or his designee at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Attorney General shall require; and

(B) agree to report annually to the Attorney General on the participation rate, cost, and effectiveness of the program and any other aspect of the program upon which the Attorney General may request information.

(3) In awarding grants under this section, the Attorney General shall give priority to programs that have the greatest potential for innovation, effectiveness, and replication in other systems, jails, and detention centers.

Subtitle C—Drug Free Truck Stops and Safety Rest Areas

SEC. 1521. DRUG FREE TRUCK STOPS AND SAFETY REST AREAS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This section may be cited as the "Drug Free Truck Stop Act".

(b) AMENDMENT TO CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES ACT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Part D of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 801 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 408 the following new section:

"TRANSPORTATION SAFETY OFFENSES

"SEC. 409. (a) Any person who violates section 401(a)(1) or section 416 by distributing or possessing with intent to distribute a controlled substance in or on, or within 1,000 feet of, a truck stop or safety rest area is (except as provided in subsection (b)) subject to—

"(1) twice the maximum punishment authorized by section 401(b); and

"(2) at least twice any term of supervised release authorized by section 401(b) for a first offense.

Except to the extent a greater minimum sentence is otherwise provided by section 401(b), a term of imprisonment under this subsection shall be not less than one year. The mandatory minimum sentencing provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to offenses involving 5 grams or less of marihuana.

"(b) Any person who violates section 401(a)(1) or section 416 by distributing or possessing with intent to distribute a controlled substance in or on, or within 1,000 feet of, a truck stop or a safety rest area after a prior conviction or convictions under subsection (a) have become final is punishable—

"(1) by the greater of (A) a term of imprisonment of not less than 3 years and not more than life imprisonment or (B) 3 times the maximum punishment authorized by section 401(b); and

"(2) by at least 3 times any term of supervised release authorized by section 401(b) for a first offense.

"(c) In the case of any sentence imposed under subsection (b), imposition or execution of such sentence shall not be suspended and probation shall not be granted. An individual convicted under subsection (b) shall not be eligible for parole under chapter 311 of title 18 of the United States Code until the individual has served the minimum sentence required by such subsection.

"(d) For purposes of this section—

"(1) the term 'safety rest area' means a roadside facility with parking facilities for the rest or other needs of motorists; and

"(2) the term 'truck stop' means any facility (including any parking lot appurtenant thereto) that has the capacity to provide fuel or service, or both, to any commercial motor vehicle as defined under section 12019(6) of the Commercial Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1986, operating in commerce as defined in section 12019(3) of such Act and that is located within 2,500 feet of the National System of Interstate and Defense Highways or the Federal-Aid Primary System.".

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(A) CROSS REFERENCE.—Section 401(b) of such Act (21 U.S.C. 841(b)) is amended by inserting "409," immediately before "418," each place it appears.

(B) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents of the Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act of 1970 is amended by striking the item relating to section 409, the following new item:

"Sec. 409. Transportation safety offenses.".

(c) SENTENCING GUIDELINES.—

(1) PROMULGATION OF GUIDELINES.—Pursuant to its authority under section 994 of title 28, United States Code, and section 21 of the Sentencing Act of 1987 (28 U.S.C. 994 note), the United States Sentencing Commission shall promulgate guidelines, or shall amend existing guidelines, to provide that a defendant convicted of violating section 409 of the Controlled Substances Act, as added by subsection (c), shall be assigned an offense level under chapter 2 of the sentencing guidelines that is—

(A) two levels greater than the level that would have been assigned for the underlying controlled substance offense; and

(B) in no event less than level 26.

(2) IMPLEMENTATION BY SENTENCING COMMISSION.—If the sentencing guidelines are amended after the date of enactment of this Act, the Sentencing Commission shall implement the instruction set forth in paragraph (1) so as to achieve a comparable result.

(3) LIMITATION.—The guidelines described in paragraph (1), as promulgated or amended under this subsection, shall provide that an offense that could be subject to multiple enhancements pursuant to this subsection is subject to not more than one such enhancement.

TITLE XVI—DRUG CONTROL

Subtitle A—Drug Emergency Areas

SEC. 1601. DRUG EMERGENCY AREAS.

Section 1005 of the National Narcotics Leadership Act of 1988 (21 U.S.C. 1504) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(e) DECLARATION OF DRUG EMERGENCY AREAS.—

"(1) PRESIDENTIAL DECLARATION.—(A) In the event that a major drug-related emergency exists throughout a State or a part of a State or where the threat of a drug-related emergency exists to part of a State bordering part of a foreign country where a drug-related emergency is known to exist, the President may, in consultation with the Director and other appropriate officials, declare such State or part of a State to be a drug emergency area and may take any and all necessary actions authorized by this subsection or otherwise authorized by law.

"(B) For the purposes of this subsection, the term 'major drug-related emergency' means any occasion or instance in which drug smuggling, drug trafficking, drug abuse, or drug-related violence reaches such levels, as determined by the President, that Federal assistance is needed to supplement State and local efforts and capabilities to save lives, and to protect property and public health and safety.

"(2) PROCEDURE FOR DECLARATION.—(A) All requests for a declaration by the President designating an area to be a drug emergency area shall be made, in writing, by the Governor or chief executive officer of any affected State or local government, respectively, and shall be forwarded to the President through the Director in such form as the Director may by regulation require. One or more cities, counties, or States may submit a joint request for designation as a drug emergency area under this subsection.

"(B) Any request made under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph shall be based on a written finding that the major drug-related emergency is of such severity and magnitude, that Federal assistance is necessary to assure an effective response to save lives, and to protect property and public health and safety.

"(C) The President shall not limit declarations made under this subsection to highly-populated centers of drug trafficking, drug smuggling, drug use or drug-related violence, but shall also consider applications from governments of less populated areas where the magnitude and severity of such activities is beyond the capability of the State or local government to respond.

"(D) As part of a request for a declaration by the President under this subsection, and as a prerequisite to Federal drug emergency assistance under this subsection, the Governor(s) or chief executive officer(s) shall—

"(i) take appropriate action under State or local law and furnish such information on the nature and amount of State and local resources which have been or will be committed to alleviating the major drug-related emergency;

"(ii) certify that State and local government obligations and expenditures will comply with all applicable cost-sharing requirements of this subsection; and

"(iii) submit a detailed plan outlining that government's short- and long-term plans to respond to the major drug-related emergency, specifying the types and levels of Federal assistance requested, and including explicit goals (where possible quantitative goals) and timetables and shall specify how Federal assistance provided under this subsection is intended to achieve such goals.

"(E) The Director shall review any request submitted pursuant to this subsection and forward the application, along with a recommendation to the President on whether to approve or disapprove the application, within 30 days after receiving such application. Based on the application and the recommendation of the Director, the President may declare an area to be a drug emergency area under this subsection.

"(3) FEDERAL MONETARY ASSISTANCE.—(A) The President is authorized to make grants to State or local governments of up to, in the aggregate for any single major drug-related emergency, $50,000,000.

"(B) The Federal share of assistance under this section shall not be greater than 75 percent of the costs necessary to implement the short- and long-term plan outlined in paragraph (2)(D)(iii).

"(C) Federal assistance under this subsection shall not be provided to a drug disaster area for more than 1 year. In any case where Federal assistance is provided under this Act, the Governor(s) or chief executive officer(s) may apply to the President, through the Director, for an extension of assistance beyond 1 year. The President, based on the recommendation of the Director, may extend the provision of Federal assistance for not more than an additional 180 days.

"(D) Any State or local government receiving Federal assistance under this subsection shall balance the allocation of such assistance evenly between drug supply reduction and drug demand reduction efforts, unless State or local conditions dictate otherwise.

"(4) NONMONETARY ASSISTANCE.—In addition to the assistance provided under paragraph (3), the President may—

"(A) direct any Federal agency, with or without reimbursement, to utilize its authorities and the resources granted to it under Federal law (including personnel, equipment, supplies, facilities, and managerial, technical, and advisory services) in support of State and local assistance efforts; and

"(B) provide technical and advisory assistance, including communications support and law enforcement-related intelligence information.

"(5) ISSUANCE OF IMPLEMENTING REGULATIONS.—Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this subsection, the Director shall issue regulations to implement this subsection, including such regulations as may be necessary relating to applications for Federal assistance and the provision of Federal monetary and nonmonetary assistance.

"(6) AUDIT BY COMPTROLLER GENERAL.—Assistance under this subsection shall be subject to annual audit by the Comptroller General.

"(7) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for each of fiscal years 1992, 1993, and 1994, $300,000,000 to carry out this subsection.".

(3) in subsection (c)(1) by striking "regular supplier" and inserting in lieu thereof "regular importer".

SEC. 1619. ADMINISTRATIVE INSPECTIONS AND AUTHORITY.

Section 510(a)(2) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 880(a)(2)) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) places, including factories, warehouses, or other establishments, and conveyances, where persons registered under section 303 of this title (or exempt from such registration under section 302(d) of this title or by regulation of the Attorney General), or a regulated person may lawfully hold, manufacture, distribute, dispense, administer, or otherwise dispose of controlled substances or listed chemicals or where records relating to such activity are maintained.".

SEC. 1620. THRESHOLD AMOUNTS.

Section 102(39)(A) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802(39)(A)) is amended by inserting "a listed chemical, or if the Attorney General establishes a threshold amount for a specific listed chemical," before "a threshold amount, including a cumulative threshold amount of multiple transactions".

SEC. 1621. MANAGEMENT OF LISTED CHEMICALS.

(a) Part C of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 801 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 310 the following new section:

"MANAGEMENT OF LISTED CHEMICALS

"SEC. 311. (a) It is unlawful for a person who possesses a listed chemical with the intent that it be used in the illegal manufacture of a controlled substance to manage the listed chemical or waste from the manufacture of a controlled substance otherwise than as required by regulations issued under sections 3001 through 3005 of the Solid Waste Disposal Act (42 U.S.C. 6921–6925).

"(b)(1) In addition to a penalty that may be imposed for the illegal manufacture, possession, or distribution of a listed chemical or toxic residue of a clandestine laboratory, a person who violates subsection (a) shall be assessed the costs described in paragraph (2) and shall be imprisoned as described in paragraph (3).

"(2) Pursuant to paragraph (1), a defendant shall be assessed the following costs to the United States, a State, or other authority or person that undertakes to correct the results of the improper management of a listed chemical:

"(A) The cost of initial cleanup and disposal of the listed chemical and contaminated property; and

"(B) The cost of restoring property that is damaged by exposure to a listed chemical for rehabilitation under Federal, State, and local standards.

"(3)(A) A violation of subsection (a) shall be punished as a Class D felony, or in the case of a willful violation, as a Class C felony.

"(B) It is the sense of the Congress that guidelines issued by the Sentencing Commission regarding sentencing under this paragraph should recommend that the term of imprisonment for the violation of subsection (a) should not be less than 5 years, nor less than 10 years in the case of a willful violation.

"(4) The Court may order that all or a portion of the earnings from work performed by a defendant in prison be withheld for payment of costs assessed under paragraph (2).

"(c) The Attorney General may direct that assets forfeited under section 511 in connection with a prosecution under this section be shared with State agencies that participated in the seizure or cleaning up of a contaminated site.".

(b) Section 523(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking "or" at the end of paragraph (9);

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (10) and inserting "; or"; and

(3) by adding the following new paragraph at the end thereof:

"(11) for costs assessed under section 311(b) of the Controlled Substances Act.".

Subtitle C—General Provisions

SEC. 1631. CRIMINAL PENALTY FOR FAILURE TO OBEY ORDER TO LAND.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 109 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§2237. Order to land

"(a)(1) A pilot or operator of an aircraft that has crossed the border of the United States, or an aircraft subject to the jurisdiction of the United States operating outside the United States, who intentionally fails to obey an order to land issued by an authorized Federal law enforcement officer who has observed conduct or is otherwise in possession of information establishing reasonable suspicion that the aircraft is being used unlawfully in violation of the laws of the United States relating to controlled substances, as that term is defined in section 102(6) of the Controlled Substances Act, or section 1956 or 1957 of this title (relating to money laundering), shall be fined under this title, or imprisoned not more than two years, or both.

"(2) The Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Transportation, in consultation with the Attorney General, shall make rules governing the means by which a Federal law enforcement officer may communicate an order to land to a pilot or operator of an aircraft.

"(3) This section does not limit the authority of a customs officer under section 581 of the Tariff Act of 1930 or another law the Customs Service enforces or administers, or the authority of a Federal law enforcement officer under a law of the United States to order an aircraft to land.

"(b) A foreign nation may consent or waive objection to the United States enforcing the laws of the United States by radio, telephone, or similar oral or electronic means. Consent or waiver may be proven by certification of the Secretary of State or the Secretary's designee.

"(c) For purposes of this section—

"(1) the term 'aircraft subject to the jurisdiction of the United States' includes—

"(A) an aircraft located over the United States or the customs waters of the United States;

"(B) an aircraft located in the airspace of a foreign nation, when that nation consents to United States enforcement of United States law; and

"(C) over the high seas, an aircraft without nationality, an aircraft of the United States registry, or an aircraft registered in a foreign nation that has consented or waived objection to the United States enforcement of United States law; and

"(2) the term 'Federal law enforcement officer' has the same meaning that term has in section 115 of this title.

"(d) An aircraft that is used in violation of this section is liable in rem for a fine imposed under this section.

"(e) An aircraft that is used in violation of this section may be seized and forfeited. The laws relating to seizure and forfeiture for violation of the customs laws, including available defenses such as innocent owner provisions, apply to aircraft seized or forfeited under this section.".

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 109 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"2237. Order to land.".

(2) adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(2)(A) In addition to any term of imprisonment provided for operating a motor vehicle under the influence of a drug or alcohol imposed under the law of a State, territory, possession, or district, the punishment for such an offense under this section shall include an additional term of imprisonment of not more than 1 year, or if serious bodily injury of a minor is caused, 5 years, or if death of a minor is caused, 10 years, and an additional fine of not more than $1,000, or both, if—

"(i) a minor (other than the offender) was present in the motor vehicle when the offense was committed; and

"(ii) the law of the State, territory, possession, or district in which the offense occurred does not provide an additional term of imprisonment under the circumstances described in clause (i).

"(B) For the purposes of subparagraph (A), the term 'minor' means a person less than 18 years of age.".

SEC. 1703. SENSE OF CONGRESS CONCERNING CHILD CUSTODY AND VISITATION RIGHTS.

It is the sense of the Congress that in determining child custody and visitation rights, the courts should take into consideration the history of drunk driving that any person involved in the determination may have.

TITLE XVIII—COMMISSIONS

Subtitle A—Commission on Crime and Violence

SEC. 1801. ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMISSION ON CRIME AND VIOLENCE.

There is established a commission to be known as the "National Commission on Crime and Violence in America". The Commission shall be composed of 22 members, appointed as follows:

(1) 6 persons by the President;

(2) 8 persons by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, two of whom shall be appointed on the recommendation of the minority leader; and

(3) 8 persons by the President pro tempore of the Senate, six of whom shall be appointed on the recommendation of the majority leader of the Senate and two of whom shall be appointed on the recommendation of the minority leader of the Senate.

SEC. 1802. PURPOSE.

The purposes of the Commission are as follows:

(1) To develop a comprehensive and effective crime control plan which will serve as a "blueprint" for action in the 1990's. The report shall include an estimated cost for implementing any recommendations made by the Commission.

(2) To bring attention to successful models and programs in crime prevention and crime control.

(3) To reach out beyond the traditional criminal justice community for ideas when developing the comprehensive crime control plan.

(4) To recommend improvements in the coordination of local, State, Federal, and international border crime control efforts.

(5) To make a comprehensive study of the economic and social factors lending to or contributing to crime and specific proposals for legislative and administrative actions to reduce crime and the elements that contribute to it.

(6) To recommend means of targeting finite correctional facility space and resources to the most serious and violent offenders, with the goal of achieving the most cost-effective possible crime control and protection of the community and public safety, with particular emphasis on examining the issue of possible disproportionate incarceration rates among black males and any other minority group disproportionately represented in State and Federal correctional populations, and to consider increased use of alternatives to incarceration which offer a reasonable prospect of equal or better crime control at equal or less cost.

SEC. 1802. RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE COMMISSION.

The commission shall be responsible for the following:

(1) Reviewing the effectiveness of traditional criminal justice approaches in preventing and controlling crime and violence.

(2) Examining the impact that changes to state and Federal law have had in controlling crime and violence.

(3) Examining the impact of changes in Federal immigration laws and policies and increased development and growth along United States international borders on crime and violence in the United States, particularly among our Nation's youth.

(4) Examining the problem of youth gangs and provide recommendations as to how to reduce youth involvement in violent crime.

(5) Examining the extent to which assault weapons and high power firearms have contributed to violence and murder in America.

(6) Convening field hearings in various regions of the country to receive testimony from a cross section of criminal justice professionals, business leaders, elected officials, medical doctors, and other citizens that wish to participate.

(7) Review all segments of our criminal justice system, including the law enforcement, prosecution, defense, judicial, corrections components in developing the crime control plan.

Subtitle B—National Commission to Study the Causes of the Demand for Drugs in the United States

SEC. 1821. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "National Commission to Study the Causes of the Demand for Drugs in the United States".

SEC. 1822. ESTABLISHMENT.

There is established a National Commission to Study the Causes of the Demand for Drugs in the United States (hereinafter in this Act referred to as the "Commission").

SEC. 1823. DUTIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Commission shall—

(1) examine the root causes of illicit drug use and abuse in the United States, including by compiling existing research regarding those root causes;

(2) evaluate the efforts being made to prevent drug abuse;

(3) identify the existing gaps in drug abuse policy that result from the lack of attention to the root causes of drug abuse;

(4) assess the needs of Government at all levels for resources and policies for reducing the overall desire of individuals to experiment with and abuse illicit drugs; and

(5) make recommendations regarding necessary improvements in policies for reducing the use of illicit drugs in the United States.

(b) EXAMINATION.—Matters examined by the Commission under this section shall include the following:

(1) CHARACTERISTICS.—The characteristics of potential illicit drug users and abusers or drug traffickers, including age and social, economic, and educational backgrounds.

(2) ENVIRONMENT.—Environmental factors that contribute to illicit drug use and abuse, including the correlation between unemployment, poverty, and homelessness on drug experimentation and abuse.

(3) ASSOCIATIONS AND SOCIAL RELATIONSHIPS.—The effects of substance use and abuse by a relative or friend in contributing to the likelihood and desire of an individual to experiment with illicit drugs.

(4) CULTURE.—Aspects of, and changes in, philosophical or religious beliefs, cultural values, attitudes toward authority, status of basic social units (such as families), and traditions that contribute to illicit drug use and abuse.

(5) PHYSIOLOGICAL AND PSYCHOLOGICAL FACTORS.—The physiological and psychological factors that contribute to the desire for illicit drugs.

(6) EFFORTS OF GOVERNMENTS.—The current status of Federal, State, and local efforts regarding the causes of illicit drug use and abuse, including a review of drug strategies being promoted by Federal, State, and local authorities to address the causes of illicit drug use and abuse.

SEC. 1824. MEMBERSHIP.

(a) NUMBER AND APPOINTMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Commission shall consist of 13 members, as follows:

(A) PRESIDENT.—Three individuals appointed by the President.

(B) SENATE.—Five individuals appointed jointly by the majority and minority leaders of the Senate. Not more than 3 members appointed under this paragraph may be of the same political party. At least 1 member appointed under this paragraph shall be a recovering drug user.

(C) HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.—Five individuals appointed jointly by the Speaker, majority leader, and minority leader of the House of Representatives. Not more than 3 members appointed under this paragraph may be of the same political party. At least 1 member appointed under this paragraph shall be a recovering drug abuser.

(2) GOALS IN MAKING APPOINTMENTS.—In appointing individuals as members of the Commission, the President and the majority and minority leaders of the House of Representatives and the Senate shall seek to ensure that—

(A) the membership of the Commission reflects the racial, ethnic, and gender diversity of the United States; and

(B) members are specially qualified to serve on the Commission by reason of their education, training, expertise, or experience in—

(i) sociology,
(ii) psychology,
(iii) law,
(iv) bio-medicine,
(v) addiction, and
(vi) ethnography and urban poverty, including health care, housing, education, and employment.

(b) PROHIBITION AGAINST OFFICER OR EMPLOYEE.—Each individual appointed under subsection (a) shall not be an officer or employee of any government and shall be qualified to serve the Commission by virtue of education, training, or experience.

(c) DEADLINE FOR APPOINTMENT.—Members of the Commission shall be appointed within 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act for the life of the Commission.

(d) MEETINGS.—The Commission shall have its headquarters in the District of Columbia, and shall meet at least once each month for a business session that shall be conducted by the Chairperson.

(e) QUORUM.—Seven members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum, but a lesser number may hold hearings.

(f) CHAIRPERSON AND VICE CHAIRPERSON.—No later than 15 days after the members of the Commission are appointed, such members shall designate a Chairperson and Vice Chairperson of the Commission.

(g) CONTINUATION OF MEMBERSHIP.—If a member of the Commission later becomes an officer or employee of any government, the individual may continue as a member until a successor is appointed.

(h) VACANCIES.—A vacancy in the Commission shall be filled not later than 30 days after the Commission is informed of the vacancy in the manner in which the original appointment was made.

(i) COMPENSATION.—

(1) NO PAY, ALLOWANCE, OR BENEFIT.—Members of the Commission shall receive no additional pay, allowances, or benefits by reason of their service on the Commission.

(2) TRAVEL EXPENSES.—Each member of the Commission shall receive travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, in accordance with sections 5702 and 5703 of title 5, United States Code.

SEC. 1825. STAFF AND SUPPORT SERVICES.

(a) DIRECTOR.—The Chairperson shall appoint a director after consultation with the members of the Commission, who shall be paid the rate of basic pay for level V of the Executive Schedule.

(b) STAFF.—With the approval of the Commission, the director may appoint personnel as the director considers appropriate.

(c) APPLICABILITY OF CIVIL SERVICE LAWS.—The staff of the Commission shall be appointed without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, and shall be paid without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of that title relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates.

(d) EXPERTS AND CONSULTANTS.—With the approval of the Commission, the director may procure temporary and intermittent services under section 3109(b) of title 5, United States Code.

(e) STAFF OF FEDERAL AGENCIES.—Upon the request of the Commission, the head of any Federal agency may detail, on a reimbursable basis, any of the personnel of that agency to the Commission to assist in carrying out its duties under this Act.

(f) OTHER RESOURCES.—The Commission shall have reasonable access to materials, resources, statistical data, and other information from the Library of Congress, as well as agencies and elected representatives of the executive and legislative branches of government. The Chairperson of the Commission shall make requests in writing where necessary.

(g) PHYSICAL FACILITIES.—The General Services Administration shall find suitable office space for the operation of the Commission. The facilities shall serve as the headquarters of the Commission and shall include all necessary equipment and incidentals required for proper functioning.

SEC. 1826. POWERS OF COMMISSION.

(a) HEARINGS.—The Commission may conduct public hearings or forums at its discretion, at any time and place it is able to secure facilities and witnesses, for the purpose of carrying out its duties.

(b) DELEGATION OF AUTHORITY.—Any member or agent of the Commission may, if authorized by the Commission, take any action the Commission is authorized to take by this section.

(c) INFORMATION.—The Commission may secure directly from any Federal agency information necessary to enable it to carry out this Act. Upon request of the Chairperson or Vice Chairperson of the Commission, the head of a Federal agency shall furnish the information to the Commission to the extent permitted by law.

(d) GIFTS, BEQUESTS, AND DEVISES.—The Commission may accept, use, and dispose of gifts, bequests, or devices of services or property, both real and personal, for the purpose of aiding or facilitating the work of the Commission. Gifts, bequests, or devises of money and proceeds from sales of other property received as gifts, bequests, or devices shall be deposited in the Treasury and shall be available for disbursement upon order of the Commission.

(e) MAILS.—The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other Federal agencies.

SEC. 1827. REPORTS.

(a) MONTHLY REPORTS.—The Commission shall submit monthly activity reports to the President and the Congress.

(b) REPORTS.—

(1) INTERIM REPORT.—The Commission shall submit an interim report to the President and the Congress not later than 1 year before the termination of the Commission. The interim report shall contain a detailed statement of the findings and conclusions of the Commission, together with its recommendations for legislative and administrative action based on the Commission's activities to date. A strategy for disseminating the report to Federal, State, and local authorities shall be formulated and submitted with the formal presentation of the report to the President and the Congress.

(2) FINAL REPORT.—Not later than the date of the termination of the Commission, the Commission shall submit to the Congress and the President a final report with a detailed statement of final findings, conclusions, and recommendations, including an assessment of the extent to which recommendations of the Commission included in the interim report under paragraph (1) have been implemented.

(c) PRINTING AND PUBLIC DISTRIBUTION.—Upon receipt of each report of the Commission under this section, the President shall—

(1) order the report to be printed; and

(2) make the report available to the public upon request.

SEC. 1828. TERMINATION.

The Commission shall terminate on the date which is 2 years after the Members of the Commission have met and designated a Chairperson and Vice Chairperson.

Subtitle C—National Commission to Support Law Enforcement

SECTION 1831. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "National Commission to Support Law Enforcement Act".

SEC. 1832. CONGRESSIONAL FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) law enforcement officers risk their lives daily to protect citizens, for modest rewards and too little recognition;

(2) a significant shift has occurred in the problems that law enforcement officers face without a corresponding change in the support from the Federal Government;

(3) law enforcement officers are on the front line in the war against drugs and crime;

(4) the rate of violent crime continues to increase along with the increase in drug use;

(5) a large percentage of individuals arrested test positive for drug usage;

(6) the Presidential Commission on Law Enforcement and the Administration of Justice of 1965 focused attention on many issues affecting law enforcement, and a review twenty-five years later would help to evaluate current problems, including drug-related crime, violence, racial conflict, and decreased funding; and

(7) a comprehensive study of law enforcement issues, including the role of the Federal Government in supporting law enforcement officers, working conditions, and responsibility for crime control would assist in redefining the relationships between the Federal Government, the public, and law enforcement officials.

SEC. 1833. ESTABLISHMENT.

There is established a national commission to be known as the "National Commission to Support Law Enforcement" (referred to in this title as the "Commission").

SEC. 1834. DUTIES.

(a) IN GENERAL. —The Commission shall study and recommend changes regarding law enforcement agencies and law enforcement issues on the Federal, State, and local levels, including the following:

(1) FUNDING.—The sufficiency of funding, including a review of grant programs at the Federal level.

(2) EMPLOYMENT.—The conditions of law enforcement employment.

(3) INFORMATION.—The effectiveness of information-sharing systems, intelligence, infrastructure, and procedures among law enforcement agencies of Federal, State, and local governments.

(4) RESEARCH AND TRAINING.—The status of law enforcement research and education and training.

(5) EQUIPMENT AND RESOURCES.—The adequacy of equipment, physical resources, and human resources.

(6) COOPERATION.—The cooperation among Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies.

(7) RESPONSIBILITY.—The responsibility of governments and law enforcement agencies in solving the crime problem.

(8) IMPACT.—The impact of the criminal justice system, including court schedules and prison overcrowding, on law enforcement.

(b) CONSULTATION.—The Commission shall conduct surveys and consult with focus groups of law enforcement officers, local officials, and community leaders across the Nation to obtain information and seek advice on important law enforcement issues.

SEC. 1835. MEMBERSHIP.

(a) NUMBER AND APPOINTMENT.—The Commission shall be composed of 23 members as follows:

(1) Seven individuals from national law enforcement organizations representing law enforcement officers, of whom—

(A) Two shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

(B) Two shall be appointed by the majority leader of the Senate;

(C) One shall be appointed by the minority leader of the House of Representatives;

(D) One shall be appointed by the minority leader of the Senate; and

(E) One shall be appointed by the President.

(2) Seven individuals from national law enforcement organizations representing law enforcement management, of whom—

(A) Two shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

(B) Two shall be appointed by the majority leader of the Senate;

(C) One shall be appointed by the minority leader of the House of Representatives;

(D) One shall be appointed by the minority leader of the Senate; and

(E) One shall be appointed by the President.

(3) Two individuals with academic expertise regarding law enforcement issues, of whom—

(A) One shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the majority leader of the Senate.

(B) One shall be appointed by the minority leader of the Senate and the minority leader of the House of Representatives.

(4) Two Members of the House of Representatives, appointed by the Speaker and the minority leader of the House of Representatives.

(5) Two Members of the Senate, appointed by the majority leader and the minority leader of the Senate.

(6) One individual involved in Federal law enforcement from the Department of the Treasury, appointed by the President.

(7) One individual from the Department of Justice, appointed by the President.

(8) One individual representing a State or local governmental entity, such as a Governor, mayor, or State Attorney General, to be appointed by the Majority Leader of the Senate.

(9) One individual representing a State or local governmental entity, such as a Governor, mayor, or State Attorney General, to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

(10) One individual representing a State or local governmental entity, such as a governor, mayor, or State attorney general, to be appointed by the President.

(b) COMPTROLLER GENERAL.—The Comptroller General shall serve in an advisory capacity and shall oversee the methodology and approach of the Commission's study.

(c) CHAIRPERSON.—Upon their appointment the members of the Commission shall select one of their number to act as chairperson.

(d) COMPENSATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Members of the Commission shall receive no additional pay, allowance, or benefit by reason of service on the Commission.

(2) TRAVEL EXPENSES.—Each member of the Commission shall receive travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, in accordance with sections 5702 and 5703 of title 5, United States Code.

(e) APPOINTMENT DATES.—Members of the Commission shall be appointed no later than 90 days after the enactment of this title.

SEC. 1836. EXPERTS AND CONSULTANTS.

(a) EXPERTS AND CONSULTANTS.—The Commission may procure temporary and intermittent services under section 3109(b) of title 5, United States Code.

(b) STAFF OF FEDERAL AGENCIES.—Upon request of the Commission, the head of any Federal agency is authorized to detail, on a reimbursable basis, any of the personnel of that agency to the Commission to assist the Commission in carrying out its duties under this title.

(c) ADMINISTRATIVE SUPPORT.—The Administrator of General Services shall provide to the Commission, on a reimbursable basis, administrative support services as the Commission may request.

SEC. 1837. POWERS OF COMMISSION.

(a) HEARINGS.—The Commission may, for purposes of this title, hold hearings, sit and act at the times and places, take testimony, and receive evidence, as the Commission considers appropriate.

(b) DELEGATION OF AUTHORITY.—Any member or agent of the Commission may, if authorized by the Commission, take any action the Commission is authorized to take by this section.

(c) INFORMATION.—The Commission may secure directly from any Federal agency information necessary to enable it to carry out this title. Upon request of the chairperson of the Commission, the head of an agency shall furnish the information to the Commission to the extent permitted by law.

(d) GIFTS AND DONATIONS.—The Commission may accept, use, and dispose of gifts or donations of services or property.

(e) MAILS.—The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other Federal agencies.

SEC. 1838. REPORT.

Not later than the expiration of the eighteen-month period beginning on the date of the appointment of the members of the Commission, a report containing the findings of the Commission and specific proposals for legislation and administrative actions that the Commission has determined to be appropriate shall be submitted to Congress.

SEC. 1839. TERMINATION.

The Commission shall cease to exist upon the expiration of the sixty-day period beginning on the date on which the Commission submits its report under section 1838.

SEC. 1840. REPEALS.

Title XXXIV of the Crime Control Act of 1990 (Public Law 101–647; 104 Stat. 4918) and title II, section 211 B of the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1991 (Public Law 101–515; 104 Stat. 2122) are repealed.

TITLE XIX—BAIL POSTING REPORTING

SEC. 1901. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Illegal Drug Profits Act of 1991".

SEC. 1902. REQUIRED REPORTING BY CRIMINAL COURT CLERKS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Each clerk of a Federal or State criminal court shall report to the Internal Revenue Service, in a form and manner as prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, the name and taxpayer identification number of—

(1) any individual charged with any criminal offense who posts cash bail, or on whose behalf cash bail is posted, in an amount exceeding $10,000, and

(2) any individual or entity (other than a licensed bail bonding individual or entity) posting such cash bail for or on behalf of such individual.

(b) CRIMINAL OFFENSES.—For purposes of subsection (a), the term "criminal offense" means—

(1) any Federal criminal offense involving a controlled substance,

(2) racketeering (as defined in section 1951, 1952, or 1955 of title 18, United States Code),

(3) money laundering (as defined in section 1956 or 1957 of title 18, United States Code), or

(4) any violation of State criminal law involving offenses substantially similar to the offenses described in the preceding paragraphs.

(c) COPY TO PROSECUTORS.—Each clerk shall submit a copy of each report of cash bail described in subsection (a) to—

(1) the office of the United States Attorney, and

(2) the office of the local prosecuting attorney, for the jurisdiction in which the defendant resides (and the jurisdiction in which the criminal offense occurred, if different).

(d) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall promulgate such regulations as are necessary within 90 days of the enactment of this title.

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This section shall become effective 60 days after the date of the promulgation of regulations under subsection (c).

TITLE XX—MOTOR VEHICLE THEFT PREVENTION

SEC. 2001. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Motor Vehicle Theft Prevention Act".

SEC. 2002. MOTOR VEHICLE THEFT PREVENTION PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Attorney General shall develop, in cooperation with the States, a national voluntary motor vehicle theft prevention program (in this section referred to as the "program") under which—

(1) the owner of a motor vehicle may voluntarily sign a consent form with a participating State or locality in which the motor vehicle owner—

(A) states that the vehicle is not normally operated under certain specified conditions; and

(B) agrees to—

(i) display program decals or devices on the owner's vehicle; and

(ii) permit law enforcement officials in any State to stop the motor vehicle and take reasonable steps to determine whether the vehicle is being operated by or with the permission of the owner, if the vehicle is being operated under the specified conditions; and

(2) participating States and localities authorize law enforcement officials in the State or locality to stop motor vehicles displaying program decals or devices under specified conditions and take reasonable steps to determine whether the vehicle is being operated by or with the permission of the owner.

(b) UNIFORM DECAL OR DEVICE DESIGNS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The motor vehicle theft prevention program developed pursuant to this section shall include a uniform design or designs for decals or other devices to be displayed by motor vehicles participating in the program.

(2) TYPE OF DESIGN.—The uniform design shall—

(A) be highly visible; and

(B) explicitly state that the motor vehicle to which it is affixed may be stopped under the specified conditions without additional grounds for establishing a reasonable suspicion that the vehicle is being operated unlawfully.

(c) VOLUNTARY CONSENT FORM.—The voluntary consent form used to enroll in the program shall—

(1) clearly state that participation in the program is voluntary;

(2) clearly explain that participation in the program means that, if the participating vehicle is being operated under the specified conditions, law enforcement officials may stop the vehicle and take reasonable steps to determine whether it is being operated by or with the consent of the owner, even if the law enforcement officials have no other basis for believing that the vehicle is being operated unlawfully;

(3) include an express statement that the vehicle is not normally operated under the specified conditions and that the operation of the vehicle under those conditions would provide sufficient grounds for a prudent law enforcement officer to reasonably believe that the vehicle was not being operated by or with the consent of the owner; and

(4) include any additional information that the Attorney General may reasonably require.

(d) SPECIFIED CONDITIONS UNDER WHICH STOPS MAY BE AUTHORIZED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Attorney General shall promulgate rules establishing the conditions under which participating motor vehicles may be authorized to be stopped under this section. These conditions may not be based on race, creed, color, national origin, gender, or age. These conditions may include—

(A) the operation of the vehicle during certain hours of the day; or

(B) the operation of the vehicle under other circumstances that would provide a sufficient basis for establishing a reasonable suspicion that the vehicle was not being operated by the owner, or with the consent of the owner.

(2) MORE THAN ONE SET OF CONDITIONS.—The Attorney General may establish more than one set of conditions under which participating motor vehicles may be stopped. If more than one set of conditions is established, a separate consent form and a separate design for program decals or devices shall be established for each set of conditions. The Attorney General may choose to satisfy the requirement of a separate design for program decals or devices under this paragraph by the use of a design color that is clearly distinguishable from other design colors.

(3) NO NEW CONDITIONS WITHOUT CONSENT.—After the program has begun, the conditions under which a vehicle may be stopped if affixed with a certain decal or device design may not be expanded without the consent of the owner.

(4) LIMITED PARTICIPATION BY STATES AND LOCALITIES.—A State or locality need not authorize the stopping of motor vehicles under all sets of conditions specified under the program in order to participate in the program.

(e) MOTOR VEHICLES FOR HIRE.—

(1) NOTIFICATION TO LESSEES.—Any person who is in the business of renting or leasing motor vehicles and who rents or leases a motor vehicle on which a program decal or device is affixed shall, prior to transferring possession of the vehicle, notify the person to whom the motor vehicle is rented or leased about the program.

(2) TYPE OF NOTICE.—The notice required by this subsection shall—

(A) be in writing;

(B) be in a prominent format to be determined by the Attorney General; and

(C) explain the possibility that if the motor vehicle is operated under the specified conditions, the vehicle may be stopped by law enforcement officials even if the officials have no other basis for believing that the vehicle is being operated unlawfully.

(3) FINE FOR FAILURE TO PROVIDE NOTICE.—Failure to provide proper notice under this subsection shall be punishable by a fine not to exceed $5,000.

(f) NOTIFICATION OF POLICE.—As a condition of participating in the program, a State or locality must agree to take reasonable steps to ensure that law enforcement officials throughout the State or locality are familiar with the program, and with the conditions under which motor vehicles may be stopped under the program.

(g) REGULATIONS.—The Attorney General shall promulgate regulations to implement this section.

(h) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized such sums as are necessary to carry out this section.

SEC. 2002. ALTERING OR REMOVING MOTOR VEHICLE IDENTIFICATION NUMBERS.

(a) BASIC OFFENSE.—Subsection (a) of section 511 of title 18, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(a) Whoever, with intent to further the theft of a vehicle, knowingly removes, obliterates, tampers with, or alters an identification number for a motor vehicle, or motor vehicle part, or a decal or device affixed to a motor vehicle pursuant to the Motor Vehicle Theft Prevention Act, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.".

(b) EXCEPTED PERSONS.—Paragraph (2) of section 511(b) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by—

(1) striking "and" after the semicolon in subparagraph (B);

(2) striking the period at the end of subparagraph (C) and inserting "; and"; and

(3) adding at the end thereof the following:

"(D) a person who removes, obliterates, tampers with, or alters a decal or device affixed to a motor vehicle pursuant to the Motor Vehicle Theft Prevention Act, if that person is the owner of the motor vehicle, or is authorized to remove, obliterate, tamper with or alter the decal or device by—

"(i) the owner or his authorized agent;

"(ii) applicable State or local law; or

"(iii) regulations promulgated by the Attorney General to implement the Motor Vehicle Theft Prevention Act.".

(c) DEFINITION.—Section 511 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(d) For purposes of subsection (a) of this section, the term 'tampers with' includes covering a program decal or device affixed to a motor vehicle pursuant to the Motor Vehicle Theft Prevention Act for the purpose of obstructing its visibility.".

(d) UNAUTHORIZED APPLICATION OF A DECAL OR DEVICE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 25 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding after section 511 the following new section:

"§511A. Unauthorized application of theft prevention decal or device

"(a) Whoever affixes to a motor vehicle a theft prevention decal or other device, or a replica thereof, unless authorized to do so pursuant to the Motor Vehicle Theft Prevention Act, shall be punished by a fine not to exceed $1,000.

"(b) For purposes of this section, the term 'theft prevention decal or device' means a decal or other device designed in accordance with a uniform design for such devices developed pursuant to the Motor Vehicle Theft Prevention Act.".

(2) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 25 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding immediately after the item for section 511 the following:

"511A. Unauthorized application of theft prevention decal or device.".

TITLE XXI—PROTECTIONS FOR THE ELDERLY

SEC. 2101. MISSING ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE PATIENT ALERT PROGRAM.

(a) GRANT.—The Attorney General shall award a grant to an eligible organization to assist the organization in paying for the costs of planning, designing, establishing, and operating a Missing Alzheimer's Disease Patient Alert Program, which shall be a locally based, proactive program to protect and locate missing patients with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias.

(b) APPLICATION.—To be eligible to receive a grant under subsection (a), an organization shall submit an application to the Attorney General at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Attorney General may require, including, at a minimum, an assurance that the organization will obtain and use assistance from private nonprofit organizations to support the program.

(c) ELIGIBLE ORGANIZATION.—The Attorney General shall award the grant described in subsection (a) to a national voluntary organization that has a direct link to patients, and families of patients, with Alzheimer's disease and related dementias.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $1,000,000 for each of fiscal years 1992, 1993, and 1994.

SEC. 2102. CRIMES AGAINST THE ELDERLY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Pursuant to its authority under the Sentencing Reform Act of 1984 and section 21 of the Sentencing Act of 1987 (including its authority to amend the sentencing guidelines and policy statements) and its authority to make such amendments on an emergency basis, the United States Sentencing Commission shall ensure that the applicable guideline range for a defendant convicted of a crime of violence against an elderly victim is sufficiently stringent to deter such a crime, to protect the public from additional crimes of such a defendant, and to adequately reflect the heinous nature of such an offense.

((b) CRITERIA.—In carrying out subsection (a), the United States Sentencing Commission shall ensure that—

(1) the guidelines provide for increasingly severe punishment for a defendant commensurate with the degree of physical harm caused to the elderly victim;

(2) the guidelines take appropriate account of the vulnerability of the victim; and

(3) the guidelines provide enhanced punishment for a defendant convicted of a crime of violence against an elderly victim who has previously been convicted of a crime of violence against an elderly victim, regardless of whether the conviction occurred in Federal or State court.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section—

(1) the term "crime of violence" means an offense under section 113, 114, 1111, 1112, 1113, 1117, 2241, 2242, or 2244 of title 18, United States Code; and

(2) the term "elderly victim" means a victim who is 65 years of age or older at the time of an offense.

TITLE XXII—CONSUMER PROTECTION

SEC. 2201. CRIMES BY OR AFFECTING PERSONS ENGAGED IN THE BUSINESS OF INSURANCE WHOSE ACTIVITIES AFFECT INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 47 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sections:

"§1033. Crimes by or affecting persons engaged in the business of insurance whose activities affect interstate commerce merce and, with the intent to deceive, knowingly makes any false material statement or report or willfully and materially overvalues any land, property or security—

"(A) in connection with any financial reports or documents presented to any insurance regulatory official or agency or an agent or examiner appointed by such official or agency to examine the affairs of such person, and

"(B) for the purpose of influencing the actions of such official or agency or such an appointed agent or examiner, shall be punished as provided in paragraph (2).

"(2) The punishment for an offense under paragraph (1) is a fine as established under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both, except that the term of imprisonment shall be not more than 15 years if the statement or report or overvaluing of land, property, or security jeopardizes the safety and soundness of an insurer.

"(b)(1) Whoever—

"(A) acting as, or being an officer, director, agent, or employee of, any person engaged in the business of insurance whose activities affect interstate commerce, or

"(B) is engaged in the business of insurance whose activities affect interstate commerce or is involved (other than as an insured or beneficiary under a policy of insurance) in a transaction relating to the conduct of affairs of such a business, willfully embezzles, abstracts, purloins, or misappropriates any of the moneys, funds, premiums, credits, or other property of such person so engaged shall be punished as provided in paragraph (2).

"(2) The punishment for an offense under paragraph (1) is a fine as provided under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both, except that if such embezzlement, abstraction, purloining, or misappropriation described in paragraph (1) jeopardizes the safety and soundness of an insurer, such imprisonment shall be not more than 15 years. If the amount or value so embezzled, abstracted, purloined, or misappropriated does not exceed $5,000, whoever violates paragraph (1) shall be fined as provided in this title or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.

"(c)(1) Whoever is engaged in the business of insurance and whose activities affect interstate commerce or is involved (other than as an insured or beneficiary under a policy of insurance) in a transaction relating to the conduct of affairs of such a business, knowingly makes any false entry of material fact in any book, report, or statement of such person engaged in the business of insurance with intent to—

"(A) deceive any person about the financial condition or solvency of such business, or

"(B) deceive any officer, employee, or agent of such person engaged in the business of insurance, any insurance regulatory official or agency, or any agent or examiner appointed by such official or agency to examine the affairs of such person about the financial condition or solvency of such business, shall be punished as provided in paragraph (2).

"(2) The punishment for an offense under paragraph (1) is a fine as provided under this title or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both, except that if the false entry in any book, report, or statement of such person jeopardizes the safety and soundness of an insurer, such imprisonment shall be not more than 15 years.

"(d) Whoever, by threats or force or by any threatening letter or communication, corruptly influences, obstructs, or impedes or endeavors corruptly to influence, obstruct, or impede the due and proper administration of the law under which any proceeding involving the business of insurance whose activities affect interstate commerce is pending before any insurance regulatory official or agency or any agent or examiner appointed by such official or agency to examine the affairs of a person engaged in the business of insurance whose activities affect interstate commerce, shall be fined as provided in this title or imprisoned not more than 10 years, or both.

"(e)(1)(A) Any individual who has been convicted of any criminal felony involving dishonesty or a breach of trust, or who has been convicted of an offense under this section, and who willfully engages in the business of insurance whose activities affect interstate commerce or participates in such business, shall be fined as provided in this title or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"(B) Any individual who is engaged in the business of insurance whose activities affect interstate commerce and who willfully permits the participation described in subparagraph (A) shall be fined as provided in this title or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"(2) A person described in paragraph (1)(A) may engage in the business of insurance or participate in such business if such person has the written consent of any insurance regulatory official authorized to regulate the insurer, which consent specifically refers to this subsection.

"(f) As used in this section—

"(1) the term 'business of insurance' means—

"(A) the writing of insurance, or

"(B) the reinsuring of risks,

by an insurer, including all acts necessary or incidental to such writing or reinsuring and the activities of persons who act as, or are, officers, directors, agents, or employees of insurers or who are other persons authorized to act on behalf of such persons;

"(2) the term 'insurer' means any entity the business activity of which is the writing of insurance or the reinsuring of risks or any receiver or similar official or any liquidating agent for such an entity, in his or her capacity as such, and includes any person who acts as, or is, an officer, director, agent, or employee of that business;

"(3) the term 'interstate commerce' means—

"(A) commerce within the District of Columbia, or any territory or possession of the United States;

"(B) all commerce between any point in the State, territory, possession, or the District of Columbia and any point outside thereof;

"(C) all commerce between points within the same State through any place outside such State; or

"(D) all other commerce over which the United States has jurisdiction; and

"(4) the term 'State' includes any State, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Northern Mariana Islands, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

"§1034. Civil penalties and injunctions for violations of section 1033

"(a) The Attorney General may bring a civil action in the appropriate United States district court against any person who engages in conduct constituting an offense under section 1033 and, upon proof of such conduct by a preponderance of the evidence, such person shall be subject to a civil penalty of not more than $50,000 for each violation or the amount of compensation which the person received or offered for the prohibited conduct, whichever amount is greater. If the offense has contributed to the decision of a court of appropriate jurisdiction to issue an order directing the conservation, rehabilitation, or liquidation of an insurer, such penalty shall be remitted to the regulatory official for the benefit of the policyholders, claimants, and creditors of such insurer. The imposition of a civil penalty under this subsection does not preclude any other criminal or civil statutory, common law, or administrative remedy, which is available by law to the United States or any other person.

"(b) If the Attorney General has reason to believe that a person is engaged in conduct constituting an offense under section 1033, the Attorney General may petition an appropriate United States district court for an order prohibiting that person from engaging in such conduct. The court may issue an order prohibiting that person from engaging in such conduct if the court finds that the conduct constitutes such an offense. The filing of a petition under this section does not preclude any other remedy which is available by law to the United States or any other person.".

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 47 of such title is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"1033. Crimes by or affecting persons engaged in the business of insurance whose activities affect interstate commerce.

"1034. Civil penalties and injunctions for violations of section 1033.".

(c) MISCELLANEOUS AMENDMENTS TO TITLE 18, UNITED STATES CODE.—(1) TAMPERING WITH INSURANCE REGULATORY PROCEEDINGS.—Section 1515(a)(1) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (B);

(B) by inserting "or" at the end of subparagraph (C); and

(C) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

(2) by inserting "1517, 1956, or 1957".

SEC. 2303. FEDERAL CREDIT UNION ACT AMENDMENTS.

Section 205(d) of the Federal Credit Union Act (12 U.S.C. 1785(d)) is amended to read as follows:

"(d) PROHIBITION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except with prior written consent of the Board—

"(A) any person who has been convicted of any criminal offense involving dishonesty or a breach of trust, or has agreed to enter into a pretrial diversion or similar program in connection with a prosecution for such offense, may not—

"(i) become, or continue as, an institution-affiliated party with respect to any insured credit union; or

"(ii) otherwise participate, directly or indirectly, in the conduct of the affairs of any insured credit union; and

"(B) any insured credit union may not permit any person referred to in subparagraph (A) to engage in any conduct or continue any relationship prohibited under such subparagraph.

"(2) MINIMUM 10-YEAR PROHIBITION PERIOD FOR CERTAIN OFFENSES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If the offense referred to in paragraph (1)(A) in connection with any person referred to in such paragraph is—

"(i) an offense under—

"(I) section 215, 656, 657, 1005, 1006, 1007, 1008, 1014, 1032, 1344, 1517, 1956, or 1957 of title 18, United States Code; or

"(II) section 1341 or 1343 of such title which affects any financial institution (as defined in section 20 of such title); or

"(ii) the offense of conspiring to commit any such offense, the Board may not consent to any exception to the application of paragraph (1) to such person during the 10-year period beginning on the date the conviction or the agreement of the person becomes final.

"(B) EXCEPTION BY ORDER OF SENTENCING COURT.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—On motion of the Board, the court in which the conviction or the agreement of a person referred to in subparagraph (A) has been entered may grant an exception to the application of paragraph (1) to such person if granting the exception is in the interest of justice.

"(ii) PERIOD FOR FILING.—A motion may be filed under clause (i) at any time during the 10-year period described in subparagraph (A) with regard to the person on whose behalf such motion is made.

"(3) PENALTY.—Whoever knowingly violates paragraph (1) or (2) shall be fined not more than $1,000,000 for each day such prohibition is violated or imprisoned for not more than 5 years, or both.".

SEC. 2304. CRIME CONTROL ACT AMENDMENT.

Section 2546 of the Crime Control Act of 1990 (Public Law 101–647, 104 Stat. 4885) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(c) FRAUD TASK FORCES REPORT.—In addition to the reports required under subsection (a), the Attorney General is encouraged to submit a report to the Congress containing the findings of the financial institutions fraud task forces established under section 2539 as they relate to the collapse of private deposit insurance corporations, together with recommendations for any regulatory or legislative changes necessary to prevent such collapses in the future.".

TITLE XXIV—SAVINGS AND LOAN PROSECUTION TASK FORCE

SEC. 2401. SAVINGS AND LOAN PROSECUTION TASK FORCE.

The Attorney General shall establish within the Justice Department a savings and loan criminal fraud task force to prosecute in an aggressive manner those criminal cases involving savings and loan institutions.

TITLE XXV—SENTENCING PROVISIONS

SEC. 2501. IMPOSITION OF SENTENCE.

Section 3553(a)(4) of title 18, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(4) the kinds of sentence and the sentencing range established for—

"(A) the applicable category of offense committed by the applicable category of defendant as set forth in the guidelines issued by the Sentencing Commission pursuant to section 994(a)(1) of title 28, United States Code, and that are in effect on the date the defendant is sentenced; or

"(B) in the case of a violation of probation or supervised release, the applicable guidelines or policy statements issued by the Sentencing Commission pursuant to section 994(a)(3) of title 28, United States Code;".

SEC. 2502. TECHNICAL AMENDMENT TO MANDATORY CONDITIONS OF PROBATION.

Section 3563(a)(3) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking "possess illegal controlled substances" and inserting "unlawfully possess a controlled substance".

SEC. 2503. REVOCATION OF PROBATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 3565(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2) by striking "impose any other sentence that was available under subchapter A at the time of the initial sentencing" and inserting "resentence the defendant under subchapter A"; and

(2) by striking the last sentence.

(b) MANDATORY REVOCATION.—Section 3565(b) of title 18, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(b) MANDATORY REVOCATION FOR POSSESSION OF CONTROLLED SUBSTANCE OR FIREARM OR REFUSAL TO COOPERATE IN DRUG TESTING.—If the defendant—

"(1) possesses a controlled substance in violation of the condition set forth in section 3563(a)(3);

"(2) possesses a firearm, as such term is defined in section 921 of this title, in violation of Federal law, or otherwise violates a condition of probation prohibiting the defendant from possessing a firearm; or

"(3) refuses to cooperate in drug testing, thereby violating the condition imposed by section 3563(a)(4), the court shall revoke the sentence of probation and resentence the defendant under subchapter A to a sentence that includes a term of imprisonment.".

SEC. 2504. SUPERVISED RELEASE AFTER IMPRISONMENT.

Section 3583 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (d), by striking "possess illegal controlled substances" and inserting "unlawfully possess a controlled substance";

(2) in subsection (e)—

(A) by striking "person" each place such term appears in such subsection and inserting "defendant"; and

(B) by amending paragraph (3) to read as follows:

"(3) revoke a term of supervised release, and require the defendant to serve in prison all or part of the term of supervised release authorized by statute for the offense that resulted in such term of supervised release without credit for time previously served on postrelease supervision, if the court, pursuant to the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure applicable to revocation of probation or supervised release, finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant violated a condition of supervised release, except that a defendant whose term is revoked under this paragraph may not be required to serve more than 5 years in prison if the offense that resulted in the term of supervised release is a class A felony, more than 3 years in prison if such offense is a class B felony, more than 2 years in prison if such offense is a class C or D felony, or more than one year in any other case; or"; and

(3) by striking subsection (g) and inserting the following:

"(g) MANDATORY REVOCATION FOR POSSESSION OF CONTROLLED SUBSTANCE OR FIREARM OR FOR REFUSAL TO COOPERATE WITH DRUG TESTING.—If the defendant—

"(1) possesses a controlled substance in violation of the condition set forth in subsection (d);

"(2) possesses a firearm, as such term is defined in section 921 of this title, in violation of Federal law, or otherwise violates a condition of supervised release prohibiting the defendant from possessing a firearm; or

"(3) refuses to cooperate in drug testing imposed as a condition of supervised release; the court shall revoke the term of supervised release and require the defendant to serve a term of imprisonment not to exceed the maximum term of imprisonment authorized under subsection (e)(3).

"(h) SUPERVISED RELEASE FOLLOWING REVOCATION.—When a term of supervised release is revoked and the defendant is required to serve a term of imprisonment that is less than the maximum term of imprisonment authorized under subsection (e)(3), the court may include a requirement that the defendant be placed on a term of supervised release after imprisonment. The length of such a term of supervised release shall not exceed the term of supervised release authorized by statute for the offense that resulted in the original term of supervised release, less any term of imprisonment that was imposed upon revocation of supervised release.

"(i) DELAYED REVOCATION.—The power of the court to revoke a term of supervised release for violation of a condition of supervised release, and to order the defendant to serve a term of imprisonment and, subject to the limitations in subsection (h), a further term of supervised release, extends beyond the expiration of the term of supervised release for any period reasonably necessary for the adjudication of matters arising before its expiration if, before its expiration, a warrant or summons has been issued on the basis of an allegation of such a violation.".

TITLE XXVI—SENTENCING AND MAGISTRATES AMENDMENTS

SEC. 2601. AUTHORIZATION OF PROBATION FOR PETTY OFFENSES IN CERTAIN CASES.

Section 3561(a)(3) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end: "However, this paragraph does not preclude the imposition of a sentence to a term of probation for a petty offense if the defendant has been sentenced to a term of imprisonment at the same time for another such offense.".

SEC. 2602. TRIAL BY A MAGISTRATE IN PETTY OFFENSE CASES.

Section 3401 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (b) by adding "other than a petty offense" after "misdemeanor"; and

"(i) with reckless disregard of a substantial and unjustifiable risk that the transmission will—

"(I) damage, or cause damage to, a computer, computer system, network, information, data or program; or

"(II) withhold or deny or cause the withholding or denial of the use of a computer, computer services, system, network, information, data or program; and

"(ii) if the transmission of the harmful component of the program, information, code, or command—

"(I) occurred without the knowledge and authorization of the persons or entities who own or are responsible for the computer system receiving the program, information, code, or command; and

"(II)(aa) causes loss or damage to one or more other persons of a value aggregating $1,000 or more during any 1-year period; or

"(bb) modifies or impairs, or potentially modifies or impairs, the medical examination, medical diagnosis, medical treatment, or medical care of one or more individuals;".

(c) PENALTY.—Section 1030(c) of title 18, United States Code is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2)(B) by striking "and" after the semicolon;

(2) in paragraph (3)(A) by inserting "(A)" after "(a)(5)"; and

(3) in paragraph (3)(B) by striking the period at the end thereof and inserting "; and"; and

(4) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(4) a fine under this title or imprisonment for not more than 1 year, or both, in the case of an offense under subsection (a)(5)(B).".

(d) CIVIL ACTION.—Section 1030 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g) Any person who suffers damage or loss by reason of a violation of the section, other than a violation of subsection (a)(5)(B), may maintain a civil action against the violator to obtain compensatory damages and injunctive relief or other equitable relief. Damages for violations of any subsection other than subsection (a)(5)(A)(ii)(II)(bb) or (a)(5)(B)(ii)(II)(bb) are limited to economic damages. No action may be brought under this subsection unless such action is begun within 2 years of the date of the act complained of or the date of the discovery of the damage.".

(e) REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.—Section 1030 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(h) The Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury shall report to the Congress annually, during the first 3 years following the date of the enactment of this subsection, concerning investigations and prosecutions under section 1030(a)(5) of title 18, United States Code.".

(f) PROHIBITION.—Section 1030(a)(3) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting "adversely" before "affects the use of the Government's operation of such computer".

TITLE XXVIII—PARENTAL KIDNAPPING

SEC. 2801. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "International Parental Kidnapping Crime Act of 1991".

SEC. 2802. TITLE 18 AMENDMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 55 (relating to kidnapping) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§1204. International parental kidnapping

"(a) Whoever removes a child from the United States or retains a child (who has been in the United States) outside the United States with intent to obstruct the lawful exercise of parental rights shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than 3 years, or both.

"(b) As used in this section—

"(1) the term 'child' means a person who has not attained the age of 16 years; and

"(2) the term 'parental rights', with respect to a child, means the right to physical custody of the child—

"(A) whether joint or sole (and includes visiting rights); and

"(B) whether arising by operation of law, court order, or legally binding agreement of the parties.

"(c) It shall be an affirmative defense under this section that—

"(1) the defendant acted within the provisions of a valid court order granting the defendant legal custody or visitation rights and that order was obtained pursuant to the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act and was in effect at the time of the offense;

"(2) the defendant was fleeing an incidence or pattern of domestic violence;

"(3) the defendant had physical custody of the child pursuant to a court order granting legal custody or visitation rights and failed to return the child as a result of circumstances beyond the defendant's control, and the defendant notified or made reasonable attempts to notify the other parent or lawful custodian of the child of such circumstances within 24 hours after the visitation period had expired and returned the child as soon as possible.

"(d) This section does not detract from The Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Parental Child Abduction, done at The Hague on October 25, 1980.".

(b) SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.—It is the sense of the Congress that, inasmuch as use of the procedures under the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Parental Child Abduction has resulted in the return of many children, those procedures, in circumstances in which they are applicable, should be the option of first choice for a parent who seeks the return of a child who has been removed from the parent.

(c) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 55 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"1204. International parental kidnapping.".

SEC. 2803. STATE COURT PROGRAMS REGARDING INTERSTATE AND INTERNATIONAL PARENTAL CHILD ABDUCTION.

There is authorized to be appropriated $250,000 to carry out under the State Justice Institute Act of 1984 (42 U.S.C. 10701–10713) national, regional, and in-State training and educational programs dealing with criminal and civil aspects of interstate and international parental child abduction.

TITLE XXIX—SAFE SCHOOLS

Subtitle A—Safe Schools

SEC. 2901. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Safe Schools Act of 1991".

SEC. 2902. SAFE SCHOOLS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3711 et seq.), as amended by section 1421 of this Act, is amended—

(1) by redesignating part U as part Y;

(2) by redesignating section 2101 as section 2201; and

(3) by inserting after part T the following:

"PART U—SAFE SCHOOLS ASSISTANCE

"SEC. 2101. GRANT AUTHORIZATION.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance, in consultation with the Secretary of Education, may make grants to local educational agencies for the purpose of providing assistance to such agencies most directly affected by crime and violence.

"(b) MODEL PROJECT.—The Director, in consultation with the Secretary of Education, shall develop a written safe schools model in English and in Spanish in a timely fashion and make such model available to any local educational agency that requests such information.

"SEC. 2102. USE OF FUNDS.

"Grants made by the Director under this part shall be used—

"(1) to fund anticrime and safety measures and to develop education and training programs for the prevention of crime, violence, and illegal drugs and alcohol;

"(2) for counseling programs for victims of crime within schools;

"(3) for crime prevention equipment, including metal detectors and video-surveillance devices; and

"(4) for the prevention and reduction of the participation of young individuals in organized crime and drug and gang-related activities in schools.

"SEC. 2103. APPLICATIONS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—In order to be eligible to receive a grant under this part for any fiscal year, a local educational agency shall submit an application to the Director in such form and containing such information as the Director may reasonably require.

"(b) REQUIREMENTS.—Each application under subsection (a) shall include—

"(1) a request for funds for the purposes described in section 2002;

"(2) a description of the schools and communities to be served by the grant, including the nature of the crime and violence problems within such schools;

"(3) assurances that Federal funds received under this part shall be used to supplement, not supplant, non-Federal funds that would otherwise be available for activities funded under this part; and

"(4) statistical information in such form and containing such information that the Director may require regarding crime within schools served by such local educational agency.

"(c) COMPREHENSIVE PLAN.—Each application shall include a comprehensive plan that shall contain—

"(1) a description of the crime problems within the schools targeted for assistance;

"(2) a description of the projects to be developed;

"(3) a description of the resources available in the community to implement the plan together with a description of the gaps in the plan that cannot be filed with existing resources;

"(4) an explanation of how the requested grant will be used to fill gaps;

"(5) a description of the system the applicant will establish to prevent and reduce crime problems; and

"(6) a description of educational materials to be developed in Spanish.

"SEC. 2104. ALLOCATION OF FUNDS; LIMITATIONS ON GRANTS.

"(a) ADMINISTRATIVE COST LIMITATION.—The Director shall use not more than 5 percent of the funds available under this part for the purposes of administration and technical assistance.

"(b) RENEWAL OF GRANTS.—A grant under this part may be renewed for up to 2 additional years after the first fiscal year during which the recipient receives its initial grant under this part, subject to the availability of funds, if—

"(1) the Director determines that the funds made available to the recipient during the previous year were used in a manner required under the approved application; and

"(2) the Director determines that an additional grant is necessary to implement the crime prevention program described in the comprehensive plan as required by section 2003(c).

"SEC. 2105. AWARD OF GRANTS.

"(a) SELECTION OF RECIPIENTS.—The Director, in consultation with the Secretary of Education, shall consider the following factors in awarding grants to local educational agencies:

"(1) CRIME PROBLEM.—The nature and scope of the crime problem in the targeted schools.

"(2) NEED AND ABILITY.—Demonstrated need and evidence of the ability to provide the services described in the plan required under section 2003(c).

"(3) POPULATION.—The number of students to be served by the plan required under section 2003(c).

"(b) GEOGRAPHIC DISTRIBUTION.—The Director shall attempt, to the extent practicable, to achieve an equitable geographic distribution of grant awards.

"SEC. 2106. REPORTS.

"(a) REPORT TO DIRECTOR.—Local educational agencies that receive funds under this part shall submit to the Director a report not later than March 1 of each year that describes progress achieved in carrying out the plan required under section 2003(c).

"(b) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—The Director shall submit to the Committee on Education and Labor and the Committee on the Judiciary a report by October 1 of each year in which grants are made available under this part which shall contain a detailed statement regarding grant awards, activities of grant recipients, a compilation of statistical information submitted by applicants under 2003(b)(4), and an evaluation of programs established under this part.

"SEC. 2107. DEFINITIONS.

"For the purpose of this part:

"(1) The term 'Director' means the Director of the Bureau of Justice Assistance.

"(2) The term 'local educational agency' means a public board of education or other public authority legally constituted within a State for either administrative control or direction of, or to perform a service function for, public elementary and secondary schools in a city, county, township, school district, or other political subdivision of a State, or such combination of school districts of counties as are recognized in a State as an administrative agency for its public elementary and secondary schools. Such term includes any other public institution or agency having administrative control and direction of a public elementary or secondary school.".

"§3703. Injunctions

"A civil action to enjoin a violation of section 3702 may be commenced in an appropriate district court of the United States by the Attorney General of the United States, or by a professional sports organization or amateur sports organization whose competitive game is alleged to be the basis of such violation.

"§3704. Applicability

"(a) Section 3702 shall not apply to—

"(1) a lottery in operation in a State or subdivision of a State, to the extent that such a lottery actually was conducted by that State or subdivision at any time during the period beginning January 1, 1976 and ending August 31, 1990;

"(2) a betting, gambling, or wagering scheme in operation in a State or subdivision of a State, other than a lottery described in paragraph (1), where both—

"(A) such scheme was authorized by a statute as in effect on August 31, 1990; and

"(B) any scheme described in section 3702 (other than one based on parimutuel animal racing or jai-alai games) actually was conducted in that State or subdivision at any time during the period beginning September 1, 1989, and ending August 31, 1990, pursuant to the law of that State or subdivision;

"(3) a betting, gambling, or wagering scheme, other than a lottery described in paragraph (1), conducted exclusively in casinos located in a municipality, but only to the extent that—

"(A) such scheme or a similar scheme was in operation in that municipality not later than one year after the effective date of this chapter; and

"(B) any commercial casino gaming scheme was in operation in such municipality throughout the 10-year period ending on such effective date pursuant to a comprehensive system of State regulation authorized by that State's constitution and applicable solely to such municipality; or

"(4) parimutuel animal racing or jai-alai games.

"(b) Except as provided in subsection (a), section 3702 shall apply on lands described in section 4(4) of the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act (25 U.S.C. 2703(4)).".

SEC. 3067. THEFTS OF MAJOR ART WORKS.

(a) OFFENSE.—Chapter 31 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"§668. Theft of a major art work

"(a) Whoever steals or obtains by fraud any object of cultural heritage held in a museum, or knowing the same to have been stolen, converted, or taken by fraud receives, conceals, stores, sells, exhibits, or disposes of such goods, shall be fined under this title, imprisoned for not more than the maximum term of imprisonment for a class C felony, or both.

"(b) Notwithstanding section 3282 of this title, the statute of limitations for an offense under this section shall be 20 years.

"(c) The property of a person convicted of an offense under this section shall be subject to criminal forfeiture under section 982 of this title.

"(d) For purposes of this section—

"(1) The term 'museum' means an organized and permanent institution, situated in the United States, essentially educational or aesthetic in purpose with professional staff, which owns and utilizes tangible objects, cares for them, and exhibits them to the public on some regularly scheduled period.

"(2) The term 'stolen object of cultural heritage' means an object stolen from a museum after the effective date of this title reported to law enforcement authorities as stolen and registered with the International Foundation for Art Research, or any equivalent registry.".

(b) CHAPTER ANALYSIS.—The chapter analysis for chapter 31 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"668. Theft of a major art work.".

SEC. 3068. BALANCE IN THE CRIMINAL JUSTICE SYSTEM.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) an adequately supported Federal judiciary is essential to the enforcement of law and order in the United States, and

(2) section 331 of title 28 provides in pertinent part that the Chief Justice shall submit to Congress an annual report of the proceedings of the Judicial Conference and its recommendations for legislation, and

(3) in 1990, in response to the recommendations of the Judicial Conference for additional judgeships, Congress enacted legislation creating 85 additional judgeships with an effective date of December 1, 1990, and

(4) only one of these vacancies has been filled, and

(5) during the current administration, it has taken an average of 502 days from the time a judgeship becomes vacant until such vacancy is filled, and

(6) the enactment of legislation providing additional funding for the invesigation and prosecution facets of the criminal justice system has a direct and positive impact on the needs and workload of the Judiciary, which is already severely overloaded with criminal cases, and

(7) recommendations by the Judicial Conference for the filling of judicial vacancies are currently made on the basis of historical data alone, and

(8) the General Accounting Office, pursuant to the 1988 Anti-Drug Abuse Act, has developed a computer model that measures the potential effect of fiscal increases on one or more parts of the criminal justice system on the Judiciary, and

(9) the General Accounting Office has established that an increase in the resources allocated to the investigative and prosecutorial parts of the criminal justice system, brings about an increase in the number of criminal cases filed, which in turn adds to the need for additional judgeships, and

(10) the allocation of resources to portions of the Federal criminal justice system other than the Judiciary contributes to the need for additional judgeships that cannot be anticipated by the use of historical data alone, and

(11) the use of historical data alone, because of its inability to project the need for additional judgeships attributable to the increase in criminal caseload adds to the delay in meeting the needs of the Judiciary.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that the Judicial Conference should be encouraged to make its recommendations to Congress for additional judgeships utilizing historical data and a workload estimate model designed to anticipate an increase in criminal filings resulting from increased funding in one or more components of the Federal criminal justice system, and to take into account the time expended in the appointive and confirmation process.

SEC. 3069. AWARD OF ATTORNEY'S FEES.

Section 519 of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting "(a) IN GENERAL.—" before "Except"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(b) AWARD OF FEES.—

"(1) CURRENT EMPLOYEES.—Upon the application of any current employee of the Department of Justice or of any Federal public defender's office who was the subject of a criminal or disciplinary investigation instituted on or after the date of enactment of this Act by the Department of Justice, which investigation related to such employee's discharge of his or her official duties, and which investigation resulted in neither disciplinary action nor criminal indictment against such employee, the Attorney General shall award reimbursement for reasonable attorney's fees incurred by that employee as a result of such investigation.

"(2) FORMER EMPLOYEES.—Upon the application of any former employee of the Department of Justice or of any Federal public defender's office who was the subject of a criminal or disciplinary investigation instituted on or after the date of enactment of this Act by the Department of Justice, which investigation related to such employee's discharge of his or her official duties, and which investigation resulted in neither disciplinary action nor criminal indictment against such employee, the Attorney General shall award reimbursement for those reasonable attorney's fees incurred by that former employee as a result of such investigation.

"(3) EVALUATION OF AWARD.—The Attorney General may make an inquiry into the reasonableness of the sum requested. In making such inquiry the Attorney General shall consider:

"(A) the sufficiency of the documentation accompanying the request;

"(B) the need or justification for the underlying item;

"(C) the reasonableness of the sum requested in light of the nature of the investigation; and

"(D) current rates for legal services in the community in which the investigation took place.".

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 3371), to control and prevent crime, submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

The Senate amendment struck out all of the House bill after the enacting clause and inserted a substitute text.

The House recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate with an amendment which is a substitute for the House bill and the Senate amendment. The differences between the House bill, the Senate amendment, and the substitute agreed to in conference are noted below, except for clerical corrections, conforming changes made necessary by agreements reached by the conferees, and minor drafting and clarifying changes.

TITLE I—DEATH PENALTY

Procedures: The House recedes to Title II of the Senate amendment with the following modifications: (1) minimum age (18) adopted from the House bill; (2) victim impact statement language adopted from the House bill; and (3) technical language on catch-all mitigation factor adopted from the House bill.

Offenses: The Senate recedes to the House on including the following death-eligible offenses: (1) murder by an escaped prisoner (House only); (2) rape and child molestation murders (House only); (3) death resulting from the sexual exploitation of children (House only); (4) death penalty for gun murders during federal crimes of violence and drug trafficking crimes based on the amount of drugs or gross receipts (similar provisions in House bill and Senate amendment although House bill requires twice the amount of drugs or twice the gross receipts); and (5) murder of U.S. nationals abroad (similar provisions in House bill and Senate amendment).

TITLE II—HABEAS CORPUS

The Senate recedes to Title XI of the House bill, which, with one minor modification, is identical to the provision reported by the House Judiciary Committee.

TITLE III—EXCLUSIONARY RULE

The House recedes to section 2301 of the Senate amendment, which codifies the United States Supreme Court's decision in United States v. Leon.

TITLE IV—COERCED CONFESSIONS

The Senate recedes to section 901 of the House bill, which reverses the United States Supreme Court's decision in Arizona v. Fulminante, by declaring that the admission of a coerced confession into evidence in a criminal trial shall never be considered harmless error.

TITLE V—FIREARMS

SUBTITLE A—THE BRADY HANDGUN VIOLENCE PREVENTION ACT

The House recedes to sections 2701–2703 of the Senate amendment, with modifications. In section 2701(a) of the Senate amendment, the provision relating to the triggering of the waiting period is modified to provide that the period will begin when the 'transferor' furnishes notice of the contents of the statement to the chief law enforcement officer, rather than when the 'transferee' furnishes such notice. The provision in section 2701(a) that would have created a new section 922(a)(1)(B) of Title 18, United States Code, is replaced by the House version of its comparable section. The provision allowing an exemption based upon remote location and absence of telecommunications facilities is modified to also require a ratio of less than 2.5 law enforcement officers to 1,000 square miles of land area. The Senate provision requiring law enforcement to issue an exemption from the waiting period to a prospective handgun purchaser demonstrating a threat to his or her life is replaced by the comparable House provision. The Section authorizing grants for the improvement of criminal records is modified to be administered through the Bureau of Justice statistics. Several other technical and conforming modifications were adopted.

SUBTITLE B—GUN CRIME PENALTIES

SUBTITLE E—GAMBLING

Section 3041 of the Conference Substitute adds a new chapter 178 to title 28, United States Code, which makes unlawful and subjects to suits for injunctive relief any wagering or gambling scheme based on an amateur or professional sporting event. Exceptions are provided for parimutuel animal racing and jai-alai, as well as for sports wagering activities in the State of Nevada and the sports lotteries which have been conducted in recent years in the States of Oregon and Delaware; the State of New Jersey is given one year, if it so chooses, to have in operation sports wagering in its Atlantic City casinos.

Section 3043 of the Conference Substitute clarifies the prohibitions in existing law regarding gambling activities on foreign-flag vessels in international waters, and conforms the prohibitions regarding such activities on United States-flag ships. The term "segment of a voyage" is used in the new subsection (b)(2) of 15 U.S.C. 1175, as amended, to refer to an interval between two stops which is part of a longer overall voyage. Subsection (b)(2) works in conjunction with the other provisions of section 1175 to prohibit use or repair of a gambling device on voyages or segments of a voyage that begin and end in the same State (for example, between two islands of the State of Hawaii) if the State enacts a statute prohibiting such use or repair. A detailed explanation of the bill on which section 3043(b) is based appears in the report of the House of Representatives to accompany H.R. 3282 (H. Rept. 102–357).

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 301, the conference report is considered as having been read.

The gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS].

☐ 0720

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the time has finally come for each of us to take responsibility as citizen-legislators and fight crime with actions, not slogans. It may be hard—very hard—for some to finally let go of what they perceive to be an election year issue, but our streets are flowing with blood and our constituents don't want any more words that fly ever so lightly into the atmosphere, signifying nothing. They are tired of promises; they are tired of politicians vying with each other to prove just who is tougher on crime; they are especially tired of purists who want 100 percent of one thing or nothing at all. Yes, crime is a wonderful issue for politicians. But crime is perhaps the most compelling social reality that threatens our daily lives. It is time to shed the issue and take on the problem.

Sunday, after 3 weeks of unconscionable political delay in the other body, the House and Senate conferees on the crime bill reached a final agreement that is historic in scope and approach. Without question, it is the toughest, most stringent crime control bill since the Federal Government was forced to take drastic steps to fight social anarchy in the 1920's and 1930's.

The bill creates 56 Federal capital punishment offenses, including the killing of law enforcement officials, death resulting from hijacking, terrorists, and drug kingpin activity, drive-by shootings, hostage taking resulting in death, child and sexual abuse resulting in death, and attempts to assassinate the President of the United States, to name just a few. These are heinous crimes, and must be dealt with appropriately. But, I ask my colleagues: Does it not serve our constituents to focus as well on preventing crime, rather than just ratcheting up the punishment after it occurs?

If we are going to take concrete steps to prevent crime, to cut down on recidivism, to support putting our police back on the streets where they belong and safeguarding our schools as learning environments, then we need programs to address these problems. And, we have them in H.R. 3371.

We have a program that puts the cop back on the beat, because there is no substitute for a direct enforcement presence. In another area, we require mandatory drug testing for all prisoners with a drug abuse history, in order to reduce repeat offender behavior.

Finally, we create a host of programs to further the use of DNA analysis and crime solving, to provide law enforcement scholarships to better train our police, to create antigang programs to combat this developing trend, and to set up boot camps for youthful offenders to learn the value of the straight and narrow before they become hardened career criminals.

Yet, in setting out harsh new penalties, and creating needed new prevention programs, we have been mindful that the very same constitution that guaranteed domestic tranquility for its citizens, also created a bill of rights for every American. This House has twice upheld this balance between individual rights and efficient law enforcement in its effort to restructure and streamline the doctrine of habeas corpus without gutting it completely. A strict statutory time period is set within which death row petitioners must file petitions, and there is a virtual prohibition of all successive habeas corpus applications aimed at delay, delay, delay. In addition, while we want all properly obtained evidence admitted into any criminal trial, that does not include the rack and the thumbscrew; and coerced confessions have no place in our system of justice. That is made clear in H.R. 3371. This is not a dictatorship.

In the howl of the crime bill debate, a few facts tend to become lost. Let us remember as we proceed that 95 percent of all serious crime cases in this country are the province of State and local officials. In other words, this bill, which deals with Federal offenses, involves not more than one-twentieth of the criminal activity out there in America. Let us be very precise in our statements before proclaiming any crime initiative—as meritorious as this one surely is—as a panacea for the end of crime.

Let us remember one last thing. Less than 6 weeks ago, on October 16, the House of Representatives voted 305 to 118 to adopt a crime bill; the Senate also passed a crime bill; and the two have now been reconciled. Compromise is an essential element of that process, and that means not everybody will be perfectly pleased with the product. But does that mean we keep to the status quo? The substantial majority of this body, as well as the other body, wants a crime bill now. We are not willing to continue quibbling for months and months more. We want to discharge our duties to the American public and we will do so today.

I ask you to support H.R. 3371.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this is a disastrous time to discuss a very complicated but nonetheless critical piece of legislation, and so I beg of you to try and stay awake, as I am, because what we do here is significant, not only to our own legislative records but to our communities back home.

Back about 380 B.C. a man named Hippocrates gave some advice to physicians. He said, "First, do no harm." That is good advice for Congressmen, too: Do no harm.

I suggest to you that this bill, which is the product of an absurdity called a conference committee—and you should have been there, because they could do a miniseries about the way that railroad ran—and that conference committee report is not an anticrime bill but rather it is a step back from present law.

I will try to demonstrate that to you, and I stipulate that nobody is pro-crime, nobody is pro-criminal, nobody, but out of ignorance, which we could call euphemistically a failure to understand, out of ideology, which is certainly present in this Chamber on both sides of the aisle, some people instinctively want to protect the accused rather than the victim or, simply out of being misled by people in whom you misplace your trust, but I know well meaning people are going to support this bill.

I suggest to you it is a terrible mistake. Crime is nonpartisan. It is not Democrat. It is not Republican.

One of the letters that we rely on is from the attorneys general of the States, 31 of them, 15 of them are Democrats, and 16 of them are Republicans, so we are talking about a professional view about crime.

Our cities are turning into Beiruts. Walking through a city used to be an exercise in life and liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Now it is an exercise in fear and in terror, and the pursuit of survival.

So we come here today in a spasm of spurious macho to prove to our constituents, as we beat our chests, that we are tough on crime.

If you want to be tougher on crime than this conference report, go back to your office and do not vote, because when you vote for this, you are retrenching. You are stepping back. You are retreating.

Because of its critical importance, let us examine the pretense this bill puts forward. Now, this is complicated. It is complicated for me, and I have been a lawyer since 1950.

But just to show you how misled you are, those who are within hearing of my voice, you have heard two things. You have heard there is no retroactivity, do not even use the word, said my friend from California. He said you are going to hear it. It is demagoguery. Then you heard from the member of the Committee on Rules, authority that only one petition for appeal is permissible under this conference report.

I submit to you both of these comments are way off the wall, much off the mark.

Let us talk about retroactivity, because that is one of the major flaws with the habeas corpus that emerges from this conference. Now, section 2256 discusses the retroactivity aspect. There is a case, Teague versus Lane, that holds that the law that was in effect at the time of the crime is the law that will control in all of these appeals, whether a direct appeal in the State courts, or a collateral appeal in the State courts, and then to the Federal court where you make another collateral appeal pursuant to habeas corpus laws.

The current law is that in all of these proceedings there shall be no retroactivity. The law that was in effect at the time is the law that controls.

Well, here is what they say, artfully, cleverly, to nullify that. Section 2256: "In an action filed under this chapter, the Court shall not apply a new rule."

Gee, that sounds great. Then they define "new rule" to make it almost impossible of attainment. What they give with one hand they take away with the other.

The description of a "new rule" now says, "For the purposes of this section, the term 'new rule' means a clear break from precedent announced by the Supreme Court of the United States that could not reasonably have been anticipated at the time the claimant's sentence became final in State court."

So under this definition, they issue a new rule, because most new rules are simply adjustments to the law and not a clear break from precedent announced by the Supreme Court of the United States that could not have been reasonably anticipated.

There is all kinds of retroactivity. Do not believe me, believe all the prosecutors in the country. Believe the 31 attorneys general, half of them Democrat, half of them Republican, the professionals. Yes, its true, they are not policemen, they are lawyers. They are prosecutors.

Now, as to successive Federal petitions, look at section 206.

If you get section 206 and you read it, you will find that you can have repeated petitions. Repeated petitions.

It says that a second or successive application that was not presented in a prior application shall be dismissed unless—unless, and that is the big word—unless the applicant shows the basis of the claim could not have been discovered by the exercise of reasonable diligence before the applicant filed the prior application or the failure to raise the claim in the prior application was due to action by the State officials, violation of the Constitution, and, get this, the facts underlying the claim would be sufficient if proven to undermine the court's confidence in the applicant's guilt of the offense or offenses for which the capital sentence was imposed, or in the validity of that sentence under Federal law. Again and again and again, reasons for additional petitions.

The attorney general of New Jersey, Robert J. Del Tufo, in a letter signed also by the attorney general of Pennsylvania, says, "This conference report is not a strong anti-crime bill. The proposals favor the convicted murderer, revictimizes the survivors of a murder victim, and penalizes the States. We urge you to reject it."

On and on and on. The prosecutors say that this conference report mugs the American people. It is a sad day when the will of the American people to enact tougher criminal laws is so completely thwarted.

That, my friends, is something you ought to consider.

The habeas procedures adopted by this conference are worse than current law. They overturn at least 14 U.S. Supreme Court decisions that are favorable to law enforcement. They create major new obstacles to the use of the State death penalty laws.

You see, that is the unfunny joke. They add to a list of death penalty circumstances, but then they adjust their procedures so you cannot really use them. They simply enlarge the opportunities for prolonging litigation and for overturning criminal judgments.

Now, I have told you that they overruled the Supreme Court decision in Teague v. Lane. The report limits the definition of new rule to those that are announced by the Supreme Court and involve a clear break from precedent.

This is a novel standard. Almost all later decisions would be retroactively applicable to overturn earlier convictions and sentences that were imposed in conformity with existing law.

There is a famous case out in California, Robert Alton Harris, who brutally murdered two teenage boys in 1978. He has filed eight State habeas petitions and three Federal habeas petitions to get additional rounds of Federal litigation based on rules that would not be applied under current law and were not even in existence at the time he originally litigated his case.

Fourteen years that man has been appealing and appealing and appealing. What we want, My colleagues, is finality. Finality. That is what the victims of crime want, the victims of crime and the families. They are torn and torn reliving those tragic events until they see justice done.

Now, in addition, the habeas provisions before us allow delays of up to a full year to file a Federal habeas petition, rather than 6 months, which is the recommendation of the Powell committee. It rejects the Powell committee recommendations, which limited second and successive petitions to claims addressing guilt or innocence. Instead, it allows successeive petitions to attack the validity of the sentence.

In addition, and here is something you have not heard, standards for the appointed counsel, you have to have competent counsel appointed to defend an indigent criminal defendant. But they are unworkably high in this bill.

Mandatory Federal standards for State capital trial appeals and collateral review are established that are very difficult to attain. Each defendant has to have two—two—attorneys, with years of criminal felony experience, to represent him at every stage of the process.

Now, incredibly, these attorneys are not appointed by the court, by a judge. Who appoints them? The defense bar. And if there are not enough lawyers to go around, the statute is tolled and you wait and you wait and you wait.

So if you have been sentenced to death and you cannot get two competent attorneys who have had over 5 years of criminal felony experience, and the defense bar does not want to appoint them, nothing happens. Nothing happens. A committee of criminal lawyers appoints the defense counsel, not the court.

Now, there are 50 additional offenses for the imposition of the death penalty, but the procedures are constitutionally questionable.

Let me tell you one thing: We could go on and on and take time, but you are exhausted and so am I at this hour.

There is a case, Arizona versus Fulminante. What it holds is very simple. In that case if a law enforcement official coerces a confession out of the defendant, an involuntary confession, that confession, of course, cannot be admitted at the trial.

This case holds, and it is a Supreme Court case, that if there is other evidence sufficient to convict, you may proceed with the other evidence to convict.

Not this bill. Not this tough-on-crime bill. This reverses the Supreme Court Arizona versus Fulminante case and says if there is a coerced confession, the whole case goes out. It is not harmless error.

So that is this tough-on-crime bill. You have got a murderer and you have got plenty of evidence to convict a murderer, but because some stupid or overzealous law enforcement official coerced a confession out of him, he walks. That is the tough bill that they are asking you to support.

The exclusionary rule. The courts have finally come around to understanding that a motion to suppress the evidence because the search and seizure may have been illegal should not result in the criminal walking free, the accused walking free.

That does not accomplish anything. The policeman who made the illegal search is not punished. The only people punished are society by having the evidence of guilt suppressed.

So we have developed a good faith exception. The courts are finally coming around to recognizing a good faith exception to the exclusionary rule.

☐ 0740

What we wanted to do was to extend that to warrantless searches and seizures, if they were made in good faith. Not only has the conference report reversed that or taken that out, but now one must prove that the magistrate who issued the warrant was neutral and detached. The focus in this tough anticrime bill is on the mental attitude and status of the magistrate, not the conduct of the policeman. Is that crazy? Of course it is.

That is what they have given us. They have rolled back the exclusionary rule.

Look, explain this, my friends. When we go home and we mention tough issues, we talk about health care. We talk about education. We talk about the economy. We are going to talk about crime. I would love to hear the explanation, especially from my friend back there who is paying such rapt attention and nodding his head. I want to hear him explain why the conference stripped out provisions in the House bill providing enhanced penalties for drug distribution to pregnant women. Why did they strip out increased penalties for recidivist sex offenders? Why, explain why you stripped out HIV testing for sex offenders? You took out government payment for HIV testing for rape victims. You removed the retired public safety officer death benefit program. Explain how we are so tough on crime that we took out all of those provisions.

If you can explain that, I think that is great.

This is a victory for the ACLU, not law enforcement. I suggest we would do well to listen to the professionals, the prosecutors in a bipartisan, nonpartisan way if we pretend to care and want to do something effective about crime.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HYDE. I yield to the gentlewoman from Colorado.

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, the only thing I wanted to point out is, the gentleman is talking about this bill versus where he would like to be. I think we also have to look at this bill versus where we are. I think there is absolutely no question this bill tightens up habeas versus where it is today.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, recapturing my time, I radically disagree with the gentlewoman.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes and 30 seconds to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES], a distinguished chairman of one of our subcommittees.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

One of the most disappointing aspects of this session of Congress is that politics began about 2 months ago. Usually we have a few months, and already we are in an acrimonious debate. You would not recognize the legislation that we are debating because of the extreme rhetoric on both sides.

I was a member of the National District Attorneys Association for about 10 years. I loved it; good organization. I do not know what has happened to it. They seem to have left the reservation. They have left the reservation. I cannot imagine, with the attitude that is prevalent today, this association ever passing a bill of rights. I cannot imagine, with some of their views.

It is an old adage that a right without a remedy is nothing. And that is what habeas corpus provides.

Look, it is not about the capital offenses in here, and it is not about the provisions dealing with sex offenders, and it really is not about the exclusionary rule, as much as it is about habeas corpus. That is what we are debating. That is what it is all about.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE] indicated that the conference left a lot to be desired. I must say, I agree with that. But why? Why?

First of all, two Republican Senators had the crime legislation held up for 3 weeks. One of them had it held up because of the ratio, going to conference, Democrats and Republicans. And the other had it hung up over the gun legislation that was in there.

And the President had to bring them into the White House to unglue it so that we could begin to debate it. It was released on Friday, and we stayed here the weekend to try to resolve the differences.

There were a number of provisions that were dropped that I would have preferred to have held onto, which I felt would have strengthened the bill more. But unfortunately we had to drop a lot of provisions because we could not reach accommodation.

During that conference, as my colleagues on this side of the aisle know, there was a filibuster in process. And it was very difficult for us to resolve this conference. It is no way to legislate.

So I agree with my colleague from Illinois that it was not the best process, but it is the one that we were left with because on the one hand the President is demanding a crime bill and on the other hand the Republicans in the Senate are stonewalling.

Let us get right to the heart of habeas corpus. There are so many misstatements about what habeas corpus does.

First of all, the suggestion that the 1 year is unreasonable. That came from the National District Attorneys Association. That was their submission. I have their letter, their resolution. The 1 year came from them.

Second, insofar as successive petitions that my colleague from Illinois got into, read the legislation. In the first place, successive petitions, the difference between the Republicans and the President's plan and the Democratic plan is that in the Republican plan, a judge in a habeas corpus process could not reach an illegal sentence. If an individual had perjured himself in a bifurcated trial during the sentencing process and the 1 year had run, that prisoner would be executed because under habeas corpus the process had run. And they would not be able to reach him.

Insofar as retroactivity, the gentleman does a dance around that. There is no question but we redefine new rules, and I grant the gentleman that, but it is a reasonable manner in which to modify that retroactivity provision because it deals with a clear break from precedent announced by the Supreme Court.

Finally, the President's plan would have us have two systems for defendants in this country, the opt-in provision. If in fact a person was to take advantage of habeas reforms, we provide competent counsel. If a person did not want to provide competent counsel, they do not opt in. So we have a system for the rich and a system for the poor.

It is a good bill. It is a strong bill, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. EMERSON].

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the bill.

Mr. Speaker, we've done it once again. Once again we have turned a crime bill into a criminals' bill. The bill is supposed to impose new Federal death penalties for heinous crimes—but with the habeas corpus provisions in this bill, these hardened criminals can't be executed—at least not without multiple appeals in both State and Federal courts. If we are going to have a death penalty for heinous crimes—and the will of the American people is demanding a death penalty—then let's have a death penalty and not a "we'll-execute-you-if-you-don't-die-of-old-age-first" penalty. Too many innocent people like Patricia Lexie are dying from senseless violence and the Congress is making it easier for criminals to get off the hook. This isn't the modestly reasonable bill on which the House worked its will. This is a compromise bill by liberals with liberals in conference. This certainly is not a bill manifesting concern for victims of crime.

We're making it easier for criminals to exclude evidence of their crimes from their trials, too. No matter if a police officer acting in good faith catches a criminal red-handed with kilos of cocaine; if the officer didn't have a warrant, those kilos of cocaine can't be used as evidence in a trial.

This bill also contains the "Brady Bill"—it requires an onerous process and waiting period for the purchase of a gun, and it requires local law enforcement to do a background check on every purchaser. Not only are we making life easier for criminals, we're making life more difficult for law-abiding citizens, who bear the real burden of these gun control provisions.

And if that's not enough, we're mandating official bilingualism in a crime bill. This bill requires the Bureau of Justice Assistance to develop models for the Safe School Antidrug Program in Spanish as well as in English. Moreover, each and every school that applies for an antidrug grant under this program must describe the Spanish-language materials it will use before it may even be considered for a grant. This applies to every school, whether or not the school even has any Spanish-speaking students.

The gentleman who authored this Spanish-language amendment will tell you that it only applies "where appropriate." That may well have been the gentleman's intent, but quite frankly, that is not what the bill itself does. Read it yourself. This legislation itself says that each school shall include these materials in its application—it makes no mention of "when appropriate" or "when a significant number of students speak Spanish."

I strongly support doing everything we can to reach all students with our antidrug message. But this language does absolutely nothing to reach Chinese-speaking students, Vietnamese-speaking students, German-speaking students, or anyone else who speaks any other of the 150 languages spoken in this country. This language only mandates that the Federal Government operate in two languages—Spanish and English. Let's not make the same mistake. I urge you to vote against this procrime bill.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SENSENBRENNER].

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] has a very short attention span on who has been stalling the crime package. We may recall that on March 6th the President of the United States stood in this Chamber and challenged the Congress to pass a crime package within 100 days. The Committee on the Judiciary did not even hold a legislative hearing on any of the crime package during that 100 days. It took until September for the committee to mark up a bill and send it to the floor.

When it came to the floor, the rule that was requested by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS] did not set up a conference immediately, which is the case usually when the other body passes a bill, so that we can get on with it. And the delay in setting up the conference was caused only in part by two Senators over on the other side. But in a far greater part by not asking to set up that conference at the time the House passed the bill in October.

On the merits of this proposal, this bill contains $3.1 billion of authorizations for various kinds of law enforcement assistant programs, including safe schools and cop-on-the-beat, but not one penny of appropriations. We all know here that under the budget agreement that any increase to fund new programs in domestic discretionary spending has got to be matched with either a tax increase or a dollar-for-dollar reduction in other domestic discretionary spending programs.

Quite frankly, that is not going to happen. This year the Congress reduced the President's request for law enforcement by $470 million. If we add $3.1 billion on top of that, we are simply not going to find the money. It is putting an illusion in front of the local officials and the sheriffs and the local police departments all around the country that there is going to be Federal money available when every one of us here knows that that is not going to be the case.

That is a fraud, Mr. Speaker. It is a fraud on a lot of people who think the Congress is acting in good faith when we know that very little of that $3.1 billion will be appropriated come appropriations bill time next year.

The second issue which I would like to bring to the attention of the Members, Mr. Speaker, is the firearms provision that is contained at the end of the Brady bill. As the Members may recall, when the House passed the Brady bill we rejected the Staggers instant check system by a rather substantial margin. A revised instant check system appeared in the conference committee version of the bill which emanated from the other body, and it says that once the instant check system in on line, the Brady bill, which applies to handgun sunsets, but the instant check system applies to all firearms purchases, not just handguns.

I have attempted to maintain an objective viewpoint on gun legislation, with my strong support of the Brady bill, but also my opposition to the semi-automatic weapons bill, which I did not think did the trick. The House agreed with my position on both of them. What I am here to tell the House this morning is that the permanent provisions relating to handguns are much broader than the Staggers provisions. It makes a provision that the gentleman from Florida, Mr. MCCOLLUM, put in, the drug bill of 1988, permanent and it triggers it as of the sunset of the Brady bill.

This is back door gun registration, there is no way of getting around it, and it expands the instant check provision to all firearms, not just the handguns and perhaps the semiautomatic weapons that are causing the problem, but the hunting rifles, the hunting shotguns, and every other firearm that is transferred through a licensed gun dealer.

This is a blank check, and when someone asks, come campaign time about this, do not say "I did not know about it when it passed," because I am telling the Members about it now.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, would the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SENSENBRENNER] give me his attention just a moment? I want to commend the gentleman, because he has studied this bill very carefully and I am delighted that he came back from Bermuda, though he missed the conference. He has shown great intelligence in reading the bill and in paying attention to it this day or two that we have had to evaluate it. I am very grateful for his attention.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DINGELL], who is familiar with the gun allocations.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, as my colleagues know I have long been diligent in protecting the rights of firearms owners' enforcement from wrongful pieces of legislation. While I will observe that this legislation in that particular is not all that I would have liked it to have been, I will observe that it has been significantly improved by the distinguished gentleman from Texas in conference. I commend him for it.

I recognize that the other portions of the bill are good. I intend to vote for this legislation. I urge my colleagues to do likewise. The firearms provisions, which on many occasions were oppressive at different times during the career of this legislation as it went through the process, has been much improved and much cleaned up, and I believe it is a piece of legislation this body can support and I should support.

I commend the conferees and I commend my dear friend, the gentleman from Texas, for having presented this legislation to us today.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes and 30 seconds to the gentleman from California [Mr. EDWARDS], the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee.

Mr. EDWARDS of California. Mr. Speaker, this is an interesting debate and I will not take a long time. I think it is curious that the Members who are opposed to the bill have neglected completely the hard-hitting provisions in the bill to fight crime, one after another. I have not heard from this side of the aisle those mentioned once, and yet our chairman, the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS] has itemized them in his opening statement. Was no one listening?

This is a crime fighting bill, and people who vote against this vote against it at their peril. The Members will not get those provisions again easily.

Now, the ranking Republican on the subcommittee that I am honored to chair of course is the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE] and I was very interested in what he said about the exclusionary rule. He made a strong pitch for it.

Let us be very clear about what we mean by the exclusionary rule. It is to allow the police to use illegal evidence in criminal trials, illegal evidence, evidence illegally, against the law, gathered.

Now, in the House we approve it, I regret to say, but why was it excluded in the bill? Why was not the present law codified in the bill? Because Senator RUDMAN, the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire, a former prosecutor and a hard-line prosecutor, as he is always proud to say, said "Under no circumstance will the Senate of the United States legalize illegal evidence." That is why that provision is in the bill, illegal evidence, licensing the police of this country to use evidence in criminal trials illegally gathered. Does it not shock the Members even to think of it?

Now, last, habeas corpus. Let us just for a moment look at history. William French Smith was the Attorney General under Ronald Reagan. He made the statement in one of his opening speeches that they were determined to get rid of habeas corpus, they really wanted 50 different criminal laws throughout the country, because if we get rid of habeas corpus that is what we are going to have. We are going to have 50 different codes of criminal law, because there will be no appeals, no appeals, and some of the laws will never be able to be brought in line with the Bill of Rights to the Constitution.

I need to say once more I really do understand why the prosecutors are against the bill, not that any of them have read it, it is obvious. And as I say over and over again about all we have heard in the last couple of hours is our friends who are against the bill who just get up and read something from some prosecutor.

Of course, some prosecutor. Why would they not be against the habeas provisions? Because 40 percent of their convictions are overturned. They do not like to be reviewed and then have to remand back to the trial court or new hearings. Forty percent of them, those are the statistics. We had that evidence in the hearings.

Lastly, there is an emergency committee out there to save habeas corpus. Let me remind Members that four distinguished former Attorneys General of the United States are the chairmen, the co-chairmen, two Republicans and two Democrats; the two Democrats, Ben Civiletti, and Nick Katzenbach, and of course the Republicans, Ed Levy, and Elliot Richardson, all very distinguished, all good prosecutors.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER].

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I thank my chairman for yielding. I want to build on this a bit, and that is, first of all, we have eight different groups of police officers pushing for this bill. Those are the people I feel sorry for. They are the ones on the frontlines. I do not know, there may be more than eight groups in America, but here are eight of them that back it.

Second, I want everybody to deal with the facts and not fiction. We have heard a lot of fiction here. Please get this fact sheet where it shows what is in the Bush proposal and what is in the proposal we are talking about. If the Members want to prevent crime, this is the bill to vote for. None of these preventive measures is in the Bush proposal.

No. 1, all these different ideas that have come in, starting with $1.2 billion to go to State and local agencies to fight crime, that is where 95 percent of the crime is.

☐ 0800

Every State and locality is under tremendous crunches. I think that is why the police really appreciate this bill because they see some help finally coming, rather than more and more lectures about this; plus we have put in some very creative programs.

I also want to point out there are some other things in here that if we do not pass, we will not have them. That is like the registry for people who have been guilty of child abuse and many other such things; very positive things. Deal with the facts. Do not deal with fiction and vote for this crime bill.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Missouri [Mr. VOLKMER].

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to this legislation.

I believe that we here in this Congress, many of us feel we must represent our sportsmen and hunters.

This legislation is bad for our sportsmen and hunters.

The Brady bill as contained in this legislation is worse than the Brady bill that was passed by this House. I cannot understand why anybody who is concerned about their sportsmen and their hunters would like to have that man who walks in and buys a shotgun, as the gentleman from Wisconsin has said, goes in and buys a shotgun and has to have a background check, nor do I think a person who goes in and buys just a hunting rifle, a 22, single shot 22 has to have a background check.

Those of you who are serious about protecting the rights of hunters and sportsmen, I say to you, vote against this legislation.

Mr. BRYANT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOLKMER. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BRYANT. Mr. Speaker, if it is as the gentleman says, I say to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. VOLKMER], why has the NRA not come out against this conference report?

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. RAMSTAD].

Mr. RAMSTAD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference committee report on the Omnibus Crime Control Act of 1991, H.R. 3371. Although the conference committee report includes several diluted provisions, it represents a compromise and a truly comprehensive anticrime package.

It is time for Congress to put public safety ahead of politics. As the president of the National Fraternal Order of Police said yesterday, "I don't think we can sit back and let partisan politics tear away at a piece of legislation we in law enforcement need right now."

In these final hours of this session of Congress, the choice is this anticrime package or no anticrime package. With violent crimes in America up 10 percent from last year, and new record numbers of murders and rapes, I believe Congress must address the rising and very serious crime problem now.

This conference committee report does contain significantly tougher penalties for criminals. It imposes the death penalty for some 50 Federal crimes, including drug kingpins. It triples the penalty for drug dealers who use minors and significantly increases sentences for violent crimes involving firearms. Further, the conference committee report provides tougher penalties for selling drugs in public housing and in other drug-free zones.

This conference committee report also includes a provision that is important to all Minnesotans, the Jacob Wetterling Crimes Against Children Registration Act. This legislation will require convicted child molesters to register with local law enforcement for 10 years after their release from prison. Given the extremely high recidivism rate for sex offenders against children, law enforcement needs this national registration law for child abduction cases.

Mr. Speaker, there are other positive provisions in this package, including $3 billion in fiscal year 1992 for hiring more law enforcement at the Federal, State, and local levels, and for local law enforcement to put more police on street patrols. As the president of the International Association of Chiefs of Police said, "We need that type of help because we're in such straits right now."

There is substantial aid for residential drug treatment and drug testing for prisoners. The bill also provides more resources for prosecutors and creates a police corps which would offer scholarships to college students who agree to serve as police officers after graduation.

Furthermore, the conference committee report restricts the appeals which State prisoners can file in Federal court. This habeas corpus reform sets a 1-year deadline on filing petitions and bars successive petitions unless new evidence emerges or a prisoner could not have reasonably included a claim in the first petition. While I share the President's concern about this diluted habeas corpus reform, I also know this provision has very little to do with removing violent criminals from our streets. Habeas corpus affects those criminals already convicted and behind bars.

In addition, the bill allows introduction of improperly seized evidence in Federal court cases if police acted in good faith while executing a search warrant. The conference committee rejected a broader House passed version, supported by the President, that would have allowed improperly seized evidence even if police had no warrant, as long as they acted in good faith.

Mr. Speaker, this conference committee report is far from perfect, and as a member of the Judiciary Subcommittee on crime, my support comes with several reservations. But given the tragic national crime and drug epidemic that is sweeping our Nation and tearing away at our social fabric, we must choose between an imperfect crime bill or no crime bill at all. In making that choice, I conclude that this compromise conference committee report deserves enactment.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAZZOLI], the chairman of the Subcommittee on International Law, Immigration and Refugees of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate my friend yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I think what we are looking for at this late hour or really this early hour, is balance. I think on balance this is a good bill, not a great bill, but a good bill. It has some very important anticrime measures in it, preventive measures, which are not on the books today which I think are very worth supporting.

But most importantly, Mr. Speaker, the two elements I would like to speak about briefly, one is that we do finally have Brady type waiting language in this bill that has taken us years and years to achieve. I would think it would be terrible if we left this moment without adopting this legislation.

Lastly, there is made permanent in here a 75 percent Federal, 25 percent local share of anticrime money, and in a time when local law enforcement efforts have got to be ratcheted up to prevent crime and at a time when the revenues locally are ratcheting lower because of problems they have in revenues, this is a very valid concern. We are now responding to local concerns.

Mr. Speaker, on the whole this is a good bill. Please support this bill.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Florida [Mr. MCCOLLUM].

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, sadly the bill before us is worse than present law in two out of the three major provisions that the President asked for in his initial crime package.

We do see enhanced death penalty provisions. There is no doubt about that, but in the area of habeas corpus, we beat a retreat because we do not provide the kind of relief that it is supposed to do. That was supposed to end the endless appeals from death row and others.

Instead, what we have done in this bill that came out of conference is to complicate matters so that the appeals time will be lengthened, and that is why this Member objects so strenuously in part to this bill.

The other thing that we do, or we were supposed to do in this bill and we do not do and we retreat from present law about it, we were supposed to allow more evidence in with respect to those cases like drug cases. We were supposed to make it easier by adopting the good faith exception to the exclusionary rule of evidence by expanding the Supreme Court decision and in principle and exception to this rule in those cases where a police officer reasonably and objectively believes that his search is legal in cases with search warrants to those cases where there are no search warrants, but he also reasonably believes that it is legal, as two circuit courts of appeal have done in this country; but instead of adopting that in the conference, which by the way we adopted on the floor of the House, this expanded exception, by a vote of 247 to 165 on the 17th of October, instead of doing that, not only do we not do that, we adopted a provision that narrows the existing Supreme Court exception and will make it more difficult to get evidence in cases where there are search warrants. That is what we have done with this situation.

We have reduced the scope of what you can get into evidence. We will have fewer convictions if you pass this bill as a result of this.

Is it any wonder prosecutors oppose this and any thinking American should oppose it, because we have beaten a retreat by lengthening the appeals time that you have from death row cases and by instead of allowing more evidence in, we have changed the rules of the Supreme Court so in search warrant cases you will have less evidence allowed.

Mr. Speaker, let us vote no on this bill. It is not a criminal justice bill.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. CHAPMAN], a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. CHAPMAN. Mr. Speaker, I could not disagree more with what the previous speaker said.

I say that from 8 years experience as a district attorney with hundreds of felony trials and experience as a capital murder case prosecutor.

I do not know how any Member of this body can in good faith say the habeas corpus provisions in this bill lengthen appeals in criminal cases. That is not true and every Member of this body knows it.

As a prosecutor, when you restrict the number of petitions of habeas corpus to one and impose a time limit of one year, when today there are no restrictions and no time limits, how you can say that is not a restriction of the right to habeas corpus is beyond me.

And as to successive petitions, to my friend, the gentleman from Illinois, yes, there are exceptions. There can be successive petitions, but instead of talking legal mumbo jumbo, let us talk about the real world of criminal prosecutions.

What are the exceptions? The exceptions apply when someone else confesses. Would you deny a man on death row his freedom when after his 1-year statute of limitations for habeas petition has expired, someone else confesses?

☐ 0810

You would. If the State hides exculpatory evidence and does not reveal it at the trial, the defendant has no way of knowing it or getting it and you would deny him his freedom. Your position would.

When chemical or ballistic analysis years later, not available to the defendant at the trial, shows he was not guilty, would you deny him his freedom? You would. That is not reasonable.

As to the mandatory experience—and this is a prosecutor with hundreds of experiences—I cannot believe my friend from Illinois would find unreasonable that if the Government wants to take a life, that 5 years' experience by the defense attorney is unreasonable to represent him in that case. And to represent him on appeal, that 3 years of experience is unreasonable.

I have prosecuted a capital murder case. I know the onus when you as a Government lawyer want to take the life of someone. And it blows my mind that you should suggest that that should be done by defense counsel with no experience.

I think that is wrong.

Yes, there are parts of this bill that I would change, there are things that we could do better. But this is a crime bill. It limits habeas; it will prevent crime. It ought to be passed by this body.

I urge my colleagues to support it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. PANETTA). The gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS] has 7 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE] has 7½ minutes remaining.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. THOMAS].

Mr. THOMAS of Wyoming. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the bill.

Mr. Speaker, here we go again.

We need an effective crime bill, and I'm ready to vote for a real crime bill. But we can't seem to shake the notion that, by controlling the access of law-abiding citizens to gun purchases, somehow we'll reduce crime.

The Brady bill language in this crime bill isn't going to keep people from selling guns out of the trunks of cars; it isn't going to stop thefts of guns from law-abiding gunowners; and it sure isn't going to stop people from using guns for illegal acts, no matter where they got them!

If the Congress was really serious about fighting crime, the conferees would have chosen the tougher provisions from each bill and brought them to us. Instead, they adopted the weaker option in several instances, and kept the antigun language that punishes law-abiding citizens—not criminals.

Mr. Speaker, we need crime control, not gun control. This conference report just doesn't cut it on either.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HARRIS].

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the conference committee report. This is not an anticrime bill. This is not a law enforcement bill. This is not a victims' rights bill, it is the opposite of all those things.

If this is an anticrime bill, then why does the Department of Justice oppose it? If this is a law enforcement bill, then why does the National Association of District Attorneys oppose it? If this is an anticrime or law enforcement bill, then why have more than 30 State attorneys general signed a letter urging the President to veto this bill? If this is a victims' rights bill, then why are victims' groups unalterably opposed to it?

We hear much talk today about finality of judgment and about ending the intolerable delay in carrying out sentences, including capital sentences. This bill will not make things better. Instead, it will destroy what little finality of judgment we have, and it will multiply delay many fold. The most important action the Supreme Court has taken to ensure finality of judgment is its 1989 decision in Teague versus Lane, which limits the retroactive effect of new decisions on old cases. The Teague decision helps ensure that when State courts comply with existing constitutional law their judgments will not be upset years later because of changes in the law that could not be anticipated. This bill repeals the Teague decision with a vengence. In fact, this bill is written in such a way that the law on retroactivity will be even worse for law enforcement than it was before the Teague decision. If you want endless delay and never-ending relitigation of every criminal conviction, then you want this bill. However, if you believe, as I do, that we do not need more delay and more relitigation in our legal system, then you should join me in voting against this bill.

It is no answer to say that this bill contains a one-year statute of limitations for filing habeas corpus petitions. That requirement is so riddled with exceptions that it is worthless.

We also hear much talk today about the need for better counsel in the trial of capital cases, and I am all for ensuring competent counsel. However, the draconian counsel provisions of this bill are designed to obstruct, delay, and prevent the imposition of capital punishment. I cannot support that. This bill would also turn over to private groups, such as capital resource centers, the authority for appointing counsel and evaluating their performance. I cannot support that.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARRIS. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. HYDE. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is aware that the attorney general of Texas disagrees with the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CHAPMAN] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS], the gentleman is aware of that?

Mr. HARRIS. I am.

Mr. Speaker, this bill seeks to effectively overrule the Supreme Court's Strickland versus Washington decision in capital cases. I cannot support that.

We also hear much talk today about women's rights and interests, and I am certainly for that. In fact, I welcome this vote, because it is an important test vote for our commitment in the area of women's rights. We sent the conference committee a bill requiring HIV testing of rapists, and a bill that would fund HIV testing for rape victims. The conference committee deleted those provisions. We sent the conference committee a bill that mandated enhanced punishment for repeat sexual offenders. The conference committee deleted that provision. How can anyone who believes in women's rights and in protecting women victims of violent sexual attack justify what the conference committee has done to our bill? How can anyone vote to approve such utter contempt for the rights and interests of women and of the victims of violent sexual attack?

The Association of National District Attorneys is right. The attorneys general of more than 30 States are right. The victims groups are right. This bill is not an anticrime bill. It will hurt, not help law enforcement. It will hurt, not help victims and survivors of crime. I urge a no bill.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 15 seconds to the gentleman from Texas, [Mr. BRYANT].

Mr. BRYANT. Mr. Speaker, I think one of the many things that Mr. HYDE, failed to investigate before coming to the floor today and speaking about is the nature of the Texas attorney general's office.

I say the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. HYDE, he would be interested to learn that the Texas attorney general is a civil official who has no power to prosecute criminal cases whatsoever.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I knew Mr. Maddox real well, his predecessor.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. FEIGHAN].

Mr. FEIGHAN. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I want to start by expressing my gratitude to you, to Mr. SCHUMER, and to each of your hard-working staffs. This crime bill would not have been possible without your leadership, dedication, and endurance.

Although I fear that we are laboring in the shadow of a senseless veto, the bill before us is a good crime bill. It is a bill that members can be proud to vote for.

We can be proud because action on crime is something our constituents have demanded for two decades, ever since a wave of violent crime began to seriously erode the American way of life.

As a result, our children are growing up in a more frightening world, not just in our cities but in our suburbs, our small towns, and now in rural America where the largest increases in crimes of violence are taking place.

The time for a crime bill is long past overdue and now we have one. Let's pass it and get it to George Bush's desk.

Mr. Chairman, I don't claim that this is a perfect crime bill. The fact is that we don't pass much legislation that is perfect.

We can try for several more months to achieve a bill that would come closer to perfection but that would be pitting the ideal against the good. That would accomplish nothing but delay. Delay while the senseless slaughter on our streets continues.

The President has threatened to veto this bill. This would be a serious mistake. Quite literally a deadly mistake.

Because the Brady bill provisions of this legislation alone would save thousands of lives. We know that because handgun waiting periods in the various States that have already enacted them have stopped tens of thousands of illegal handgun purchases.

Criminals, the mentally incompetent, and drug addicts have not been able to complete their gun purchases because a waiting period, and the background check allowed by that waiting period, showed that they just shouldn't be armed with a handgun.

And they have been denied a handgun. And because of those denials, there are people walking the streets today who are alive and well because some criminal or addict just wasn't able to buy a handgun the way he could buy a tube of toothpaste.

But there is another side to that coin. It is the thought of all the men, women, and children who will not be with us this Thanksgiving because there was no law in place to stop some felon from buying a gun and ending their lives. Men, women, children. All races, all colors, all creeds.

People who should be with their families but are, instead, wept over as victims. Victims of handgun violence and victims of a system that refuses to do anything about it. At long last, let's do something. Let's pass this bill.

There are other good reasons to support this legislation. It includes the Anti-Terrorism Act of 1991, which will finally provide the families of victims of terrorism with a civil cause of action to seize the assets of terrorist organizations.

It also includes the Law Enforcement Scholarship Act which, by providing scholarships for career police officers, will help improve police effectiveness and reduce the number of citizen complaints against officers.

In conclusion, there are numerous reasons to support this crime bill and there is not one good reason to oppose it. House passage of this rule and this bill will represent a rare victory in the war against crime. A defeat here today or a veto by the President will represent nothing less than a surrender to forces that threaten to destroy us.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the learned gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GEKAS].

Mr. GEKAS. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, Members of the House, the reason that we oppose this bill, we who are proponents of the death penalty, of the exclusionary rule, of reform in habeas corpus, the basic reason we oppose this bill is the careless provisions and the flawed provisions contained therein.

For instance, how many will remember the drive-by shooting debate we had in the House for the last two sessions? This bill maintains that a drive-by killer can only be convicted and be subjected to the possibility of the death penalty if there would be an intentional killing.

All the drive-by shooter has to do, under the version presently before us, the drive-by shooter simply has to show that he did not intend to kill, because the verbiage talks about an intentional killing.

That is not what the House proposed before, that is not what the House agreed upon.

We know and the general society knows that a drive-by killer, which is a scourge on our streets, who has to be driven from our streets when he acts with reckless disregard for the lives of people who are in the streets, that individual should face the possibility of the death penalty, a big flaw in this bill.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, what is the time remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS] has 5¾ minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE] has 3 minutes remaining.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished former member of the Committee on the Judiciary, now with the Committee on Appropriations, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of Florida. I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I commend the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. Speaker, this is a test of will. This is not just an anticrime bill, of epic proportions for us, this is a test of will. Is the will of the collective American people in this country going to win or are the Republicans going to win? Are they going to say that this is a procrime bill and get away with it? Or are we going to deny them the chance to deny the American people the relief they have been asking us for for years?

This is a test of will. Will we pass this, send it to the Republican President and have him veto it, so that the American people will know once and for all who stands with them and who wants to play only a game, in name only, because they just want to win for show so that they can be perceived as being against crime? They have handled white-collar crime the most miserably of any administration in the history of this country.

We are not anticrime, according to them.

□ 0820

According to them we are pro-crime, but according to their record they are pro-crime. I say, You vote for this bill, you're going to tell the American people exactly where the Democrats stand, with them in the fight against crime.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished former sheriff the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT].

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, I supported the bill in its original form. I oppose the bill now.

I say this to the Members of Congress as a former sheriff: We should attach a tax credit provision to this bill so every American citizen could go out and buy a flak jacket because this bill declares open season.

Mr. Speaker, I cannot believe that conference threw out the assault weapons, the ban on assault weapons. My colleagues, with all the death sentences we are talking about, we will be sentencing more Americans to the death penalty on the streets of America than we will criminals in court.

Now I am not going to take a lot of time, and I am not here to impress everybody or to maybe make a lot of friends. Congress is not going to deal with crime on the streets until they take a look at guns, and, if the NRA is going to write the gun laws of America and Congress is going to wimp out, we will never deal with the issue.

Now the NRA and the police should not be apart. They are both honorable groups. We have got to bring it together. We had an instrument. The President wants a death penalty. We backed off in Congress, and we declared open season on the American people.

How can I justify, as a former sheriff, having policemen on the streets when these bums have more firepower than they do?

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TRAFICANT. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, as the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT] knows, the President opposed the assault weapon bill.

Mr. TRAFICANT. I am not dealing with the President opposing it, and, if the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS] would yield me some time, I would explain my position.

Democrats and Republicans should be sitting down with the NRA. The NRA and policemen should be friends. We all stand for the same things, but, my God, you cannot have drive-by, drive-through, drive-in, drive-by murders.

Mr. Speaker, I would wish that we would consider that issue if this bill gets vetoed and we do not have the votes to override it.

I thank the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE] for yielding this time to me.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SCHUMER], the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Crime and Criminal Justice.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, we have before us the toughest crime bill that has been before this body in 20 years, and we have a choice. Our choice is a simple one. Are we going to say, because the bill does not have this, or this, or this, I am going to oppose? Or are we going to vote for a bill that contains tough provision after tough provision?

I ask my colleagues, Do you want to go home and explain your vote against a bill that calls for the death penalty for drug kingpins? For child sex abuse? For terrorism? For killing cops? You going to explain that to your constituents? Do you want to go home and explain to your constituents and explain to yourself that you voted against increased penalties for using a gun on the street? Five years mandatory for the first penalty, 10 years mandatory for the second, 15 for the third? A provision written by the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. SCHIFF] on that side of the aisle? Do you want to go home and explain to your constituents why you voted to allow those on death row to have 8, or 9 or 10 appeals rather than the one in this bill? Do you want to go home and explain to your constituents why you voted against more prisons so that the prisoners, the criminals, wouldn't be out on the streets? Do you want to go home and explain to your constituents why you voted against money for cops on the beat when in so many areas of this country we do not see a police man anymore? Do you want to go home and explain to your constituents why you voted against mandatory minimums for terrorists? Who frightened so many and killed some of us?

Mr. Speaker, I say to my colleagues, If you want to do all that, my colleagues, pick a little reason that you're opposed to this bill and vote no. But I would argue to you that you're doing the wrong thing substantively because you're preventing the American people from getting good anti-crime protection, and you're also doing the wrong thing politically because I can make a much better 15-second spot pinning on you why you voted against all these tough provisions than you can explaining the Teague decision to me.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. SCHIFF], the former state's attorney and a member of the ill-starred conference committee.

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE] for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I was a prosecutor for 14 years, and, as a member of the Subcommittee on Crime and Criminal Justice, I want to say there are some provisions, including provisions written by the gentleman from New York [Mr. SCHUMER] with which I approve. But this bill went wrong. This bill went wrong in conference when there was a Hail Mary pass from House Committee on the Judiciary Democrats to Senate Judiciary Democrats which selected the weakest possible position right down the line on priority issues, and my colleagues know that to be the case because that is why the National District Attorneys and the National Attorneys General opposed this bill.

In addition to that situation, there are provisions in this bill that Members of the House have never voted to approve. For example, this bill says that anyone who wants to buy a hunting rifle will have to go through a police background check, and the House, for all of its accepting the Brady bill, never accepted that. The point is that we do not have to choose between this bill and no bill.

Mr. Speaker, we will offer a motion to recommit to conference to cure the evils that we have described so that we can pass a crime control bill, not a crime encouragement bill.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. GOSS].

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, 1 month ago, I voted for H.R. 3371, not because I supported every provision of the bill, but because I felt that several important amendments added backbone to a bill introduced with weaknesses in major areas. It took 3 days, but this body was able to put teeth in this bill, extending the good faith exemption and turning back a criminal protection measure mistakenly described as a fairness in Death Sentencing Act. The Brady bill was included as well, demonstrating to me that the legislation, although still lacking strength in such important areas as habeas corpus reform, nonetheless was headed in the right direction.

I was optimistic that the conferees would continue in this vein, bringing us a truly tough on crime bill. It was not to be. These chosen few conferees set about dismantling much of the progress we had made, disarming some of the most significant portions of the bill. When faced with a choice, they repeatedly and deliberately chose the weaker provisions. The legislation we are left with today is nothing but a shadow. It's a big step backward and I cannot support it.

Mr. Speaker, this country is crying out for help. Our streets are unsafe, and an increasing number of juveniles have found that crime pays. Obviously we're failing in our efforts to deter violent crime. What astounds me is that the House and the other body did adopt strong stances on provisions to empower our police forces, streamline our judicial process, and protect victims with the same vigor that we use to protect criminals. So why then, with the tools available to them, and good legislation on the table, did the conferees gloss over other major provisions that would have made a difference to the American people? I am willing to compromise, but this is more like full surrender—I urge my colleagues, don't settle for next to nothing—vote "no" on the conference report.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 2¼ minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to close with a few words of friendly advice for my fellow Texan down on Pennsylvania Avenue. My advice is simple: Mr. President, you don't need another civil rights bill fiasco right now. You don't need to be proclaiming your belief in a principle at one moment and then to be shown trying to undermine that principle that next moment. That only produces embarrassment—not just for the President but for our system of Government.

This President has expended tremendous energy over the past 3 years proclaiming how tough he want to be on crime. He has a chance to put those words into action by working with us here in the Congress to enact this bill. If the President really wants a crime bill, instead of just talking about crime, he can pick up the phone and ask his troops here and in the other body to get with the program. And then, he can pick up his pen and sign this tough and comprehensive anticrime measure.

If the President fails to do this, the burden is on him to tell the American people why he is against putting cops back on the beat, why he's against steering youthful offenders away from a life of crime, why he is against the death penalty for drug kingpins who kill, for torturers, rapists, and terrorists who kill. The President has quite enough to explain these days. He may not wish to explain why voting against a crime-fighting bill will somehow be in the best interest of the American people. I urge the Members to support this conference report.

☐ 0830

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New York [Mr. WALSH].

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this bill.

Mr. MCMILLEN of Maryland. Mr. Sepaker, no question exists that the rampage of crime continues in this country and that we must seek ways in which to stem this violence. The House Judiciary Committee has spoken wisely on a number of improvements to the U.S. Criminal Code, and I support the legislation we consider today. However, in our zeal to fight crime in the streets of America we must not lose sight of the fact that any changes made to the United States Code must be done with full respect for the U.S. Constitution.

My votes on H.R. 3371, the Omnibus Crime Control Act of 1991, have reflected my belief in the essential integrity of the Constitution. I believe that its directives are unassailable and that this body should not radically alter its direction.

I opposed the McCollum amendment which would expand the exclusionary rule to allow the admissibility of evidence into a criminal proceeding which is obtained illegally. The committee legislation allows certain "good faith" exceptions when evidence is obtained by a law enforcement officer with a warrant. The McCollum amendment extends the admissibility of such evidence to instances where no warrant is involved. I find this an abridgement of the rights of unfair search and seizure, as guaranteed under the fourth amendment of the U.S. Bill of Rights.

My votes on habeas corpus reform further demonstrated my belief in fundamental consitutional rights. A strong case is made that the extreme workload which inundates our Federal court system demands action. We need to take steps to curb excessive and unnecessary petitions and appeals; however, that does not mean we need to sacrifice the writ of habeas corpus for reasons of expediency. The committee legislation included significant reforms without destroying the fundamental right for a Federal review of a State court decision. For these reasons, I opposed the Hyde amendments on habeas corpus.

A particularly difficult vote for me was to support the Volkmer amendment on semiautomatic firearms. While I strongly agree with the need to address the issue of urban crime and spreading violence, I felt that in our efforts to break this downward cycle of violence, we must be careful to not inadvertently ignore the rights of law abiding citizens who seek to own guns for legitimate reasons.

All of my gun control votes have been consistent in one regard; they are based on the premise that we must make it as difficult as possible for criminals and the deranged to obtain illegal and dangerous firearms, while at the same time being respectful of the right of the responsible citizen to have unfettered access to a firearm. Unfortunately, the ban proposed in the original legislation was imprecise in its construction; it denied legitimate uses of certain guns, and it would unfairly and negatively impact domestic manufacturers.

If we really want to address the issue of criminal use of semiautomatic weapons and to limit violence, we should not try to simply ban certain categories of rifles, but, rather, look into other alternatives as cooling-off or waiting periods between the sale of a firearm and its transfer. This is a way in which we need not infringe upon legitimate gun owners' rights, while achieving the aim of controlling crime. Previously, I have supported a waiting period for handguns, and see potential in extending this to other areas. The effectiveness of this approach has been demonstrated by various States, including my home State of Maryland.

The Congress cannot ignore the plague of violence rippling through our society. Men, women, and children of all ages and of all races face the streets in fear of their own lives and property. This legislation we consider today is a positive step to addressing the problem of crime in America. By giving law enforcement officers and prosecuting attorneys more tools to catch and convict criminals, we are taking steps toward ridding our society of crime and returning the streets to the people.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the conference report on H.R. 3371, the crime bill. I want to commend Chairman BROOKS for his leadership in bringing back to the House floor a conference report which fundamentally addresses the many complex and controversial issues which divided the two Houses.

I am particularly pleased that all of the revenue measures in the Senate amendment have been deleted from the conference report. It has been our consistent position that, in order to preserve the constitutional prerogatives of the House of Representatives, that revenue measures added by the Senate to a nonrevenue bill are not acceptable.

There is one such Senate provision, however, that I believe deserves further study. Section 4917 of the Senate amendment would authorize up to $30 million of unobligated funds to be transferred out of the Customs forfeiture fund to the Department of Health and Human Services to be expended for drug treatment for individuals under criminal justice supervision. I strongly believe that there is a great need to increase funding for drug treatment programs, and I have committed to holding a public hearing on this matter in the Committee on Ways and Means early next year to explore the merits of funding such programs out of the Customs forfeiture fund.

Mr. Speaker, this is an important matter and I want to assure my colleagues that it will receive the serious attention of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. KOPETSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the conference report. Before I continue, I want to commend Chairman BROOKS for his diligent efforts and those of the Judiciary Committee staff in putting this conference report together in such a short period of time. I also want to recognize the efforts of Congressman CHUCK SCHUMER and Congressman DON EDWARDS for their efforts in this process.

This is my first crime bill as a Member of this body. I've heard a great deal of talk from Members on both sides of the aisle that we need to be tough on crime. Well, I contend that this bill is tough on crime. This is a comprehensive crime prevention package—31 titles and over 900 pages. This is a package that Members can take home and of which to be proud.

Much attention has been given to the "big ticket" items such as the exclusionary rule, habeas corpus reform, a ban on assault weapons, and coerced confessions.

These are important but are only parts of the whole. Important parts of this bill are not being discussed. I meet on a regular basis with the law enforcement community in my district. Their primary concern is Federal assistance to the communities and strong prevention programs. Mr. Speaker, the bottom line is that this legislation goes a long way toward this end.

In this context, H.R. 3371 demonstrates clearly that this Congress is serious about waging the war on crime by engaging in a partnership with our States and local governments. Mr. Speaker, we need to dedicate ourselves to the war on crime in the same manner in which we mobilized for Operation Desert Storm. H.R. 3371 does this.

Mr. Speaker, the fact remains fighting crime costs money. Enhanced penalties, minimum sentencing, and the addition of new crimes to Federal jurisdictions requires additional judges, court personnel, court rooms, and personnel costs including an increase in the monies for indigent defense costs. If we increase the burden on the criminal justice system, let's make sure at the same time we increase the resources for the system to handle that burden. This bill does this by increasing the authorization for the Federal law enforcement agencies to $345.5 million and providing a $1 billion authorization for the Safer Streets and Neighborhoods Act.

Beyond this authorization, H.R. 3371 establishes a series of new grant programs that will promote the prevention of crime and will help end recidivism in the criminal justice system. I want to take this opportunity to highlight a few of these programs.

On the prevention end, H.R. 3371 establishes the Community Policing: Cop on the Beat Program; title XI, subtitle E. This program will put police officers back into the community through Federal-State-local cooperative grants. These grants will help State and local police departments and local community groups develop innovative, neighborhood-oriented policing programs.

H.R. 3371 also establishes an authorization to expand the successful Midnight Basketball Program, title XI, subtitle H, on a nationwide basis. This program keeps young people off the streets and away from drugs, alcohol, and crime during the hours of 10 p.m. and 2 a.m. It provides 80 young people in a given community with safe haven from the streets. The Midnight Basketball Program also requires that players attend employment counseling, job training, and education classes. This is a crime prevention measure that will have immediate impact on our communities.

Mr. Speaker, this bill also provides $200 million for grants to States and local governments to ensure certainty of punishment and promote reduced recidivism among young offenders. The Certainty of Punishment of Young Offenders title, title XI, subtitle J, encourages States and local governments to develop alternative methods of correctional and rehabilitation options including boot-camp prisons, community-based incarceration, weekend incarceration, intensive probation, electronic monitoring, home confinement, vocational and educational options, and restitution programs. I offered an amendment to this title on the floor that made sure that treatment and counseling of substance abuse include alcohol abuse, a serious problem to law enforcement officers in my district and I understand, across the country. This program will be an effective tool in turning young people away from a life of crime.

To facilitate the apprehension of criminals, H.R. 3371 works on two levels. First, H.R. 3371 provides $30 million for law enforcement scholarships to send rank and file members of our law enforcement agencies back to school for further professional development. This will help police officers better use the developing technologies of the 21st century in fighting crime.

Second, H.R. 3371 sets up a uniform program to deal with the latest technological breakthrough in fighting crime, DNA identification [title XI, subtitle B.] This program seeks to improve the quality and availability of DNA analyses for law enforcement identification purposes by setting uniform standards and establish a national index of DNA profiles of convicted offenders. H.R. 3371 will help State and local law enforcement agencies to use effectively this valuable technology.

To end recidivism, H.R. 3371 attacks the problem of drug abuse among individuals in the criminal justice system. I was appalled to learn that there are waiting lines in the Federal penal system for inmates attempting to obtain substance abuse treatment and counseling. Recent statistics show that 60 percent of all prisoners suffer from drug or alcohol abuse. Section 1404 of H.R. 3371 requires that Federal prisons provide residential substance abuse programs for all prisoners who seek such treatment by fiscal year 1995. Studies show that prisoners who undergo such treatment are much less likely to reenter the criminal justice system after release. H.R. 3371 also provides technical and financial assistance to States to establish a similar program for State corrections facilities.

These are but a few of the programs that will make a real difference in the war on crime. H.R. 3371 also offers tough sentences. For those who believe that death penalty is a deterrent, H.R. 3371 has 50 new death penalty offenses. This bill also strengthens sentences for crimes involving firearms, child abuse, sexual violence, and terrorism. These are tough provisions.

Lastly, Mr. Speaker, I want my colleagues to know that while being tough on crime, we must be responsible. Responsible to our Federal Constitution. H.R. 3371 provides a "good faith" exception to the exclusionary rule for seizures conducted under invalid warrants.

H.R. 3371 also streamlines the Federal habeas corpus process by establishing a 1-year statute of limitations for death penalty habeas corpus cases. Mr. Speaker, this habeas corpus reform is supported by Federal and State judges, attorneys general, the American Bar Association and over 370 law school professors.

Why is habeas corpus so important? The American Bar Association has found that in 40 percent of death penalty cases reviewed by the Federal courts, the State court conviction or sentence was based on serious violations of constitutional rights. This is not to say that 40 percent of these convictions were thrown out; it simply meant that the defendant was entitled to a new trial or new sentencing. After retrial or resentencing, some of these people were fairly retried, others were resentenced to life terms, others were acquitted of all charges, and yes, still others faced their original sentence.

Mr. Speaker, our founding fathers fought for the right of habeas corpus to ensure that the State will not wrongfully punish citizens. In this year of the bicentennial of the Bill of Rights, we are affirming the importance of habeas corpus.

Mr. Speaker, this bill represents a compromise. There are parts of this bill that I do not support including the waiting period on the purchase of handguns and the drastic increase in the number of death penalty offenses. I am supporting this legislation because the people of this country want this Congress to enact a comprehensive crime fighting package now. There is much good in it. Mr. Speaker, this is such a package. I urge my colleagues to support this conference report.

Mr. MORAN. Mr. Speaker, it is with great regret that I rise today in opposition to the conference report on H.R. 3371, the Violent Crime Prevention Act of 1991.

Our constituents are afraid. They are seeing their cities and their children being destroyed by senseless gun violence. They are seeing their schools and their communities pervaded by crack and other highly addictive drugs. They feel that their local police and courts have become powerless as more drug dealers and criminals are set free because our prison systems is too overcrowded. They are enraged that justice is not swift and that the same appeals system established by this Nation's Founding Fathers to protect individual liberties is now being used to tie up our courts and to escape punishment.

Our constituents, our police officers, our judges, and public attorneys turned to Congress asking for the tools to fight the war on crime. We have let them down.

Our constituents asked us to bring an end to the proliferation of high-powered assault weapons, fueling the ever rising homicide count. We let our constituents down. The conference committee failed to enact a ban on the domestic manufacture and sale of assault weapons.

Our court officials asked us to limit the numbers of habeas appeals choking our judicial system and preventing victimized families from resolving their pain. We let our constituents down. The conference committee failed to substantially reform the system of habeas corpus appeals.

Our constituents in the South and in urban enclaves across this country asked us to ensure that the death penalty was being administered fairly. We let them down. The conference committee struck the Fairness in Death Sentencing Act which passed the House of Representatives.

In point after point as we go through this legislation, we see that this bill does little to protect our constituents. In page after page, as we go through this bill, we see that this legislation does not fight crime and will not make our streets any safer, our courts any more efficient, or our families and children any more secure.

It is thus, with regret that I am voting against this version of the Violent Crime Prevention Act of 1991. I hope that the Congress can readdress this issue next year and ensure that we develop a package that does protect our constituents and regains the offensive in our war on crime.

Mr. BLACKWELL. Mr. Speaker, we can't give life and we certainly don't have the God given right to take a life. This bill establishes 50 different reasons to take a life. But it does not and can not legislate a way to correct a mistake. No appeals can bring anyone back from the dead. Death makes all mistakes final.

I will never forget the case, many many years ago, of Corine Sykes, a black woman who was convicted and executed before her innocence was discovered. She died after being judged by a justice system that is not completely color blind, a justice system that is too often blinded by skin color and economic status. Repeated evidence continues to prove that the death penalty is applied in a racially biased manner. I point to the last year's General Accounting office study. It found that 82 percent of those convicted of murdering nonminority victims were more likely to be sentenced to death than those convicted of murdering minority victims.

For the life of me, I simply can not understand how we can consider, on one hand, the death penalty, and reject, on the other hand, legislation that will regulate the sale of assault type weapons. Are we saying that it is all right to sell a weapon that can only be used to kill people. But now, in fine print, we are saying if you kill, we will kill you? Today, we are debating a bill that calls for death sentencing for 50 crimes; 50 crimes. What's next, 100 crimes or 200 crimes?

I firmly believe that those convicted of committing the most heinous crimes should be incarcerated for as long as our penal system permits. But does this Congress or anyone have the right to decide when someone should live and when someone should die? No.

Does our justice system have the ability to fairly decide who should die? No.

Mr. Speaker, until we can answer yes to both of these questions with a clear conscience, I will continue to vote "no," on this and any future bills which call for the use of the death penalty.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the conference report to H.R. 3371.

I want to acknowledge the conferees for their work in attempting to develop an acceptable conference report. While I applaud the conferees action in including a compromise 5-day waiting period for handgun purchases and an associated background check by local law enforcement officials, nevertheless, I oppose the adoption of the conference report.

I remain concerned by the so-called habeas corpus reform provisions previously adopted in the House which purport to streamline the implementation of the death penalty on State prisoners. Of all the circumstances where the Government should be concerned with guaranteeing the highest standards of due process of law, certainly a prisoner facing the ultimate penalty in our society, the loss of their life, deserves the most thorough and searching scrutiny of the facts in his or her case. But the conference report before us today does not meet that strict standard. Instead, it unmistakably compromises the constitutional right of habeas corpus by adopting a totally arbitrary timetable which insists that in most instances the only legally or factually relevant issues in a capital case must be asserted by a defendant within 1 year after direct appeals have been exhausted. For the unfortunate defendant who discovers exculpatory facts after this 1-year period has run, it may simply be too late to correct an injustice if a judge makes a subjective finding that the facts could have been discovered through "due diligence" by the defendant earlier.

In summary, the provision on habeas corpus reform, despite the best intentions of its proponents, tampers with the Constitution. The writ of habeas corpus was considered so important to the founders of our country that it predated the Bill of Rights and was included in article 1, section 9 of the Constitution itself.

In the Civil War, when a civilian was sentenced to death by a court martial, even though the local grand jury had refused to indict him, his life was spared when the Supreme Court granted a writ of habeas corpus in the case of Ex Parte Milligan. When Americans of Japanese descent were confined against their will in internment camps during World War II, again it was the writ of habeas corpus that finally won their release in the case of Ex Parte Endo.

Today, some of the proponents of habeas corpus reform insist that too many habeas corpus petitions are frivolous and bog down the courts in seemingly endless paperwork. However, according to the American Bar Association, petitions for habeas corpus are granted in 40 percent of all capital cases. Surely, the constitutional right of habeas corpus is important enough to avoid shortcuts in the name of some vague notion claiming judicial efficiency or because it may be politically popular today.

Mr. Speaker, I also oppose the significant expansion of the list of Federal offenses where the death penalty may be imposed to some 50 crimes. No one would suggest that these offenses are not heinous crimes. In most instances of sentencing for serious crimes, judges and juries have considerable latitude in determining a proper sentence, many of which may be severe, such as life imprisonment without possibility of parole. However, there are still wide variations among different jurisdictions about those circumstances where a judge or jury may elect to impose the death penalty. I am concerned that the conference report will increase rather than minimize such arbitrary disparities based on race, socio-economic status, and the proficiency of a defendant's legal counsel. Indeed, when the House considered the Judiciary Committee's bill, H.R. 3371, a provision designed to protect against racial discrimination in capital sentencing was dropped from the bill altogether. There may be many aggravating factors which a judge or jury should weigh in assessing a criminal sentence, but the defendant's race should never be one of those factors. Regrettably, this conference report does not make that unequivocal statement.

Finally, I am concerned that the conference agreement codifies into law a judicially crafted good-faith exception to the exclusionary rule relating to illegally seized evidence or illegal police conduct. Under this 1984 Supreme Court ruling, evidence will not be excluded if it was obtained in good faith reliance on a warrant, even if the warrant is ultimately determined to be invalid. The reality of most criminal cases in Federal and State courts today is that convictions are won or lost on the weight of numerous exhibits of evidence rather than only one smoking gun.

A good faith exception to the warrant requirements of the fourth amendment invites police, prosecutors, judges, and juries to engage in a game of subjective speculation about what was in the minds of police when they occasionally may not act in accord with the full rights of the defendant being observed. At the same time, the so-called good faith exception will erode the prevailing standards for the overwhelming majority of police officials who have learned over the past quarter century since Mapp versus Ohio to comply with constitutional requirements. The most certain route to obtaining criminal convictions against guilty defendants is still good solid police work combined with strict adherence to the guarantees of the Bill of Rights.

For these reasons, Mr. Speaker, I oppose the adoption of this conference report.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PANETTA). Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the conference report.

There was no objection.

MOTION TO RECOMMIT

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit with instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman opposed to the conference report?

Mr. HYDE. Most definitely, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. HYDE moves to recommit the Conference Report on H.R. 3371 to the Committee of Conference on the disagreeing votes between two Houses with the following instructions to the Managers on the part of the House to insist on the following provisions in the House bill:

Title V, Subtitle B, Restitution of Crime Victims;

Title V, Subtitle C, HIV Testing of Sex Offenders;

Title XII, Subtitle B, Retired Public Safety Officer Death Benefit;

Title XV, Section 1505, Drug Distribution to Pregnant Women;

Title XVI, Equal Justice Act;

Title XVII, Section 1714, National Baseline Study on Campus Sexual Assault;

Title XVII, Section 1720, Exclusionary Rule;

Title XVII, Section 1724, Increased Penalties for Recidivist Sex Offenders;

Title XXIII, Death Penalty Procedures;

Title XXIV, Death Penalty;

And to insist on the following provisions in the Senate bill:

Title V, Subtitle A, Aviation Terrorism;

Title V, Section 514, Offenses of violence against maritime navigation or fixed platform;

Title XLVIII, Public Corruption;

Title XI, Subtitle B, Death Penalty Litigation Procedures for Habeas Corpus proceedings, except for 2259(b);

And to disagree to the following House provision:

Title IX, Coerced Confessions.

And to insist that the text of H.R. 7, the "Brady Bill", as it passed the House, be included in H.R. 3371.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would advise the Members that this motion is not debatable.

Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present. The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were yeas 174, nays 237, answered "present," 1, not voting 22, as follows:

Messrs. DREIER of California, ALLARD, LEACH, GINGRICH, CRAMER, PALLONE, and EDWARDS of Oklahoma changed their vote from "nay" to "yea."

So the motion to recommit was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. LEHMAN of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rushed in at the last minute. I thought I was voting on final passage. Instead I voted "yes" on the motion to recommit, and I should have changed the vote to "nay."

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

(By unanimous consent, Mr. MICHEL was allowed to proceed out of order.)

Mr. MICHEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the distinguished majority leader for the purpose of determining how much more we have to do and how soon we get out of here and so forth.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding and I wish him good morning. I never said where the sun was going to come up.

We are moving now to the vote on the crime conference. We will then move to the banking bill. There will be a rule and then that matter under conference.

We will then move to a rule on RTC, and that bill, and we have one other matter that is a must to try to get done and has to do with the Medicaid legislation that affects many of the States.

That matter is now in conference and should be ready shortly.

□ 0900

It is impossible for me to give Members a definite, absolute firm time. Each of these matters could be done in 2 hours, could be done in less than that, and obviously we are going to press to move these matters as quickly as we possibly can so that Members can make their planes.

Mr. MICHEL. Might I inquire of the majority leader then, if everything falls into place as he has outlined, would it then be in order for us to pass an adjournment resolution that takes us to January 3, with the usual caveat that the leaders, in agreement, could within a 2-day notice call reconvene the Congress?

Mr. GEPHARDT. I believe the undertaking is to try to pass a resolution that calls for an adjournment to a date certain of January 3, with the ability of the leadership to call Members back if that needs to be done for any reason, and from the 3d then to the 23d of January, with the same caveat, and the ability of the leadership to call Members back.

Mr. MICHEL. The gentleman anticipated my next question, because I wondered whether or not we would do that adjournment resolution now? That is perfectly all right, and I guess there has to be a kind of a recess to the 3d to get the other leg of that accomplished.

Mr. GEPHARDT. If the gentleman will yield back to me, it would be a concurrent resolution, and we can go right to the banking bill and we will do that, and take up the adjournment resolution a little bit later in the schedule.

Mr. MICHEL. I thank the gentleman.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HOYER). The question is on the conference report.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 205, noes 203, answered “present’ 1, not voting 26, as follows:

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Ortiz for, with Mrs. Collins of Illinois against.

Mr. Waxman for, with Mr. Marlenee against.

Mr. Brown of California for, with Mr. Shaw against.

Mr. JAMES changed his vote from “aye” to “no.”

Mr. FORD of Michigan changed his vote from “no” to “aye.”

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HOYER). All time has expired.

On this vote, the yeas are 205, the nays are 202.

The Chair will announce there was a change. There was an additional “no” vote by card that was not indicated on the slip that was handed to the Chair. The Chair's announcement made a mistake.

The Clerk. Mr. MORAN. Mr. MORAN votes no.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. When the slip was handed to the Chair, the tally clerk had not registered the vote, so that when the Chair took the slip, the Chair read a slip that did not register a vote that was on the front desk here.

Mr. GINGRICH. From our side, Mr. Speaker, let us calm that down. It has been a long, long night. A few minor errors can occur.

We thank the Chair for trying to make sure that every Member is protected in a difficult time when we are all a little tired.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There were 205 votes in the affirmative, 203 in the negative.

So the conference report was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. BALLENGER. Mr. Speaker, unfortunately, I missed three rollcall votes. Had I been present, I would have voted “nay” on rollcall 437, House Resolution 309, passage of the rule on the fiscal 1992 supplemental appropriation conference report; “yea” on rollcall 438, passage of House Joint Resolution 157, the fiscal 1992 supplemental appropriation conference report; and “nay” on rollcall 444, on passage of House Resolution 320, the rule providing for consideration of H.R. 3435, a bill to provide funding for the Resolution Trust Corporation.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. PICKETT. Mr. Speaker, I was unavoidably absent from the House of Representatives due to official business. I wish to have the RECORD indicate that had I been present and voting, I would have voted in the following manner:

On rollcall vote No. 437, “yes”; on rollcall No. 438, “yes”; on rollcall No. 439, “yes”; on rollcall vote No, 440, “yes”; on rollcall vote No. 441, “yes”; on rollcall vote No. 442, “no”; on rollcall vote No. 443, “yes”; and on rollcall vote No. 444, “yes.”

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. ROE. Mr. Speaker, due to a meeting away from the Capitol, I was unable to be present during rollcall vote 442, motion to commit with instructions H.R. 3371 and No. 443, final passage of H.R. 3371, Omnibus Crime Control Act. Had I been present I would have recorded my strong support of this legislation by voting “nay” on rollcall No. 442, the motion to recommit and by voting “yea” on rollcall No. 443 final passage.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have the rest of this session in order to revise and extend their remarks on the conference report just adopted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HOYER). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

DEFENSE PRODUCTION ACT OF 1950 EXTENSION

Mr. CARPER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs be discharged from further consideration of the bill (H.R. 3919) to temporarily extend the Defense Production Act of 1950, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Delaware?

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do so in order to yield to my friend and colleague from Delaware [Mr. CARPER] for purposes of an explanation.

Mr. CARPER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RIDGE. I yield to the gentleman from Delaware.

Mr. CARPER. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, the Defense Production Act has expired as of September 30 of this year. The purpose of this extension—and I will be asking for an amendment to this unanimous consent request in just a moment—what we really want to do is extend the Defense Production Act during our recess to March 1, 1992. During the next 2 months we will work out a conference report and bring it to the full House.

Mr. RIDGE. Is it my understanding that the gentleman has been in consultation with our colleagues in the other body and they have agreed to the extension of this period of time and they have also agreed and believe that we can finally come to a conclusion by March 1 of next year on the Defense Production Act, which we have been working on for well over a year now?

Mr. CARPER. If the gentleman will continue to yield, I think we have reached a meeting of the minds. One element that sort of kept us apart, fair trade and financial services, I think we are fairly close to an agreement on and we hope to reach that by March 1 and put this one to bed.

Mr. RIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman's explanation, and I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Delaware?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

H.R. 3919

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. TEMPORARY EXTENSION OF THE DEFENSE PRODUCTION ACT OF 1950.

The first sentence of section 717(a) of the Defense Production Act of 1950 (50 U.S.C. App. 2166(a)) is amended by striking “September 30, 1991” and inserting “March 1, 1992”.

SEC. 2. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This Act shall take effect on September 30, 1991.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. CARPER

Mr. CARPER. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CARPER: Page 1, line 7, strike out “March 30” and insert “March 1”.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Delaware [Mr. CARPER].

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will be pleased to recognize those Members who may want to address the House for 1 minute pending the arrival of additional business.

THE PRESIDENT WAFFLES ON HIS ECONOMIC PACKAGE

(Mr. GEJDENSON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, as we enter these final hours of this session, I think that we can be proud of this Congress in achieving significant goals, significant goals on crime that just passed, on banking reform, a number of areas.

But one of the things that troubles us is a President who cannot seem to get it straight. First, he wants an economic package brought to the Congress, then he does not; then he does, again, then he does not.

It seems to me if we are serious about resolving this economy, we need more than presidential press conferences or presidential photo ops, Mr. Speaker.

We need a President who comes up here and engages the real issues of the economy. From Connecticut to California, we have an economy where workers are losing their jobs, they are losing their homes, and they can no longer afford to send their children to school.

Mr. President, stop taking photo ops; Mr. Speaker, bring the President here to work with us to try to heal this economy.

FUTURE HEARINGS SET FOR ECONOMIC GROWTH DEBATE

(Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota. Mr. Speaker, the Congress is going to embark on some hearings in the month of December on the subject of economic growth. We will have had by then a sufficient dose of partisanship and bickering back and forth across the political aisles, and I think the important thing for all of us to understand is that this country's economy is in serious trouble, probably more serious trouble than most of us understand.

I think what the American people who watch this process want most from us is to try to get from each side of the political aisle the best of whatever one has to offer, not the least of each of us. We need some mechanism whereby the President and the Congress, conservatives and liberals, Republicans and Democrats, will try to join together to try to put this country back on track.

Mr. Speaker, we face tough international competition. This country is losing its edge. I know there are some who say the problem is in the engine room of the ship of state. I do not believe that. I think the engine is fine. I think the problem is we have loaded this ship down with too much cargo and too much debt. I do not think the answer is sexy or fancy or anything like that. I think we need to get back to the basic virtues, the old ideas, paying your bills, putting America back on track.

I hope we see that kind of bipartisan spirit between the White House and the Congress because this country desperately needs it.

☐ 0930

NO ONE REALLY LIKES A COMPROMISE

(Mr. BILBRAY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BILBRAY. Mr. Speaker, just a few minutes ago the people of the country saw a historic vote on a crime bill that was worked on very hard by Members of this Congress to bring forth a new crime bill that will help curtail the crime problems of this country.

Mr. Speaker, my colleagues heard a lot of arguments. They heard people on the far right who were against the bill because it did not go far enough, and, if my colleagues look at the Democrats who voted against it, they will find many Democrats from the far left who went against it because it went too far.

Mr. Speaker, it was a difficult bill. It was one that was crafted with compromise in mind, trying to find a bill that could pass this House. It was very difficult, and I commend the leadership of the Democrat Party, the majority party, for crafting that particular bill and working with the other body to get it done.

The people have to understand that many of us that supported the bill had other things that we would have liked in the bill, but, having practiced law for many years and having dealt with people on both sides of an issue, sometimes we had a compromise worked out that no one really liked, but it was a compromise that had to be done.

Mr. Speaker, we have to move forward to try to help the people of this country.

COUNTERANALYSIS OF THE VOTE ON THE CRIME BILL

(Mr. DORNAN of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DORNAN of California. Mr. Speaker, having grabbed about 3 hours of sleep last night sitting up while the six couches were grabbed out of 166 Republicans, let me say that I appreciate the analysis of the crime bill we just voted on by the gentleman from Nevada [Mr. BILBRAY], my friend. Let me give a little counteranalysis.

Here is the readout: 205 to 203, 26 Members not here, some of them I saw a few hours ago, they must be asleep in their offices. Sorry they did not get over here for this vote. However our distinguished Speaker voted about 4 minutes before the end of the vote. I can appreciate that he did not want to have to come right up and break a tie, but, if we take his vote out, it is 204 to 203. That means every single vote was the margin of victory, and in our Republican Party the DMV, the Democratic margin of victory, was given to them by six Republicans. Each one of them was singularly the margin of victory.

Mr. Speaker, this is an easy veto for the President. He is obviously veto-proof. It will be sustained when he has got 203 people to draw from and there is only 145 needed.

Let me say that the most compelling thing was the letter the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE] read from the National Association of District Attorneys. They said this was a vote for criminals.

Did I hear cheering on death rows all across America? I am afraid so.

Mr. Speaker, I hope the President will veto this bill. It is an easy slam-dunk sustaining of the President's veto.

WHERE IS THE BILL TO ELEVATE THE EPA TO CABINET-LEVEL STATUS?

(Mr. BOEHLERT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, we have been in session for almost 24 hours, but that is what we are paid for, to do the people's business. Right now we are in a dead period, dead time between conference reports coming to this House so we can exercise the people's will, and during this time people like me can get up and say whatever we want for 60 seconds, speak to anybody about any subject.

Mr. Speaker, I want to speak to my colleagues on the Democrat side of the aisle. I want to ask them where the bill is to elevate the Environmental Protection Agency to cabinet-level status. I want to remind them that it was a Democrat in the Senate in cooperation with a Republican, Senator JOHN GLENN and Senator BILL ROTH, who passed that bill that now lays on the Speaker's desk ready to come up here by unanimous consent.

Mr. Speaker, the majority of Members in this House want it. Every single environmental group in America wants it. The President has said he will sign it. He has encouraged us to act on it, and yet it lays on the Speaker's desk.

Why? Because one person, the chairman of the Committee on Government Operations, refuses to act.

Mr. Speaker, the American people deserve better. They deserve someone who will act and not turn his back on a piece of legislation that the American people demand.

THINGS LIBERALS VOTE FOR BESIDES A WEAK CRIME BILL

(Mr. CUNNINGHAM asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, as a freshman on this body, first time I was upset on this House is the same week that we came aboard, and that is when the Desert Storm vote came out, and many Members of this House turned their backs on the men and women, and I think that today, next to the civil rights bill, was the hardest for me to stomach.

Mr. Speaker, in every case the conferees took the weakest position of either the Senate or the House and put it into the crime bill. I ask, "Why can't we put the strongest position in and fight crime?"

Mr. Speaker, I would like to tie in the votes of the liberals with some of the other things, the same people that voted against Desert Storm, the same people that supported the Sandinistas, that voted to burn the flag, that voted for Mapplethorpe and obscene art, to destroy the family unit, to not take drug tests, not to be tough on crime. I think, if we compile these votes, we would find the same liberal votes.

PROUD TO SAY, I VOTED FOR THE CRIME BILL

(Ms. OAKAR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I could not help hearing the last speaker attack people who voted for a crime bill.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to say that I voted for the crime bill, and I say to the gentleman, "Of course in any bill you don't feel strongly about every provision, but the fact is overall it's a very fine bill."

One of the things that I think is an important aspect of that bill is that it finally gives assistance to the cities of this country by giving funds to the police department. We are seeing cities having less resources because we do not have an urban policy in this country, and one of the things that is on the minds and hearts of the American people is crime in the streets.

So, Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to see that there is a safe street program in this crime bill and that we funded the police departments across the country to give them the tools to work with to assist in their combating and arresting crime, which I think is among the top issues that affect the American people.

Mr. Speaker, people do not like to see their cars stolen. They do not like to see drug peddling. They do not like to see alcoholic drivers on the roads, and so on, and the police department cannot do it alone, and the cities and rural areas cannot do it alone.

So, I am proud of this bill, and I congratulate those who worked so hard on it.

CALLING ON OUR HEMISPHERE

(Mr. RANGEL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, as the House moves to complete its legislative business, I hope that we do not forget that there are thousands of people cast asea from Haiti without homes, without hope, and the President of the United States is only being restrained from sending these people back to Haiti by a Federal court judge in Miami. Some people may ask, "Well, what do we do with all these people? We can't absorb them in Miami; we can't absorb them in New York."

Well, God forbid that a country of our great wealth should even anticipate absorbing 5,000 Haitians, but it seems to me that we can use our Presidential and national influence to pick up the phone, as the President did so well in the Persian Gulf, and convince the neighboring countries that we would give them assistance, to call upon some of the industrial countries to pitch in.

Mr. Speaker, this is not just a question of poor black folks in Haiti. This is a question as to whether democracy can survive in the world, and specifically in our hemisphere.

So, while one may believe that we have asked certain portions of our country to assume too much of this moral responsibility which has a heavy fiscal burden with it, it seems to me that we have not done all that we can in reaching out to the United Nations, the Organization of American States, the Caribbean countries and say, "For God's sake, that can be your country. Pitch in and do something."

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. HOYER). The Chair declares a recess for approximately one-half hour.

Accordingly (at 9 o'clock and 40 minutes a.m.), the House stood in recess for a period in excess of 30 minutes.

☐ 1030

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore at 10 o'clock and 31 minutes a.m.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate by Mr. Hallen, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills, a joint resolution and concurrent resolution of the House of the following titles:

H.R. 829. An act to amend title 28, United States Code, to make changes in the composition of the Eastern and Western Districts of Virginia.

H.R. 990. An act to authorize additional appropriations for land acquisition at Monocacy National Battlefield, Maryland;

H.R. 1099. An act to amend the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act by designating segments of the Lamprey River in the State of New Hampshire for study for potential addition to the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System, and for other purposes;

H.R. 2105. An act to designate an area as the "Myrtle Foester Whitmire Division of the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge";

H.R. 3012. An act to amend the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act by designating the White Clay Creek in Delaware and Pennsylvania for study for potential addition to the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System, and for other purposes;

H.R. 3387. An act to amend the Pennsylvania Avenue Development Corporation Act of 1972 to authorize appropriations for implementation of the development plan for Pennsylvania Avenue between the Capitol and the White House, and for other purposes;

H.R. 3604. An act to direct acquisitions within the Eleven Point Wild and Scenic River, to establish the Greer Spring Special Management Area in Missouri and for other purposes;

H.R. 3881. An act to expand the boundaries of Stones River National Battlefield, Tennessee, and for other purposes;

H.R. 3909. An act to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to extend certain expiring provisions, and for other purposes;

H.R. 3932. An act to improve the operational efficiency of the James Madison Memorial Fellowship Foundation, and for other purposes;

H.J. Res. 191. Joint resolution designating January 5, 1992 through January 11, 1992 as "National Law Enforcement Training Week"; and

H. Con. Res. 249. Concurrent resolution correcting a technical error in the enrollment of the bill H.R. 1724.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 3595. An act to delay until September 30, 1992, the issuance of any regulations by the Secretary of Health and Human Services changing the treatment of voluntary contributions and provider-specific taxes by States as a source of a State's expenditures for which Federal financial participation is available under the medicaid program and to maintain the treatment of intergovernmental transfers as such a source.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the bill (H.R. 3595) "An Act to delay until September 30, 1992, the issuance of any regulations by the Secretary of Health and Human Services changing the treatment of voluntary contributions and provider-specific taxes by States as a source of a State's expenditures for which Federal financial participation is available under the medicaid program and to maintain the treatment of intergovernmental transfers as such a source" disagreed to by the House and agrees to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. BENTSEN, Mr. RIEGLE, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mr. PACKWOOD, and Mr. DURENBERGER, to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate recedes from its amendment to the bill (H.R. 690) "An Act to authorize the National Park Service to acquire and manage the Mary McLeod Bethune Council House National Historic Site, and for other purposes."

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 3029) "An Act to make technical corrections to agriculture laws."

REPORT ON RESOLUTION WAIVING ALL POINTS OF ORDER AGAINST CONFERENCE REPORT ON S. 543, COMPREHENSIVE DEPOSIT INSURANCE REFORM AND TAXPAYER PROTECTION ACT OF 1991, AND AGAINST CONSIDERATION OF SUCH CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. MOAKLEY, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privilege report (Rept. No. 102–406) on the resolution (H. Res. 318) waiving all points of order against the conference report on the bill (S. 543) to reform Federal deposit insurance, protect the deposit insurance funds, recapitalize the bank insurance fund, improve supervision and regulations of insured depository institutions, and against consideration of such conference report which was referred to the House calendar and ordered to be printed.

WAIVING ALL POINTS OF ORDER AGAINST CONFERENCE REPORT ON S. 543, COMPREHENSIVE DEPOSIT INSURANCE REFORM AND TAXPAYER PROTECTION ACT OF 1991.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 318 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. REPT. 318

Resolved, That upon adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to consider the conference report on the bill (S. 543) to reform Federal deposit insurance, protect the deposit insurance funds, recapitalize the bank insurance fund, improve supervision and regulation of insured depository institutions. All points of order against the conference report and against its consideration are hereby waived. The conference report shall be considered as having been read when called up for consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. FROST] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. DREIER], pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, all time yielded during debate on this House resolution is yielded for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 318 is the rule providing for the consideration of the conference report on S. 543, the Comprehensive Deposit Insurance Reform and Taxpayer Protection Act of 1991. The rule waives all points of order against the conference report and against its consideration. The rule also provides that the conference report will be considered as having been read.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation will provide important borrowing authority for the FDIC. It includes a variety of provisions which would revise the Federal Deposit Insurance Program and strengthen the supervisory and regulatory processes to ensure against future crises.

The House has fully debated banking reform issues over the past few weeks. It is time to move forward and pass this legislation so that we can restore public confidence in banking system. I urge adoption of the rule and the conference report.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in reluctant support of this rule. My reluctance is not the result of what is in the rule but rather what is not in the conference report itself.

Mr. Speaker, I originally voted for H.R. 3768 in an effort to keep the process moving forward. I am concerned that while the process did move forward, the significance of this legislation headed in the opposite direction. I am referring to the fact that this banking bill does not include any of the President's structural reform proposals. Those proposals would help to restore the banking industry to profitability, and this would help to strengthen the bank insurance fund.

However, the fact remains, Mr. Speaker, that as many as 239 banks may fail next year, and the insurance fund needs billions of dollars in borrowing authority to guarantee the funds of nearly 110 million bank depositors. Once again I want to emphasize that this is not a taxpayer bill, and I underscore not a taxpayer bailout.

Mr. Speaker, in the Rules Committee, on Saturday, the chairman and ranking member of the Banking Committee provided assurances that in the next session of Congress, the Banking Committee will begin looking anew at the comprehensive legislation which we considered several weeks ago in the House. It is necessary that we overhaul the Nation's banking system.

Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the gentleman from Texas, the chairman of the committee [Mr. GONZALEZ], and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE], the ranking member, for their diligence in working on this bill. I hope very much that their committee will move forward so as to make sure that this will not become a taxpayer bailout.

I urge my colleagues to support the rule.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE], the ranking member of the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs.

Mr. WYLIE. I thank the gentleman from California, a former important member of the Banking Committee. I certainly will not use the 5 minutes. I just want to rise in the strongest possible way to support the rule and the conference report which it makes in order.

As will be mentioned a little later on, we worked until 5 this morning on a banking bill. It is absolutely essential that we recapitalize the bank insurance fund, and that was the crux and the basis for our bill.

We do provide for $30 billion in new lending authority, which allows us to refund the recapitalization of the bank insurance fund to the tune of $25 billion. We do have a provision in here for early intervention, too-big-to-fail ends on January 1, 1995, a limit on broker deposits, and so forth. Essentially, the conference report we have before us includes the parameters of the House bill. I think our House conferees did an excellent job. I want to commend the gentleman from Texas, Mr. GONZALEZ, chairman of the House Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, for the hard work and diligence he put into this. I will do that in his presence later on.

Mr. Speaker, I urge adoption of the rule.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, I yield back the balance of my time, and I urge support of the rule.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I move the previous question, on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON S. 543, COMPREHENSIVE DEPOSIT INSURANCE REFORM AND TAXPAYER PROTECTION ACT OF 1991

Mr. NEAL of North Carolina submitted the following conference report and statement on the Senate bill (S. 543) to reform Federal deposit insurance, protect the deposit insurance funds, recapitalize the bank insurance fund, improve supervision and regulation of insured depository institutions, and for other purposes:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. 102-407)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 543), to reform Federal deposit insurance, protect the deposit insurance funds, and improve supervision and regulation of and disclosure relating to federally insured depository institutions, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the text of the bill and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment, insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991".

TITLE I—SAFETY AND SOUNDNESS

Subtitle A—Deposit Insurance Funds

SEC. 101. FUNDING FOR THE FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE FUNDS.

Section 14(a) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1824(a)) is amended by striking "$5,000,000,000" and inserting "$30,000,000,000".

SEC. 102. LIMITATION ON OUTSTANDING BORROWING.

(a) In General.—Section 15(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1825(c)) is amended by striking paragraphs (5) and (6) and inserting the following new paragraphs:

"(5) Maximum Amount Limitation on Outstanding Obligations.—Notwithstanding any other provisions of this Act, the Corporation may not issue or incur any obligation, if, after issuing or incurring the obligation, the aggregate amount of obligations of the Bank Insurance Fund or Savings Association Insurance Fund, respectively, outstanding would exceed the sum of—

"(A) the amount of cash or the equivalent of cash held by the Bank Insurance Fund or Savings Association Insurance Fund, respectively;

"(B) the amount which is equal to 90 percent of the Corporation's estimate of the fair market value of assets held by the Bank Insurance Fund or the Savings Association Insurance Fund, respectively, other than assets described in subparagraph (A); and

"(C) the total of the amounts authorized to be borrowed from the Secretary of the Treasury pursuant to section 14(a).

"(6) Obligation Defined.—

"(A) In General.—For purposes of paragraph (5), the term 'obligation' includes—

"(i) any guarantee issued by the Corporation, other than deposit guarantees;

"(ii) any amount borrowed pursuant to section 14; and

"(iii) any other obligation for which the Corporation has a direct or contingent liability to pay any amount.

"(B) Valuation of Contingent Liabilities.—The Corporation shall value any contingent liability at its expected cost to the Corporation.".

(b) GAO Reports.—

(1) Quarterly Reporting.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall submit a report each calendar quarter on the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation's compliance with section 15(c)(5) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act for the preceding quarter to the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate.

(2) Analyses to be Included.—Each report submitted under paragraph (1) shall include—

(A) an analysis of the performance of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation in meeting any repayment schedule under section 14(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (as added by section 103 of this Act); and

(B) an analysis of the actual recovery on asset sales compared to the estimated fair market value of the assets as determined for the purposes of section 15(c)(5)(B) of such Act.

(c) Technical and Conforming Amendment.—Section 15(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1825(c)) is amended by striking paragraph (7).

SEC. 103. REPAYMENT SCHEDULE.

(a) In General.—Section 14 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1824) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(c) Repayment Schedules Required for Any Borrowing.—

"(1) In General.—No amount may be provided by the Secretary of the Treasury to the Corporation under subsection (a) unless an agreement is in effect between the Secretary and the Corporation which—

"(A) provides a schedule for the repayment of the outstanding amount of any borrowing under such subsection; and

"(B) demonstrates that income to the Corporation from assessments under this Act will be sufficient to amortize the outstanding balance within the period established in the repayment schedule and pay the interest accruing on such balance.

"(2) Consultation with and Report to Congress.—The Secretary of the Treasury and the Corporation shall—

"(A) consult with the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate on the terms of any repayment schedule agreement described in paragraph (1) relating to repayment, including terms relating to any emergency special assessment under section 7(b)(7); and

"(B) submit a copy of each repayment schedule agreement entered into under paragraph (1) to the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate before the end of the 30-day period beginning on the date any amount is provided by the Secretary of the Treasury to the Corporation under subsection (a).".

(b) Emergency Special Assessments.—Section 7(b) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(b)) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (7), (8), and (9) as paragraphs (8), (9), and (10), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (6) the following new paragraph:

"(7) Emergency Special Assessments.—In addition to the other assessments imposed on insured depository institutions under this subsection, the Corporation may impose 1 or more special assessments on insured depository institutions in an amount determined by the Corporation if the amount of any such assessment—

"(A) is necessary—

"(i) to provide sufficient assessment income to repay amounts borrowed from the Secretary of the Treasury under section 14(a) in accordance with the repayment schedule in effect under section 14(c) during the period with respect to which such assessment is imposed;

"(ii) to provide sufficient assessment income to repay obligations issued to and other amounts borrowed from Bank Insurance Fund members under section 14(d); or

"(iii) for any other purpose the Corporation may deem necessary; and

"(B) is allocated between Bank Insurance Fund members and Savings Association Insurance Fund members in amounts which reflect the degree to which the proceeds of the amounts borrowed are to be used for the benefit of the respective insurance funds.".

SEC. 104. RECAPITALIZING THE BANK INSURANCE FUND.

(a) In General.—Section 7(b)(1)(C) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(b)(1)(C)) is amended to read as follows:

"(C) Assessment Rates for Bank Insurance Fund Members.—

"(i) In General.—If the reserve ratio of the Bank Insurance Fund equals or exceeds the fund's designated reserve ratio under subparagraph (B), the Board of Directors shall set semiannual assessment rates for members of that fund as appropriate to maintain the reserve ratio at the designated reserve ratio.

"(ii) Special Rules for Recapitalizing Undercapitalized Fund.—If the reserve ratio of the Bank Insurancc Fund is less than the designated reserve ratio under subparagraph (B), the Board of Directors shall set semiannual assessment rates for members of that fund—

"(I) that are sufficient to increase the reserve ratio for that fund to the designated reserve ratio not later than 1 year after such rates are set; or

"(II) in accordance with a schedule promulgated by the Corporation under clause (iii).

"(iii) Recapitalization Schedules.—For purposes of clause (ii)(II), the Corporation shall, by regulation, promulgate a schedule that specifies, at semiannual intervals, target reserve ratios for the Bank Insurance Fund, culminating in a reserve ratio that is equal to the designated reserve ratio no later than 15 years after the date on which the schedule becomes effective.

"(iv) Amending Schedule.—The Corporation may, by regulation, amend a schedule promulgated under clause (iii), but such an amendment may not extend the date for achieving the designated reserve ratio.".

(b) Assessment Rate Changes.—Section 7(b)(1)(A) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(b)(1)(A)) is amended by striking clause (iii) and inserting the following:

"(iii) Rate Changes.—The Corporation shall notify each insured depository institution of that institution's semiannual assessment. The Corporation may establish and, from time to time, adjust the assessment rates for such institutions.".

SEC. 105. BORROWING FOR BIF FROM BIF MEMBERS.

Section 14 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1824) is amended by inserting after subsection (c) (as added by section 103 of this subtitle) the following new subsection:

"(d) Borrowing for BIF From BIF Members.—

"(1) Borrowing Authority.—The Corporation may issue obligations to Bank Insurance Fund members, and may borrow from Bank Insurance Fund members and give security for any amount borrowed, and may pay interest on (and any redemption premium with respect to) any such obligation or amount to the extent—

"(A) the proceeds of any such obligation or amount are used by the Corporation solely for purposes of carrying out the Corporation's functions with respect to the Bank Insurance Fund; and

"(B) the terms of the obligation or instrument limit the liability of the Corporation or the Bank Insurance Fund for the payment of interest and the repayment of principal to the amount which is equal to the amount of assessment income received by the Fund from assessments under section 7.

"(2) Limitations on Borrowing.—

"(A) Applicability of Public Debt Limit.—For purposes of the public debt limit established in section 3101(b) of title 31, United States Code, any obligation issued, or amount borrowed, by the Corporation under paragraph (1) shall be considered to be an obligation to which such limit applies.

"(B) Applicability of FDIC Borrowing Limit.—For purposes of the dollar amount limitation established in section 14(a) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1824(a)), any obligation issued, or amount borrowed, by the Corporation under paragraph (1) shall be considered to be an amount borrowed from the Treasury under such section.

"(C) Interest Rate Limit.—The rate of interest payable in connection with any obligation issued, or amount borrowed, by the Corporation under paragraph (1) shall not exceed an amount determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration current market yields on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States of comparable maturities.

"(D) Obligations to be Held Only by BIF Members.—The terms of any obligation issued by the Corporation under paragraph (1) shall provide that the obligation will be valid only if held by a Bank Insurance Fund Member.

"(3) Liability of BIF.—Any obligation issued or amount borrowed under paragraph (1) shall be a liability of the Bank Insurance Fund.

"(4) Terms and Conditions.—Subject to paragraphs (1) and (2), the Corporation shall establish the terms and conditions for obligations issued or amounts borrowed under paragraph (1), including interest rates and terms to maturity.

"(5) Investment by BIF Members.—

"(A) Authority to Invest.—Subject to subparagraph (B) and notwithstanding any other provision of Federal law or the law of any State, any Bank Insurance Fund member may purchase and hold for investment any obligation issued by the Corporation under paragraph (1) without limitation, other than any limitation the appropriate Federal banking agency may impose specifically with respect to such obligations.

"(B) Investment Only From Capital and Retained Earnings.—Any Bank Insurance Fund member may purchase obligations or make loans to the Corporation under paragraph (1) only to the extent the purchase money or the money loaned is derived from the member's capital or retained earnings.

"(6) Accounting Treatment.—In accounting for any investment in an obligation purchased from, or any loan made to, the Corporation for purposes of determining compliance with any capital standard and preparing any report required pursuant to section 7(a), the amount of such investment or loan shall be treated as an asset.".

Subtitle B—Supervisory Reforms

SEC. 111. IMPROVED EXAMINATIONS.

(a) In General.—Section 10 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1820) is amended by inserting after subsection (c) the following new subsection:

"(d) Annual On-Site Examinations of All Insured Depository Institutions Required.—

"(1) In General.—The appropriate Federal banking agency shall, not less than once during each 12-month period, conduct a full-scope, on-site examination of each insured depository institution.

"(2) EXAMINATIONS BY CORPORATION.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply during any 12-month period in which the Corporation has conducted a full-scope, on-site examination of the insured depository institution.

"(3) STATE EXAMINATIONS ACCEPTABLE.—The examinations required by paragraph (1) may be conducted in alternate 12-month periods, as appropriate, if the appropriate Federal banking agency determines that an examination of the insured depository institution conducted by the State during the intervening 12-month period carries out the purpose of this subsection.

"(4) 18-MONTH RULE FOR CERTAIN SMALL INSTITUTIONS.—Paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) shall apply with '18-month' substituted for '12-month' if—

"(A) the insured depository institution has total assets of less than $100,000,000;

"(B) the institution is well capitalized, as defined in section 38;

"(C) when the institution was most recently examined, it was found to be well managed, and its composite condition was found to be outstanding; and

"(D) no person acquired control of the institution during the 12-month period in which a full-scope, on-site examination would be required but for this paragraph.

"(5) CERTAIN GOVERNMENT-CONTROLLED INSTITUTIONS EXEMPTED.—Paragraph (1) does not apply to—

"(A) any institution for which the Corporation is conservator; or

"(B) any bridge bank none of the voting securities of which are owned by a person or agency other than the Corporation.

"(6) CONSUMER COMPLIANCE EXAMINATIONS EXCLUDED.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'full-scope, on-site examination' does not include a consumer compliance examination, as defined in section 41(b).".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall become effective 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act.

(c) TRANSITION RULE.—Notwithstanding section 10(d) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (as added by subsection (a)), during the period beginning on the date of enactment of this Act and ending on December 31, 1993, a full-scope, on-site examination of an insured depository institution is not required more often than once during every 18-month period, unless—

(1) the institution, when most recently examined, was found to be in a less than satisfactory condition; or

(2) 1 or more persons acquired control of the institution.

(d) EXAMINATION IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The appropriate Federal banking agencies, acting through the Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council, shall each establish a comparable examination improvement program that meets the requirements of paragraph (2).

(2) REQUIREMENTS.—An examination improvement program meets the requirements of this paragraph if, under the program, the agency is required—

(A) to periodically review the organization and training of the staff of the agency who are responsible for conducting examinations of insured depository institutions and to make such improvements as the agency determines to be appropriate to ensure frequent, objective, and thorough examinations of such institutions; and

(B) to increase the number of examiners, supervisors, and other individuals employed by the agency in connection with conducting or supervising examinations of insured depository institutions to the extent necessary to ensure frequent, objective, and thorough examinations of such institutions.

(e) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 3(s) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1813(s)) is amended to read as follows:

"(s) DEFINITIONS RELATING TO FOREIGN BANKS AND BRANCHES.—

"(1) FOREIGN BANK.—The term 'foreign bank' has the meaning given to such term by section 1(b)(7) of the International Banking Act of 1978.

"(2) FEDERAL BRANCH.—The term 'Federal branch' has the meaning given to such term by section 1(b)(6) of the International Banking Act of 1978.

"(3) INSURED BRANCH.—The term 'insured branch' means any branch (as defined in section 1(b)(3) of the International Banking Act of 1978) of a foreign bank any deposits in which are insured pursuant to this Act.".

SEC. 112. INDEPENDENT ANNUAL AUDITS OF INSURED DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1811 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 36. EARLY IDENTIFICATION OF NEEDED IMPROVEMENTS IN FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT.

"(a) ANNUAL REPORT ON FINANCIAL CONDITION AND MANAGEMENT.—

"(1) REPORT REQUIRED.—Each insured depository institution shall submit an annual report to the Corporation, the appropriate Federal banking agency, and any appropriate State bank supervisor (including any State bank supervisor of a host State).

"(2) CONTENTS OF REPORT.—Any annual report required under paragraph (1) shall contain—

"(A) the information required to be provided by—

"(i) the institution's management under subsection (b); and

"(ii) an independent public accountant under subsections (c) and (d); and

"(B) such other information as the Corporation and the appropriate Federal banking agency may determine to be necessary to assess the financial condition and management of the institution.

"(3) PUBLIC AVAILABILITY.—Any annual report required under paragraph (1) shall be available for public inspection.

"(b) MANAGEMENT RESPONSIBILITY FOR FINANCIAL STATEMENTS AND INTERNAL CONTROLS.—Each insured depository institution shall prepare—

"(1) annual financial statements in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles and such other disclosure requirements as the Corporation and the appropriate Federal banking agency may prescribe; and

"(2) a report signed by the chief executive officer and the chief accounting or financial officer of the institution which contains—

"(A) a statement of the management's responsibilities for—

"(i) preparing financial statements;

"(ii) establishing and maintaining an adequate internal control structure and procedures for financial reporting; and

"(iii) complying with the laws and regulations relating to safety and soundness which are designated by the Corporation or the appropriate Federal banking agency; and

"(B) an assessment, as of the end of the institution's most recent fiscal year, of—

"(i) the effectiveness of such internal control structure and procedures; and

"(ii) the institution's compliance with the laws and regulations relating to safety and soundness which are designated by the Corporation and the appropriate Federal banking agency.

"(c) INTERNAL CONTROL EVALUATION AND REPORTING REQUIREMENTS FOR INDEPENDENT PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—With respect to any internal control report required by subsection (b)(2) of any institution, the institution's independent public accountant shall attest to, and report separately on, the assertions of the institution's management contained in such report.

"(2) ATTESTATION REQUIREMENTS.—Any attestation pursuant to paragraph (1) shall be made in accordance with generally accepted standards for attestation engagements.

"(d) ANNUAL INDEPENDENT AUDITS OF FINANCIAL STATEMENTS.—

"(1) AUDITS REQUIRED.—The Corporation, in consultation with the appropriate Federal banking agencies, shall prescribe regulations requiring that each insured depository institution shall have an annual independent audit made of the institution's financial statements by an independent public accountant in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards and section 37.

"(2) SCOPE OF AUDIT.—In connection with any audit under this subsection, the independent public accountant shall determine and report whether the financial statements of the institution—

"(A) are presented fairly in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles; and

"(B) comply with such other disclosure requirements as the Corporation and the appropriate Federal banking agency may prescribe.

"(3) REQUIREMENTS FOR INSURED SUBSIDIARIES OF HOLDING COMPANIES.—The requirements for an independent audit under this subsection may be satisfied for insured depository institutions that are subsidiaries of a holding company by an independent audit of the holding company.

"(e) DETECTING AND REPORTING VIOLATIONS OF LAWS AND REGULATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—An independent public accountant shall apply procedures agreed upon by the Corporation to objectively determine the extent of the compliance of any insured depository institution or depository institution holding company with laws and regulations designated by the Corporation, in consultation with the appropriate Federal banking agencies.

"(2) ATTESTATION REQUIREMENTS.—Any attestation pursuant to paragraph (1) shall be made in accordance with generally accepted standards for attestation engagements.

"(f) FORM AND CONTENT OF REPORTS AND AUDITING STANDARDS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The scope of each report by an independent public accountant pursuant to this section, and the procedures followed in preparing such report, shall meet or exceed the scope and procedures required by generally accepted auditing standards and other applicable standards recognized by the Corporation.

"(2) CONSULTATION.—The Corporation shall consult with the other appropriate Federal banking agencies in implementing this subsection.

"(g) IMPROVED ACCOUNTABILITY.—

"(1) INDEPENDENT AUDIT COMMITTEE.—

"(A) ESTABLISHMENT.—Each insured depository institution (to which this section applies) shall have an independent audit committee entirely made up of outside directors who are independent of management of the institution, and who satisfy any specific requirements the Corporation may establish.

"(B) DUTIES.—An independent audit committee's duties shall include reviewing with management and the independent public accountant the basis for the reports issued under subsections (b)(2), (c), and (d).

"(C) CRITERIA APPLICABLE TO COMMITTEES OF LARGE INSURED DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS.—In the case of each insured depository institution which the Corporation determines to be a large institution, the audit committee required by subparagraph (A) shall—

"(i) include members with banking or related financial management expertise;

"(ii) have access to the committee's own outside counsel; and

"(iii) not include any large customers of the institution.

"(2) REVIEW OF QUARTERLY REPORTS OF LARGE INSURED DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any insured depository institution which the Corporation has determined to be a large institution, the Corporation may require the independent public accountant retained by such institution to perform reviews of the institution's quarterly financial reports in accordance with procedures agreed upon by the Corporation.

"(B) REPORT TO AUDIT COMMITTEE.—The independent public accountant referred to in subparagraph (A) shall provide the audit committee of the insured depository institution with reports on the reviews under such subparagraph and the audit committee shall provide such reports to the Corporation, any appropriate Federal banking agency, and any appropriate State bank supervisor.

"(C) LIMITATION ON NOTICE.—Reports provided under subparagraph (B) shall be only for the information and use of the insured depository institution, the Corporation, any appropriate Federal banking agency, and any State bank supervisor that received the report.

"(3) QUALIFICATIONS OF INDEPENDENT PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—All audit services required by this section shall be performed only by an independent public accountant who—

"(i) has agreed to provide related working papers, policies, and procedures to the Corporation, an appropriate Federal banking agency, and any State bank supervisor, if requested; and

"(ii) has received a peer review that meets guidelines acceptable to the Corporation.

"(B) REPORTS ON PEER REVIEWS.—Reports on peer reviews shall be filed with the Corporation and made available for public inspection.

"(4) ENFORCEMENT ACTIONS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In addition to any authority contained in section 8, the Corporation or an appropriate Federal banking agency may remove, suspend, or bar an independent public accountant, upon a showing of good cause, from performing audit services required by this section.

"(B) JOINT RULEMAKING.—The appropriate Federal banking agencies shall jointly issue rules of practice to implement this paragraph.

"(5) NOTICE BY ACCOUNTANT OF TERMINATION OF SERVICES.—Any independent public accountant performing an audit under this section who subsequently ceases to be the accountant for the institution shall promptly notify the Corporation pursuant to such rules as the Corporation shall prescribe.

"(h) EXCHANGE OF REPORTS AND INFORMATION.—

"(1) REPORT TO THE INDEPENDENT AUDITOR.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Each insured depository institution which has engaged the services of an independent auditor to audit such institution shall transmit to the auditor a copy of the most recent report of condition made by the institution (pursuant to this Act or any other provision of law) and a copy of the most recent report of examination received by the institution.

"(B) ADDITIONAL INFORMATION.—In addition to the copies of the reports required to be provided under subparagraph (A), each insured depository institution shall provide the auditor with—

"(i) a copy of any supervisory memorandum of understanding with such institution and any written agreement between such institution and any appropriate Federal banking agency or any appropriate State bank supervisor which is in effect during the period covered by the audit; and

"(ii) a report of—

"(I) any action initiated or taken by the appropriate Federal banking agency or the Corporation during such period under subsection (a), (b), (c), (e), (g), (i), (s), or (t) of section 8;

"(II) any action taken by any appropriate State bank supervisor under State law which is similar to any action referred to in subclause (I); or

"(III) any assessment of any civil money penalty under any other provision of law with respect to the institution or any institution-affiliated party.

"(2) REPORTS TO BANKING AGENCIES.—

"(A) INDEPENDENT AUDITOR REPORTS.—Each insured depository institution shall provide to the Corporation, any appropriate Federal banking agency, and any appropriate State bank supervisor, a copy of each audit report and any qualification to such report, any management letter, and any other report within 15 days of receipt of any such report, qualification, or letter from the institution's independent auditors.

"(B) NOTICE OF CHANGE OF AUDITOR.—Each insured depository institution shall provide written notification to the Corporation, the appropriate Federal banking agency, and any appropriate State bank supervisor of the resignation or dismissal of the institution's independent auditor or the engagement of a new independent auditor by the institution, including a statement of the reasons for such change within 15 calendar days of the occurrence of the event.

"(i) REQUIREMENTS FOR INSURED SUBSIDIARIES OF HOLDING COMPANIES.—Except with respect to any audit requirements established under or pursuant to subsection (d), the requirements of this section may be satisfied for insured depository institutions that are subsidiaries of a holding company, if—

"(1) services and functions comparable to those required under this section are provided at the holding company level; and

"(2) either—

"(A) the institution has total assets, as of the beginning of such fiscal year, of less than $5,000,000,000; or

"(B) the institution—

"(i) has total assets, as of the beginning of such fiscal year, of more than $5,000,000,000 and less than $9,000,000,000; and

"(ii) has a CAMEL composite rating of 1 or 2 under the Uniform Financial Institutions Rating System (or an equivalent rating by any such agency under a comparable rating system) as of the most recent examination of such institution by the Corporation or the appropriate Federal banking agency.

"(j) EXEMPTION FOR SMALL DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS.—This section shall not apply with respect to any fiscal year of any insured depository institution the total assets of which, as of the beginning of such fiscal year, are less than the greater of—

"(1) $150,000,000; or

"(2) such amount (in excess of $150,000,000) as the Corporation may prescribe by regulation.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The requirements established by the amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply with respect to fiscal years of insured depository institutions which begin after December 31, 1992.

SEC. 113. ASSESSMENTS REQUIRED TO COVER COSTS OF EXAMINATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 10 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1820) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (f); and

(2) by inserting after subsection (d) (as added by section 111(a)(1) of this subtitle) the following new subsection:

"(e) EXAMINATION FEES.—

"(1) REGULAR AND SPECIAL EXAMINATIONS OF DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS.—The cost of conducting any regular examination or special examination of any depository institution under subsection (b)(2), (b)(3), or (d) may be assessed by the Corporation against the institution to meet the Corporation's expenses in carrying out such examinations.

"(2) EXAMINATION OF AFFILIATES.—The cost of conducting any examination of any affiliate of any insured depository institution under subsection (b)(4) may be assessed by the Corporation against each affiliate which is examined to meet the Corporation's expenses in carrying out such examination.

"(3) ASSESSMENT AGAINST DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION IN CASE OF AFFILIATE'S REFUSAL TO PAY.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraph (B), if any affiliate of any insured depository institution—

"(i) refuses to pay any assessment under paragraph (2); or

"(ii) fails to pay any such assessment before the end of the 60-day period beginning on the date the affiliate receives notice of the assessment, the Corporation may assess such cost against, and collect such cost from, the depository institution.

"(B) AFFILIATE OF MORE THAN 1 DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION.—If any affiliate referred to in subparagraph (A) is an affiliate of more than 1 insured depository institution, the assessment under subparagraph (A) may be assessed against the depository institutions in such proportions as the Corporation determines to be appropriate.

"(4) CIVIL MONEY PENALTY FOR AFFILIATE'S REFUSAL TO COOPERATE.—

"(A) PENALTY IMPOSED.—If any affiliate of any insured depository institution—

"(i) refuses to permit an examiner appointed by the Board of Directors under subsection (b)(1) to conduct an examination; or

"(ii) refuses to provide any information required to be disclosed in the course of any examination, the depository institution shall forfeit and pay a penalty of not more than $5,000 for each day that any such refusal continues.

"(B) ASSESSMENT AND COLLECTION.—Any penalty imposed under subparagraph (A) shall be assessed and collected by the Corporation in the manner provided in section 8(i)(2).

"(5) DEPOSITS OF EXAMINATION ASSESSMENT.—Amounts received by the Corporation under this subsection (other than paragraph (4)) may be deposited in the manner provided in section 13.".

(b) EXAMINATIONS OF APPLICANTS FOR DEPOSIT INSURANCE.—Section 10(b)(2)(B) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1820(b)(2)(B)) is amended to read as follows:

"(B) any depository institution which files an application with the Corporation to become an insured depository institution;".

(c) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—

(1) Section 7(b)(10) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (as so redesignated by section 103(b) of this Act) is amended by inserting "or section 10(e)" after "under this section".

(2) Section 10(b)(4)(A) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1820(b)(4)(A)) is amended by striking "insured" each place such term appears.

SEC. 114. EXAMINATION AND SUPERVISION FEES FOR NATIONAL BANKS AND SAVINGS ASSOCIATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 5240 of the Revised Statutes (12 U.S.C. 482) is amended—

(1) by striking the 4th undesignated paragraph and inserting the following:

"The Comptroller of the Currency may impose and collect assessments, fees, or other charges as necessary or appropriate to carry out the responsibilities of the duties of the Comptroller. Such assessments, fees, and other charges shall be set to meet the Comptroller's expenses in carrying out authorized activities.";

(2) by striking "In addition to the expense of examination" and all that follows through "to cover the expense thereof.".

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—Section 5240 of the Revised Statutes is amended in the 2d undesignated paragraph (12 U.S.C. 481)—

(1) by striking the 2d sentence;

(2) by striking the 3d sentence and inserting "If any affiliate of a national bank refuses to pay any assessments, fees, or other charges imposed by the Comptroller of the Currency pursuant to this section or fails to make such payment not later than 60 days after the date on which they are imposed, the Comptroller of the Currency may impose such assessments, fees, or charges against the affiliated national bank, and such assessments, fees, or charges shall be paid by such national bank. If the affiliation is with 2 or more national banks, such assessments, fees, or charges may be imposed on, and collected from, any or all of such national banks in such proportions as the Comptroller of the Currency may prescribe.";

(3) in the 4th sentence, by inserting "or from other fees or charges imposed pursuant to this section" after "assessments on banks or affiliates thereof"; and

(4) in the 5th sentence—

(A) by inserting ", fees, or charges" before "may be deposited"; and

(B) by inserting "or of other fees or charges imposed pursuant to this section" before the period.

(c) ASSESSMENT AUTHORITY OF THE OFFICE OF THRIFT SUPERVISION.—Section 9 of the Home Owners' Loan Act (12 U.S.C. 1467) is amended—

(1) by striking subsections (a) and (b) and inserting the following:

"(a) EXAMINATION OF SAVINGS ASSOCIATIONS.—The cost of conducting examinations of savings associations pursuant to section 5(d) shall be assessed by the Director against each such savings association as the Director deems necessary or appropriate.

"(b) EXAMINATION OF AFFILIATES.—The cost of conducting examinations of affiliates of savings associations pursuant to this Act may be assessed by the Director against each affiliate that is examined as the Director deems necessary or appropriate.";

(2) by amending subsection (k) to read as follows:

"(k) FEES FOR EXAMINATIONS AND SUPERVISORY ACTIVITIES.—The Director may assess against institutions for which the Director is the appropriate Federal banking agency, as defined in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, fees to fund the direct and indirect expenses of the Office as the Director deems necessary or appropriate. The fees may be imposed more frequently than annually at the discretion of the Director.".

SEC. 115. APPLICATION TO FDIC REQUIRED FOR INSURANCE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 5 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1815(a)) is amended by striking all that precedes subsection (b) and inserting the following:

"SEC. 5. DEPOSIT INSURANCE.

"(a) APPLICATION TO CORPORATION REQUIRED.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), any depository institution which is engaged in the business of receiving deposits other than trust funds (as defined in section 3(p)), upon application to and examination by the Corporation and approval by the Board of Directors, may become an insured depository institution.

"(2) INTERIM DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS.—In the case of any interim Federal depository institution that is chartered by the appropriate Federal banking agency and will not open for business, the depository institution shall be an insured depository institution upon the issuance of the institution's charter by the agency.

"(3) APPLICATION AND APPROVAL NOT REQUIRED IN CASES OF CONTINUED INSURANCE.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply in the case of any depository institution whose insured status is continued pursuant to section 4.

"(4) REVIEW REQUIREMENTS.—In reviewing any application under this subsection, the Board of Directors shall consider the factors described in section 6 in determining whether to approve the application for insurance.

"(5) NOTICE OF DENIAL OF APPLICATION FOR INSURANCE.—If the Board of Directors votes to deny any application for insurance by any depository institution, the Board of Directors shall promptly notify the appropriate Federal banking agency and, in the case of any State depository institution, the appropriate State banking supervisor of the denial of such application, giving specific reasons in writing for the Board of Directors' determination with reference to the factors described in section 6.

"(6) NONDELEGATION REQUIREMENT.—The authority of the Board of Directors to make any determination to deny any application under this subsection may not be delegated by the Board of Directors.".

(b) CONTINUATION OF INSURANCE UPON BECOMING A MEMBER BANK.—4(b) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1814(b)) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) CONTINUATION OF INSURANCE UPON BECOMING A MEMBER BANK.—In the case of an insured bank which is admitted to membership in the Federal Reserve System or an insured State bank which is converted into a national member bank, the bank shall continue as an insured bank.".

Subtitle C—Accounting Reforms

SEC. 121. ACCOUNTING OBJECTIVES, STANDARDS, AND REQUIREMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1811 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 36 (as added by section 112 of this title) the following new section:

"SEC. 37. ACCOUNTING OBJECTIVES, STANDARDS, AND REQUIREMENTS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—

"(1) OBJECTIVES.—Accounting principles applicable to reports or statements required to be filed with Federal banking agencies by insured depository institutions should—

"(A) result in financial statements and reports of condition that accurately reflect the capital of such institutions;

"(B) facilitate effective supervision of the institutions; and

"(C) facilitate prompt corrective action to resolve the institutions at the least cost to the insurance funds.

"(2) STANDARDS.—

"(A) UNIFORM ACCOUNTING PRINCIPLES CONSISTENT WITH GAAP.—Subject to the requirements of this Act and any other provision of Federal law, the accounting principles applicable to reports or statements required to be filed with Federal banking agencies by all insured depository institutions shall be uniform and consistent with generally accepted accounting principles.

"(B) STRINGENCY.—If the appropriate Federal banking agency or the Corporation determines that the application of any generally accepted accounting principle to any insured depository institution is inconsistent with the objectives described in paragraph (1), the agency or the Corporation may, with respect to reports or statements required to be filed with such agency or Corporation, prescribe an accounting principle which is applicable to such institutions which is no less stringent than generally accepted accounting principles.

"(3) REVIEW AND IMPLEMENTATION OF ACCOUNTING PRINCIPLES REQUIRED.—Before the end of the 1-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991, each appropriate Federal banking agency shall take the following actions:

"(A) REVIEW OF ACCOUNTING PRINCIPLES.—Review—

"(i) all accounting principles used by depository institutions with respect to reports or statements required to be filed with a Federal banking agency;

"(ii) all requirements established by the agency with respect to such accounting procedures; and

"(iii) the procedures and format for reports to the agency, including reports of condition.

"(B) MODIFICATION OF NONCOMPLYING MEASURES.—Modify or eliminate any accounting principle or reporting requirement of such Federal agency which the agency determines fails to comply with the objectives and standards established under paragraphs (1) and (2).

"(C) INCLUSION OF 'OFF BALANCE SHEET' ITEMS.—Develop and prescribe regulations which require that all assets and liabilities, including contingent assets and liabilities, of insured depository institutions be reported in, or otherwise taken into account in the preparation of any balance sheet, financial statement, report of condition, or other report of such institution, required to be filed with a Federal banking agency.

"(D) MARKET VALUE DISCLOSURE.—Develop jointly with the other appropriate Federal banking agencies a method for insured depository institutions to provide supplemental disclosure of the estimated fair market value of assets and liabilities, to the extent feasible and practicable, in any balance sheet, financial statement, report of condition, or other report of any insured depository institution required to be filed with a Federal banking agency.

"(b) UNIFORM ACCOUNTING OF CAPITAL STANDARDS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Each appropriate Federal banking agency shall maintain uniform accounting standards to be used for determining compliance with statutory or regulatory requirements of depository institutions.

"(2) TRANSITION PROVISION.—Any standards in effect on the date of the enactment of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991 under section 1215 of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 shall continue in effect after such date of enactment until amended by the appropriate Federal banking agency under paragraph (1).

"(c) REPORTS TO BANKING COMMITTEES.—

"(1) ANNUAL REPORTS REQUIRED.—Each appropriate Federal banking agency shall annually submit a report to the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate containing a description of any difference between any accounting or capital standard used by such agency and any accounting or capital standard used by any other agency.

"(2) EXPLANATION OF REASONS FOR DISCREPANCY.—Each report submitted under paragraph (1) shall contain an explanation of the reasons for any discrepancy between any accounting or capital standard used by such agency and any accounting or capital standard used by any other agency.

"(3) PUBLICATION.—Each report under this subsection shall be published in the Federal Register.".

(b) REPEAL OF PROVISION SUPERSEDED BY SUBSECTION (a) AMENDMENTS.—Section 1215 of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 (12 U.S.C. 1833d) is hereby repealed.

SEC. 122. SMALL BUSINESS AND SMALL FARM LOAN INFORMATION

(a) IN GENERAL.—Before the end of the 180-day period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, the appropriate Federal banking agency shall prescribe regulations requiring insured depository institutions to annually submit information on small businesses and small farm lending in their reports of condition.

(b) CREDIT AVAILABILITY.—The regulations prescribed under subsection (a) shall require insured depository institutions to submit such information as the agency may need to assess the availability of credit to small businesses and small farms.

(d) CONTENTS.—The information required under subsection (a) may include information regarding the following:

(1) The total number and aggregate dollar amount of commercial loans and commercial mortgage loans to small businesses.

(2) Charge-offs, interest, and interest fee income on commercial loans and commercial mortgage loans to small businesses.

(3) Agricultural loans to small farms.

SEC. 123. FDIC PROPERTY DISPOSITION STANDARDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 11(d)(13) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(d)(13)) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(E) DISPOSITION OF ASSETS.—In exercising any right, power, privilege, or authority as conservator or receiver in connection with any sale or disposition of assets of any insured depository institution for which the Corporation has been appointed conservator or receiver, including any sale or disposition of assets acquired by the Corporation under section 13(d)(1), the Corporation shall conduct its operations in a manner which—

"(i) maximizes the net present value return from the sale or disposition of such assets;

"(ii) minimizes the amount of any loss realized in the resolution of cases;

"(iii) ensures adequate competition and fair and consistent treatment of offerors;

"(iv) prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, sex, or ethnic groups in the solicitation and consideration of offers; and

"(v) maximizes the preservation of the availability and affordability of residential real property for low- and moderate-income individuals.".

(b) CORPORATE CAPACITY.—Section 13(d)(3) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1823(d)(3)) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(D) DISPOSITION OF ASSETS.—In exercising any right, power, privilege, or authority described in subparagraph (A) regarding the sale or disposition of assets sold to the Corporation pursuant to paragraph (1), the Corporation shall conduct its operations in a manner which—

"(i) maximizes the net present value return from the sale or disposition of such assets;

"(ii) minimizes the amount of any loss realized in the resolution of cases;

"(iii) ensures adequate competition and fair and consistent treatment of offerors;

"(iv) prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, sex, or ethnic groups in the solicitation and consideration of offers; and

"(v) maximizes the preservation of the availability and affordability of residential real property for low- and moderate-income individuals.".

Subtitle D—Prompt Regulatory Action

SEC. 131. PROMPT REGULATORY ACTION.

(a) ESTABLISHING SYSTEM OF PROMPT CORRECTIVE ACTION.—The Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1811 et seq.) is amended by adding after section 37 (as added by section 121 of this Act) the following new section:

"SEC. 38. PROMPT CORRECTIVE ACTION.

"(a) RESOLVING PROBLEMS TO PROTECT DEPOSIT INSURANCE FUNDS.—

"(1) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to resolve the problems of insured depository institutions at the least possible long-term loss to the deposit insurance fund.

"(2) PROMPT CORRECTIVE ACTION REQUIRED.—Each appropriate Federal banking agency and the Corporation (acting in the Corporation's capacity as the insurer of depository institutions under this Act) shall carry out the purpose of this section by taking prompt corrective action to resolve the problems of insured depository institutions.

"(b) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:

"(1) CAPITAL CATEGORIES.—

"(A) WELL CAPITALIZED.—An insured depository institution is 'well capitalized' if it significantly exceeds the required minimum level for each relevant capital measure.

"(B) ADEQUATELY CAPITALIZED.—An insured depository institution is 'adequately capitalized' if it meets the required minimum level for each relevant capital measure.

"(C) UNDERCAPITALIZED.—An insured depository institution is 'undercapitalized' if it fails to meet the required minimum level for any relevant capital measure.

"(D) SIGNIFICANTLY UNDERCAPITALIZED.—An insured depository institution is 'significantly undercapitalized' if it is significantly below the required minimum level for any relevant capital measure.

"(E) CRITICALLY UNDERCAPITALIZED.—An insured depository institution is 'critically undercapitalized' if it fails to meet any level specified under subsection (c)(3)(A).

"(2) OTHER DEFINITIONS.—

"(A) AVERAGE.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The 'average' of an accounting item (such as total assets or tangible equity) during a given period means the sum of that item at the close of business on each business day during that period divided by the total number of business days in that period.

"(ii) AGENCY MAY PERMIT WEEKLY AVERAGING FOR CERTAIN INSTITUTIONS.—In the case of insured depository institutions that have total assets of less than $300,000,000 and normally file reports of condition reflecting weekly (rather than daily) averages of accounting items, the appropriate Federal banking agency may provide that the 'average' of an accounting item during a given period means the sum of that item at the close of business on the relevant business day each week during that period divided by the total number of weeks in that period.

"(B) CAPITAL DISTRIBUTION.—The term 'capital distribution' means—

"(i) a distribution of cash or other property by any insured depository institution or company to its owners made on account of that ownership, but not including—

"(I) any dividend consisting only of shares of the institution or company or rights to purchase such shares; or

"(II) any amount paid on the deposits of a mutual or cooperative institution that the appropriate Federal banking agency determines is not a distribution for purposes of this section;

"(ii) a payment by an insured depository institution or company to repurchase, redeem, retire, or otherwise acquire any of its shares or other ownership interests, including any extension of credit to finance an affiliated company's acquisition of those shares or interests; or

"(iii) a transaction that the appropriate Federal banking agency or the Corporation determines, by order or regulation, to be in substance a distribution of capital to the owners of the insured depository institution or company.

"(C) CAPITAL RESTORATION PLAN.—The term 'capital restoration plan' means a plan submitted under subsection (e)(2).

"(D) COMPANY.—The term 'company' has the same meaning as in section 2 of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956.

"(E) COMPENSATION.—The term 'compensation' includes any payment of money or provision of any other thing of value in consideration of employment.

"(F) RELEVANT CAPITAL MEASURE.—The term 'relevant capital measure' means the measures described in subsection (c).

"(G) REQUIRED MINIMUM LEVEL.—The term 'required minimum level' means, with respect to each relevant capital measure, the minimum acceptable capital level specified by the appropriate Federal banking agency by regulation.

"(H) SENIOR EXECUTIVE OFFICER.—The term 'senior executive officer' has the same meaning as the term 'executive officer' in section 22(h) of the Federal Reserve Act.

"(I) SUBORDINATED DEBT.—The term 'subordinated debt' means debt subordinated to the claims of general creditors.

"(c) CAPITAL STANDARDS.—

"(1) RELEVANT CAPITAL MEASURES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B)(ii), the capital standards prescribed by each appropriate Federal banking agency shall include—

"(i) a leverage limit; and

"(ii) a risk-based capital requirement.

"(B) OTHER CAPITAL MEASURES.—An appropriate Federal banking agency may, by regulation—

"(i) establish any additional relevant capital measures to carry out the purpose of this section; or

"(ii) rescind any relevant capital measure required under subparagraph (A) upon determining (with the concurrence of the other Federal banking agencies) that the measure is no longer an appropriate means for carrying out the purpose of this section.

"(2) CAPITAL CATEGORIES GENERALLY.—Each appropriate Federal banking agency shall, by regulation, specify for each relevant capital measure the levels at which an insured depository institution is well capitalized, adequately capitalized, undercapitalized, and significantly undercapitalized.

"(3) CRITICAL CAPITAL.—

"(A) AGENCY TO SPECIFY LEVEL.—

"(i) LEVERAGE LIMIT.—Each appropriate Federal banking agency shall, by regulation, in consultation with the Corporation, specify the ratio of tangible equity to total assets at which an insured depository institution is critically undercapitalized.

"(ii) OTHER RELEVANT CAPITAL MEASURES.—The agency may, by regulation, specify for 1 or more other relevant capital measures, the level at which an insured depository institution is critically undercapitalized.

"(B) LEVERAGE LIMIT RANGE.—The level specified under subparagraph (A)(i) shall require tangible equity in an amount—

"(i) not less than 2 percent of total assets; and

"(ii) except as provided in clause (i), not more than 65 percent of the required minimum level of capital under the leverage limit.

"(C) FDIC'S CONCURRENCE REQUIRED.—The appropriate Federal banking agency shall not, without the concurrence of the Corporation, specify a level under subparagraph (A)(i) lower than that specified by the Corporation for State nonmember insured banks.

"(d) PROVISIONS APPLICABLE TO ALL INSTITUTIONS.—

"(1) CAPITAL DISTRIBUTIONS RESTRICTED.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—An insured depository institution shall make no capital distribution if, after making the distribution, the institution would be undercapitalized.

"(B) EXCEPTION.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), the appropriate Federal banking agency may permit, after consultation with the Corporation, an insured depository institution to repurchase, redeem, retire, or otherwise acquire shares or ownership interests if the repurchase, redemption, retirement, or other acquisition—

"(i) is made in connection with the issuance of additional shares or obligations of the institution in at least an equivalent amount; and

"(ii) will reduce the institution's financial obligations or otherwise improve the institution's financial condition.

"(2) MANAGEMENT FEES RESTRICTED.—An insured depository institution shall pay no management fee to any person having control of that institution if, after making the payment, the institution would be undercapitalized.

"(e) PROVISIONS APPLICABLE TO UNDERCAPITALIZED INSTITUTIONS.—

"(1) MONITORING REQUIRED.—Each appropriate Federal banking agency shall—

"(A) closely monitor the condition of any undercapitalized insured depository institution;

"(B) closely monitor compliance with capital restoration plans, restrictions, and requirements imposed under this section; and

"(C) periodically review the plan, restrictions, and requirements applicable to any undercapitalized insured depository institution to determine whether the plan, restrictions, and requirements are achieving the purpose of this section.

"(2) CAPITAL RESTORATION PLAN REQUIRED.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Any undercapitalized insured depository institution shall submit an acceptable capital restoration plan to the appropriate Federal banking agency within the time allowed by the agency under subparagraph (D).

"(B) CONTENTS OF PLAN.—The capital restoration plan shall—

"(i) specify—

"(I) the steps the insured depository institution will take to become adequately capitalized;

"(II) the levels of capital to be attained during each year in which the plan will be in effect;

"(III) how the institution will comply with the restrictions or requirements then in effect under this section; and

"(IV) the types and levels of activities in which the institution will engage; and

"(ii) contain such other information as the appropriate Federal banking agency may require.

"(C) CRITERIA FOR ACCEPTING PLAN.—The appropriate Federal banking agency shall not accept a capital restoration plan unless the agency determines that—

"(i) the plan—

"(I) complies with subparagraph (B);

"(II) is based on realistic assumptions, and is likely to succeed in restoring the institution's capital; and

"(III) would not appreciably increase the risk (including credit risk, interest-rate risk, and other types of risk) to which the institution is exposed; and

"(ii) if the insured depository institution is undercapitalized, each company having control of the institution has—

"(I) guaranteed that the institution will comply with the plan until the institution has been adequately capitalized on average during each of 4 consecutive calendar quarters; and

"(II) provided appropriate assurances of performance.

"(D) DEADLINES FOR SUBMISSION AND REVIEW OF PLANS.—The appropriate Federal banking agency shall by regulation establish deadlines that—

"(i) provide insured depository institutions with reasonable time to submit capital restoration plans, and generally require an institution to submit a plan not later than 45 days after the institution becomes undercapitalized; and

"(ii) require the agency to act on capital restoration plans expeditiously, and generally not later than 60 days after the plan is submitted; and

"(iii) require the agency to submit a copy of any plan approved by the agency to the Corporation before the end of the 45-day period beginning on the date such approval is granted.

"(E) GUARANTEE LIABILITY LIMITED.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The aggregate liability under subparagraph (C)(ii) of all companies having control of an insured depository institution shall be the lesser of—

"(I) an amount equal to 5 percent of the institution's total assets at the time the institution became undercapitalized; or

"(II) the amount which is necessary (or would have been necessary) to bring the institution into compliance with all capital standards applicable with respect to such institution as of the time the institution fails to comply with a plan under this subsection.

"(ii) CERTAIN AFFILIATES NOT AFFECTED.—This paragraph may not be construed as—

"(I) requiring any company not having control of an undercapitalized insured depository institution to guarantee, or otherwise be liable on, a capital restoration plan;

"(II) requiring any person other than an insured depository institution to submit a capital restoration plan; or

"(III) affecting compliance by brokers, dealers, government securities brokers, and government securities dealers with the financial responsibility requirements of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and regulations and orders thereunder.

"(3) ASSET GROWTH RESTRICTED.—An undercapitalized insured depository institution shall not permit its average total assets during any calendar quarter to exceed its average total assets during the preceding calendar quarter unless—

"(A) the appropriate Federal banking agency has accepted the institution's capital restoration plan;

"(B) any increase in total assets is consistent with the plan; and

"(C) the institution's ratio of tangible equity to assets increases during the calendar quarter at a rate sufficient to enable the institution to become adequately capitalized within a reasonable time.

"(4) PRIOR APPROVAL REQUIRED FOR ACQUISITIONS, BRANCHING, AND NEW LINES OF BUSINESS.—An undercapitalized insured depository institution shall not, directly or indirectly, acquire any interest in any company or insured depository institution, establish or acquire any additional branch office, or engage in any new line of business unless—

"(A) the appropriate Federal banking agency has accepted the insured depository institution's capital restoration plan, the institution is implementing the plan, and the agency determines that the proposed action is consistent with and will further the achievement of the plan; or

"(B) the Board of Directors determines that the proposed action will further the purpose of this section.

"(5) DISCRETIONARY SAFEGUARDS.—The appropriate Federal banking agency may, with respect to any undercapitalized insured depository institution, take actions described in any subparagraph of subsection (f)(2) if the agency determines that those actions are necessary to carry out the purpose of this section.

"(f) PROVISIONS APPLICABLE TO SIGNIFICANTLY UNDERCAPITALIZED INSTITUTIONS AND UNDERCAPITALIZED INSTITUTIONS THAT FAIL TO SUBMIT AND IMPLEMENT CAPITAL RESTORATION PLANS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—This subsection shall apply with respect to any insured depository institution that—

"(A) is significantly undercapitalized; or

"(B) is undercapitalized and—

"(i) fails to submit an acceptable capital restoration plan within the time allowed by the appropriate Federal banking agency under subsection (e)(2)(D); or

"(ii) fails in any material respect to implement a plan accepted by the agency.

"(2) SPECIFIC ACTIONS AUTHORIZED.—The appropriate Federal banking agency shall carry out this section by taking 1 or more of the following actions:

"(A) REQUIRING RECAPITALIZATION.—Doing 1 or more of the following:

"(i) Requiring the institution to sell enough shares or obligations of the institution so that the institution will be adequately capitalized after the sale.

"(ii) Further requiring that instruments sold under clause (i) be voting shares.

"(iii) Requiring the institution to be acquired by a depository institution holding company, or to combine with another insured depository institution, if 1 or more grounds exist for appointing a conservator or receiver for the institution.

"(B) RESTRICTING TRANSACTIONS WITH AFFILIATES.—

"(i) Requiring the institution to comply with section 23A of the Federal Reserve Act as if subsection (d)(1) of that section (exempting transactions with certain affiliated institutions) did not apply.

"(ii) Further restricting the institution's transactions with affiliates.

"(C) RESTRICTING INTEREST RATES PAID.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Restricting the interest rates that the institution pays on deposits to the prevailing rates of interest on deposits of comparable amounts and maturities in the region where the institution is located, as determined by the agency.

"(ii) RETROACTIVE RESTRICTIONS PROHIBITED.—This subparagraph does not authorize the agency to restrict interest rates paid on time deposits made before (and not renewed or renegotiated after) the agency acted under this subparagraph.

"(D) RESTRICTING ASSET GROWTH.—Restricting the institution's asset growth more stringently than subsection (e)(3), or requiring the institution to reduce its total assets.

"(E) RESTRICTING ACTIVITIES.—Requiring the institution or any of its subsidiaries to alter, reduce, or terminate any activity that the agency determines poses excessive risk to the institution.

"(F) IMPROVING MANAGEMENT.—Doing 1 or more of the following:

"(i) NEW ELECTION OF DIRECTORS.—Ordering a new election for the institution's board of directors.

"(ii) DISMISSING DIRECTORS OR SENIOR EXECUTIVE OFFICERS.—Requiring the institution to dismiss from office any director or senior executive officer who had held office for more than 180 days immediately before the institution became undercapitalized. Dismissal under this clause shall not be construed to be a removal under section 8.

"(iii) EMPLOYING QUALIFIED SENIOR EXECUTIVE OFFICERS.—Requiring the institution to employ qualified senior executive officers (who, if the agency so specifies, shall be subject to approval by the agency).

"(G) PROHIBITING DEPOSITS FROM CORRESPONDENT BANKS.—Prohibiting the acceptance by the institution of deposits from correspondent depository institutions, including renewals and rollovers of prior deposits.

"(H) REQUIRING PRIOR APPROVAL FOR CAPITAL DISTRIBUTIONS BY BANK HOLDING COMPANY.—Prohibiting any bank holding company having control of the insured depository institution from making any capital distribution without the prior approval of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

"(I) REQUIRING DIVESTITURE.—Doing one or more of the following:

"(i) DIVESTITURE BY THE INSTITUTION.—Requiring the institution to divest itself of or liquidate any subsidiary if the agency determines that the subsidiary is in danger of becoming insolvent and poses a significant risk to the institution, or is likely to cause a significant dissipation of the institution's assets or earnings.

"(ii) DIVESTITURE BY PARENT COMPANY OF NONDEPOSITORY AFFILIATE.—Requiring any company having control of the institution to divest itself of or liquidate any affiliate other than an insured depository institution if the appropriate Federal banking agency for that company determines that the affiliate is in danger of becoming insolvent and poses a significant risk to the institution, or is likely to cause a significant dissipation of the institution's assets or earnings.

"(iii) DIVESTITURE OF INSTITUTION.—Requiring any company having control of the institution to divest itself of the institution if the appropriate Federal banking agency for that company determines that divestiture would improve the institution's financial condition and future prospects.

"(J) REQUIRING OTHER ACTION.—Requiring the institution to take any other action that the agency determines will better carry out the purpose of this section than any of the actions described in this paragraph.

"(3) PRESUMPTION IN FAVOR OF CERTAIN ACTIONS.—In complying with paragraph (2), the agency shall take the following actions, unless the agency determines that the actions would not further the purpose of this section:

"(A) The action described in clause (i) or (iii) of paragraph (2)(A) (relating to requiring the sale of shares or obligations, or requiring the institution to be acquired by or combine with another institution).

"(B) The action described in paragraph (2)(B)(i) (relating to restricting transactions with affiliates).

"(C) The action described in paragraph (2)(C) (relating to restricting interest rates).

"(4) SENIOR EXECUTIVE OFFICERS' COMPENSATION RESTRICTED.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The insured depository institution shall not do any of the following without the prior written approval of the appropriate Federal banking agency:

"(i) Pay any bonus to any senior executive officer.

"(ii) Provide compensation to any senior executive officer at a rate exceeding that officer's average rate of compensation (excluding bonuses, stock options, and profit-sharing) during the 12 calendar months preceding the calendar month in which the institution became undercapitalized.

"(B) FAILING TO SUBMIT PLAN.—The appropriate Federal banking agency shall not grant any approval under subparagraph (A) with respect to an institution that has failed to submit an acceptable capital restoration plan.

"(5) DISCRETION TO IMPOSE CERTAIN ADDITIONAL RESTRICTIONS.—The agency may impose 1 or more of the restrictions prescribed by regulation under subsection (i) if the agency determines that those restrictions are necessary to carry out the purpose of this section.

"(6) CONSULTATION WITH FUNCTIONAL REGULATORS.—Before the agency or Corporation makes a determination under paragraph (2)(I) with respect to an affiliate that is a broker, dealer, government securities broker, government securities dealer, investment company, or investment adviser, the agency or Corporation shall consult with the Securities and Exchange Commisssion and, in the case of any other affiliate which is subject to any financial responsibility or capital requirement, any other functional regulator (as defined in section 2(s) of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956) of such affiliate with respect to the proposed determination of the agency or the Corporation and actions pursuant to such determination.

"(g) MORE STRINGENT TREATMENT BASED ON OTHER SUPERVISORY CRITERIA.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If the appropriate Federal banking agency determines (after notice and an opportunity for hearing) that an insured depository institution is in an unsafe or unsound condition or, pursuant to section 8(b)(8), deems the institution to be engaging in an unsafe or unsound practice, the agency may—

"(A) if the institution is well capitalized, reclassify the institution as adequately capitalized;

"(B) if the institution is adequately capitalized, require the institution to comply with 1 or more provisions of subsections (d) and (e), as if the institution were undercapitalized; or

"(C) if the institution is undercapitalized, take any 1 or more actions authorized under subsection (f)(2) as if the institution were significantly undercapitalized.

"(2) CONTENTS OF PLAN.—Any plan required under paragraph (1) shall specify the steps that the insured depository institution will take to correct the unsafe or unsound condition or practice. Capital restoration plans shall not be required under paragraph (1)(B).

"(h) PROVISIONS APPLICABLE TO CRITICALLY UNDERCAPITALIZED INSTITUTIONS.—

"(1) ACTIVITIES RESTRICTED.—Any critically undercapitalized insured depository institution shall comply with restrictions prescribed by the Corporation under subsection (i).

"(2) PAYMENTS ON SUBORDINATED DEBT PROHIBITED.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—A critically undercapitalized insured depository institution shall not, beginning 60 days after becoming critically undercapitalized, make any payment of principal or interest on the institution's subordinated debt.

"(B) EXCEPTIONS.—The Corporation may make exceptions to subparagraph (A) if—

"(i) the appropriate Federal banking agency has taken action with respect to the insured depository institution under paragraph (3)(A)(ii); and

"(ii) the Corporation determines that the exception would further the purpose of this section.

"(C) LIMITED EXEMPTION FOR CERTAIN SUBORDINATED DEBT.—Until July 15, 1996, subparagraph (A) shall not apply with respect to any subordinated debt outstanding on July 15, 1991, and not extended or otherwise renegotiated after July 15, 1991.

"(D) ACCRUAL OF INTEREST.—Subparagraph (A) does not prevent unpaid interest from accruing on subordinated debt under the terms of that debt, to the extent otherwise permitted by law.

"(3) CONSERVATORSHIP, RECEIVERSHIP, OR OTHER ACTION REQUIRED.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The appropriate Federal banking agency shall, not later than 90 days after an insured depository institution becomes critically undercapitalized—

"(i) appoint a receiver (or, with the concurrence of the Corporation, a conservator) for the institution; or

"(ii) take such other action as the agency determines, with the concurrence of the Corporation, would better achieve the purpose of this section, after documenting why the action would better achieve that purpose.

"(B) PERIODIC REDETERMINATIONS REQUIRED.—Any determination by an appropriate Federal banking agency under subparagraph (A)(ii) to take any action with respect to an insured depository institution in lieu of appointing a conservator or receiver shall cease to be effective not later than the end of the 90-day period beginning on the date that the determination is made and a conservator or receiver shall be appointed for that institution under subparagraph (A)(i) unless the agency makes a new determination under subparagraph (A)(ii) at the end of the effective period of the prior determination.

"(C) APPOINTMENT OF RECEIVER REQUIRED IF OTHER ACTION FAILS TO RESTORE CAPITAL.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding subparagraphs (A) and (B), the appropriate Federal banking agency shall appoint a receiver for the insured depository institution if the institution is critically undercapitalized on average during the calendar quarter beginning 270 days after the date on which the institution became critically undercapitalized.

"(ii) EXCEPTION.—Notwithstanding clause (i), the appropriate Federal banking agency may continue to take such other action as the agency determines to be appropriate in lieu of such appointment if—

"(I) the agency determines, with the concurrence of the Corporation, that (aa) the insured depository institution has positive net worth, (bb) the insured depository institution has been in substantial compliance with an approved capital restoration plan which requires consistent improvement in the institution's capital since the date of the approval of the plan, (cc) the insured depository institution is profitable or has an upward trend in earnings the agency projects as sustainable, and (dd) the insured depository institution is reducing the ratio of nonperforming loans to total loans; and

"(II) the head of the appropriate Federal banking agency and the Chairperson of the Board of Directors both certify that the institution is viable and not expected to fail.

"(i) RESTRICTING ACTIVITIES OF CRITICALLY UNDERCAPITALIZED INSTITUTIONS.—To carry out the purpose of this section, the Corporation shall, by regulation or order—

"(1) restrict the activities of any critically undercapitalized insured depository institution; and

"(2) at a minimum, prohibit any such institution from doing any of the following without the Corporation's prior written approval:

"(A) Entering into any material transaction other than in the usual course of business, including any investment, expansion, acquisition, sale of assets, or other similar action with respect to which the depository institution is required to provide notice to the appropriate Federal banking agency.

"(B) Extending credit for any highly leveraged transaction.

"(C) Amending the institution's charter or bylaws, except to the extent necessary to carry out any other requirement of any law, regulation, or order.

"(D) Making any material change in accounting methods.

"(E) Engaging in any covered transaction (as defined in section 23A(b) of the Federal Reserve Act).

"(F) Paying excessive compensation or bonuses.

"(G) Paying interest on new or renewed liabilities at a rate that would increase the institution's weighted average cost of funds to a level significantly exceeding the prevailing rates of interest on insured deposits in the institution's normal market areas.

"(j) CERTAIN GOVERNMENT-CONTROLLED INSTITUTIONS EXEMPTED.—Subsections (e) through (i) (other than paragraph (3) of subsection (e)) shall not apply—

"(1) to an insured depository institution for which the Corporation or the Resolution Trust Corporation is conservator; or

"(2) to a bridge bank, none of the voting securities of which are owned by a person or agency other than the Corporation or the Resolution Trust Corporation.

"(k) REVIEW REQUIRED WHEN DEPOSIT INSURANCE FUND INCURS MATERIAL LOSS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—If a deposit insurance fund incurs a material loss with respect to an insured depository institution on or after July 1, 1993, the inspector general of the appropriate Federal banking agency shall—

"(A) make a written report to that agency reviewing the agency's supervision of the institution (including the agency's implementation of this section), which shall—

"(i) ascertain why the institution's problems resulted in a material loss to the deposit insurance fund; and

"(ii) make recommendations for preventing any such loss in the future; and

"(B) provide a copy of the report to—

"(i) the Comptroller General of the United States;

"(ii) the Corporation (if the agency is not the Corporation);

"(iii) in the case of a State depository institution, the appropriate State banking supervisor; and

"(iv) upon request by any Member of Congress, to that Member.

"(2) MATERIAL LOSS INCURRED.—For purposes of this subsection:

"(A) LOSS INCURRED.—A deposit insurance fund incurs a loss with respect to an insured depository institution—

"(i) if the Corporation provides any assistance under section 13(c) with respect to that institution; and—

"(I) it is not substantially certain that the assistance will be fully repaid not later than 24 months after the date on which the Corporation initiated the assistance; or

"(II) the institution ceases to repay the assistance in accordance with its terms; or

"(ii) if the Corporation is appointed receiver of the institution, and it is or becomes apparent that the present value of the deposit insurance fund's outlays with respect to that institution will exceed the present value of receivership dividends or other payments on the claims held by the Corporation.

"(B) MATERIAL LOSS.—A loss is material if it exceeds the greater of—

"(i) $25,000,000; or

"(ii) 2 percent of the institution's total assets at the time the Corporation initiated assistance under section 13(c) or was appointed receiver.

"(3) DEADLINE FOR REPORT.—The inspector general of the appropriate Federal banking agency shall comply with paragraph (1) expeditiously, and in any event (except with respect to paragraph (1)(B)(iv)) as follows:

"(A) If the institution is described in paragraph (2)(A)(i), during the 6-month period beginning on the earlier of—

"(i) the date on which the institution ceases to repay assistance under section 13(c) in accordance with its terms, or

"(ii) the date on which it becomes apparent that the assistance will not be fully repaid during the 24-month period described in paragraph (2)(A)(i).

"(B) If the institution is described in paragraph (2)(A)(ii), during the 6-month period beginning on the date on which it becomes apparent that the present value of the deposit insurance fund's outlays with respect to that institution will exceed the present value of receivership dividends or other payments on the claims held by the Corporation.

"(4) PUBLIC DISCLOSURE REQUIRED.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The appropriate Federal banking agency shall disclose the report upon request under section 552 of title 5, United States Code, without excising—

"(i) any portion under section 552(b)(5) of that title; or

"(ii) any information about the insured depository institution under paragraph (4) (other than trade secrets) or paragraph (8) of section 552(b) of that title.

"(B) EXCEPTION.—Subparagraph (A) does not require the agency to disclose the name of any customer of the insured depository institution (other than an institution-affiliated party), or information from which such a person's identity could reasonably be ascertained.

"(5) GAO REVIEW.—The General Accounting Office shall annually—

"(A) review reports made under paragraph (1) and recommend improvements in the supervision of insured depository institutions (including the implementation of this section); and

"(B) verify the accuracy of 1 or more of those reports.

"(6) TRANSITION RULE.—During the period beginning on July 1, 1993, and ending on June 30, 1997, a loss incurred by the Corporation with respect to an insured depository institution—

"(A) with respect to which the Corporation initiates assistance under section 13(c) during the period in question, or

"(B) for which the Corporation was appointed receiver during the period in question, is material for purposes of this subsection only if that loss exceeds the greater of $25,000,000 or the applicable percentage of the institution's total assets at that time, set forth in the following table:

"For the following period:	The applicable percentage is:
July 1, 1993–June 30, 1994	7 percent
July 1, 1994–June 30, 1995	5 percent
July 1, 1995–June 30, 1996	4 percent
July 1, 1996–June 30, 1997	3 percent.

"(l) IMPLEMENTATION.—

"(1) REGULATIONS AND OTHER ACTIONS.—Each appropriate Federal banking agency shall prescribe such regulations (in consultation with the other Federal banking agencies), issue such orders, and take such other actions as are necessary to carry out this section.

"(2) WRITTEN DETERMINATION AND CONCURRENCE REQUIRED.—Any determination or concurrence by an appropriate Federal banking agency or the Corporation required under this section shall be written.

"(m) OTHER AUTHORITY NOT AFFECTED.—This section does not limit any authority of an appropriate Federal banking agency, the Corporation, or a State to take action in addition to (but not in derogation of) that required under this section.

"(n) ADMINISTRATIVE REVIEW OF DISMISSAL ORDERS.—

"(1) TIMELY PETITION REQUIRED.—A director or senior executive officer dismissed pursuant to an order under subsection (f)(2)(F)(ii) may obtain review of that order by filing a written petition for reinstatement with the appropriate Federal banking agency not later than 10 days after receiving notice of the dismissal.

"(2) PROCEDURE.—

"(A) HEARING REQUIRED.—The agency shall give the petitioner an opportunity to—

"(i) submit written materials in support of the petition; and

"(ii) appear, personally or through counsel, before 1 or more members of the agency or designated employees of the agency.

"(B) DEADLINE FOR HEARING.—The agency shall—

"(i) schedule the hearing referred to in subparagraph (A)(ii) promptly after the petition is filed; and

"(ii) hold the hearing not later than 30 days after the petition is filed, unless the petitioner requests that the hearing be held at a later time.

"(C) DEADLINE FOR DECISION.—Not later than 60 days after the date of the hearing, the agency shall—

"(i) by order, grant or deny the petition;

"(ii) if the order is adverse to the petitioner, set forth the basis for the order; and

"(iii) notify the petitioner of the order.

"(3) STANDARD FOR REVIEW OF DISMISSAL ORDERS.—The petitioner shall bear the burden of proving that the petitioner's continued employment would materially strengthen the insured depository institution's ability—

"(A) to become adequately capitalized, to the extent that the order is based on the institution's capital level or failure to submit or implement a capital restoration plan; and

"(B) to correct the unsafe or unsound condition or unsafe or unsound practice, to the extent that the order is based on subsection (g)(1).

"(o) TRANSITION RULES FOR SAVINGS ASSOCIATIONS.—

"(1) RTC'S ROLE DOES NOT DIMINISH CARE REQUIRED OF OTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In implementing this section, the appropriate Federal banking agency (and, to the extent applicable, the Corporation) shall exercise the same care as if the Savings Association Insurance Fund (rather than the Resolution Trust Corporation) bore the cost of resolving the problems of insured savings associations described in clauses (i) and (ii)(II) of section 21A(b)(3)(A) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act.

"(B) REPORTS.—Subparagraph (A) does not require reports under subsection (k).

"(2) ADDITIONAL FLEXIBILITY FOR CERTAIN SAVINGS ASSOCIATIONS.—Subsections (e)(2), (f), and (h) shall not apply before July 1, 1994, to any insured savings association if—

"(A) before the date of enactment of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991—

"(i) the savings association had submitted a plan meeting the requirements of section 5(t)(6)(A)(ii) of the Home Owners' Loan Act; and

"(ii) the Director of the Office of Thrift Supervision had accepted the plan;

"(B) the plan remains in effect; and

"(C) the savings association remains in compliance with the plan or is operating under a written agreement with the appropriate Federal banking agency.".

(b) DEADLINE FOR REGULATIONS.—Each appropriate Federal banking agency (as defined in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1813)) (and the Corporation, acting in the Corporation's capacity as insurer of depository institutions under that Act) shall, after notice and opportunity for comment, promulgate final regulations under section 38 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (as added by subsection (a)) not later than 9 months after the date of enactment of this Act, and those regulations shall become effective not later than 1 year after that date of enactment.

(c) OTHER AMENDMENTS TO THE FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE ACT.—

(1) ENFORCEMENT ACTION BASED ON UNSATISFACTORY ASSET QUALITY, MANAGEMENT, EARNINGS, OR LIQUIDITY.—Section 8(b) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1818(b)) is amended by redesignating paragraph (8) as paragraph (9) and inserting after paragraph (7) the following:

"(8) UNSATISFACTORY ASSET QUALITY, MANAGEMENT, EARNINGS, OR LIQUIDITY AS UNSAFE OR UNSOUND PRACTICE.—If an insured depository institution receives, in its most recent report of examination, a less-than-satisfactory rating for asset quality, management, earnings, or liquidity, the appropriate Federal banking agency may (if the deficiency is not corrected) deem the institution to be engaging in an unsafe or unsound practice for purposes of this subsection.".

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS RELATING TO FEDERAL BANKING AGENCIES' ENFORCEMENT AUTHORITY.—Section 8(i) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1818(i)) is amended—

(A) in the first sentence of paragraph (1), by inserting "or under section 38" after "section"; and

(B) in paragraph (2)(A)(ii), by inserting ", or final order under section 38" after "section".

(3) DEFINITION.—Section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1813) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(y) The term 'deposit insurance fund' means the Bank Insurance Fund or the Savings Association Insurance Fund, as appropriate.".

(d) CONFORMING AMENDMENT TO SECTION 5(t)(7) OF THE HOME OWNERS' LOAN ACT.—Section 5(t)(7) of the Home Owners' Loan Act (12 U.S.C. 1464(t)(7)) is amended—

(1) in subsection (A), by inserting "under this Act" before the period; and

(2) in subsection (B), by inserting "under this Act" after "imposed by the Director".

(e) TRANSITION RULE REGARDING CURRENT DIRECTORS AND SENIOR EXECUTIVE OFFICERS.—

(1) DISMISSAL FROM OFFICE.—Section 38(f)(2)(F)(ii) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (as added by subsection (a)) shall not apply with respect to—

(A) any director whose current term as a director commenced on or before the date of enactment of this Act and has not been extended—

(i) after that date of enactment, or

(ii) to evade section 38(f)(2)(F)(ii); or

(B) any senior executive officer who accepted employment in his or her current position on or before the date of enactment of this Act and whose contract of employment has not been renewed or renegotiated—

(i) after that date of enactment, or

(ii) to evade section 38(f)(2)(F)(ii).

(2) RESTRICTING COMPENSATION.—Section 38(f)(4) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (as added by subsection (a)) shall not apply with respect to any senior executive officer who accepted employment in his or her current position on or before the date of enactment of this Act and whose contract of employment has not been renewed or renegotiated—

(A) after that date of enactment, or

(B) to evade section 38(f)(4).

(f) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall become effective 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 132. STANDARDS FOR SAFETY AND SOUNDNESS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1811 et seq.) is amended by adding after section 38 (as added by section 131 of this Act) the following new section:

"SEC. 39. STANDARDS FOR SAFETY AND SOUNDNESS.

"(a) OPERATIONAL AND MANAGERIAL STANDARDS.—Each appropriate Federal banking agency shall, for all insured depository institutions and depository institution holding companies, prescribe—

"(1) standards relating to—

"(A) internal controls, information systems, and internal audit systems, in accordance with section 36;

"(B) loan documentation;

"(C) credit underwriting;

"(D) interest rate exposure;

"(E) asset growth; and

"(F) compensation, fees, and benefits, in accordance with subsection (c); and

"(2) such other operational and managerial standards as the agency determines to be appropriate.

"(b) ASSET QUALITY, EARNINGS, AND STOCK VALUATION STANDARDS.—Each appropriate Federal banking agency shall, for all insured depository institutions and depository institution holding companies, prescribe—

"(1) standards specifying—

"(A) a maximum ratio of classified assets to capital;

"(B) minimum earnings sufficient to absorb losses without impairing capital; and

"(C) to the extent feasible, a minimum ratio of market value to book value for publicly traded shares of the institution or company; and

"(2) such other standards relating to asset quality, earnings, and valuation as the agency determines to be appropriate.

"(c) COMPENSATION STANDARDS.—Each appropriate Federal banking agency shall, for all insured depository institutions, prescribe—

"(1) standards prohibiting as an unsafe and unsound practice any employment contract, compensation or benefit agreement, fee arrangement, perquisite, stock option plan, postemployment benefit, or other compensatory arrangement that—

"(A) would provide any executive officer, employee, director, or principal shareholder of the institution with excessive compensation, fees or benefits; or

"(B) could lead to material financial loss to the institution;

"(2) standards specifying when compensation, fees, or benefits referred to in paragraph (1) are excessive, which shall require the agency to determine whether the amounts are unreasonable or disproportionate to the services actually performed by the individual by considering—

"(A) the combined value of all cash and noncash benefits provided to the individual;

"(B) the compensation history of the individual and other individuals with comparable expertise at the institution;

"(C) the financial condition of the institution;

"(D) comparable compensation practices at comparable institutions, based upon such factors as asset size, geographic location, and the complexity of the loan portfolio or other assets;

"(E) for postemployment benefits, the projected total cost and benefit to the institution;

"(F) any connection between the individual and any fraudulent act or omission, breach of trust or fiduciary duty, or insider abuse with regard to the institution; and

"(G) other factors that the agency determines to be relevant; and

"(3) such other standards relating to compensation, fees, and benefits as the agency determines to be appropriate.

"(d) STANDARDS TO BE PRESCRIBED BY REGULATION.—Standards under subsections (a), (b), and (c) shall be prescribed by regulation.

"(e) FAILURE TO MEET STANDARDS.—

"(1) PLAN REQUIRED.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If the appropriate Federal banking agency determines that an insured depository institution or depository institution holding company fails to meet any standard prescribed under subsection (a), (b), or (c) the agency shall require the institution or company to submit an acceptable plan to the agency within the time allowed by the agency under subparagraph (C).

"(B) CONTENTS OF PLAN.—Any plan required under subparagraph (A) shall specify the steps that the institution or company will take to correct the deficiency. If the institution is undercapitalized, the plan may be part of a capital restoration plan.

"(C) DEADLINES FOR SUBMISSION AND REVIEW OF PLANS.—The appropriate Federal banking agency shall by regulation establish deadlines that—

"(i) provide institutions and companies with reasonable time to submit plans required under subparagraph (A), and generally require the institution or company to submit a plan not later than 30 days after the agency determines that the institution or company fails to meet any standard prescribed under subsection (a), (b), or (c); and

"(ii) require the agency to act on plans expeditiously, and generally not later than 30 days after the plan is submitted.

"(2) ORDER REQUIRED IF INSTITUTION OR COMPANY FAILS TO SUBMIT OR IMPLEMENT PLAN.—If an insured depository institution or depository institution holding company fails to submit an acceptable plan within the time allowed under paragraph (1)(C), or fails in any material respect to implement a plan accepted by the appropriate Federal banking agency, the agency, by order—

"(A) shall require the institution or company to correct the deficiency; and

"(B) may do 1 or more of the following until the deficiency has been corrected:

"(i) Prohibit the institution or company from permitting its average total assets during any calendar quarter to exceed its average total assets during the preceding calendar quarter, or restrict the rate at which the average total assets of the institution or company may increase from one calendar quarter to another.

"(ii) Require the institution or company to increase its ratio of tangible equity to assets.

"(iii) Take the action described in section 38(f)(2)(C).

"(iv) Require the institution or company to take any other action that the agency determines will better carry out the purpose of section 38 than any of the actions described in this subparagraph.

"(3) RESTRICTIONS MANDATORY FOR CERTAIN INSTITUTIONS.—In complying with paragraph (2), the appropriate Federal banking agency shall take 1 or more of the actions described in clauses (i) through (iii) of paragraph (2)(B) if—

"(A) the agency determines that the insured depository institution fails to meet any standard prescribed under subsection (a)(1) or (b)(1);

"(B) the institution has not corrected the deficiency; and

"(C) either—

"(i) during the 24-month period before the date on which the institution first failed to meet the standard—

"(I) the institution commenced operations; or

"(II) 1 or more persons acquired control of the institution; or

"(ii) during the 18-month period before the date on which the institution first failed to meet the standard, the institution underwent extraordinary growth, as defined by the agency.

"(f) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the terms 'average' and 'capital restoration plan' have the same meanings as in section 38.

"(g) OTHER AUTHORITY NOT AFFECTED.—The authority granted by this section is in addition to any other authority of the Federal banking agencies.".

(b) REGULATIONS REQUIRED.—Each appropriate Federal banking agency (as defined in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act) shall promulgate final regulations under section 39 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (as added by subsection (a)) not later than August 1, 1993.

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall become effective on the earlier of—

(1) the date on which final regulations promulgated in accordance with subsection (b) become effective; or

(2) December 1, 1993.

SEC. 133. CONSERVATORSHIP AND RECEIVERSHIP AMENDMENTS TO FACILITATE PROMPT REGULATORY ACTION.

(a) ADDITIONAL GROUNDS FOR APPOINTING CONSERVATOR OR RECEIVER; CONSISTENT STANDARDS FOR NATIONAL, STATE MEMBER, AND STATE NONMEMBER BANKS.—Section 11(c)(5) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(c)(5)) is amended to read as follows:

"(5) GROUNDS FOR APPOINTING CONSERVATOR OR RECEIVER.—The grounds for appointing a conservator or receiver (which may be the Corporation) for any insured depository institution are as follows:

"(A) ASSETS INSUFFICIENT FOR OBLIGATIONS.—The institution's assets are less than the institution's obligations to its creditors and others, including members of the institution.

"(B) SUBSTANTIAL DISSIPATION.—Substantial dissipation of assets or earnings due to—

"(i) any violation of any statute or regulation; or

"(ii) any unsafe or unsound practice.

"(C) UNSAFE OR UNSOUND CONDITION.—An unsafe or unsound condition to transact business.

"(D) CEASE AND DESIST ORDERS.—Any willful violation of a cease-and-desist order which has become final.

"(E) CONCEALMENT.—Any concealment of the institution's books, papers, records, or assets, or any refusal to submit the institution's books, papers, records, or affairs for inspection to any examiner or to any lawful agent of the appropriate Federal banking agency or State bank or savings association supervisor.

"(F) INABILITY TO MEET OBLIGATIONS.—The institution is likely to be unable to pay its obligations or meet its depositors' demands in the normal course of business.

"(G) LOSSES.—The institution has incurred or is likely to incur losses that will deplete all or substantially all of its capital, and there is no reasonable prospect for the institution to become adequately capitalized (as defined in section 38(b)) without Federal assistance.

"(H) VIOLATIONS OF LAW.—Any violation of any law or regulation, or any unsafe or unsound practice or condition that is likely to—

"(i) cause insolvency or substantial dissipation of assets or earnings;

"(ii) weaken the institution's condition; or

"(iii) otherwise seriously prejudice the interests of the institution's depositors or the deposit insurance fund.

"(I) CONSENT.—The institution, by resolution of its board of directors or its shareholders or members, consents to the appointment.

"(J) CESSATION OF INSURED STATUS.—The institution ceases to be an insured institution.

"(K) UNDERCAPITALIZATION.—The institution is undercapitalized (as defined in section 38(b)), and—

"(i) has no reasonable prospect of becoming adequately capitalized (as defined in that section);

"(ii) fails to become adequately capitalized when required to do so under section 38(f)(2)(A);

"(iii) fails to submit a capital restoration plan acceptable to that agency within the time prescribed under section 38(e)(2)(D); or

"(iv) materially fails to implement a capital restoration plan submitted and accepted under section 38(e)(2).

"(L) The institution—

"(i) is critically undercapitalized, as defined in section 38(b); or

"(ii) otherwise has substantially insufficient capital.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT TO AUTHORITY TO APPOINT RECEIVER FOR NATIONAL BANK.—Section 1 of the Act of June 30, 1876 (12 U.S.C. 191) is amended to read as follows:

"SECTION 1. The Comptroller of the Currency may, without prior notice or hearings, appoint the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation as receiver for any national banking association if the Comptroller determines, in the Comptroller's discretion, that—

"(1) 1 or more of the grounds specified in section 11(c)(5) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act exist; or

"(2) the association's board of directors consists of fewer than 5 members.".

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENT TO THE BANK CONSERVATION ACT.—Section 203(a) of the Bank Conservation Act (12 U.S.C. 203(a)) is amended to read as follows:

"(a) APPOINTMENT.—The Comptroller of the Currency may, without prior notice or hearings, appoint a conservator (which may be the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation) to the possession and control of a bank whenever the Comptroller of the Currency determines that 1 or more of the grounds specified in section 11(c)(5) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act exist.".

(d) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS TO THE HOME OWNERS' LOAN ACT.—Section 5(d)(2) of the Home Owners' Loan Act (12 U.S.C. 1464(d)(2)) is amended—

(1) by striking subparagraphs (A) through (D) and inserting the following:

"(A) GROUNDS FOR APPOINTING CONSERVATOR OR RECEIVER FOR INSURED SAVINGS ASSOCIATION.—The Director of the Office of Thrift Supervision may appoint a conservator or receiver for any insured savings association if the Director determines, in the Director's discretion, that 1 or more of the grounds specified in section 11(c)(5) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act exists"; and

(2) by redesignating subparagraphs (E) through (I) as subparagraphs (B) through (F), respectively.

(e) ADDITIONAL PROVISIONS RELATING TO APPOINTMENT OF CONSERVATOR OR RECEIVER.—Section 11(c)(9) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(c)(9)) is amended to read as follows:

"(9) APPROPRIATE FEDERAL BANKING AGENCY MAY APPOINT CORPORATION AS CONSERVATOR OR RECEIVER FOR INSURED STATE DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION TO CARRY OUT SECTION 38.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The appropriate Federal banking agency may appoint the Corporation as sole receiver (or, subject to paragraph (11), sole conservator) of any insured State depository institution, after consultation with the appropriate State supervisor, if the appropriate Federal banking agency determines that—

"(i) 1 or more of the grounds specified in subparagraphs (K) and (L) of paragraph (5) exist with respect to that institution; and

"(ii) the appointment is necessary to carry out the purpose of section 38.

"(B) NONDELEGATION.—The appropriate Federal banking agency shall not delegate any action under subparagraph (A).

"(10) CORPORATION MAY APPOINT ITSELF AS CONSERVATOR OR RECEIVER FOR INSURED DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION TO PREVENT LOSS TO DEPOSIT INSURANCE FUND.—The Board of Directors may appoint the Corporation as sole conservator or receiver of an insured depository institution, after consultation with the appropriate Federal banking agency and the appropriate State supervisor (if any), if the Board of Directors determines that—

"(A) 1 or more of the grounds specified in any subparagraph of paragraph (5) exist with respect to the institution; and

"(B) the appointment is necessary to reduce—

"(i) the risk that the deposit insurance fund would incur a loss with respect to the insured depository institution, or

"(ii) any loss that the deposit insurance fund is expected to incur with respect to that institution.

"(11) APPROPRIATE FEDERAL BANKING AGENCY SHALL NOT APPOINT CONSERVATOR UNDER CERTAIN PROVISIONS WITHOUT GIVING CORPORATION OPPORTUNITY TO APPOINT RECEIVER.—The appropriate Federal banking agency shall not appoint a conservator for an insured depository institution under subparagraph (K) or (L) of paragraph (5) without the Corporation's consent unless the agency has given the Corporation 48 hours notice of the agency's intention to appoint the conservator and the grounds for the appointment.

"(12) DIRECTORS NOT LIABLE FOR ACQUIESCING IN APPOINTMENT OF CONSERVATOR OR RECEIVER.—The members of the board of directors of an insured depository institution shall not be liable to the institution's shareholders or creditors for acquiescing in or consenting in good faith to—

"(A) the appointment of the Corporation or the Resolution Trust Corporation as conservator or receiver for that institution; or

"(B) an acquisition or combination under section 38(f)(2)(A)(iii).

"(13) ADDITIONAL POWERS.—In any case in which the Corporation is appointed conservator or receiver under paragraph (4), (6), (9), or (10) for any insured State depository institution—

"(A) subject to subparagraph (B), this section shall apply to the Corporation as conservator or receiver in the same manner and to the same extent as if that institution were a Federal depository institution for which the Corporation had been appointed conservator or receiver;

"(B) the Corporation shall apply the law of the State in which the institution is chartered insofar as that law gives the claims of depositors priority over those of other creditors or claimants; and

"(C) the Corporation as receiver of the institution may—

"(i) liquidate the institution in an orderly manner; and

"(ii) make any other disposition of any matter concerning the institution, as the Corporation determines is in the best interests of the institution, the depositors of the institution, and the Corporation.".

(f) CONFORMING AMENDMENT TO THE FEDERAL RESERVE ACT.—Section 11 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 248) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(p) AUTHORITY TO APPOINT CONSERVATOR OR RECEIVER.—The Board may appoint the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation as conservator or receiver for a State member bank under section 11(c)(9) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.".

(g) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall become effective 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act.

Subtitle E—Least-Cost Resolution

SEC. 141. LEAST-COST RESOLUTION.

(a) LEAST-COST RESOLUTIONS REQUIRED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 13(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1823(c)) is amended—

(A) by redesignating paragraphs (5), (6), (7), (8), and (9) as paragraphs (6), (7), (8), (9) and (10), respectively;

(B) by redesignating subparagraph (B) of paragraph (4) as paragraph (5); and

(C) by amending paragraph (4) (as amended by subparagraph (B) of this paragraph) to read as follows:

"(4) LEAST-COST RESOLUTION REQUIRED.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Corporation may not exercise any authority under this subsection or subsection (d), (f), (h), (i), or (k) with respect to any insured depository institution unless—

"(i) the Corporation determines that the exercise of such authority is necessary to meet the obligation of the Corporation to provide insurance coverage for the insured deposits in such institution; and

"(ii) the total amount of the expenditures by the Corporation and obligations incurred by the Corporation (including any immediate and long-term obligation of the Corporation and any direct or contingent liability for future payment by the Corporation) in connection with the exercise of any such authority with respect to such institution is the least costly to the deposit insurance fund of all possible methods for meeting the Corporation's obligation under this section.

"(B) DETERMINING LEAST COSTLY APPROACH.—In determining how to satisfy the Corporation's obligations to an institution's insured depositors at the least possible cost to the deposit insurance fund, the Corporation shall comply with the following provisions:

"(i) PRESENT-VALUE ANALYSIS; DOCUMENTATION REQUIRED.—The Corporation shall—

"(I) evaluate alternatives on a present-value basis, using a realistic discount rate;

"(II) document that evaluation and the assumptions on which the evaluation is based, including any assumptions with regard to interest rates, asset recovery rates, asset holding costs, and payment of contingent liabilities; and

"(III) retain the documentation for not less than 5 years.

"(ii) FOREGONE TAX REVENUES.—Federal tax revenues that the Government would forego as the result of a proposed transaction, to the extent reasonably ascertainable, shall be treated as if they were revenues foregone by the deposit insurance fund.

"(C) TIME OF DETERMINATION.—

"(i) GENERAL RULE.—For purposes of this subsection, the determination of the costs of providing any assistance under paragraph (1) or (2) or any other provision of this section with respect to any depository institution shall be made as of the date on which the Corporation makes the determination to provide such assistance to the institution under this section.

"(ii) RULE FOR LIQUIDATIONS.—For purposes of this subsection, the determination of the costs of liquidation of any depository institution shall be made as of the earliest of—

"(I) the date on which a conservator is appointed for such institution;

"(II) the date on which a receiver is appointed for such institution; or

"(III) the date on which the Corporation makes any determination to provide any assistance under this section with respect to such institution.

"(D) LIQUIDATION COSTS.—In determining the cost of liquidating any depository institution for the purpose of comparing the costs under subparagraph (A) (with respect to such institution), the amount of such cost may not exceed the amount which is equal to the sum of the insured deposits of such institution as of the earliest of the dates described in subparagraph (C), minus the present value of the total net amount the Corporation reasonably expects to receive from the disposition of the assets of such institution in connection with such liquidation.

"(E) DEPOSIT INSURANCE FUNDS AVAILABLE FOR INTENDED PURPOSE ONLY.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—After December 31, 1994, or at such earlier time as the Corporation determines to be appropriate, the Corporation may not take any action, directly or indirectly, with respect to any insured depository institution that would have the effect of increasing losses to any insurance fund by protecting—

"(I) depositors for more than the insured portion of deposits (determined without regard to whether such institution is liquidated); or

"(II) creditors other than depositors.

"(ii) DEADLINE FOR REGULATIONS.—The Corporation shall prescribe regulations to implement clause (i) not later than January 1, 1994, and the regulations shall take effect not later than January 1, 1995.

"(iii) PURCHASE AND ASSUMPTION TRANSACTIONS.—No provision of this subparagraph shall be construed as prohibiting the Corporation from allowing any person who acquires any assets or assumes any liabilities of any insured depository institution for which the Corporation has been appointed conservator or receiver to acquire uninsured deposit liabilities of such institution so long as the insurance fund does not incur any loss with respect to such deposit liabilities in an amount greater than the loss which would have been incurred with respect to such liabilities if the institution had been liquidated.

"(F) DISCRETIONARY DETERMINATIONS.—Any determination which the Corporation may make under this paragraph shall be made in the sole discretion of the Corporation.

"(G) SYSTEMIC RISK.—

"(i) EMERGENCY DETERMINATION BY SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.—Notwithstanding subparagraphs (A) and (E), if, upon the written recommendation of the Board of Directors (upon a vote of not less than two-thirds of the members of the Board of Directors) and the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (upon a vote of not less than two-thirds of the members of such Board), the Secretary of the Treasury (in consultation with the President) determines that—

"(I) the Corporation's compliance with subparagraphs (A) and (E) with respect to an insured depository institution would have serious adverse effects on economic conditions or financial stability; and

"(II) any action or assistance under this subparagraph would avoid or mitigate such adverse effects, the Corporation may take other action or provide assistance under this section as necessary to avoid or mitigate such effects.

"(ii) REPAYMENT OF LOSS.—The Corporation shall recover the loss to the appropriate insurance fund arising from any action taken or assistance provided with respect to an insured depository institution under clause (i) expeditiously from 1 or more emergency special assessments on the members of the insurance fund (of which such institution is a member) equal to the product of—

"(I) an assessment rate established by the Corporation; and

"(II) the amount of each member's average total assets during the semiannual period, minus the sum of the amount of the member's average total tangible equity and the amount of the member's average total subordinated debt.

"(iii) DOCUMENTATION REQUIRED.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall—

"(I) document any determination under clause (i); and

"(II) retain the documentation for review under clause (iv).

"(iv) GAO REVIEW.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall review and report to the Congress on any determination under clause (i), including—

"(I) the basis for the determination;

"(II) the purpose for which any action was taken pursuant to such clause; and

"(III) the likely effect of the determination and such action on the incentives and conduct of insured depository institutions and uninsured depositors.

"(v) NOTICE.—

"(I) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall provide written notice of any determination under clause (i) to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs of the House of Representatives.

"(II) DESCRIPTION OF BASIS OF DETERMINATION.—The notice under subclause (I) shall include a description of the basis for any determination under clause (i).

"(H) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—No provision of law shall be construed as permitting the Corporation to take any action prohibited by paragraph (4) unless such provision expressly provides, by direct reference to this paragraph, that this paragraph shall not apply with respect to such action.".

(2) ANNUAL GAO COMPLIANCE AUDIT.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall annually audit the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Resolution Trust Corporation to determine the extent to which such corporations are complying with section 13(c)(4) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

(3) CLARIFICATION OF MANNER OF APPLICATION TO THE RTC.—Section 21A(b)(4) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(b)(4)) is amended—

(A) by striking "POWERS.—Except as" and inserting "POWERS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as"; and

(B) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(B) MANNER OF APPLICATION OF LEAST-COST RESOLUTION.—For purposes of applying section 13(c)(4) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act to the Corporation under subparagraph (A), the Corporation shall be treated as the affected deposit insurance fund.".

(b) SECURED CLAIMS IN EXCESS OF VALUE OF COLLATERAL.—Section 11(d)(5)(D) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(d)(5)(D)) is amended to read as follows:

"(D) AUTHORITY TO DISALLOW CLAIMS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The receiver may disallow any portion of any claim by a creditor or claim of security, preference, or priority which is not proved to the satisfaction of the receiver.

"(ii) PAYMENTS TO LESS THAN FULLY SECURED CREDITORS.—In the case of a claim of a creditor against an insured depository institution which is secured by any property or other asset of such institution, any receiver appointed for any insured depository institution—

"(I) may treat the portion of such claim which exceeds an amount equal to the fair market value of such property or other asset as an unsecured claim against the institution; and

"(II) may not make any payment with respect to such unsecured portion of the claim other than in connection with the disposition of all claims of unsecured creditors of the institution.

"(iii) EXCEPTIONS.—No provision of this paragraph shall apply with respect to—

"(I) any extension of credit from any Federal home loan bank or Federal Reserve bank to any institution described in paragraph (3)(A); or

"(II) any security interest in the assets of the institution securing any such extension of credit.".

(c) DATA COLLECTIONS.—Section 7(a)(8) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(a)(8)) is amended to read as follows:

"(8) DATA COLLECTIONS.—In addition to or in connection with any other report required under this subsection, the Corporation shall take such action as may be necessary to ensure that—

"(A) each insured depository institution maintains; and

"(B) the Corporation receives on a regular basis from such institution, information on the total amount of all insured deposits, preferred deposits, and uninsured deposits at the institution.".

(d) INDUSTRY IMPACT ANALYSIS REQUIRED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 11(h) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(h)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4) FINANCIAL SERVICES INDUSTRY IMPACT ANALYSIS.—After the appointment of the Corporation as conservator or receiver for any insured depository institution and before taking any action under this section or section 13 in connection with the resolution of such institution, the Corporation shall—

"(A) evaluate the likely impact of the means of resolution, and any action which the Corporation may take in connection with such resolution, on the viability of other insured depository institutions in the same community; and

"(B) take such evaluation into account in determining the means for resolving the institution and establishing the terms and conditions for any such action.".

(2) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The heading for section 11(h) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(h)) is amended by striking "LIQUIDATION" and inserting "RESOLUTION".

(e) ASSISTANCE BEFORE APPOINTMENT OF CONSERVATOR OR RECEIVER.—Section 13(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1823(c)) is amended by redesignating paragraphs (8), (9), and (10) (as so redesignated by subsection (a)(1)(A) of this section), as paragraphs (9), (10), and (11), respectively, and by inserting after paragraph (7) the following new paragraph:

"(8) ASSISTANCE BEFORE APPOINTMENT OF CONSERVATOR OR RECEIVER.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to the least-cost provisions of paragraph (4), the Corporation shall consider providing direct financial assistance under this section for depository institutions before the appointment of a conservator or receiver for such institution only under the following circumstances:

"(i) TROUBLED CONDITION CRITERIA.—The Corporation determines—

"(I) grounds for the appointment of a conservator or receiver exist or likely will exist in the future unless the depository institution's capital levels are increased; and

"(II) it is unlikely that the institution can meet all currently applicable capital standards without assistance.

"(ii) OTHER CRITERIA.—The depository institution meets the following criteria:

"(I) The appropriate Federal banking agency and the Corporation have determined that, during such period of time preceding the date of such determination as the agency or the Corporation considers to be relevant, the institution's management has been competent and has complied with applicable laws, rules, and supervisory directives and orders.

"(II) The institution's management did not engage in any insider dealing, speculative practice, or other abusive activity.

"(B) PUBLIC DISCLOSURE.—Any determination under this paragraph to provide assistance under this section shall be made in writing and published in the Federal Register.".

(f) DEFINITIONS.—Section 3(m) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1813(m)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(3) UNINSURED DEPOSITS.—The term 'uninsured deposit' means the amount of any deposit of any depositor at any insured depository institution in excess of the amount of the insured deposits of such depositor (if any) at such depository institution.

"(4) PREFERRED DEPOSITS.—The term 'preferred deposits' means deposits of any public unit (as defined in paragraph (1)) at any insured depository institution which are secured or collateralized as required under State law.".

SEC. 142. FEDERAL RESERVE DISCOUNT WINDOW ADVANCES.

(a) REDESIGNATING SECTIONS 10(a) AND 10(b) OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE ACT.—The Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 221 et seq.) is amended—

(1) by redesignating section 10(a) (12 U.S.C. 347a) as section 10A; and

(2) by redesignating section 10(b) (12 U.S.C. 347b) as section 10B.

(b) LIMITATIONS ON LIQUIDITY LENDING FOR DEPOSIT INSURANCE PURPOSES.—Section 10B of the Federal Reserve Act (as redesignated by subsection (a)) is amended—

(1) by striking "Any Federal Reserve bank" and inserting "(a) IN GENERAL.—Any Federal Reserve bank"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(b) LIMITATIONS ON ADVANCES.—

"(1) LIMITATION ON EXTENDED PERIODS.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), no advances to any undercapitalized depository institution by any Federal Reserve bank under this section may be outstanding for more than 60 days in any 120-day period.

"(2) VIABILITY EXCEPTION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If—

"(i) the head of the appropriate Federal banking agency certifies in advance in writing to the Federal Reserve bank that any depository institution is viable; or

"(ii) the Board conducts an examination of any depository institution and the Chairman of the Board certifies in writing to the Federal Reserve bank that the institution is viable, the limitation contained in paragraph (1) shall not apply during the 60-day period beginning on the date such certification is received.

"(B) EXTENSIONS OF PERIOD.—The 60-day period may be extended for additional 60-day periods upon receipt by the Federal Reserve bank of additional written certifications under subparagraph (A) with respect to each such additional period.

"(C) AUTHORITY TO ISSUE A CERTIFICATE OF VIABILITY MAY NOT BE DELEGATED.—The authority of the head of any agency to issue a written certification of viability under this paragraph may not be delegated to any other person.

"(D) EXTENDED ADVANCES SUBJECT TO PARAGRAPH (3).—Notwithstanding paragraph (1), an undercapitalized depository institution which does not have a certificate of viability in effect under this paragraph may have advances outstanding for more than 60 days in any 120-day period if the Board elects to treat—

"(i) such institution as critically undercapitalized under paragraph (3); and

"(ii) any such advance as an advance described in subparagraph (A)(i) of paragraph (3).

"(3) ADVANCES TO CRITICALLY UNDERCAPITALIZED DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS.—

"(A) LIABILITY FOR INCREASED LOSS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, if—

"(i) in the case of any critically undercapitalized depository institution—

"(I) any advance under this section to such institution is outstanding without payment having been demanded as of the end of the 5-day period beginning on the date the institution becomes a critically undercapitalized depository institution; or

"(II) any new advance is made to such institution under this section after the end of such period; and

"(ii) after the end of that 5-day period, any deposit insurance fund in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation incurs a loss exceeding the loss that the Corporation would have incurred if it had liquidated that institution as of the end of that period, the Board shall, subject to the limitations in subparagraph (B), be liable to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation for the excess loss, without regard to the terms of the advance or any collateral pledged to secure the advance.

"(B) LIMITATION ON EXCESS LOSS.—The liability of the Board under subparagraph (A) shall not exceed the lesser of the following:

"(i) The amount of the loss the Board or any Federal Reserve bank would have incurred on the increases in the amount of advances made after the 5-day period referred to in subparagraph (A) if those increased advances had been unsecured.

"(ii) The interest received on the increases in the amount of advances made after the 5-day period referred to in subparagraph (A).

"(C) FEDERAL RESERVE TO PAY OBLIGATION.—The Board shall pay the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation the amount of any liability of the Board under subparagraph (A).

"(D) REPORT.—The Board shall report to the Congress on any excess loss liability it incurs under subparagraph (A), as limited by subparagraph (B)(i), and the reasons therefore, not later than 6 months after incurring the liability.

"(4) NO OBLIGATION TO MAKE ADVANCES.—A Federal Reserve bank shall have no obligation to make, increase, renew, or extend any advance or discount under this Act to any depository institution.

"(5) DEFINITIONS.—

"(A) APPROPRIATE FEDERAL BANKING AGENCY.—The term 'appropriate Federal banking agency' has the same meaning as in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

"(B) CRITICALLY UNDERCAPITALIZED.—The term 'critically undercapitalized' has the same meaning as in section 38 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

"(C) DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION.—The term 'depository institution' has the same meaning as in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

"(D) UNDERCAPITALIZED DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION.—The term 'undercapitalized depository institution' means any depository institution which—

"(i) is undercapitalized, as defined in section 38 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act; or

"(ii) has a composite CAMEL rating of 5 under the Uniform Financial Institutions Rating System (or an equivalent rating by any such agency under a comparable rating system) as of the most recent examination of such institution.

"(E) VIABLE.—A depository institution is 'viable' if the Board or the appropriate Federal banking agency determines, giving due regard to the economic conditions and circumstances in the market in which the institution operates, that the institution—

"(i) is not critically undercapitalized;

"(ii) is not expected to become critically undercapitalized; and

"(iii) is not expected to be placed in conservatorship or receivership.".

(c) BOARD'S AUTHORITY TO EXAMINE DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS AND AFFILIATES.—Section 11 of the Federal Reserve Act is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(n) To examine, at the Board's discretion, any depository institution, and any affiliate of such depository institution, in connection with any advance to, any discount of any instrument for, or any request for any such advance or discount by, such depository institution under this Act.".

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (b) shall take effect at the end of the 2-year period beginning on the date of enactment of this Act.

(e) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS REDESIGNATING SECTIONS 13a, 25(a), AND 25(b) OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE ACT.—The Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 221 et seq.) is amended—

(1) by redesignating section 13a as section 13A;

(2) by redesignating section 25(a) as section 25A; and

(3) by redesignating section 25(b) as section 25B.

SEC. 143. EARLY RESOLUTION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—It is the sense of the Congress that the Federal banking agencies should facilitate early resolution of troubled insured depository institutions whenever feasible if early resolution would have the least possible long-term cost to the deposit insurance fund, consistent with the least-cost and prompt corrective action provisions of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

(b) GENERAL PRINCIPLES.—In encouraging the Federal banking agencies to pursue early resolution strategies, the Congress contemplates that any resolution transaction under section 13(c) of that Act would observe the following general principles:

(1) COMPETITIVE NEGOTIATION.—The transaction should be negotiated competitively, taking into account the value of expediting the process.

(2) RESULTING INSTITUTION ADEQUATELY CAPITALIZED.—Any insured depository institution created or assisted in the transaction (hereafter the "resulting institution") and any institution acquiring the troubled institution should meet all applicable minimum capital standards.

(3) SUBSTANTIAL PRIVATE INVESTMENT.—The transaction should involve substantial private investment.

(4) CONCESSIONS.—Preexisting owners and debtholders of any troubled institution or its holding company should make substantial concessions.

(5) QUALIFIED MANAGEMENT.—Directors and senior management of the resulting institution should be qualified to perform their duties, and should not include individuals substantially responsible for the troubled institution's problems.

(6) FDIC'S PARTICIPATION.—The transaction should give the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation an opportunity to participate in the success of the resulting institution.

(7) STRUCTURE OF TRANSACTION.—The transaction should, insofar as practical, be structured so that—

(A) the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation—

(i) does not acquire a significant proportion of the troubled institution's problem assets;

(ii) succeeds to the interests of the troubled institution's preexisting owners and debtholders in proportion to the assistance the Corporation provides; and

(iii) limits the Corporation's assistance in term and amount; and

(B) new investors share risk with the Corporation.

(c) REPORT.—Two years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation shall submit a report to Congress analyzing the effect of early resolution on the deposit insurance funds.

Subtitle F—Federal Insurance for State Chartered Depository Institutions

SEC. 151. DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS LACKING FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE.

(a) ANNUAL INDEPENDENT AUDIT OF PRIVATE DEPOSIT INSURER; DISCLOSURE BY INSTITUTIONS LACKING FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1811 et seq.), as amended by the preceding provisions of this Act, is further amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 40. DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS LACKING FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE.

"(a) ANNUAL INDEPENDENT AUDIT OF PRIVATE DEPOSIT INSURERS.—

"(1) AUDIT REQUIRED.—Any private deposit insurer shall obtain an annual audit from an independent auditor using generally accepted auditing standards. The audit shall include a determination of whether the private deposit insurer follows generally accepted accounting principles and has set aside sufficient reserves for losses.

"(2) PROVIDING COPIES OF AUDIT REPORT.—

"(A) PRIVATE DEPOSIT INSURER.—The private deposit insurer shall provide a copy of the audit report—

"(i) to each depository institution the deposits of which are insured by the private deposit insurer, not later than 14 days after the audit is completed; and

"(ii) to the appropriate supervisory agency of each State in which such an institution receives deposits, not later than 7 days after the audit is completed.

"(B) DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION.—Any depository institution the deposits of which are insured by the private deposit insurer shall provide a copy of the audit report, upon request, to any current or prospective customer of the institution.

"(b) DISCLOSURE REQUIRED.—Any depository institution lacking Federal deposit insurance shall, within the United States, do the following:

"(1) PERIODIC STATEMENTS; ACCOUNT RECORDS.—Include conspicuously in all periodic statements of account, on each signature card, and on each passbook, certificate of deposit, or similar instrument evidencing a deposit a notice that the institution is not federally insured, and that if the institution fails, the Federal Government does not guarantee that depositors will get back their money.

"(2) ADVERTISING; PREMISES.—Include conspicuously in all advertising and at each place where deposits are normally received a notice that the institution is not federally insured.

"(3) ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF RISK.—Receive deposits only for the account of persons who have signed a written acknowledgment that the institution is not federally insured, and that if the institution fails, the Federal Government does not guarantee that they will get back their money.

"(c) MANNER AND CONTENT OF DISCLOSURE.—To ensure that current and prospective customers understand the risks involved in foregoing Federal deposit insurance, the Federal Trade Commission, by regulation or order, shall prescribe the manner and content of disclosure required under this section.

"(d) EXCEPTIONS FOR INSTITUTIONS NOT RECEIVING RETAIL DEPOSITS.—The Federal Trade Commission may, by regulation or order, make exceptions to subsection (b) for any depository institution that, within the United States, does not receive initial deposits of less than $100,000 from individuals who are citizens or residents of the United States, other than money received in connection with any draft or similar instrument issued to transmit money.

"(e) ELIGIBILITY FOR FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as permitted by the Federal Trade Commission, in consultation with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, no depository institution (other than a bank, including an unincorporated bank) lacking Federal deposit insurance may use the mails or any instrumentality of interstate commerce to receive or facilitate receiving deposits, unless the appropriate supervisor of the State in which the institution is chartered has determined that the institution meets all eligibility requirements for Federal deposit insurance, including—

"(A) in the case of an institution described in section 19(b)(1)(A)(iv) of the Federal Reserve Act, all eligibility requirements set forth in the Federal Credit Union Act and regulations of the National Credit Union Administration; and

"(B) in the case of any other institution, all eligibility requirements set forth in this Act and regulations of the Corporation.

"(2) AUTHORITY OF FDIC AND NCUA NOT AFFECTED.—No determination under paragraph (1) shall bind, or otherwise affect the authority of, the National Credit Union Administration or the Corporation.

"(f) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:

"(1) APPROPRIATE SUPERVISOR.—The 'appropriate supervisor' of a depository institution means the agency primarily responsible for supervising the institution.

"(2) DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION.—The term 'depository institution' includes—

"(A) any entity described in section 19(b)(1)(A)(iv) of the Federal Reserve Act; and

"(B) any entity that, as determined by the Federal Trade Commission—

"(i) is engaged in the business of receiving deposits; and

"(ii) could reasonably be mistaken for a depository institution by the entity's current or prospective customers.

"(3) LACKING FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE.—A depository institution lacks Federal deposit insurance if the institution is not either—

"(A) an insured depository institution; or

"(B) an insured credit union, as defined in section 101 of the Federal Credit Union Act.

"(4) PRIVATE DEPOSIT INSURER.—The term 'private deposit insurer' means any entity insuring the deposits of any depository institution lacking Federal deposit insurance.

"(g) ENFORCEMENT.—Compliance with the requirements of this section, and any regulation prescribed or order issued under this section, shall be enforced under the Federal Trade Commission Act by the Federal Trade Commission.".

(2) EFFECTIVE DATES.—Section 40 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (as added by paragraph (1)) shall become effective on the date of enactment of this Act, except that—

(A) paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (b) shall become effective 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act;

(B) during the period beginning 1 year after that date of enactment of this Act and ending 30 months after that date of enactment, subsection (b)(1) shall apply with ", and that if the institution fails, the Federal Government does not guarantee that depositors will get back their money" omitted;

(C) subsection (e) shall become effective 2 years after that date of enactment; and

(D) subsection (b)(3) shall become effective 30 months after that date of enactment.

(3) CONFORMING AMENDMENT TO FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE ACT.—Effective 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, section 28 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1831e) is amended—

(A) by striking subsection (h); and

(B) by redesignating subsection (i) as subsection (h).

(b) VIABILITY OF PRIVATE DEPOSIT INSURERS.—

(1) DEADLINE FOR INITIAL INDEPENDENT AUDIT.—The initial annual audit under section 40 (a)(1) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (as added by subsection (a)) shall be completed not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

(2) BUSINESS PLAN REQUIRED.—Not later than 240 days after the date of enactment of this Act, any private deposit insurer shall provide a business plan to each appropriate supervisor of each State in which deposits are received by any depository institution lacking Federal deposit insurance the deposits of which are insured by a private deposit insurer. The business plan shall explain in detail why the private deposit insurer is viable, and shall, at a minimum—

(A) describe the insurer's—

(i) underwriting standards;

(ii) resources, including trends in and forecasts of assets, income, and expenses;

(iii) risk-management program, including examination and supervision, problem case resolution, and remedies; and

(B) include, for the preceding 5 years, copies of annual audits, annual reports, and annual meeting agendas and minutes.

(3) Definitions.—For purposes of this subsection, the terms "appropriate supervisor", "deposit", "depository institution", and "lacking Federal deposit insurance" have the same meaning as in section 40(f) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (as added by subsection (a)).

Subtitle G—Technical Corrections

SEC. 161. TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS AND CLARIFICATIONS.

(a) Section 11 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.—Section 11 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821) is amended—

(1) in subsection (d)(3)(A), by striking "(4)(A)" and inserting "(4)";

(2) in subsection (d)(11)(B), by striking "(14)(C)" and inserting "(15)(B)";

(3) in subsection (e)(3)(C)(ii), by striking "subsection (k)" and inserting "subsection (i)";

(6) in subsection (n)(9), by striking "(13)" and inserting "(12)"; and

(7) in subsection (n)(11)(D), by striking "(8)" and inserting "(9)".

(b) Clarification of FDIC Powers in FSLIC Resolution Fund Conservatorships and Receiverships.—Section 11A(a) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821a(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(4) Rights, powers, and duties.—Effective August 10, 1989, the Corporation shall have all rights, powers, and duties to carry out the Corporation's duties with respect to the assets and liabilities of the FSLIC Resolution Fund that the Corporation otherwise has under this Act.

"(5) Corporation as conservator or receiver.—

"(A) In general.—Effective August 10, 1989, the Corporation shall succeed the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation as conservator or receiver with respect to any depository institution—

"(i) the accounts of which were insured before August 10, 1989 by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation; and

"(ii) for which a conservator or receiver was appointed before January 1, 1989.

"(B) Rights, powers, and duties.—When acting as conservator or receiver with respect to any depository institution described in subparagraph (A), the Corporation shall have all rights, powers, and duties that the Corporation otherwise has as conservator or receiver under this Act.".

(c) Clerical Amendment to Subsection Heading.—The heading for section 3(w) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1813(w)) is amended by striking "Holding Companies" and inserting "Affiliates of Depository Institutions".

(d) FDIC Removal Period Made Consistent With RTC Period.—Section 9(b)(2)(B) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1819(b)(2)(B)) is amended by inserting "before the end of the 90-day period beginning on the date the action, suit, or proceeding is filed against the Corporation or the Corporation is substituted as a party" before the period.

(e) Clarification of FDIC Authority to Pay De Minimus Claims.—The 2d sentence of section 11(i)(3)(A) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(i)(3)(A)) is amended by striking "The" and inserting "Notwithstanding any other provision of Federal or State law, or the constitution of any State, the".

(1) The heading for section 219 of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 is amended by striking "FROM TAXATION".

(2) The table of contents for the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 is amended by striking "from taxation" in the item relating to section 219.

TITLE II—REGULATORY IMPROVEMENT

Subtitle A—Regulation of Foreign Banks

SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Foreign Bank Supervision Enhancement Act of 1991".

SEC. 202. REGULATION OF FOREIGN BANK OPERATIONS.

(a) Establishment and Termination of Foreign Bank Offices in the United States.—Section 7 of the International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3105) is amended by striking subsection (d) and inserting the following new subsections:

"(d) Establishment of Foreign Bank Offices in the United States.—

"(1) Prior approval required.—No foreign bank may establish a branch or an agency, or acquire ownership or control of a commercial lending company, without the prior approval of the Board.

"(2) Required standards for approval.—The Board may not approve an application under paragraph (1) unless it determines that—

"(A) the foreign bank engages directly in the business of banking outside of the United States and is subject to comprehensive supervision or regulation on a consolidated basis by the appropriate authorities in its home country; and

"(B) the foreign bank has furnished to the Board the information it needs to adequately assess the application.

"(3) Standards for approval.—In acting on any application under paragraph (1), the Board may take into account—

"(A) whether the appropriate authorities in the home country of the foreign bank have consented to the proposed establishment of a branch, agency or commercial lending company in the United States by the foreign bank;

"(B) the financial and managerial resources of the foreign bank, including the bank's experience and capacity to engage in international banking;

"(C) whether the foreign bank has provided the Board with adequate assurances that the bank will make available to the Board such information on the operations or activities of the foreign bank and any affiliate of the bank that the Board deems necessary to determine and enforce compliance with this Act, the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, and other applicable Federal law; and

"(D) whether the foreign bank and the United States affiliates of the bank are in compliance with applicable United States law.

"(4) Factor.—In acting on an application under paragraph (1), the Board shall not make the size of the foreign bank the sole determinant factor, and may take into account the needs of the community as well as the length of operation of the foreign bank and its relative size in its home country. Nothing in this paragraph shall affect the ability of the Board to order a State branch, agency, or commercial lending company subsidiary to terminate its activities in the United States pursuant to any standard set forth in this Act.

"(5) Establishment of conditions.—Consistent with the standards for approval in paragraph (2), the Board may impose such conditions on its approval under this subsection as it deems necessary.

"(e) Termination of Foreign Bank Offices in the United States.—

"(1) Standards for termination.—The Board, after notice and opportunity for hearing and notice to any appropriate State bank supervisor, may order a foreign bank that operates a State branch or agency or commercial lending company subsidiary in the United States to terminate the activities of such branch, agency, or subsidiary if the Board finds that—

"(A) the foreign bank is not subject to comprehensive supervision or regulation on a consolidated basis by the appropriate authorities in its home country; or

"(B)(i) there is reasonable cause to believe that such foreign bank, or any affiliate of such foreign bank, has committed a violation of law or engaged in an unsafe or unsound banking practice in the United States; and

"(ii) as a result of such violation or practice, the continued operation of the foreign bank's branch, agency or commercial lending company subsidiary in the United States would not be consistent with the public interest or with the purposes of this Act, the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, or the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

However, in making findings under this paragraph, the Board shall not make size the sole determinant factor, and may take into account the needs of the community as well as the length of operation of the foreign bank and its relative size in its home country. Nothing in this paragraph shall affect the ability of the Board to order a State branch, agency, or commercial lending company subsidiary to terminate its activities in the United States pursuant to any standard set forth in this Act.

"(2) Discretion to deny hearing.—The Board may issue an order under paragraph (1) without providing for an opportunity for a hearing if the Board determines that expeditious action is necessary in order to protect the public interest.

"(3) Effective date of termination order.—An order issued under paragraph (1) shall take effect before the end of the 120-day period beginning on the date such order is issued unless the Board extends such period.

"(4) Compliance with State and Federal law.—Any foreign bank required to terminate activities conducted at offices or subsidiaries in the United States pursuant to this subsection shall comply with the requirements of applicable Federal and State law with respect to procedures for the closure or dissolution of such offices or subsidiaries.

"(5) Recommendation to agency for termination of a Federal branch or agency.—The Board may transmit to the Comptroller of the Currency a recommendation that the license of any Federal branch or Federal agency of a foreign bank be terminated in accordance with section 4(i) if the Board has reasonable cause to believe that such foreign bank or any affiliate of such foreign bank has engaged in conduct for which the activities of any State branch or agency may be terminated under paragraph (1).

"(6) Enforcement of orders.—

"(A) In general.—In the case of contumacy of any office or subsidiary of the foreign bank against which the Board or, in the case of an order issued under section 4(i), the Comptroller of the Currency has issued an order under paragraph (1) or a refusal by such office or subsidiary to comply with such order, the Board or the Comptroller of the Currency may invoke the aid of the district court of the United States within the jurisdiction of which the office or subsidiary is located.

"(B) Court order.—Any court referred to in subparagraph (A) may issue an order requiring compliance with an order issued under paragraph (1).

"(7) Criteria relating to foreign supervision.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this subsection, the Board, in consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury, shall develop and publish criteria to be used in evaluating the operation of any foreign bank in the United States that the Board has determined is not subject to comprehensive supervision or regulation on a consolidated basis. In developing such criteria, the Board shall allow reasonable opportunity for public review and comment.

"(f) Judicial Review.—

"(1) Jurisdiction of United States courts of appeals.—Any foreign bank—

"(A) whose application under subsection (d) or section 10(a) has been disapproved by the Board;

"(B) against which the Board has issued an order under subsection (e) or section 10(b); or

"(C) against which the Comptroller of the Currency has issued an order under section 4(i) of this Act, may obtain a review of such order in the United States court of appeals for any circuit in which such foreign bank operates a branch, agency, or commercial lending company that has been required by such order to terminate its activities, or in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, by filing a petition for review in the court before the end of the 30-day period beginning on the date the order was issued.

"(2) Scope of judicial review.—Section 706 of title 5, United States Code, (other than paragraph (2)(F) of such section) shall apply with respect to any review under paragraph (1).

"(g) Consultation With State Bank Supervisor.—The Board shall request and consider any views of the appropriate State bank supervisor with respect to any application or action under subsection (d) or (e).

(h) Limitations on Powers of State Branches and Agencies.—

"(1) In general.—After the end of the 1-year period beginning on the date of enactment of the Comprehensive Deposit Insurance Reform and Taxpayer Protection Act of 1991, a State branch or State agency may not engage in any type of activity that is not permissible for a Federal branch unless—

"(A) the Board has determined that such activity is consistent with sound banking practice; and

"(B) in the case of an insured branch, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation has determined that the activity would pose no significant risk to the deposit insurance fund.

"(2) Single borrower lending limit.—A State branch or State agency shall be subject to the same limitations with respect to loans made to a single borrower as are applicable to a Federal branch or Federal agency under section 4(b).

"(3) Other authority not affected.—This section does not limit the authority of the Board or any State supervisory authority to impose more stringent restrictions.".

(b) Standards for Approval of Federal Branches and Agencies.—Section 4(a) of the International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3102(a)) is amended—

(1) by striking "(a) Except as provided in section 5," and inserting "(a) Establishment and Operation of Federal Branches and Agencies.—

"(1) Initial federal branch or agency.—Except as provided in section 5,"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(2) Board conditions required to be included.—In considering any application for approval under this subsection, the Comptroller of the Currency shall include any condition imposed by the Board under section 7(d)(5) as a condition for the approval of such application by the agency.".

(c) Standards for Approval of Additional Federal Branches and Agencies.—Section 4(h) of the International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3102(h)) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (1) and (2) as subparagraphs (A) and (B), respectively;

(2) by striking "(h) A foreign bank" and inserting "(h) Additional Branches or Agencies.—

"(1) Approval of agency required.—A foreign bank"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(2) Notice to and comment by board.—The Comptroller of the Currency shall provide the Board with notice and an opportunity for comment on any application to establish an additional Federal branch or Federal agency under this subsection.".

(d) Disapproval for Failure To Agree To Provide Necessary Information.—Section 3(c) of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 (12 U.S.C. 1842(c)) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (1) and (2) as subparagraphs (A) and (B), respectively;

(2) by striking "(c) The Board shall" and inserting "(c) Factors for Consideration by Board.—

"(1) Competitive factors.—The Board shall";

(3) by striking "In every case" and inserting "(2) Banking and community factors.—In every case";

(4) by striking "community to be served. Notwithstanding any other provision of law" and inserting "community to be served.

"(4) Treatment of certain bank stock loans.— Notwithstanding any other provision of law"; and

(5) by inserting after paragraph (2) (as so designated by paragraph (3) of this subsection) the following new paragraph:

"(3) Supervisory factors.—The Board shall disapprove any application under this section by any company if—

"(A) the company fails to provide the Board with adequate assurances that the company will make available to the Board such information on the operations or activities of the company, and any affiliate of the company, as the Board determines to be appropriate to determine and enforce compliance with this Act; or

"(B) in the case of an application involving a foreign bank, the foreign bank is not subject to comprehensive supervision or regulation on a consolidated basis by the appropriate authorities in the bank's home country.".

(e) Conforming Amendments.—

(1) Affiliate defined.—Section 1(b)(13) of the International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3101(13)) is amended by inserting " 'affiliate,' " after "the terms" the 1st place such term appears.

(2) Definitions.—Section 1(b) of the International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3101(b)) is amended—

(A) by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (13);

(B) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (14) and inserting a semicolon; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(15) the term 'representative office' means any office of a foreign bank which is located in any State and is not a Federal branch, Federal agency, State branch, State agency, or subsidiary of a foreign bank;

"(16) the term 'office' means any branch, agency, or representative office; and

"(17) the term 'State bank supervisor' has the meaning given to such term in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.".

SEC. 203. CONDUCT AND COORDINATION OF EXAMINATIONS.

(a) Authority of Board To Conduct and Coordinate Examinations.—Section 7(c) of the International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3105(b)) is amended—

(1) by striking paragraph (1) and inserting the following new paragraph:

"(1) Examination of branches, agencies, and affiliates.—

"(A) In general.—The Board may examine each branch or agency of a foreign bank, each commercial lending company or bank controlled by 1 or more foreign banks or 1 or more foreign companies that control a foreign bank, and other office or affiliate of a foreign bank conducting business in any State.

"(B) Coordination of examinations.—

"(i) In general.—The Board shall coordinate examinations under this paragraph with the Comptroller of the Currency, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and appropriate State bank supervisors to the extent such coordination is possible.

"(ii) Simultaneous examinations.—The Board may request simultaneous examinations of each office of a foreign bank and each affiliate of such bank operating in the United States.

"(C) Annual on-site examination.—Each branch or agency of a foreign bank shall be examined at least once during each 12-month period (beginning on the date the most recent examination of such branch or agency ended) in an on-site examination.

"(D) Cost of examinations.—The cost of any examination under subparagraph (A) shall be assessed against and collected from the foreign bank or the foreign company that controls the foreign bank, as the case may be."; and

(2) in paragraph (2), by inserting "Reporting requirements.—" before "Each branch".

(b) Coordination of Examinations.—Section 4(b) of the International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3102(b)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The Comptroller of the Currency shall coordinate examinations of Federal branches and agencies of foreign banks with examinations conducted by the Board under section 7(c)(1) and, to the extent possible, shall participate in any simultaneous examinations of the United States operations of a foreign bank requested by the Board under such section.".

(c) Participation in Coordinated Examinations.—

(1) In general.—Section 10(b) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1820(b)) is amended by redesignating paragraphs (5) and (6) as paragraphs (6) and (7), respectively, and by inserting after paragraph (4) the following new paragraph:

"(5) Examination of insured State branches.—The Board of Directors shall—

"(A) coordinate examinations of insured State branches of foreign banks with examinations conducted by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System under section 7(c)(1) of the International Banking Act of 1978; and lish a representative office, the Board shall take into account the standards contained in section 7(d)(2) and may impose any additional requirements that the Board determines to be necessary to carry out the purposes of this Act.

"(b) TERMINATION OF REPRESENTATIVE OFFICES.—The Board may order the termination of the activities of a representative office of a foreign bank on the basis of the standards, procedures, and requirements applicable under paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) of section 7(d) with respect to branches and agencies.

"(c) EXAMINATIONS.—The Board may make examinations of each representative office of a foreign bank, the cost of which shall be assessed against and paid by such foreign bank.

"(d) COMPLIANCE WITH STATE LAW.—This Act does not authorize the establishment of a representative office in any State in contravention of State law.".

SEC. 205. REPORTING OF STOCK LOANS.

Section 7(j)(9) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(j)(9)) is amended to read as follows:

"(9) REPORTING OF STOCK LOANS.—

"(A) REPORT REQUIRED.—Any financial institution and any affiliate of any financial institution that has credit outstanding to any person or group of persons which is secured, directly or indirectly, by shares of an insured depository institution shall file a consolidated report with the appropriate Federal banking agency for such insured depository institution if the extensions of credit by the financial institution and such institution's affiliates, in the aggregate, are secured, directly or indirectly, by 25 percent or more of any class of shares of the same insured depository institution.

"(B) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this paragraph—

"(i) FINANCIAL INSTITUTION.—The term 'financial institution' means any insured depository institution and any foreign bank that is subject to the provisions of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 by virtue of section 8(a) of the International Banking Act of 1978.

"(ii) CREDIT OUTSTANDING.—The term 'credit outstanding' includes—

"(I) any loan or extension of credit,

"(II) the issuance of a guarantee, acceptance, or letter of credit, including an endorsement or standby letter of credit, and

"(III) any other type of transaction that extends credit or financing to the person or group of persons.

"(iii) GROUP OF PERSONS.—The term 'group of persons' includes any number of persons that the financial institution reasonably believes—

"(I) are acting together, in concert, or with one another to acquire or control shares of the same insured depository institution, including an acquisition of shares of the same insured depository institution at approximately the same time under substantially the same terms; or

"(II) have made, or propose to make, a joint filing under section 13 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 regarding ownership of the shares of the same insured depository institution.

"(C) INCLUSION OF SHARES HELD BY THE FINANCIAL INSTITUTION.—Any shares of the insured depository institution held by the financial institution or any of its affiliates as principal shall be included in the calculation of the number of shares in which the financial institution or its affiliates has a security interest for purposes of subparagraph (A).

"(D) REPORT REQUIREMENTS.—

"(i) TIMING OF REPORT.—The report required under this paragraph shall be a consolidated report on behalf of the financial institution and all affiliates of the institution, and shall be filed in writing within 30 days of the date on which the financial institution or any such affiliate first believes that the security for any outstanding credit consists of 25 percent or more of any class of shares of an insured depository institution.

"(ii) CONTENT OF REPORT.—The report under this paragraph shall indicate the number and percentage of shares securing each applicable extension of credit, the identity of the borrower, and the number of shares held as principal by the financial institution and any affiliate of such institution.

"(iii) COPY TO OTHER AGENCIES.—A copy of any report under this paragraph shall be filed with the appropriate Federal banking agency for the financial institution (if other than the agency receiving the report under this paragraph).

"(iv) OTHER INFORMATION.—Each appropriate Federal banking agency may require any additional information necessary to carry out the agency's supervisory responsibilities.

"(E) EXCEPTIONS.—

"(i) EXCEPTION WHERE INFORMATION PROVIDED BY BORROWER.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), a financial institution and the affiliates of such institution shall not be required to report a transaction under this paragraph if the person or group of persons referred to in such subparagraph has disclosed the amount borrowed from such institution or affiliate and the security interest of the institution or affiliate to the appropriate Federal banking agency for the insured depository institution in connection with a notice filed under this subsection, an application filed under the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, section 10 of the Home Owners' Loan Act, or any other application filed with the appropriate Federal banking agency for the insured depository institution as a substitute for a notice under this subsection, such as an application for deposit insurance, membership in the Federal Reserve System, or a national bank charter.

"(ii) EXCEPTION FOR SHARES OWNED FOR MORE THAN 1 YEAR.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), a financial institution and any affiliate of such institution shall not be required to report a transaction involving—

"(I) a person or group of persons that has been the owner or owners of record of the stock for a period of 1 year or more; or

"(II) stock issued by a newly chartered bank before the bank's opening.".

SEC. 206. COOPERATION WITH FOREIGN SUPERVISORS.

The International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3101 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 15. COOPERATION WITH FOREIGN SUPERVISORS.

"(a) DISCLOSURE OF SUPERVISORY INFORMATION TO FOREIGN SUPERVISORS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Board, Comptroller of the Currency, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and Director of the Office of Thrift Supervision may disclose information obtained in the course of exercising supervisory or examination authority to any foreign bank regulatory or supervisory authority if the Board, Comptroller, Corporation, or Director determines that such disclosure is appropriate and will not prejudice the interests of the United States.

"(b) REQUIREMENT OF CONFIDENTIALITY.—Before making any disclosure of any information to a foreign authority, the Board, Comptroller of the Currency, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and Director of the Office of Thrift Supervision shall obtain, to the extent necessary, the agreement of such foreign authority to maintain the confidentiality of such information to the extent possible under applicable law.".

SEC. 207. APPROVAL REQUIRED FOR ACQUISITION BY FOREIGN BANKS OF SHARES OF UNITED STATES BANKS.

Section 8(a) of the International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3106(a)) is amended by striking "thereto" and all that follows through the period and inserting "to such provisions.".

SEC. 208. PENALTIES.

The International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3101 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 15 (as added by section 206 of this subtitle) the following new section:

"SEC. 16. PENALTIES.

"(a) CIVIL MONEY PENALTY.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Any foreign bank, and any office or subsidiary of a foreign bank, that violates, and any individual who participates in a violation of, any provision of this Act, or any regulation prescribed or order issued under this Act, shall forfeit and pay a civil penalty of not more than $25,000 for each day during which such violation continues.

"(2) ASSESSMENT PROCEDURES.—Any penalty imposed under paragraph (1) may be assessed and collected by the Board or the Comptroller of the Currency in the manner provided in subparagraphs (E), (F), (G), (H), and (I) of section 8(i)(2) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act for penalties imposed (under such section), and any such assessments shall be subject to the provisions of such section.

"(3) HEARING PROCEDURE.—Section 8(h) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act shall apply to any proceeding under this section.

"(4) DISBURSEMENT.—All penalties collected under authority of this section shall be deposited into the Treasury.

"(5) VIOLATE DEFINED.—For purposes of this section, the term 'violate' includes taking any action (alone or with others) for or toward causing, bringing about, participating in, counseling, or aiding or abetting a violation.

"(6) REGULATIONS.—The Board and the Comptroller of the Currency shall each prescribe regulations establishing such procedures as may be necessary to carry out this section.

"(b) NOTICE UNDER THIS SECTION AFTER SEPARATION FROM SERVICE.—The resignation, termination of employment or participation, or separation of an institution-affiliated party (within the meaning of section 3(u) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act) with respect to a foreign bank, or any office or subsidiary of a foreign bank (including a separation caused by the termination of a location in the United States), shall not affect the jurisdiction or authority of the Board or the Comptroller of the Currency to issue any notice or to proceed under this section against any such party, if such notice is served before the end of the 6-year period beginning on the date such party ceased to be an institution-affiliated party with respect to such foreign bank or such office or subsidiary of a foreign bank (whether such date occurs on, before, or after the date of the enactment of the Foreign Bank Supervision Enhancement Act of 1991).

"(c) PENALTY FOR FAILURE TO MAKE REPORTS.—

"(1) FIRST TIER.—Any foreign bank, or any office or subsidiary of a foreign bank, that—

"(A) maintains procedures reasonably adapted to avoid any inadvertent error and, unintentionally and as a result of such error—

"(i) fails to make, submit, or publish such reports or information as may be required under this Act or under regulations prescribed by the Board or the Comptroller of the Currency under this Act, within the period of time specified by the agency; or

"(ii) submits or publishes any false or misleading report or information; or

"(B) inadvertently transmits or publishes any report that is minimally late, shall be subject to a penalty of not more than $2,000 for each day during which such failure continues or such false or misleading information is not corrected. The foreign bank, or the office or subsidiary of a foreign bank, shall have the burden of proving that an error was inadvertent and that a report was inadvertently transmitted or published late.

"(2) SECOND TIER.—Any foreign bank, or any office or subsidiary of a foreign bank, that—

"(A) fails to make, submit, or publish such reports or information as may be required under this Act or under regulations prescribed by the Board or the Comptroller of the Currency pursuant to this Act, within the time period specified by such agency; or

"(B) submits or publishes any false or misleading report or information, in a manner not described in paragraph (1) shall be subject to a penalty of not more than $20,000 for each day during which such failure continues or such false or misleading information is not corrected.

"(3) THIRD TIER.—Notwithstanding paragraph (2), if any company knowingly or with reckless disregard for the accuracy of any information or report described in paragraph (2) submits or publishes any false or misleading report or information, the Board or the Comptroller of the Currency may, in the Board's or Comptroller's discretion, assess a penalty of not more than $1,000,000 or 1 percent of total assets of such foreign bank, or such office or subsidiary of a foreign bank, whichever is less, per day for each day during which such failure continues or such false or misleading information is not corrected.

"(4) ASSESSMENT OF PENALTIES.—Any penalty imposed under paragraph (1), (2), or (3) shall be assessed and collected by the Board or the Comptroller of the Currency in the manner provided in subsection (a)(2) (for penalties imposed under such subsection) and any such assessment (including the determination of the amount of the penalty) shall be subject to the provisions of such subsection.

"(5) HEARING PROCEDURE.—Section 8(h) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act shall apply to any proceeding under this subsection.".

SEC. 209. POWERS OF AGENCIES RESPECTING APPLICATIONS, EXAMINATIONS, AND OTHER PROCEEDINGS.

Section 13(b) of the International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3108(b)) is amended—

(1) by striking "(b) In addition to" and inserting "(b) ENFORCEMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In addition to";

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(2) AUTHORITY TO ADMINISTER OATHS; SUBPOENA POWER.—In the course of, or in connection with, an application, examination, investigation, or other proceeding under this Act, the Board, the Comptroller of the Currency, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, as the case may be, any member of the Board or of the Board of Directors of the Corporation, and any designated representative of the Board, Comptroller, or Corporation (including any person designated to conduct any hearing under this Act) may—

"(A) administer oaths and affirmations and take or cause to be taken depositions; and

"(B) issue, revoke, quash, or modify any subpoena, including any subpoena requiring the attendance and testimony of a witness or any subpoenas duces tecum.

"(3) ADMINISTRATIVE ASPECTS OF SUBPOENAS.—

"(A) ATTENDANCE AND PRODUCTION AT DESIGNATED SITE.—The attendance of any witness and the production of any document pursuant to a subpoena under paragraph (2) may be required at the place designated in the subpoena from any place in any State (as defined in section 3(a)(3) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act) or other place subject to the jurisdiction of the United States.

"(B) SERVICE OF SUBPOENA.—Service of a subpoena issued under this subsection may be made by registered mail, or in such other manner reasonably calculated to give actual notice as the Board, Comptroller of the Currency, or Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation may by regulation or otherwise provide.

"(C) FEES AND TRAVEL EXPENSES.—Witnesses subpoenaed under this subsection shall be paid the same fees and mileage that are paid witnesses in the district courts of the United States.

"(4) CONTUMACY OR REFUSAL.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of contumacy of any person issued a subpoena under this subsection or a refusal by such person to comply with such subpoena, the Board, Comptroller of the Currency, or Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, or any other party to proceedings in connection with which subpoena was issued may invoke the aid of—

"(i) the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, or

"(ii) any district court of the United States within the jurisdiction of which the proceeding is being conducted or the witness resides or carries on business.

"(B) COURT ORDER.—Any court referred to in subparagraph (A) may issue an order requiring compliance with a subpoena issued under this subsection.

"(5) EXPENSES AND FEES.—Any court having jurisdiction of any proceeding instituted under this subsection may allow any party to such proceeding such reasonable expenses and attorneys' fees as the court deems just and proper.

"(6) CRIMINAL PENALTY.—Any person who willfully fails or refuses to attend and testify or to answer any lawful inquiry or to produce books, papers, correspondence, memoranda, contracts, agreements, or other records in accordance with any subpoena under this subsection shall be fined under title 18, United States Code, imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both. Each day during which any such failure or refusal continues shall be treated as a separate offense.".

SEC. 213. CRIMINAL PENALTY FOR VIOLATING THE INTERNATIONAL BANKING ACT OF 1978.

The International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3101 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 16 (as added by section 208 of this subtitle) the following new section:

"SEC. 17. CRIMINAL PENALTY.

"Whoever, with the intent to deceive, to gain financially, or to cause financial gain or loss to any person, knowingly violates any provision of this Act or any regulation or order issued by the appropriate Federal banking agency under this Act shall be imprisoned not more than 5 years or fined not more than $1,000,000 for each day during which a violation continues, or both.".

SEC. 214. MISCELLANEOUS AMENDMENTS TO THE INTERNATIONAL BANKING ACT OF 1978.

(a) SECTION 6.—Section 6 of the International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3104) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (b) as subsection (b)(1);

(2) by designating the last undesignated paragraph as paragraph (2); and

(3) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(c) RETAIL DEPOSIT-TAKING BY FOREIGN BANKS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—After the date of enactment of this subsection, notwithstanding any other provision of this Act or any provision of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, in order to accept or maintain deposit accounts having balances of less than $100,000, a foreign bank shall—

"(A) establish 1 or more banking subsidies in the United States for that purpose; and

"(B) obtain Federal deposit insurance for any such subsidiary in accordance with the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

"(2) EXCEPTION.—Deposit accounts with balances of less than $100,000 may be accepted or maintained in a branch of a foreign bank only if such branch was an insured branch on the date of the enactment of this subsection.".

(b) SECTION 7.—Section 7 of the International Banking Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3105) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(j) STUDY ON EQUIVALENCE OF FOREIGN BANK CAPITAL.—Not later than 180 days after enactment of this subsection, the Board and the Secretary of the Treasury shall jointly submit to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs of the House of Representatives a report—

"(1) analyzing the capital standards contained in the framework for measurement of capital adequacy established by the Supervisory committee of the Bank for International Settlements, foreign regulatory capital standards that apply to foreign banks conducting banking operations in the United States, and the relationship of the Basle and foreign standards to risk-based capital and leverage requirements for United States banks; and

"(2) establishing guidelines for the adjustments to be used by the Board in converting data on the capital of such foreign banks to the equivalent risk-based capital and leverage requirements for United States banks for purposes of determining whether a foreign bank's capital level is equivalent to that imposed on United States banks for purposes of determinations under section 7 of the International Banking Act of 1978 and sections 3 and 4 of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956.

An update shall be prepared annually explaining any changes in the analysis under paragraph (1) and resulting changes in the guidelines pursuant to paragraph (2).

SEC. 215. STUDY AND REPORT ON SUBSIDIARY REQUIREMENTS FOR FOREIGN BANKS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of the Treasury (hereafter referred to as the "Secretary"), jointly with the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System and in consultation with the Comptroller of the Currency, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and the Attorney General, shall conduct a study of whether foreign banks should be required to conduct banking operations in the United States through subsidiaries rather than branches. In conducting the study, the Secretary shall take into account—

(1) differences in accounting and regulatory practices abroad and the difficulty of assuring that the foreign bank meets United States capital and management standards and is adequately supervised;

(2) implications for the deposit insurance system;

(3) competitive equity considerations;

(4) national treatment of foreign financial institutions;

(5) the need to prohibit money laundering and illegal payments;

(6) safety and soundness considerations;

(7) implications for international negotiations for liberalized trade in financial services;

(8) the tax liability of foreign banks;

(9) whether the establishment of subsidiaries by foreign banks to operate in the United States should be required only if United States Banks are authorized to engage in securities activities and interstate banking and branching; and

(10) differences in treatment of United States creditors under the bankruptcy and receivership laws.

(b) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall transmit to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs of the House of Representatives a report on the results of the study under subsection (a). Any additional or dissenting views of participating agencies shall be included in the report.

Subtitle B—Customer and Consumer Provisions

SEC. 221. STUDY ON REGULATORY BURDEN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council, in consultation with individuals representing insured depository institutions, consumers, community groups, and other interested parties, shall—

(1) review the policies and procedures, and recordkeeping and documentation requirements used to monitor and enforce compliance with—

(A) all laws under the jurisdiction of the Federal banking agencies; and

(B) all laws affecting insured depository institutions under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Treasury;

(2) determine whether such policies, procedures, and requirements impose unnecessary burdens on insured depository institutions; and

(3) identify any revisions of such policies, procedures, and requirements that could reduce unnecessary burdens on insured depository institutions without in any respect—

(A) diminishing either compliance with or enforcement of consumer laws in any respect; or

(B) endangering the safety and soundness of insured depository institutions.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council shall submit to the Congress a report describing the revisions identified under subsection (a)(3).

(c) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the terms "insured depository institution" and "Federal banking agency" have the same meanings as in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

SEC. 223. ENFORCEMENT OF EQUAL CREDIT OPPORTUNITY ACT.

(a) PATTERN OR PRACTICE.—Section 706(g) of the Equal Credit Opportunity Act (15 U.S.C. 1691e(g)) is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "Each agency referred to in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) of section 704(a) shall refer the matter to the Attorney General whenever the agency has reason to believe that 1 or more creditors has engaged in a pattern or practice of discouraging or denying applications for credit in violation of section 701(a). Each such agency may refer the matter to the Attorney General whenever the agency has reason to believe that 1 or more creditors has violated section 701(a).".

(b) DAMAGES.—Section 706(h) of the Equal Credit Opportunity Act (15 U.S.C. 1691e(h)) is amended by inserting "actual and punitive damages and" after "including".

(c) NOTICE TO HUD.—Section 706 of the Equal Credit Opportunity Act (15 U.S.C. 1691e) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(k) NOTICE TO HUD OF VIOLATIONS.—Whenever an agency referred to in paragraph (1), (2), or (3) of section 704(a)—

"(1) has reason to believe, as a result of receiving a consumer complaint, conducting a consumer compliance examination, or otherwise, that a violation of this title has occurred;

"(2) has reason to believe that the alleged violation would be a violation of the Fair Housing Act; and

"(3) does not refer the matter to the Attorney General pursuant to subsection (g), the agency shall notify the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development of the violation, and shall notify the applicant that the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development has been notified of the alleged violation and that remedies for the violation may be available under the Fair Housing Act.".

(d) APPRAISALS.—Section 701 of the Equal Credit Opportunity Act (15 U.S.C. 1691) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(e) Each creditor shall promptly furnish an applicant, upon written request by the applicant made within a reasonable period of time of the application, a copy of the appraisal report used in connection with the applicant's application for a loan that is or would have been secured by a lien on residential real property. The creditor may require the applicant to reimburse the creditor for the cost of the appraisal.".

SEC. 224. HOME MORTGAGE DISCLOSURE ACT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 309 of the Home Mortgage Disclosure Act (12 U.S.C. 2808) is amended—

(1) by striking "depository" before "institution";

(2) by inserting "specified in section 303(2)(A)" after "institution"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following: "The Board, in consultation with the Secretary, may exempt institutions described in section 303(2)(B) that are comparable within their respective industries to institutions that are exempt under the preceding sentence.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This section shall become effective on January 1, 1992.

SEC. 228. NOTICE OF BRANCH CLOSURE.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1811 et seq.) is amended by adding after section 38 (as added by section 131 of this Act) the following new section:

"SEC. 39. NOTICE OF BRANCH CLOSURE.

"(a) NOTICE TO APPROPRIATE FEDERAL BANKING AGENCY.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—An insured depository institution which proposes to close any branch shall submit a notice of the proposed closing to the appropriate Federal banking agency not later than the first day of the 90-day period ending on the date proposed for the closing.

"(2) CONTENTS OF NOTICE.—A notice under paragraph (1) shall include—

"(A) a detailed statement of the reasons for the decision to close the branch; and

"(B) statistical or other information in support of such reasons.

"(b) NOTICE TO CUSTOMERS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—An insured depository institution which proposes to close a branch shall provide notice of the proposed closing to its customers.

"(2) CONTENTS OF NOTICE.—Notice under paragraph (1) shall consist of—

"(A) posting of a notice in a conspicuous manner on the premises of the branch proposed to be closed during not less than the 30-day period ending on the date proposed for that closing; and

"(B) inclusion of a notice in—

"(i) at least one of any regular account statements mailed to customers of the branch proposed to be closed, or

"(ii) in a separate mailing, by not later than the beginning of the 90-day period ending on the date proposed for that closing.

"(c) ADOPTION OF POLICIES.—Each insured depository institution shall adopt policies for closings of branches of the institution.".

Subtitle C—Bank Enterprise Act

SEC. 231. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the "Bank Enterprise Act of 1991".

SEC. 232. REDUCED ASSESSMENT RATE FOR DEPOSITS ATTRIBUTABLE TO LIFELINE ACCOUNTS.

(a) QUALIFICATION OF LIFELINE ACCOUNTS BY FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation shall establish minimum requirements for accounts providing basic transaction services for consumers at insured depository institutions in order for such accounts to qualify as lifeline accounts for purposes of this section and section 7(b)(10) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

(2) FACTORS TO BE CONSIDERED.—In determining the minimum requirements under paragraph (1) for lifeline accounts at insured depository institutions, the Board and the Corporation shall consider the following factors:

(A) Whether the account is available to provide basic transaction services for individuals who maintain a balance of less than $1,000 or such other amount which the Board may determine to be appropriate.

(B) Whether any service charges or fees to which the account is subject, if any, for routine transactions do not exceed a minimal amount.

(C) Whether any minimum balance or minimum opening requirement to which the account is subject, if any, is not more than a minimal amount.

(D) Whether checks, negotiable orders of withdrawal, or similar instruments for making payments or other transfers to third parties may be drawn on the account.

(E) Whether the depositor is permitted to make more than a minimal number of withdrawals from the account each month by any means described in subparagraph (D) or any other means.

(F) Whether a monthly statement itemizing all transactions for the monthly reporting period is made available to the depositor with respect to such account or a passbook is provided in which all transactions with respect to such account are recorded.

(G) Whether depositors are permitted access to tellers at the institution for conducting transactions with respect to such account.

(H) Whether other account relationships with the institution are required in order to open any such account.

(I) Whether individuals are required to meet any prerequisite which discriminates against low-income individuals in order to open such account.

(J) Such other factors as the Board may determine to be appropriate.

(3) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection—

(A) BOARD.—The term "Board" means the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

(B) INSURED DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION.—The term "insured depository institution" has the meaning given to such term in section 3(c)(2) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

(C) LIFELINE ACCOUNT.—The term "lifeline account" means any transaction account (as defined in section 19(b)(1)(C) of the Federal Reserve Act) which meets the minimum requirements established by the Board under this subsection.

(b) REDUCED ASSESSMENT RATES FOR LIFELINE ACCOUNT DEPOSITS.—

(1) REPORTING LIFELINE ACCOUNT DEPOSITS.—Section 7(a) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(a)) (as amended by sections 122, 123, and 141 of this Act) is amended by redesignating paragraphs (6), (7), (8), (9), and (10) as paragraphs (7), (8), (9), (10), and (11), respectively, and by inserting after paragraph (5) the following new paragraph:

"(6) LIFELINE ACCOUNT DEPOSITS.—In the reports of condition required to be reported under this subsection, the deposits in lifeline accounts (as defined in section 232(a)(3)(C) of the Bank Enterprise Act of 1991) shall be reported separately.".

(2) ASSESSMENT RATES APPLICABLE TO LIFELINE DEPOSITS.—Section 7(b) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(b)) is amended by redesignating paragraph (10) (as so redesignated by section 103(b) of this Act) as paragraph (11) and by inserting after paragraph (9) the following new paragraph:

"(10) ASSESSMENT RATE FOR LIFELINE ACCOUNT DEPOSITS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection, that portion of the average assessment base of any insured depository institution which is attributable to deposits in lifeline accounts (as reported in the institution's reports of condition pursuant to subsection (a)(6)) shall be subject to assessment at the assessment rate of ½ the maximum rate.".

(3) ASSESSMENT PROCEDURE.—Section 7(b)(2)(A) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(b)(2)(A)) is amended—

(A) by striking subclause (II) of clause (i) and inserting the following new subclause:

"(II) such Bank Insurance Fund member's average assessment base for the immediately preceding semiannual period (minus any amount taken into account under clause (iii) with respect to lifeline account deposits); and"; and

(B) by striking subclause (II) of clause (ii) and inserting the following new subclause:

"(II) such Savings Association Insurance Fund member's average assessment base for the immediately preceding semiannual period (minus any amount taken into account under clause (iii) with respect to lifeline account deposits); and"; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(iii) the semiannual assessment due from any Bank Insurance Fund member or Savings Association Insurance Fund member with respect to lifeline account deposits for any semiannual assessment period shall be the product of—

"(I) ½ the assessment rate applicable with respect to such deposits pursuant to paragraph (10) during that semiannual assessment period; and

"(II) the portion of such member's average assessment base for the immediately preceding semiannual period which is attributable to deposits in lifeline accounts (as reported in the institution's reports of condition pursuant to subsection (a)(6)).".

(c) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—The provisions of this section shall not take effect until appropriations are specifically provided in advance. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

SEC. 233. ASSESSMENT CREDITS FOR QUALIFYING ACTIVITIES RELATING TO DISTRESSED COMMUNITIES.

(a) DETERMINATION OF CREDITS FOR INCREASES IN COMMUNITY ENTERPRISE ACTIVITIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Community Enterprise Assessment Credit Board established under subsection (d) shall issue guidelines for insured depository institutions eligible under this subsection for any community enterprise assessment credit with respect to any semiannual period. Such guidelines shall—

(A) designate the eligibility requirements for any institution meeting applicable capital standards to receive an assessment credit under section 7(d)(4) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act; and

(B) determine the community enterprise assessment credit available to any eligible institution under paragraph (3).

(2) QUALIFYING ACTIVITIES.—An insured depository institution shall be eligible for any community enterprise assessment credit for any semiannual period for—

(A) any increase during such period in the amount of new originations of qualified loans and other financial assistance provided for low- and moderate-income persons in distressed communities, or enterprises integrally involved with such neighborhoods, which the Board determines are qualified to be taken into account for purposes of this subsection; and

(B) any increase during such period in the amount of deposits accepted from persons domiciled in the distressed community, at any office of the institution (including any branch) located in any qualified distressed community, and any increase during such period in the amount of new originations of loans and other financial assistance made within that community, except that in no case shall the credit for increased deposits at any institution or branch exceed the credit for increased loan and other financial assistance by the bank or branch in the distressed community.

(3) AMOUNT OF ASSESSMENT CREDIT.—The amount of any community enterprise assessment credit available under section 7(d)(4) for any insured depository institution, or a qualified portion thereof, for any semiannual period shall be the amount which is equal to 5 percent, in the case of an institution which does not meet the community development organization requirements under section 235, and 15 percent, in the case of an institution, or a qualified portion thereof, which meets such requirements, (or any percentage designated under paragraph (5)) of the sum of—

(A) the amounts of assets described in paragraph (2)(A); and

(B) the amounts of deposits, loans, and other extensions of credit described in paragraph (2)(B).

(4) DETERMINATION OF QUALIFIED LOANS AND OTHER FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.—Except as provided in paragraph (6), the types of loans and other financial assistance which the Board may determine to be qualified to be taken into account under paragraph (2)(A) for purposes of the community enterprise assessment credit, may include the following:

(A) Loans insured or guaranteed by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, the Secretary of the Department of Veterans Affairs, the Administrator of the Small Business Administration, and the Secretary of Agriculture.

(B) Loans or financing provided in connection with activities assisted by the Administrator of the Small Business Administration or any small business investment company and investments in small business investment companies.

(C) Loans or financing provided in connection with any neighborhood housing service program assisted under the Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation Act.

(D) Loans or financing provided in connection with any activities assisted under the community development block grant program under title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974.

(E) Loans or financing provided in connection with activities assisted under title II of the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act.

(F) Loans or financing provided in connection with a homeownership program assisted under title III of the United States Housing Act of 1937 or subtitle B or C of title IV of the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act.

(G) Financial assistance provided through community development corporations.

(H) Federal and State programs providing interest rate assistance for homeowners.

(I) Extensions of credit to nonprofit developers or purchasers of low-income housing and small business developments.

(J) In the case of members of any Federal home loan bank, participation in the community investment fund program established by the Federal home loan banks.

(K) Conventional mortgages targeted to low- or moderate-income persons.

(5) ADJUSTMENT OF PERCENTAGE.—The Board may increase or decrease the percentage referred to in paragraph (3) for determining the amount of any community enterprise assessment credit pursuant to such paragraph, except that the percentage established for insured depository institutions which meet the community development organization requirements under section 235 shall not be less than 3 times the amount of the percentage applicable for insured depository institutions which do not meet such requirements.

(6) CERTAIN INVESTMENTS NOT ELIGIBLE TO BE TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT.—Investments by any insured depository institution in loans and securities that are not the result of originations by the institution shall not be taken into account for purposes of determining the amount of any credit pursuant to this subsection.

(b) QUALIFIED DISTRESSED COMMUNITY DEFINED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, the term "qualified distressed community" means any neighborhood or community which—

(A) meets the minimum area requirements under paragraph (3) and the eligibility requirements of paragraph (4); and

(B) is designated as a distressed community by any insured depository institution in accordance with paragraph (2) and such designation is not disapproved under such paragraph.

(2) DESIGNATION REQUIREMENTS.—

(A) NOTICE OF DESIGNATION.—

(i) NOTICE TO AGENCY.—Upon designating an area as a qualified distressed community, an insured depository institution shall notify the appropriate Federal banking agency of the designation.

(ii) PUBLIC NOTICE.—Upon the effective date of any designation of an area as a qualified distressed community, an insured depository institution shall publish a notice of such designation in major newspapers and other community publications which serve such area.

(B) AGENCY DUTIES RELATING TO DESIGNATIONS.—

(i) PROVIDING INFORMATION.—At the request of any insured depository institution, the appropriate Federal banking agency shall provide to the institution appropriate information to assist the institution to identify and designate a qualified distressed community.

(ii) PERIOD FOR DISAPPROVAL.—Any notice received by the appropriate Federal banking agency from any insured depository institution under subparagraph (A)(i) shall take effect at the end of the 90-day period beginning on the date such notice is received unless written notice of the approval or disapproval of the application by the agency is provided to the institution before the end of such period.

(3) MINIMUM AREA REQUIREMENTS.—For purposes of this subsection, an area meets the requirements of this paragraph if—

(A) the area is within the jurisdiction of 1 unit of general local government;

(B) the boundary of the area is contiguous; and

(C) the area—

(i) has a population, as determined by the most recent census data available, of not less than—

(I) 4,000, if any portion of such area is located within a metropolitan statistical area (as designated by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget) with a population of 50,000 or more; or

(II) 1,000, in any other case; or

(ii) is entirely within an Indian reservation (as determined by the Secretary of the Interior).

(4) ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENTS.—For purposes of this subsection, an area meets the requirements of this paragraph if at least 2 of the following criteria are met:

(A) INCOME.—At least 70 percent of the families and unrelated individuals residing in the area have incomes of less than 80 percent of the median income of the area.

(B) POVERTY.—At least 20 percent of the residents residing in the area have incomes which are less than the national poverty level (as determined pursuant to criteria established by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget).

(C) UNEMPLOYMENT.—The unemployment rate for the area is one and one-half times greater than the national average (as determined by the Bureau of Labor Statistic's most recent figures).

(c) ASSESSMENT CREDIT PROVIDED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 7(d) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(d)) amended—

(A) by redesignating paragraphs (4) and (5) as paragraphs (6) and (7), respectively; and

(B) by inserting after paragraph (3) the following new paragraphs:

"(4) COMMUNITY ENTERPRISE ASSESSMENT CREDITS.—Notwithstanding paragraphs (2)(A) and (3)(A) and in addition to any assessment credit authorized under paragraph (2)(B) or (3)(B), the Corporation shall allow an assessment credit for any semiannual assessment period to any Bank Insurance Fund member or Savings Association Insurance Fund member satisfying the requirements of the Community Enterprise Assessment Credit Board under section 233(a)(1) of the Bank Enterprise Act of 1991 in the amount determined by such Board through regulation for such period pursuant to such section.

"(5) MAXIMUM AMOUNT OF CREDIT.—The total amount of assessment credits allowed under this subsection (including community enterprise assessment credits pursuant to paragraph (4)) for any insured depository institution for any semiannual period shall not exceed the amount which is equal to 20 percent, in the case of an institution which does not meet the community development organization requirements under section 235 of the Bank Enterprise Act of 1991, and 50 percent, in the case of an institution which meets such requirements, of the assessment imposed on such institution for the semiannual period.".

(2) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(A) Subparagraph (A) of section 7(d)(1) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(d)(1)) is amended by inserting "(other than credits allowed pursuant to paragraph (4))" after "amount to be credited".

(B) Subparagraph (B) of section 7(d)(1) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(d)(1)) is amended by inserting "(taking into account any assessment credit allowed pursuant to paragraph (4))" after "should be reduced".

(d) COMMUNITY ENTERPRISE ASSESSMENT CREDIT BOARD.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is hereby established the "Community Enterprise Assessment Credit Board".

(2) NUMBER AND APPOINTMENT.—The Board shall be composed of 5 members as follows:

(A) The Secretary of the Treasury or a designee of the Secretary.

(B) The Secretary of Housing and Urban Development or a designee of the Secretary.

(C) The Chairperson of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation or a designee of the Chairperson.

(D) 2 individuals appointed by the President from among individuals who represent community organizations.

(3) TERMS.—

(A) APPOINTED MEMBERS.—Each appointed member shall be appointed for a term of 5 years.

(B) INTERIM APPOINTMENT.—Any member appointed to fill a vacancy occurring before the expiration of the term to which such member's predecessor was appointed shall be appointed only for the remainder of such term.

(C) CONTINUATION OF SERVICE.—Each appointed member may continue to serve after the expiration of the period to which such member was appointed until a successor has been appointed.

(4) CHAIRPERSON.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall serve as the Chairperson of the Board.

(5) NO PAY.—No members of the Commission may receive any pay for service on the Board.

(6) TRAVEL EXPENSES.—Each member shall receive travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, in accordance with sections 5702 and 5703 of title 5, United States Code.

(7) MEETINGS.—The Board shall meet at the call of the Chairperson or a majority of the Board's members.

(e) DUTIES OF THE BOARD.—

(1) PROCEDURE FOR DETERMINING COMMUNITY ENTERPRISE ASSESSMENT CREDITS.—The Board shall establish procedures for accepting and considering applications by insured depository institutions under subsection (a)(1) for community enterprise assessment credits and making determinations with respect to such applications.

(2) NOTICE TO FDIC.—The Board shall notify the applicant and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation of any determination of the Board with respect to any application referred to in paragraph (1) in sufficient time for the Corporation to include the amount of such credit in the computation made for purposes of the notification required under paragraph section 7(d)(1)(B).

(f) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—The provisions of this section shall not take effect until appropriations are specifically provided in advance. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

(g) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) APPROPRIATE FEDERAL BANKING AGENCY.—The term "appropriate Federal banking agency" has the meaning given to such term in section 3(q) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

(2) BOARD.—The term "Board" means the Community Enterprise Assessment Credit Board established under the amendment made by subsection (d).

(3) INSURED DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION.—The term "insured depository institution" has the meaning given to such term in section 3(c)(2) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

SEC. 234. COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT ORGANIZATIONS.

(a) COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT ORGANIZATIONS DESCRIBED.—For purposes of this subtitle, any insured depository institution, or a qualified portion thereof, shall be treated as meeting the community development organization requirements of this section if—

(1) the institution—

(A) is a community development bank, or controls any community development bank, which meets the requirements of subsection (b);

(B) controls any community development corporation, or maintains any community development unit within the institution, which meets the requirements of subsection (c);

(C) invests in accounts in any community development credit union designated as a low-income credit union, subject to restrictions established for such credit unions by the National Credit Union Administration Board; or

(D) invests in a community development organization jointly controlled by two or more institutions;

(2) except in the case of an institution which is a community development bank, the amount of the capital invested, in the form of debt or equity, by the institution in the community development organization referred to in paragraph (1) (or, in the case of any community development unit, the amount which the institution irrevocably makes available to such unit for the purposes described in paragraph (3)) is not less than the greater of—

(A) ½ of 1 percent of the capital, as defined by generally accepted accounting principles, of the institution; or

(B) the sum of the amounts invested in such community development organization; and

(3) the community development organization provides loans for residential mortgages, home improvement, and community development and other financial services, other than financing for the purchase of automobiles or extension of credit under any open-end credit plan (as defined in section 103(i) of the Truth in Lending Act), to low- and moderate-income persons, nonprofit organizations, and small businesses located in qualified distressed communities in a manner consistent with the intent of this subtitle.

(b) COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT BANK REQUIREMENTS.—A community development bank meets the requirements of this subsection if—

(1) the community development bank has a 15-member advisory board designated as the "Community Investment Board" and consisting entirely of community leaders who—

(A) shall be appointed initially by the board of directors of the community development bank and thereafter by the Community Investment Board from nominations received from the community; and

(B) are appointed for a single term of 2 years, except that, of the initial members appointed to the Community Investment Board, ⅓ shall be appointed for a term of 8 months, ⅓ shall be appointed for a term of 16 months, and ⅓ shall be appointed for a term of 24 months, as designated by the board of directors of the community development bank at the time of the appointment;

(2) ⅓ of the members of the community development bank's board of directors are appointed from among individuals nominated by the Community Investment Board; and

(3) the bylaws of the community development bank require that the board of directors of the bank meet with the Community Investment Board at least once every 3 months.

(c) COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION REQUIREMENTS.—Any community development corporation, or community development unit within any insured depository institution meets the requirements of this subsection if the corporation or unit provides the same or greater, as determined by the appropriate Federal banking agency, community participation in the activities of such corporation or unit as would be provided by a Community Investment Board under subsection (b) if such corporation or unit were a community development bank.

(d) ADEQUATE DISPERSAL REQUIREMENT.—The appropriate Federal banking agency may approve the establishment of a community development organization under this subtitle only upon finding that the distressed community is not adequately served by an existing community development organization.

(e) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT BANK.—The term "community development bank" means any depository institution (as defined in section 3(c)(1) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act).

(2) COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT ORGANIZATION.—The term "community development organization" means any community development bank, community development corporation, community development unit within any insured depository institution, or community development credit union.

(3) LOW- AND MODERATE-INCOME PERSONS.—The term "low- and moderate-income persons" has the meaning given such term in section 102(a)(20) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974.

(4) NONPROFIT ORGANIZATION; SMALL BUSINESS.—The terms "nonprofit organization" and "small business" have the meanings given to such terms by regulations which the appropriate Federal banking agency shall prescribe for purposes of this section.

(5) QUALIFIED DISTRESSED COMMUNITY.—The term "qualified distressed community" has the meaning given to such term in section 233(b).

Subtitle D—FDIC Property Disposition

SEC. 241. FDIC AFFORDABLE HOUSING PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1811 et seq.) is amended by adding after section 39 (as added by section 228 of this title) the following new section:

"SEC. 40. FDIC AFFORDABLE HOUSING PROGRAM.

"(a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to provide homeownership and rental housing opportunities for very low-income, low-income, and moderate-income families.

"(b) FUNDING AND LIMITATIONS OF PROGRAM.—

"(1) DURATION OF PROGRAM.—The provisions of this section shall be effective, subject to the provisions of paragraph (2), only during the 3-year period beginning upon the commencement of the first fiscal year for which amounts are provided pursuant to paragraph (2)(A).

"(2) ANNUAL FISCAL LIMITATIONS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In each fiscal year during the 3-year period referred to in paragraph (1), the provisions of this section shall apply only—

"(i) to such extent or in such amounts as are provided in appropriations Acts for any losses resulting during the fiscal year from the sale of properties under this section, except that such amounts for losses may not exceed $30,000,000 in any fiscal year; and

"(ii) to the extent that amounts are provided in appropriations Acts pursuant to subparagraph (C) for any other costs relating to the program under this section.

"(B) DEFINITION OF LOSSES.—For purposes of this paragraph, the amount of losses resulting from the sale of properties under this section during any fiscal year shall be the amount equal to the sum of any affordable housing discounts reasonably anticipated to accrue during the fiscal year.

"(C) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated, for each fiscal year during the 3-year period referred to in paragraph (1), such sums as may be necessary for any costs of the program under this section other than losses resulting from the sale of properties under this section.

"(D) OTHER DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this paragraph:

"(i) AFFORDABLE HOUSING DISCOUNT.—The term 'affordable housing discount' means, with respect to any eligible residential or eligible condominium property transferred under this section by the Corporation, the difference (if any) between the realizable disposition value of the property and the actual sale price of the property under this section.

"(ii) REALIZABLE DISPOSITION VALUE.—The term 'realizable disposition value' means the estimated sale price that the Corporation reasonably would be able to obtain upon the sale of a property by the Corporation under the provisions of this Act, not including this section, and any other applicable laws. Not later than the expiration of the 120-day period beginning upon the commencement of the first fiscal year for which amounts are provided pursuant to paragraph (2)(A), the Corporation shall establish, and publish in the Federal Register, procedures for determining the realizable disposition value of a property transferred under this section, which shall take into consideration such factors as the Corporation considers appropriate, including the actual sale prices of properties disposed of by the Resolution Trust Corporation under section 21A(c) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, the prices of other properties sold under similar programs, and the appraised value of the property transferred under this section. Until such procedures are established, the Corporation may consider the realizable disposition value of any eligible residential or condominium property to be equal to the appraised value of the property.

"(3) EXISTING CONTRACTS.—The provisions of this section shall not apply to any eligible residential property or any eligible condominium property that is subject to an agreement entered into by the Corporation before the commencement of the first fiscal year for which amounts are provided pursuant to paragraph (2)(A) that provides for any other disposition of the property.

"(c) RULES GOVERNING DISPOSITION OF ELIGIBLE SINGLE FAMILY PROPERTIES.—

"(1) NOTICE TO CLEARINGHOUSES.—Within a reasonable period of time after acquiring title to an eligible single family property, the Corporation shall provide written notice to clearinghouses. Such notice shall contain basic information about the property, including but not limited to location, condition, and information relating to the estimated fair market value of the property. Each clearinghouse shall make such information available, upon request, to other public agencies, other nonprofit organizations, and qualifying households. The Corporation shall allow public agencies, nonprofit organizations, and qualifying households reasonable access to eligible single family property for purposes of inspection.

"(2) OFFERS TO SELL TO NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS, PUBLIC AGENCIES, AND QUALIFYING HOUSEHOLDS.—During the 180-day period beginning on the date on which the Corporation makes an eligible single family property available for sale, the Corporation shall offer to sell the property to—

"(A) qualifying households (including qualifying households with members who are veterans); or

"(B) public agencies or nonprofit organizations that agree to (i) make the property available for occupancy by and maintain it as affordable for low-income families (including low-income families with members who are veterans) for the remaining useful life of such property, or (ii) make the property available for purchase by any such family who, except as provided in paragraph (4), agrees to occupy the property as a principal residence for at least 12 months and certifies in writing that the family intends to occupy the property for at least 12 months.

The restrictions described in clause (i) of subparagraph (B) shall be contained in the deed or other recorded instrument. If, upon the expiration of such 180-day period, no qualifying household, public agency, or nonprofit organization has made a bona fide offer to purchase the property, the Corporation may offer to sell the property to any purchaser. The Corporation shall actively market eligible single family properties for sale to low-income families and to low-income families with members who are veterans.

"(3) RECAPTURE OF PROFITS FROM RESALE.—Except as provided in paragraph (4), if any eligible single family property sold (A) to a qualifying household, or (B) to a low-income family pursuant to paragraph (2)(B)(ii), subsection (j)(3)(A), or subsection (k)(2), is resold by the qualifying household or low-income family during the 1-year period beginning upon initial acquisition by the household or low-income family, the Corporation shall recapture 75 percent of the amount of any proceeds from the resale that exceed the sum of (i) the original sale price for the acquisition of the property by the qualifying household or low-income family, (ii) the costs of any improvements to the property made after the date of the acquisition, and (iii) any closing costs in connection with the acquisition.

"(4) EXCEPTIONS TO RECAPTURE REQUIREMENT.—

"(A) RELOCATION.—The Corporation may in its discretion waive the applicability (i) to any qualifying household of the requirement under paragraph (3) and the requirements relating to residency of a qualifying household under subsections (p)(12)(B) and (C), and (ii) to any low-income family of the requirement under paragraph (3) and the residency requirements under paragraph (2)(B)(ii). The Corporation may grant any such a waiver only for good cause shown, including any necessary relocation of the qualifying household or low-income family.

"(B) OTHER RECAPTURE PROVISIONS.—The requirement under paragraph (3) shall not apply to any eligible single family property for which, upon resale by the qualifying household or low-income family during the 1-year period beginning upon initial acquisition by the household or family, a portion of the sale proceeds or any subsidy provided in connection with the acquisition of the property by the household or family is required to be recaptured or repaid under any other Federal, State, or local law (including section 143(m) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) or regulation or under any sale agreement.

"(5) EXCEPTION TO AVOID DISPLACEMENT OF EXISTING RESIDENTS.—Notwithstanding the first sentence of paragraph (2), during the 180-day period following the date on which the Corporation makes an eligible single family property available for sale, the Corporation may sell the property to the household residing in the property, but only if (A) such household was residing in the property at the time notice regarding the property was provided to clearinghouses under paragraph (1), (B) such sale is necessary to avoid the displacement of, and unnecessary hardship to, the resident household, (C) the resident household intends to occupy the property as a principal residence for at least 12 months, and (D) the resident household certifies in writing that the household intends to occupy the property for at least 12 months.

"(d) RULES GOVERNING DISPOSITION OF ELIGIBLE MULTIFAMILY HOUSING PROPERTIES.—

"(1) NOTICE TO CLEARINGHOUSES.—Within a reasonable period of time after acquiring title to an eligible multifamily housing property, the Corporation shall provide written notice to clearinghouses. Such notice shall contain basic information about the property, including but not limited to location, number of units (identified by number of bedrooms), and information relating to the estimated fair market value of the property. Each clearinghouse shall make such information available, upon request, to qualifying multifamily purchasers. The Corporation shall allow qualifying multifamily purchasers reasonable access to eligible multifamily housing properties for purposes of inspection.

"(2) EXPRESSION OF SERIOUS INTEREST.—Qualifying multifamily purchasers may give written notice of serious interest in a property during a period ending 90 days after the time the Corporation provides notice under paragraph (1). The notice of serious interest shall be in such form and include such information as the Corporation may prescribe.

"(3) NOTICE OF READINESS FOR SALE.—Upon the expiration of the period referred to in paragraph (2) for a property, the Corporation shall provide written notice to any qualifying multifamily purchaser that has expressed serious interest in the property. Such notice shall specify the minimum terms and conditions for sale of the property.

"(4) OFFERS BY QUALIFYING MULTIFAMILY PURCHASERS.—A qualifying multifamily purchaser receiving notice in accordance with paragraph (3) shall have 45 days (from the date notice is received) to make a bona fide offer to purchase the property. The Corporation shall accept an offer that complies with the terms and conditions established by the Corporation. If, before the expiration of such 45-day period, any offer to purchase a property initially accepted by the Corporation is subsequently rejected or fails (for any reason), the Corporation shall accept another offer to purchase the property made during such period that complies with the terms and conditions established by the Corporation (if such another offer is made). The preceding sentence may not be construed to require a qualifying multifamily purchaser whose offer is accepted during the 45-day period to purchase the property before the expiration of the period.

"(5) EXTENSION OF RESTRICTED OFFER PERIODS.—The Corporation may provide notice to clearinghouses regarding, and offer for sale under the provisions of paragraphs (1) through (4), any eligible multifamily housing property—

"(A) in which no qualifying multifamily purchaser has expressed serious interest during the period referred to in paragraph (2), or

"(B) for which no qualifying multifamily purchaser has made a bona fide offer before the expiration of the period referred to in paragraph (4), except that the Corporation may, in the discretion of the Corporation, alter the duration of the periods referred to in paragraphs (2) and (4) in offering any property for sale under this paragraph.

"(6) SALE OF MULTIFAMILY PROPERTIES TO OTHER PURCHASERS.—

"(A) TIMING.—If, upon the expiration of the period referred to in paragraph (2), no qualifying multifamily purchaser has expressed serious interest in a property, the Corporation may offer to sell the property, individually or in combination with other properties, to any purchaser.

"(B) LIMITATION ON COMBINATION SALES.—The Corporation may not sell in combination with other properties any property for which a qualifying multifamily purchaser has expressed serious interest in purchasing individually.

"(C) EXPIRATION OF OFFER PERIOD.—If, upon the expiration of the period referred to in paragraph (4), no qualifying multifamily purchaser has made an offer to purchase a property, the Corporation may offer to sell the property, individually or in combination with other properties, to any purchaser.

"(7) LOW-INCOME OCCUPANCY REQUIREMENTS.—

"(A) SINGLE PROPERTY PURCHASES.—With respect to any purchase of a single eligible multifamily housing property by a qualifying multifamily purchaser under paragraph (4) or (5)—

"(i) not less than 35 percent of all dwelling units purchased shall be made available for occupancy by and maintained as affordable for low-income and very low-income families during the remaining useful life of the property in which the units are located; provided that

"(ii) not less than 20 percent of all dwelling units purchased shall be made available for occupancy by and maintained as affordable for very low-income families during the remaining useful life of the property in which the units are located.

"(B) AGGREGATION REQUIREMENTS FOR MULTIPROPERTY PURCHASES.—With respect to any purchase under paragraph (4) or (5) by a qualifying multifamily purchaser involving more than one eligible multifamily housing property as a part of the same negotiation, with respect to which the purchaser intends to aggregate the low-income occupancy required under this paragraph over the total number of units so purchased—

"(i) not less than 40 percent of the aggregate number of all dwelling units purchased shall be made available for occupancy by and maintained as affordable for low-income and very low-income families during the remaining useful life of the building or structure in which the units are located; provided that

"(ii) not less than 20 percent of the aggregate number of all dwelling units purchased shall be made available for occupancy by and maintained as affordable for very low-income families during the remaining useful life of the building or structure in which the units are located; and further provided that

"(iii) not less than 10 percent of the dwelling units in each separate property purchased shall be made available for occupancy by and maintained as affordable for low-income families during the remaining useful life of the property in which the units are located.

The requirements of this paragraph shall be contained in the deed or other recorded instrument.

"(8) EXEMPTIONS.—

"(A) CONTINUED OCCUPANCY OF CURRENT RESIDENTS.—No purchaser of an eligible multifamily property may terminate the occupancy of any person residing in the property on the date of purchase for purposes of the meeting low-income occupancy requirement applicable to the property under paragraph (7). The purchaser shall be considered to be in compliance with this subsection if each newly vacant dwelling unit is reserved for low-income occupancy until the low-income occupancy requirement is met.

"(B) FINANCIAL INFEASIBILITY.—The Secretary or the State housing finance agency for the State in which an eligible multifamily housing property is located may temporarily reduce the low-income occupancy requirements under paragraph (7) applicable to the property, if the Secretary or such agency determines that an owner's compliance with such requirements is no longer financially feasible. The owner of the property shall make a good-faith effort to return low-income occupancy to the level required under paragraph (7), and the Secretary or the State housing finance agency, as appropriate, shall review the reduction annually to determine whether financial infeasibility continues to exist.

"(e) RENT LIMITATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—With respect to properties under paragraph (2), rents charged to tenants for units made available for occupancy by very low-income families shall not exceed 30 percent of the adjusted income of a family whose income equals 50 percent of the median income for the area, as determined by the Secretary, with adjustment for family size. Rents charged to tenants for units made available for occupancy by low-income families other than very low-income families shall not exceed 30 percent of the adjusted income of a family whose income equals 65 percent of the median income for the area, as determined by the Secretary, with adjustment for family size.

"(2) APPLICABILITY.—The rent limitations under this subsection shall apply to any eligible single family property sold pursuant to subsection (c)(2)(B)(i) and to any eligible multifamily housing property sold pursuant to subsection (d).

"(f) PREFERENCES FOR SALES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In selling any eligible multifamily housing property or combinations of eligible residential properties, the Corporation shall give preference, among substantially similar offers, to the offer that would reserve the highest percentage of dwelling units for occupancy or purchase by very low-income and low-income families and would retain such affordability for the longest term.

"(2) MULTIPROPERTY PURCHASES.—The Corporation shall give preference, among substantially similar offers made under paragraph (4) or (5) of subsection (d) to purchase more than one eligible multifamily housing property as a part of the same negotiation, to offers made by purchasers who agree to maintain low-income occupancy in each separate property purchased in compliance with the levels required for properties under subsection (d)(7)(A).

"(3) DEFINITION OF SUBSTANTIALLY SIMILAR OFFERS.—For purposes of this subsection, a given offer to purchase eligible multifamily housing property or combinations of such properties shall be considered to be substantially similar to another offer if the purchase price under such given offer is not less than 85 percent of the purchase price under the other offer.

"(g) FINANCING SALES.—

"(1) ASSISTANCE BY CORPORATION.—

"(A) SALE PRICE.—The Corporation shall establish a market value for each eligible multifamily housing property. The Corporation shall sell eligible multifamily housing property at the net realizable market value, except that the Corporation may agree to sell eligible multifamily housing property at a price below the net realizable market value to the extent necessary to facilitate an expedited sale of such property and enable a public agency or nonprofit organization to comply with the low-income occupancy requirements applicable to such property under subsection (d)(7). The Corporation may sell eligible single family property or eligible condominium property to qualifying households, nonprofit organizations, and public agencies without regard to any minimum sale price.

"(B) PURCHASE LOAN.—The Corporation may provide a loan at market interest rates to any purchaser of eligible residential property for all or a portion of the purchase price, which loan shall be secured by a first or second mortgage on the property. The Corporation may provide the loan at below market interest rates to the extent necessary to facilitate an expedited sale of eligible residential property and permit (i) a low-income family to purchase an eligible single family property under subsection (c), or (ii) a public agency or nonprofit organization to comply with the low-income occupancy requirements applicable to the purchase of an eligible residential property under subsection (c) or (d). The Corporation shall provide loans under this subparagraph in a form permitting sale or transfer of the loan to a subsequent holder. In providing financing for combinations of eligible multifamily housing properties under this section, the Corporation may hold a participating share, including a subordinate participation.

"(2) ASSISTANCE BY HUD.—The Secretary shall take such action as may be necessary to expedite the processing of applications for assistance under section 202 of the Housing Act of 1959, the United States Housing Act of 1937, title IV of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act, and the National Housing Act, to enable any organization or individual to purchase eligible residential property.

"(3) ASSISTANCE BY FMHA.—The Secretary of Agriculture shall take such action as may be necessary to expedite the processing of applications for assistance under title V of the Housing Act of 1949 to enable any organization or individual to purchase eligible residential property.

"(4) EXCEPTION TO DISPOSITION RULES.—Notwithstanding the requirements under paragraphs (1), (2), (3), (4), (6), and (8) of subsection (d), the Corporation may provide for the disposition of eligible multifamily housing properties as necessary to facilitate purchase of such properties for use in connection with section 202 of the Housing Act of 1959.

"(5) BULK ACQUISITIONS UNDER HOME INVESTMENT PARTNERSHIPS ACT.—

"(A) PURCHASE PRICE.—In providing for bulk acquisition of eligible single family properties by participating jurisdictions for inclusion in affordable housing activities under title II of the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act, the Corporation shall agree to an amount to be paid for acquisition of such properties. The acquisition price shall include discounts for bulk purchase and for holding of the property such that the acquisition price for each property shall not exceed the fair market value of the property, as valued individually.

"(B) EXEMPTIONS.—To the extent necessary to facilitate sale of properties under this paragraph, the requirements of subsections (c) and (f) and of paragraph (1) of this subsection shall not apply to such transactions and properties involved in such transactions.

"(C) INVENTORIES.—To facilitate acquisitions by such participating jurisdictions, the Corporation shall provide the participating jurisdictions with inventories of eligible single family properties not less than 4 times each year.

"(h) COORDINATION WITH OTHER PROGRAMS.—

"(1) USE OF SECONDARY MARKET AGENCIES.—In the disposition of eligible residential properties, the Corporation (in consultation with the Secretary) shall explore opportunities to work with secondary market entities to provide housing for low- and moderate-income families.

"(2) CREDIT ENHANCEMENT.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—With respect to such properties, the Secretary may, consistent with statutory authorities, work through the Federal Housing Administration, the Government National Mortgage Association, the Federal National Mortgage Association, the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation, and other secondary market entities to develop risk-sharing structures, mortgage insurance, and other credit enhancements to assist in the provision of property ownership, rental, and cooperative housing opportunities for low- and moderate-income families.

"(B) CERTAIN TAX-EXEMPT BONDS.—The Corporation may provide credit enhancements with respect to tax-exempt bonds issued on behalf of nonprofit organizations pursuant to section 103, and subpart A of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1, of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, with respect to the disposition of eligible residential properties for the purposes described in subparagraph (A).

"(3) NATIONAL AFFORDABLE HOUSING ACT.—The Corporation shall coordinate the disposition of eligible residential property under this section with appropriate programs and provisions of, and amendments made by, the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act, including titles II and IV of such Act.

"(i) EXEMPTION FOR CERTAIN TRANSACTIONS WITH INSURED DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS.—The provisions of this section shall not apply with respect to any eligible residential property after the date the Corporation enters into a contract to sell such property to an insured depository institution (as defined in section 3), including any sale in connection with a transfer of all or substantially all of the assets of a closed insured depository institution (including such property) to another insured depository institution.

"(j) TRANSFER OF CERTAIN ELIGIBLE RESIDENTIAL PROPERTIES TO STATE HOUSING AGENCIES FOR DISPOSITION.—Notwithstanding subsections (c), (d), (f), and (g), the Corporation may transfer eligible residential properties to the State housing finance agency or any other State housing agency for the State in which the property is located, or to any local housing agency in whose jurisdiction the property is located. Transfers of eligible residential properties under this subsection may be conducted by direct sale, consignment sale, or any other method the Corporation considers appropriate and shall be subject to the following requirements:

"(1) INDIVIDUAL OR BULK TRANSFER.—The Corporation may transfer such properties individually or in bulk, as agreed to by the Corporation and the State housing finance agency or State or local housing agency.

"(2) ACQUISITION PRICE.—The acquisition price paid by the State housing finance agency or State or local housing agency to the Corporation for properties transferred under this subsection shall be an amount agreed to by the Corporation and the transferee agency.

"(3) LOW-INCOME USE.—Any State housing finance agency or State or local housing agency acquiring properties under this subsection shall offer to sell or transfer the properties only as follows:

"(A) ELIGIBLE SINGLE FAMILY PROPERTIES.—For eligible single family properties—

"(i) to purchasers described under subparagraphs (A) and (B) of subsection (c)(2);

"(ii) if the purchaser is a purchaser described under subsection (c)(2)(B)(i), subject to the rent limitations under subsection (e)(1);

"(iii) subject to the requirement in the second sentence of subsection (c)(2); and

"(iv) subject to recapture by the Corporation of excess proceeds from resale of the properties under paragraphs (3) and (4) of subsection (c).

"(B) ELIGIBLE MULTIFAMILY HOUSING PROPERTIES.—For eligible multifamily housing properties—

"(i) to qualifying multifamily purchasers;

"(ii) subject to the low-income occupancy requirements under subsection (d)(7);

"(iii) subject to the provisions of subsection (d)(8);

"(iv) subject to a preference, among financially acceptable offers, to the offer that would reserve the highest percentage of dwelling units for occupancy or purchase by very low- and low-income families and would retain such affordability for the longest term; and

"(v) subject to the rent limitations under subsection (e)(1).

"(4) AFFORDABILITY.—The State housing finance agency or State or local housing agency shall endeavor to make the properties transferred under this subsection more affordable to low-income families based upon the extent to which the acquisition price of a property under paragraph (2) is less than the market value of the property.

"(k) EXCEPTION FOR SALES TO NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS AND PUBLIC AGENCIES.—

"(1) SUSPENSION OF OFFER PERIODS.—With respect to any eligible residential property, the Corporation may (in the discretion of the Corporation) suspend any of the requirements of paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (c) and paragraphs (1) through (4) of subsection (d), as applicable, but only to the extent that for the duration of the suspension the Corporation negotiates the sale of the property to a nonprofit organization or public agency. If the property is not sold pursuant to such negotiations, the requirements of any provisions suspended shall apply upon the termination of the suspension. Any time period referred to in such subsections shall toll for the duration of any suspension under this paragraph.

"(2) USE RESTRICTIONS.—

"(A) ELIGIBLE SINGLE FAMILY PROPERTY.—Any eligible single family property sold under this subsection shall be (i) made available for occupancy by and maintained as affordable for low-income families for the remaining useful life of the property, or made available for purchase by such families, (ii) subject to the rent limitations under subsection (e)(1), (iii) subject to the requirements relating to residency of a qualifying household under subsection (p)(12) and to residency of a low-income family under subsection (c)(2)(B), and (iv) subject to recapture by the Corporation of excess proceeds from resale of the property under paragraphs (3) and (4) of subsection (c).

"(B) ELIGIBLE MULTIFAMILY HOUSING PROPERTY.—Any eligible multifamily housing property sold under this subsection shall comply with the low-income occupancy requirements under subsection (d)(7) and shall be subject to the rent limitations under subsection (e)(1).

"(l) RULES GOVERNING DISPOSITION OF ELIGIBLE CONDOMINIUM PROPERTY.—

"(1) NOTICE TO CLEARINGHOUSES.—Within a reasonable period of time after acquiring title to an eligible condominium property, the Corporation shall provide written notice to clearinghouses. Such notice shall contain basic information about the property. Each clearinghouse shall make such information available, upon request, to purchasers described in subparagraphs (A) through (D) of paragraph (2). The Corporation shall allow such purchasers reasonable access to an eligible condominium property for purposes of inspection.

"(2) OFFERS TO SELL.—For the 180-day period following the date on which the Corporation makes an eligible condominium property available for sale, the Corporation may offer to sell the property, at the discretion of the Corporation, to 1 or more of the following purchasers:

"(A) Qualifying households.

"(B) Nonprofit organizations.

"(C) Public agencies.

"(D) For-profit entities.

"(3) LOW-INCOME OCCUPANCY REQUIREMENTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), any nonprofit organization, public agency, or for-profit entity that purchases an eligible condominium property shall (i) make the property available for occupancy by and maintain it as affordable for low-income families for the remaining useful life of the property, or (ii) make the property available for purchase by any such family who, except as provided in paragraph (5), agrees to occupy the property as a principal residence for at least 12 months and certifies in writing that the family intends to occupy the property for at least 12 months. The restriction described in clause (i) of the preceding sentence shall be contained in the deed or other recorded instrument.

"(B) MULTIPLE-UNIT PURCHASES.—If any nonprofit organization, public agency, or for-profit entity purchases more than 1 eligible condominium property as a part of the same negotiation or purchase, the Corporation may (in the discretion of the Corporation) waive the requirement under subparagraph (A) and provide instead that not less than 35 percent of all eligible condominium properties purchased shall be (i) made available for occupancy by and maintained as affordable for low-income families for the remaining useful life of the property, or (ii) made available for purchase by any such family who, except as provided in paragraph (5), agrees to occupy the property as a principal residence for at least 12 months and certifies in writing that the family intends to occupy the property for at least 12 months. The restriction described clause (i) of the preceding sentence shall be contained in the deed or other recorded instrument.

"(C) SALE TO OTHER PURCHASERS.—If, upon the expiration of the 180-day period referred to in paragraph (2), no purchaser described in subparagraphs (A) through (D) of paragraph (2) has made a bona fide offer to purchase the property, the Corporation may offer to sell the property to any other purchaser.

"(4) RECAPTURE OF PROFITS FROM RESALE.—Except as provided in paragraph (5), if any eligible condominium property sold (A) to a qualifying household, or (B) to a low-income family pursuant to paragraph (3)(A)(ii) or (3)(B)(ii), is resold by the qualifying household or low-income family during the 1-year period beginning upon initial acquisition by the household or family, the Corporation shall recapture 75 percent of the amount of any proceeds from the resale that exceed the sum of (i) the original sale price for the acquisition of the property by the qualifying household or low-income family, (ii) the costs of any improvements to the property made after the date of the acquisition, and (iii) any closing costs in connection with the acquisition.

"(5) EXCEPTION TO RECAPTURE REQUIREMENT.—The Corporation (or its successor) may in its discretion waive the applicability to any qualifying household or low-income family of the requirement under paragraph (4) and the requirements relating to residency of a qualifying household or low-income family (under subsection (p)(12) and paragraph (3) of this subsection, respectively). The Corporation may grant any such a waiver only for good cause shown, including any necessary relocation of the qualifying household or low-income family.

"(6) LIMITATIONS ON MULTIPLE UNIT PURCHASES.—The Corporation may not sell or offer to sell as part of the same negotiation or purchase any eligible condominium properties that are not located in the same condominium project (as such term is defined in section 604 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1980). The preceding sentence may not be construed to require all eligible condominium properties offered or sold as part of the same negotiation or purchase to be located in the same structure.

"(7) RENT LIMITATIONS.—Rents charged to tenants of eligible condominium properties made available for occupancy by very low-income families shall not exceed 30 percent of the adjusted income of a family whose income equals 50 percent of the median income for the area, as determined by the Secretary, with adjustment for family size. Rents charged to tenants of eligible condominium properties made available for occupancy by low-income families other than very low-income families shall not exceed 30 percent of the adjusted income of a family whose income equals 65 percent of the median income for the area, as determined by the Secretary, with adjustment for family size.

"(m) LIABILITY PROVISIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The provisions of this section, or any failure by the Corporation to comply with such provisions, may not be used by any person to attack or defeat any title to property after it is conveyed by the Corporation.

"(2) LOW-INCOME OCCUPANCY.—The low-income occupancy requirements under subsections (c), (d), (j)(3), (k)(2), and (l)(3) shall be judicially enforceable against purchasers of property under this section and their successors in interest by affected very low- and low-income families, State housing finance agencies, and any agency, corporation, or authority of the United States. The parties specified in the preceding sentence shall be entitled to reasonable attorney fees upon prevailing in any such judicial action.

"(3) CLEARINGHOUSES.—A clearinghouse shall not be subject to suit for its failure to comply with the requirements of this section.

"(4) CORPORATION.—The Corporation shall not be liable to any depositor, creditor, or shareholder of any insured depository institution for which the Corporation has been appointed receiver, or any claimant against such an institution, because the disposition of assets of the institution under this section affects the amount of return from the assets.

"(n) AFFORDABLE HOUSING PROGRAM OFFICE.—The Corporation shall establish an Affordable Housing Program Office within the Corporation to carry out the provisions of this section and shall dedicate certain staff of the Corporation to the office.

"(o) REPORT.—To the extent applicable, in the annual report submitted by the Secretary to the Congress under section 8 of the Department of Housing and Urban Development Act, the Secretary shall include a detailed description of any activities under this section, including recommendations for any additional authority the Secretary considers necessary to implement the provisions of this section.

"(p) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:

"(1) ADJUSTED INCOME AND INCOME.—The terms 'adjusted income' and 'income' shall have the meaning given such terms in section 3(b) of the United States Housing Act of 1937.

"(2) CLEARINGHOUSE.—The term 'clearinghouse' means—

"(A) the State housing finance agency for the State in which an eligible residential property or eligible condominium property is located;

"(B) the Office of Community Investment (or other comparable division) within the Federal Housing Finance Board; and

"(C) any national nonprofit organizations (including any nonprofit entity established by the corporation established under title IX of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1968) that the Corporation determines has the capacity to act as a clearinghouse for information.

"(3) CORPORATION.—The term 'Corporation' means the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation acting in its corporate capacity or its capacity as receiver.

"(4) ELIGIBLE CONDOMINIUM PROPERTY.—The term 'eligible condominium property' means a condominium unit, as such term is defined in section 604 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1980—

"(A) to which such Corporation acquires title; and

"(B) that has an appraised value that does not exceed the applicable dollar amount set forth in the first sentence of section 203(b)(2) of the National Housing Act (which may, in the discretion of the Corporation, take into consideration any increase of such amount for high-cost areas).

"(5) ELIGIBLE MULTIFAMILY HOUSING PROPERTY.—The term 'eligible multifamily housing property' means a property consisting of more than 4 dwelling units—

"(A) to which the Corporation acquires title; and

"(B) that has an appraised value that does not exceed the applicable dollar amount set forth in section 221(d)(3)(ii) of the National Housing Act for elevator-type structures (which may, in the discretion of the Corporation, take into consideration any increase of such amount for high-cost areas).

"(6) ELIGIBLE RESIDENTIAL PROPERTY.—The term 'eligible residential property' includes eligible single family properties and eligible multifamily housing properties.

"(7) ELIGIBLE SINGLE FAMILY PROPERTY.—The term 'eligible single family property' means a 1- to 4-family residence (including a manufactured home)—

"(A) to which the Corporation acquires title; and

"(B) that has an appraised value that does not exceed the applicable dollar amount set forth in the first sentence of section 203(b)(2) of the National Housing Act (which may, in the discretion of the Corporation, take into consideration any increase of such amount for high-cost areas).

"(8) LOW-INCOME FAMILIES.—The term 'low-income families' means families and individuals whose incomes do not exceed 80 percent of the median income of the area involved, as determined by the Secretary, with adjustment for family size.

"(9) NET REALIZABLE MARKET VALUE.—The term 'net realizable market value' means a price below the market value that takes into account (A) any reductions in holding costs resulting from the expedited sale of a property, including foregone real estate taxes, insurance, maintenance costs, security costs, and loss of use of funds, and (B) the avoidance, if applicable, of fees paid to real estate brokers, auctioneers, or other individuals or organizations involved in the sale of property owned by the Corporation.

"(10) NONPROFIT ORGANIZATION.—The term 'nonprofit organization' means a private organization (including a limited equity cooperative)—

"(A) no part of the earnings of which inures to the benefit of any member, shareholder, founder, contributor, or individual; and

"(B) that is approved by the Corporation as to financial responsibility.

"(11) PUBLIC AGENCY.—The term 'public agency' means any Federal, State, local, or other governmental entity, and includes any public housing agency.

"(12) QUALIFYING HOUSEHOLD.—The term 'qualifying household' means a household—

"(A) who intends to occupy eligible single family property as a principal residence;

"(B) who agrees to occupy the property as a principal residence for at least 12 months;

"(C) who certifies in writing that the household intends to occupy the property as a principal residence for at least 12 months; and

"(D) whose income does not exceed 115 percent of the median income for the area, as determined by the Secretary, with adjustment for family size.

"(13) QUALIFYING MULTIFAMILY PURCHASER.—The term 'qualifying multifamily purchaser' means—

"(A) a public agency;

"(B) a nonprofit organization; or

"(C) a for-profit entity, which makes a commitment (for itself or any related entity) to comply with the low-income occupancy requirements under subsection (d)(7) for any eligible multifamily housing property for which an offer to purchase is made during or after the periods specified under subsection (d).

"(14) SECRETARY.—The term 'Secretary' means the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

"(15) STATE HOUSING FINANCE AGENCY.—The term 'State housing finance agency' means the public agency, authority, corporation, or other instrumentality of a State that has the authority to provide residential mortgage loan financing throughout the State.

"(16) VERY LOW-INCOME FAMILIES.—The term 'very low-income families' means families and individuals whose incomes do not exceed 50 percent of the median income of the area involved, as determined by the Secretary, with adjustment for family size.".

(b) COORDINATION.—The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Resolution Trust Corporation shall consult and coordinate with each other in carrying out their respective responsibilities under the affordable housing programs under section 42 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act and section 21A(c) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act. Such corporations shall develop any procedures, and may enter into any agreements, necessary to provide for the coordinated, efficient, and effective operation of such programs.

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE ACT.—Section 11(d) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(d)) is amended—

(A) in paragraph (2)(B), in the matter preceding clause (i), by inserting "(subject to the provisions of section 42)" before the comma; and

(B) in paragraph (2)(E), by inserting "(subject to the provisions of section 42)" before the first comma.

(2) HOUSING ACT OF 1959.—Section 202(h)(2) of the Housing Act of 1959 (12 U.S.C. 1701q(h)(2)), as amended by section 801(a) of the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act, is amended by inserting "or from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation under section 42 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act" after "Federal Home Loan Bank Act".

SEC. 251. ADDITIONAL WHISTLEBLOWER PROTECTIONS.

(a) ADDITIONAL COVERAGE ESTABLISHED UNDER FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE ACT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 33(a) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1831j(a)) is amended to read as follows:

"(a) IN GENERAL.—

"(1) EMPLOYEES OF DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS.—No insured depository institution may discharge or otherwise discriminate against any employee with respect to compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment because the employee (or any person acting pursuant to the request of the employee) provided information to any Federal banking agency or to the Attorney General regarding any possible violation of any law or regulation by the depository institution or any director, officer, or employee of the institution.

"(2) EMPLOYEES OF BANKING AGENCIES.—No Federal banking agency, Federal home loan bank, or Federal Reserve bank may discharge or otherwise discriminate against any employee with respect to compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment because the employee (or any person acting pursuant to the request of the employee) provided information to any such agency or bank or to the Attorney General regarding any possible violation of any law or regulation by—

"(A) any depository institution or any such bank or agency;

"(B) any director, officer, or employee of any depository institution or any such bank; or

"(C) any officer or employee of the agency which employs such employee.".

(2) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 33(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1831j(c)) is amended by inserting ", Federal home loan bank, Federal Reserve bank, or Federal banking agency" after "depository institution".

(3) DEFINITION.—Section 33 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1831j) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(e) FEDERAL BANKING AGENCY DEFINED.—For purposes of subsections (a) and (c), the term 'Federal banking agency' means the Corporation, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, the Federal Housing Finance Board, the Comptroller of the Currency, and the Director of the Office of Thrift Supervision.".

(4) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Paragraph (2) of section 33(a) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (as added under the amendment made by paragraph (1)) shall be treated as having taken effect on January 1, 1987, and for purposes of any cause of action arising under such paragraph (as so effective) before the date of the enactment of this Act, the 2-year period referred to in section 33(b) of such Act shall be deemed to begin on such date of enactment.

(b) ADDITIONAL COVERAGE ESTABLISHED UNDER FEDERAL CREDIT UNION ACT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 213(a) of the Federal Credit Union Act (12 U.S.C. 1790b(a)) is amended to read as follows:

"(a) IN GENERAL.—

"(1) EMPLOYEES OF CREDIT UNIONS.—No insured credit union may discharge or otherwise discriminate against any employee with respect to compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment because the employee (or any person acting pursuant to the request of the employee) provided information to the Board or the Attorney General regarding any possible violation of any law or regulation by the credit union or any director, officer, or employee of the credit union.

"(2) EMPLOYEES OF THE ADMINISTRATION.—The Administration may not discharge or otherwise discriminate against any employee (including any employee of the National Credit Union Central Liquidity Facility) with respect to compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment because the employee (or any person acting pursuant to the request of the employee) provided information to the Administration or the Attorney General regarding any possible violation of any law or regulation by—

"(A) any credit union the Administration;

"(B) any director, officer, or employee of any depository institution or any such bank; or

"(C) any officer or employee of the Administration.".

(2) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 213(c) of the Federal Credit Union Act (12 U.S.C. 1790b(c)) is amended by inserting "or the Administration" after "credit union".

(c) COVERAGE FOR EMPLOYEES OF RTC, OVERSIGHT BOARD, AND RTC CONTRACTORS.—

(1) COVERAGE ESTABLISHED.—Section 21A of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(q) RTC, OVERSIGHT BOARD, AND RTC CONTRACTOR EMPLOYEE PROTECTION REMEDY.—

"(1) PROHIBITION AGAINST DISCRIMINATION.—The Corporation, the Oversight Board, and any person who is performing, directly or indirectly, any function or service on behalf of the Corporation or the Oversight Board may not discharge or otherwise discriminate against any employee (including any employee of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation on assignment to the Corporation under this section or any personnel referred to in subparagraphs (C) and (F) of subsection (a)(5)) with respect to compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment because the employee (or any person acting pursuant to the request of the employee) provided information to the Corporation, the Oversight Board, the Attorney General, or any appropriate Federal banking agency (as defined in section 3(q) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act) regarding any possible violation of any law or regulation by the Corporation, the Oversight Board, or such person or any director, officer, or employee of the Corporation, the Oversight Board, or the person.

"(2) ENFORCEMENT.—Any employee or former employee who believes that such employee has been discharged or discriminated against in violation of paragraph (1) may file a civil action in the appropriate United States district court before the end of the 2-year period beginning on the date of such discharge or discrimination.

"(3) REMEDIES.—If the district court determines that a violation has occurred, the court may order the Corporation or the person which committed the violation to—

"(A) reinstate the employee to the employee's former position;

"(B) pay compensatory damages; or

"(C) take other appropriate actions to remedy any past discrimination.

"(4) LIMITATION.—The protections of this section shall not apply to any employee who—

"(A) deliberately causes or participates in the alleged violation of law or regulation; or

"(B) knowingly or recklessly provides substantially false information to the Corporation, the Attorney General, or any appropriate Federal banking agency.".

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Subsection (q) of section 21A of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (as added under the amendment made by paragraph (1)) shall be treated as having taken effect on August 9, 1989, and for purposes of any cause of action arising under such subsection (as so effective) before the date of the enactment of this Act, the 2-year period referred to in section 21A(q)(2) of such Act shall be deemed to begin on such date of enactment.

Subtitle F—Truth in Savings

SEC. 261. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Truth in Savings Act".

SEC. 262. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress hereby finds that economic stability would be enhanced, competition between depository institutions would be improved, and the ability of the consumer to make informed decisions regarding deposit accounts, and to verify accounts, would be strengthened if there was uniformity in the disclosure of terms and conditions on which interest is paid and fees are assessed in connection with such accounts.

(b) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this Act to require the clear and uniform disclosure of—

(1) the rates of interest which are payable on deposit accounts by depository institutions; and

(2) the fees that are assessable against deposit accounts, so that consumers can make a meaningful comparison between the competing claims of depository institutions with regard to deposit accounts.

SEC. 263. DISCLOSURE OF INTEREST RATES AND TERMS OF ACCOUNTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsection (b), each advertisement, announcement, or solicitation initiated by any depository institution or deposit broker relating to any demand or interest-bearing account offered by an insured depository institution which includes any reference to a specific rate of interest payable on amounts deposited in such account, or to a specific yield or rate of earnings on amounts so deposited, shall state the following information, to the extent applicable, in a clear and conspicuous manner:

(1) The annual percentage yield.

(2) The period during which such annual percentage yield is in effect.

(3) All minimum account balance and time requirements which must be met in order to earn the advertised yield (and, in the case of accounts for which more than 1 yield is stated, each annual percentage yield and the account minimum balance requirement associated with each such yield shall be in close proximity and have equal prominence).

(4) The minimum amount of the initial deposit which is required to open the account in order to obtain the yield advertised, if such minimum amount is greater than the minimum balance necessary to earn the advertised yield.

(5) A statement that regular fees or other conditions could reduce the yield.

(6) A statement that an interest penalty is required for early withdrawal.

(b) BROADCAST AND ELECTRONIC MEDIA AND OUTDOOR ADVERTISING EXCEPTION.—The Board may, by regulation, exempt advertisements, announcements, or solicitations made by any broadcast or electronic medium or outdoor advertising display not on the premises of the depository institution from any disclosure requirements described in paragraph (4) or (5) of subsection (a) if the Board finds that any such disclosure would be unnecessarily burdensome.

(c) MISLEADING DESCRIPTIONS OF FREE OR NO-COST ACCOUNTS PROHIBITED.—No advertisement, announcement, or solicitation made by any depository institution or deposit broker may refer to or describe an account as a free or no-cost account (or words of similar meaning) if—

(1) in order to avoid fees or service charges for any period—

(A) a minimum balance must be maintained in the account during such period; or

(B) the number of transactions during such period may not exceed a maximum number; or

(2) any regular service or transaction fee is imposed.

(d) MISLEADING OR INACCURATE ADVERTISEMENTS, ETC., PROHIBITED.—No depository institution or deposit broker shall make any advertisement, announcement, or solicitation relating to a deposit account that is inaccurate or misleading or that misrepresents its deposit contracts.

SEC. 264. ACCOUNT SCHEDULE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Each depository institution shall maintain a schedule of fees, charges, interest rates, and terms and conditions applicable to each class of accounts offered by the depository institution, in accordance with the requirements of this section and regulations which the Board shall prescribe. The Board shall specify, in regulations, which fees, charges, penalties, terms, conditions, and account restrictions must be included in a schedule required under this subsection. A depository institution need not include in such schedule any information not specified in such regulation.

(b) INFORMATION ON FEES AND CHARGES.—The schedule required under subsection (a) with respect to any account shall contain the following information:

(1) A description of all fees, periodic service charges, and penalties which may be charged or assessed against the account (or against the account holder in connection with such account), the amount of any such fees, charge, or penalty (or the method by which such amount will be calculated), and the conditions under which any such amount will be assessed.

(2) All minimum balance requirements that affect fees, charges, and penalties, including a clear description of how each such minimum balance is calculated.

(3) Any minimum amount required with respect to the initial deposit in order to open the account.

(c) INFORMATION ON INTEREST RATES.—The schedule required under subsection (a) with respect to any account shall include the following information:

(1) Any annual percentage yield.

(2) The period during which any such annual percentage yield will be in effect.

(3) Any annual rate of simple interest.

(4) The frequency with which interest will be compounded and credited.

(5) A clear description of the method used to determine the balance on which interest is paid.

(6) The information described in paragraphs (1) through (4) with respect to any period after the end of the period referred to in paragraph (2) (or the method for computing any information described in any such paragraph), if applicable.

(7) Any minimum balance which must be maintained to earn the rates and obtain the yields disclosed pursuant to this subsection and a clear description of how any such minimum balance is calculated.

(8) A clear description of any minimum time requirement which must be met in order to obtain the yields disclosed pursuant to this subsection and any information described in paragraph (1), (2), (3), or (4) that will apply if any time requirement is not met.

(9) A statement, if applicable, that any interest which has accrued but has not been credited to an account at the time of a withdrawal from the account will not be paid by the depository institution or credited to the account by reason of such withdrawal.

(10) Any provision or requirement relating to nonpayment of interest, including any charge or penalty for early withdrawal, and the conditions under which any such charge or penalty may be assessed.

(d) OTHER INFORMATION.—The schedule required under subsection (a) shall include such other disclosures as the Board may determine to be necessary to allow consumers to understand and compare accounts, including frequency of interest rate adjustments, account restrictions, and renewal policies for time accounts.

(e) STYLE AND FORMAT.—Schedules required under subsection (a) shall be written in clear and plain language and be presented in a format designed to allow consumers to readily understand the terms of the accounts offered.

SEC. 265. DISCLOSURE REQUIREMENTS FOR CERTAIN ACCOUNTS.

The Board shall require, in regulations which the Board shall prescribe, such modification in the disclosure requirements under this Act relating to annual percentage yield as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this Act in the case of—

(1) accounts with respect to which determination of annual percentage yield is based on an annual rate of interest that is guaranteed for a period of less than 1 year;

(2) variable rate accounts;

(3) accounts which, pursuant to law, do not guarantee payment of a stated rate;

(4) multiple rate accounts; and

(5) accounts with respect to which determination of annual percentage yield is based on an annual rate of interest that is guaranteed for a stated term.

SEC. 266. DISTRIBUTION OF SCHEDULES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—A schedule required under section 264 for an appropriate account shall be—

(1) made available to any person upon request;

(2) provided to any potential customer before an account is opened or a service is rendered; and

(3) provided to the depositor, in the case of any time deposit which is renewable at maturity without notice from the depositor, at least 30 days before the date of maturity.

(b) DISTRIBUTION IN CASE OF CERTAIN INITIAL DEPOSITS.—If—

(1) a depositor is not physically present at an office of a depository institution at the time an initial deposit is accepted with respect to an account established by or for such person; and

(2) the schedule required under section 264(a) has not been furnished previously to such depositor, the depository institution shall mail the schedule to the depositor at the address shown on the records of the depository institution for such account no later than 10 days after the date of the initial deposit.

(c) DISTRIBUTION OF NOTICE OF CERTAIN CHANGES.—If—

(1) any change is made in any term or condition which is required to be disclosed in the schedule required under section 264(a) with respect to any account; and

(2) the change may reduce the yield or adversely affect any holder of the account, all account holders who may be affected by such change shall be notified and provided with a description of the change by mail at least 30 days before the change takes effect.

(d) DISTRIBUTION IN CASE OF ACCOUNTS ESTABLISHED BY MORE THAN 1 INDIVIDUAL OR BY A GROUP.—If an account is established by more than 1 individual or for a person other than an individual, any distribution described in this section with respect to such account meets the requirements of this section if the distribution is made to 1 of the individuals who established the account or 1 individual representative of the person on whose behalf such account was established.

(e) NOTICE TO ACCOUNT HOLDERS AS OF THE EFFECTIVE DATE OF REGULATIONS.—For any account for which the depository institution delivers an account statement on a quarterly or more frequent basis, the depository institution shall include on or with any regularly scheduled mailing posted or delivered within 180 days after publication of regulations issued by the Board in final form, a statement that the account holder has the right to request an account schedule containing the terms, charges, and interest rates of the account, and that the account holder may wish to request such an account schedule.

SEC. 267. PAYMENT OF INTEREST.

(a) CALCULATED ON FULL AMOUNT OF PRINCIPAL.—Interest on an interest-bearing account at any depository institution shall be calculated by such institution on the full amount of principal in the account for each day of the stated calculation period at the rate or rates of interest disclosed pursuant to this Act.

(b) NO PARTICULAR METHOD OF COMPOUNDING INTEREST REQUIRED.—Subsection (a) shall not be construed as prohibiting or requiring the use of any particular method of compounding or crediting of interest.

(c) DATE BY WHICH INTEREST MUST ACCRUE.—Interest on accounts that are subject to this Act shall begin to accrue not later than the business day specified for interest-bearing accounts in section 606 of the Expedited Funds Availability Act, subject to subsections (b) and (c) of such section.

SEC. 268. PERIODIC STATEMENTS.

Each depository institution shall include on or with each periodic statement provided to each account holder at such institution a clear and conspicuous disclosure of the following information with respect to such account:

(1) The annual percentage yield earned.

(2) The amount of interest earned.

(3) The amount of any fees or charges imposed.

(4) The number of days in the reporting period.

SEC. 269. REGULATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) REGULATIONS REQUIRED.—Before the end of the 9-month period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, the Board, after consultation with each agency referred to in section 270(a) and public notice and opportunity for comment, shall prescribe regulations to carry out the purpose and provisions of this Act.

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE OF REGULATIONS.—The regulations prescribed under paragraph (1) shall take effect not later than 6 months after publication in final form.

(3) CONTENTS OF REGULATIONS.—The regulations prescribed under paragraph (1) may contain such classifications, differentiations, or other provisions, and may provide for such adjustments and exceptions for any class of accounts as, in the judgment of the Board, are necessary or proper to carry out the purposes of this Act, to prevent circumvention or evasion of the requirements of this Act, or to facilitate compliance with the requirements of this Act.

(4) DATE OF APPLICABILITY.—The provisions of this Act shall not apply with respect to any depository institution before the effective date of regulations prescribed by the Board under this subsection (or by the National Credit Union Administration Board under section 12(b), in the case of any depository institution described in clause (iv) of section 19(b)(1)(A) of the Federal Reserve Act).

(b) MODEL FORMS AND CLAUSES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Board shall publish model forms and clauses for common disclosures to facilitate compliance with this Act. In devising such forms, the Board shall consider the use by depository institutions of data processing or similar automated machines.

(2) USE OF FORMS AND CLAUSES DEEMED IN COMPLIANCE.—Nothing in this Act may be construed to require a depository institution to use any such model form or clause prescribed by the Board under this subsection. A depository institution shall be deemed to be in compliance with the disclosure provisions of this Act if the depository institution—

(A) uses any appropriate model form or clause as published by the Board; or

(B) uses any such model form or clause and changes it by—

(i) deleting any information which is not required by this Act; or

(ii) rearranging the format,

if in making such deletion or rearranging the format, the depository institution does not affect the substance, clarity, or meaningful sequence of the disclosure.

(3) PUBLIC NOTICE AND OPPORTUNITY FOR COMMENT.—Model disclosure forms and clauses shall be adopted by the Board after duly given notice in the Federal Register and an opportunity for public comment in accordance with section 553 of title 5, United States Code.

SEC. 270. ADMINISTRATIVE ENFORCEMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Compliance with the requirements imposed under this Act shall be enforced under—

(1) section 8 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act—

(A) by the appropriate Federal banking agency (as defined in section 3(q) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act) in the case of insured depository institutions (as defined in section 3(c)(2) of such Act);

(B) by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation in the case of depository institutions described in clause (i), (ii), or (iii) of section 19(b)(1)(A) of the Federal Reserve Act which are not insured depository institutions (as defined in section 3(c)(2) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act); and

(C) by the Director of the Office of Thrift Supervision in the case of depository institutions described in clause (v) and or (vi) of section 19(b)(1)(A) of the Federal Reserve Act which are not insured depository institutions (as defined in section 3(c)(2) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act); and

(2) the Federal Credit Union Act, by the National Credit Union Administration Board in the case of depository institutions described in clause (iv) of section 19(b)(1)(A) of the Federal Reserve Act.

(b) ADDITIONAL ENFORCEMENT POWERS.—

(1) VIOLATION OF THIS ACT TREATED AS VIOLATION OF OTHER ACTS.—For purposes of the exercise by any agency referred to in subsection (a) of such agency's powers under any Act referred to in such subsection, a violation of a requirement imposed under this Act shall be deemed to be a violation of a requirement imposed under that Act.

(2) ENFORCEMENT AUTHORITY UNDER OTHER ACTS.—In addition to the powers of any agency referred to in subsection (a) under any provision of law specifically referred to in such subsection, each such agency may exercise, for purposes of enforcing compliance with any requirement imposed under this Act, any other authority conferred on such agency by law.

(c) REGULATIONS BY AGENCIES OTHER THAN THE BOARD.—The authority of the Board to issue regulations under this Act does not impair the authority of any other agency referred to in subsection (a) to make rules regarding its own procedures in enforcing compliance with the requirements imposed under this Act.

SEC. 271. CIVIL LIABILITY.

(a) CIVIL LIABILITY.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, any depository institution which fails to comply with any requirement imposed under this Act or any regulation prescribed under this Act with respect to any person who is an account holder is liable to such person in an amount equal to the sum of—

(1) any actual damage sustained by such person as a result of the failure;

(2)(A) in the case of an individual action, such additional amount as the court may allow, except that the liability under this subparagraph shall not be less than $100 nor greater than $1,000; or

(B) in the case of a class action, such amount as the court may allow, except that—

(i) as to each member of the class, no minimum recovery shall be applicable; and

(ii) the total recovery under this subparagraph in any class action or series of class actions arising out of the same failure to comply by the same depository institution shall not be more than the lesser of $500,000 or 1 percent of the net worth of the depository institution involved; and

(3) in the case of any successful action to enforce any liability under paragraph (1) or (2), the costs of the action, together with a reasonable attorney's fee as determined by the court.

(b) CLASS ACTION AWARDS.—In determining the amount of any award in any class action, the court shall consider, among other relevant factors—

(1) the amount of any actual damages awarded;

(2) the frequency and persistence of failures of compliance;

(3) the resources of the depository institution;

(4) the number of persons adversely affected; and

(5) the extent to which the failure of compliance was intentional.

(c) BONA FIDE ERRORS.—

(1) GENERAL RULE.—A depository institution may not be held liable in any action brought under this section for a violation of this Act if the depository institution demonstrates by a preponderance of the evidence that the violation was not intentional and resulted from a bona fide error, notwithstanding the maintenance of procedures reasonably adapted to avoid any such error.

(2) EXAMPLES.—Examples of a bona fide error include clerical, calculation, computer malfunction and programming, and printing errors, except that an error of legal judgment with respect to a depository institution's obligation under this Act is not a bona fide error.

(d) NO LIABILITY FOR OVERPAYMENT.—A depository institution may not be held liable in any action under this section for a violation of this Act if the violation has resulted in—

(1) an interest payment to the account holder in an amount greater than the amount determined under any disclosed rate of interest applicable with respect to such payment; or

(2) a charge to the consumer in an amount less than the amount determined under the disclosed charge or fee schedule applicable with respect to such charge.

(e) JURISDICTION.—Any action under this section may be brought in any United States district court, or in any other court of competent jurisdiction, within 1 year after the date of the occurrence of the violation involved.

(f) RELIANCE ON BOARD RULINGS.—No provision of this section imposing any liability shall apply to any act done or omitted in good faith in conformity with any regulation or order, or any interpretation of any regulation or order, of the Board, or in conformity with any interpretation or approval by an official or employee of the Board duly authorized by the Board to issue such interpretation or approval under procedures prescribed by the Board, notwithstanding, the fact that after such act or omission has occurred, such regulation, order, interpretation, or approval is amended, rescinded, or determined by judicial or other authority to be invalid for any reason.

(g) NOTIFICATION OF AND ADJUSTMENT FOR ERRORS.—A depository institution shall not be liable under this section or section 270 for any failure to comply with any requirement imposed under this Act with respect to any account if—

(1) before—

(A) the end of the 60-day period beginning on the date on which the depository institution discovered the failure to comply;

(B) any action is instituted against the depository institution by the account holder under this section with respect to such failure to comply; and

(C) any written notice of such failure to comply is received by the depository institution from the account holder, the depository institution notifies the account holder of the failure of such institution to comply with such requirement; and

(2) the depository institution makes such adjustments as may be necessary with respect to such account to ensure that—

(A) the account holder will not be liable for any amount in excess of the amount actually disclosed with respect to any fee or charge;

(B) the account holder will not be liable for any fee or charge imposed under any condition not actually disclosed; and

(C) interest on amounts in such account will accrue at the annual percentage yield, and under the conditions, actually disclosed (and credit will be provided for interest already accrued at a different annual percentage yield and under different conditions than the yield or conditions disclosed).

(h) MULTIPLE INTERESTS IN 1 ACCOUNT.—If more than 1 person holds an interest in any account—

(1) the minimum and maximum amounts of liability under subsection (a)(2)(A) for any failure to comply with the requirements of this Act shall apply with respect to such account; and

(2) the court shall determine the manner in which the amount of any such liability with respect to such account shall be distributed among such persons.

(i) CONTINUING FAILURE TO DISCLOSE.—

(1) CERTAIN CONTINUING FAILURES TREATED AS 1 VIOLATION.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the continuing failure of any depository institution to disclose any particular term required to be disclosed under this Act with respect to a particular account shall be treated as a single violation for purposes of determining the amount of any liability of such institution under subsection (a) for such failure to disclose.

(2) SUBSEQUENT FAILURE TO DISCLOSE.—The continuing failure of any depository institution to disclose any particular term required to be disclosed under this Act with respect to a particular account after judgment has been rendered in favor of the account holder in connection with a prior failure to disclose such term with respect to such account shall be treated as a subsequent violation for purposes of determining liability under subsection (a).

(3) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 270.—This subsection shall not limit or otherwise affect the enforcement power under section 270 of any agency referred to in subsection (a) of such section.

SEC. 272. CREDIT UNIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—No regulation prescribed by the Board under this Act shall apply directly with respect to any depository institution described in clause (iv) of section 19(b)(1)(A) of the Federal Reserve Act.

(b) REGULATIONS PRESCRIBED BY THE NCUA.—Within 90 days of the effective date of any regulation prescribed by the Board under this Act, the National Credit Union Administration Board shall prescribe a regulation substantially similar to the regulation prescribed by the Board taking into account the unique nature of credit unions and the limitations under which they may pay dividends on member accounts.

SEC. 273. EFFECT ON STATE LAW.

The provisions of this Act do not supersede any provisions of the law of any State relating to the disclosure of yields payable or terms for accounts to the extent such State law requires the disclosure of such yields or terms for accounts, except to the extent that those laws are inconsistent with the provisions of this Act, and then only to the extent of the inconsistency. The Board may determine whether such inconsistencies exist.

SEC. 274. DEFINITIONS.

For the purposes of this Act—

(1) ACCOUNT.—The term "account" means any account offered to 1 or more individuals or an unincorporated nonbusiness association of individuals by a depository institution into which a customer deposits funds, including demand accounts, time accounts, negotiable order of withdrawal accounts, and share draft accounts.

(2) ANNUAL PERCENTAGE YIELD.—The term "annual percentage yield" means the total amount of interest that would be received on a $100 deposit, based on the annual rate of simple interest and the frequency of compounding for a 365-day period, expressed as a percentage calculated by a method which shall be prescribed by the Board in regulations.

(3) ANNUAL RATE OF SIMPLE INTEREST.—The term "annual rate of simple interest"—

(A) means the annualized rate of interest paid with respect to each compounding period, expressed as a percentage; and

(B) may be referred to as the "annual percentage rate".

(4) BOARD.—The term "Board" means the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

(5) DEPOSIT BROKER.—The term "deposit broker"—

(A) has the meaning given to such term in section 29(f)(1) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act; and

(B) includes any person who solicits any amount from any other person for deposit in an insured depository institution.

(6) DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION.—The term "depository institution" has the meaning given such term in clauses (i) through (vi) of section 19(b)(1)(A) of the Federal Reserve Act.

(7) INTEREST.—The term "interest" includes dividends paid with respect to share draft accounts which are accounts within the meaning of paragraph (3).

(8) MULTIPLE RATE ACCOUNT.—The term "multiple rate account" means any account that has 2 or more annual rates of simple interest which take effect at the same time or in succeeding periods and which are known at the time of disclosure.

TITLE III—REGULATORY IMPROVEMENT

Subtitle A—Activities

SEC. 301. LIMITATIONS ON BROKERED DEPOSITS AND DEPOSIT SOLICITATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 29 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1831f) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking "troubled institution" and inserting "insured depository institution that is not well capitalized";

(2) in subsection (c), by inserting "which is adequately capitalized" after "insured depository institution";

(3) in subsection (d), by striking all after "unsound practice;" and inserting the following:

"(2) is necessary to enable the institution to meet the demands of its depositors or pay its obligations in the ordinary course of business; and

"(3) is consistent with the conservator's fiduciary duty to minimize the institution's losses.

Effective 90 days after the date on which the institution was placed in conservatorship, the institution may not accept such deposits.";

(4) by redesignating subsections (e) through (g) as subsections (f) through (h), respectively, and inserting after subsection (d) the following:

"(e) RESTRICTION ON INTEREST RATE PAID.—Any insured depository institution which, under subsection (c) or (d), accepts funds obtained, directly or indirectly, by or through a deposit broker, may not pay a rate of interest on such funds which, at the time that such funds are accepted, significantly exceeds—

"(1) the rate paid on deposits of similar maturity in such institution's normal market area for deposits accepted in the institution's normal market area; or

"(2) the national rate paid on deposits of comparable maturity, as established by the Corporation, for deposits accepted outside the institution's normal market area.";

(5) in subsection (f), as redesignated, by striking "troubled"; and

(6) by striking subsection (h), as redesignated.

(b) NOTIFICATION AND RECORDKEEPING.—The Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1811 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 29 the following:

"SEC. 29A. DEPOSIT BROKER NOTIFICATION AND RECORDKEEPING.

"(a) NOTIFICATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A deposit broker, as defined in section 29(g), shall not solicit or place any deposit with an insured depository institution, unless such deposit broker has provided the Corporation with written notice that it is a deposit broker.

"(2) TERMINATION OF DEPOSIT BROKER STATUS.—When a deposit broker referred to in paragraph (1) ceases to act as a deposit broker it shall provide the Corporation with a written notice that it is no longer acting as a deposit broker.

"(3) FORM AND CONTENT.—The notices required by paragraphs (1) and (2) shall be in such form and contain such information concerning the deposit solicitation and placement activities of a deposit broker as the Corporation may prescribe as necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this subsection.

"(b) RECORDS.—The Corporation may prescribe regulations requiring each deposit broker that has filed a notice under subsection (a)(1) to maintain separate records relating to the total amounts and maturities of the deposits placed by such broker for each insured depository institution during specified time periods. Such regulations shall specify the format in which and the period for which such records shall be preserved, as well as the time period within which the deposit broker shall furnish to the Corporation copies of such records (or designated portions thereof) as the Corporation may request.

"(c) PERIODIC REPORTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The Corporation may prescribe regulations requiring each deposit broker that has filed a notice under subsection (a)(1) to file with the Corporation separate quarterly reports relating to the total amounts and maturities of the deposits placed by such broker for each depository institution during the applicable quarter. Such regulations shall specify the form and content of such reports, as well as the applicable reporting period.

"(2) DESIGNATED AGENT.—The Corporation may designate another entity as its agent for the purpose of receiving and maintaining reports under this subsection. If the Corporation designates such an agent the Corporation may, through its agent, prescribe and collect an appropriate quarterly fee from each deposit broker that filed reports with the agent during the applicable quarter, in an amount sufficient to defray the Corporation's cost of retaining the agent and to reflect the proportionate amount of the deposits placed with insured depository institutions by each broker during the applicable quarter.".

(c) DEPOSIT SOLICITATION RESTRICTED.—Section 29 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1831f) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(h) DEPOSIT SOLICITATION RESTRICTED.—An insured depository institution that is undercapitalized, as defined in section 38, shall not solicit deposits by offering rates of interest that are significantly higher than the prevailing rates of interest on insured deposits—

"(1) in such institution's normal market areas; or

"(2) in the market area in which such deposits would otherwise be accepted.".

(d) DEADLINE FOR REGULATIONS.—The Corporation shall promulgate final regulations to carry out the amendments made under subsections (a), (b), and (c) not later than 150 days after the date of enactment of this Act, and those regulations shall become effective not later than 180 days after that date of enactment, except that such regulations shall not apply to any specific time deposit made before that date of enactment until the stated maturity of the time deposit.

SEC. 302. RISK-BASED ASSESSMENTS.

(a) RISK-BASED ASSESSMENT SYSTEM.—Section 7(b) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(b)) is amended to read as follows:

"(b) ASSESSMENTS.—

"(1) RISK-BASED ASSESSMENT SYSTEM.—

"(A) RISK-BASED ASSESSMENT SYSTEM REQUIRED.—The Board of Directors shall, by regulation, establish a risk-based assessment system for insured depository institutions.

"(B) PRIVATE REINSURANCE AUTHORIZED.—In carrying out this paragraph, the Corporation may—

"(i) obtain private reinsurance covering not more than 10 percent of any loss the Corporation incurs with respect to an insured depository institution; and

"(ii) base that institution's semiannual assessment (in whole or in part) on the cost of the reinsurance.

"(C) RISK-BASED ASSESSMENT SYSTEM DEFINED.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'risk-based assessment system' means a system for calculating a depository institution's semiannual assessment based on—

"(i) the probability that the deposit insurance fund will incur a loss with respect to the institution, taking into consideration the risks attributable to—

"(I) different categories and concentrations of assets;

"(II) different categories and concentrations of liabilities, both insured and uninsured, contingent and noncontingent; and

"(III) any other factors the Corporation determines are relevant to assessing such probability;

"(ii) the likely amount of any such loss; and

"(iii) the revenue needs of the deposit insurance fund.

"(D) SEPARATE ASSESSMENT SYSTEMS.—The Board of Directors may establish separate risk-based assessment systems for large and small members of each deposit insurance fund.

"(2) SETTING ASSESSMENTS.—

"(A) ACHIEVING AND MAINTAINING DESIGNATED RESERVE RATIO.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The Board of Directors shall set semiannual assessments for insured depository institutions—

"(I) to maintain the reserve ratio of each deposit insurance fund at the designated reserve ratio; or

"(II) if the reserve ratio is less than the designated reserve ratio, to increase the reserve ratio to the designated reserve ratio as provided in paragraph (3).

"(ii) FACTORS TO BE CONSIDERED.—In carrying out clause (i), the Board of Directors shall consider the deposit insurance fund's—

"(I) expected operating expenses,

"(II) case resolution expenditures and income,

"(III) the effect of assessments on members' earnings and capital, and

"(IV) any other factors that the Board of Directors may deem appropriate.

"(iii) MINIMUM ASSESSMENT.—The semiannual assessment for each member of a deposit insurance fund shall be not less than $1,000.

"(iv) DESIGNATED RESERVE RATIO DEFINED.—The designated reserve ratio of each deposit insurance fund for each year shall be—

"(I) 1.25 percent of estimated insured deposits; or

"(II) a higher percentage of estimated insured deposits that the Board of Directors determines to be justified for that year by circumstances raising a significant risk of substantial future losses to the fund.

"(B) INDEPENDENT TREATMENT OF FUNDS.—The Board of Directors shall—

"(i) set semiannual assessments for members of each deposit insurance fund independently from semiannual assessments for members of any other deposit insurance fund; and

"(ii) set the designated reserve ratio of each deposit insurance fund independently from the designated reserve ratio of any other deposit insurance fund.

"(C) NOTICE OF ASSESSMENTS.—The Corporation shall notify each insured depository institution of that institution's semiannual assessment.

"(D) PRIORITY OF FINANCING CORPORATION AND FUNDING CORPORATION ASSESSMENTS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this paragraph, amounts assessed by the Financing Corporation under section 21 of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act against Savings Association Insurance Fund members, shall be subtracted from the amounts authorized to be assessed by the Corporation under this paragraph.

"(E) MINIMUM ASSESSMENTS.—The Corporation shall design the risk-based assessment system for any deposit insurance fund so that, if the Corporation has borrowings outstanding under section 14 on behalf of that fund or the reserve ratio of that fund remains below the designated reserve ratio, the total amount raised by semiannual assessments on members of that fund shall be not less than the total amount that would have been raised if—

"(i) section 7(b) as in effect on July 15, 1991 remained in effect; and

"(ii) the assessment rate in effect on July 15, 1991 remained in effect.

"(F) TRANSITION RULE FOR SAVINGS ASSOCIATION INSURANCE FUND.—With respect to the Savings Association Insurance Fund, during the period beginning on the effective date of the amendments made by section 302(a) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991 and ending on December 31, 1997—

"(i) subparagraph (A)(i)(II) shall apply as if such subparagraph did not include 'as provided in paragraph (3)'; and

"(ii) subparagraph (E) shall be applied by substituting 'if section 7(b) as in effect on July 15, 1991 remained in effect.' for 'if—' and all that follows through clause (ii).

"(G) SPECIAL RULE UNTIL THE INSURANCE FUNDS ACHIEVE THE DESIGNATED RESERVE RATIO.—Until a deposit insurance fund achieves the designated reserve ratio, the Corporation may limit the maximum assessment on insured depository institutions under the risk-based assessment system authorized under paragraph (1) to not less than 10 basis points above the average assessment on insured depository institutions under that system.

"(3) SPECIAL RULE FOR RECAPITALIZING UNDERCAPITALIZED FUNDS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2)(F), if the reserve ratio of any deposit insurance fund is less than the designated reserve ratio under paragraph (2)(A)(iv), the Board of Directors shall set semiannual assessment rates for members of that fund—

"(i) that are sufficient to increase the reserve ratio for that fund to the designated reserve ratio not later than 1 year after such rates are set; or

"(ii) in accordance with a schedule promulgated by the Corporation under subparagraph (B).

"(B) RECAPITALIZATION SCHEDULES.—For purposes of subparagraph (A)(ii), the Corporation shall by regulation promulgate a schedule that specifies, at semiannual intervals, target reserve ratios for that fund, culminating in a reserve ratio that is equal to the designated reserve ratio not later than 15 years after the date on which the schedule is implemented.

"(C) AMENDING SCHEDULE.—The Corporation may, by regulation, amend a schedule promulgated under subparagraph (B), but such amendments may not extend the date specified in subparagraph (B).

"(D) APPLICATION TO SAIF MEMBERS.—This paragraph shall become applicable to Savings Association Insurance Fund members on January 1, 1998.

"(4) SEMIANNUAL PERIOD DEFINED.—For purposes of this section, the term 'semiannual period' means a period beginning on January 1 of any calendar year and ending on June 30 of the same year, or a period beginning on July 1 of any calendar year and ending on December 31 of the same year.

"(5) RECORDS TO BE MAINTAINED.—Each insured depository institution shall maintain all records that the Corporation may require for verifying the correctness of the institution's semiannual assessments. No insured depository institution shall be required to retain those records for that purpose for a period of more than 5 years from the date of the filing of any certified statement, except that when there is a dispute between the insured depository institution and the Corporation over the amount of any assessment, the depository institution shall retain the records until final determination of the issue.".

(b) CERTIFIED STATEMENTS AND PAYMENT PROCEDURES.—Section 7(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(c)) is amended to read as follows:

"(c) CERTIFIED STATEMENTS; PAYMENTS.—

"(1) CERTIFIED STATEMENTS REQUIRED.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Each insured depository institution shall file with the Corporation a certified statement containing such information as the Corporation may require for determining the institution's semiannual assessment.

"(B) FORM OF CERTIFICATION.—The certified statement required under subparagraph (A) shall—

"(i) be in such form and set forth such supporting information as the Board of Directors shall prescribe; and

"(ii) be certified by the president of the depository institution or any other officer designated by its board of directors or trustees that to the best of his or her knowledge and belief, the statement is true, correct and complete, and in accordance with this Act and regulations issued hereunder.

"(2) PAYMENTS REQUIRED.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Each insured depository institution shall pay to the Corporation the semiannual assessment imposed under subsection (b).

"(B) FORM OF PAYMENT.—The payments required under subparagraph (A) shall be made in such manner and at such time or times as the Board of Directors shall prescribe by regulation.

"(3) NEWLY INSURED INSTITUTIONS.—To facilitate the administration of this section, the Board of Directors may waive the requirements of paragraphs (1) and (2) for the semiannual period in which a depository institution becomes insured.".

(c) REGULATIONS.—To implement the risk-based assessment system required under section 7(b) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (as amended by subsection (a)), the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation shall—

(1) provide notice of proposed regulations in the Federal Register, not later than December 31, 1992, with an opportunity for comment on the proposal of not less than 120 days; and

(2) promulgate final regulations not later than July 1, 1993.

(d) AUTHORITY TO PRESCRIBE REGULATIONS AND DEFINITIONS.—Section 10 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1820) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(f) AUTHORITY TO PRESCRIBE REGULATIONS AND DEFINITIONS.—Except to the extent that authority under this Act is conferred on any of the Federal banking agencies other than the Corporation, the Corporation may—

"(1) prescribe regulations to carry out this Act; and

"(2) by regulation define terms as necessary to carry out this Act.".

(e) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—The Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1811 et seq.) is amended—

(1) in section 5(d)(3)(B)—

(A) by striking "average assessment base" and inserting "deposits"; and

(B) by striking "shall—" and all that follows through "(iii) shall be treated" and inserting "shall be treated";

(2) in section 7(a)(5) by striking "and for the computation of assessments provided in subsection (b) of this section";

(3) in section 7 by amending subsection (d) to read as follows:

"(d) CORPORATION EXEMPT FROM APPORTIONMENT.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, amounts received pursuant to any assessment under this section and any other amounts received by the Corporation shall not be subject to apportionment for the purposes of chapter 15 of title 31, United States Code, or under any other authority."; and

(4) in the last sentence of section 8(q) by striking "upon" and inserting "with respect to".

(f) TRANSITION TO NEW ASSESSMENT SYSTEM.—To carry out the amendments made by this section, the Corporation may promulgate regulations governing the transition from the assessment system in effect on the date of enactment of this Act to the assessment system required under the amendments made by this section.

(g) EFFECTIVE DATE OF AMENDMENTS.—The amendments made by this section shall become effective on the earlier of—

(1) 180 days after the date on which final regulations promulgated in accordance with subsection (c) become effective; or

(2) January 1, 1994.

SEC. 303. RESTRICTIONS ON INSURED STATE BANK ACTIVITIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1811 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 23 the following new section:

"SEC. 24. ACTIVITIES OF INSURED STATE BANKS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—After the end of the 1-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991, an insured State bank may not engage as principal in any type of activity that is not permissible for a national bank unless—

"(1) the Corporation has determined that the activity would pose no significant risk to the appropriate deposit insurance fund; and

"(2) the State bank is, and continues to be, in compliance with applicable capital standards prescribed by the appropriate Federal banking agency.

"(b) INSURANCE UNDERWRITING.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding subsection (a), an insured State bank may not engage in insurance underwriting except to the extent that activity is permissible for national banks.

"(2) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN FEDERALLY REINSURED CROP INSURANCE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, an insured State bank or any of its subsidiaries that provided insurance on or before September 30, 1991, which was reinsured in whole or in part by the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation may continue to provide such insurance.".

"(c) EQUITY INVESTMENTS BY INSURED STATE BANKS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—An insured State bank may not, directly or indirectly, acquire or retain any equity investment of a type that is not permissible for a national bank.

"(2) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN SUBSIDIARIES.—Paragraph (1) shall not prohibit an insured State bank from acquiring or retaining an equity investment in a subsidiary of which the insured State bank is a majority owner.

"(3) EXCEPTION FOR QUALIFIED HOUSING PROJECTS.—

"(A) EXCEPTION.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection, an insured State bank may invest as a limited partner in a partnership, the sole purpose of which is direct or indirect investment in the acquisition, rehabilitation, or new construction of a qualified housing project.

"(B) LIMITATION.—The aggregate of the investments of any insured State bank pursuant to this paragraph shall not exceed 2 percent of the total assets of the bank.

"(C) QUALIFIED HOUSING PROJECT DEFINED.—As used in this paragraph—

"(i) QUALIFIED HOUSING PROJECT.—The term 'qualified housing project' means residential real estate that is intended to primarily benefit lower income people throughout the period of the investment.

"(ii) LOWER INCOME.—The term 'lower income' means income that less than or equal to the median income based on statistics from State or Federal sources.

"(4) TRANSITION RULE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Corporation shall require any insured State bank to divest any equity investment the retention of which is not permissible under this subsection as quickly as can be prudently done, and in any event before the end of the 5-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991.

"(B) TREATMENT OF NONCOMPLIANCE DURING DIVESTMENT.—With respect to any equity investment held by any insured State bank on the date of enactment of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991 which was lawfully acquired before such date, the bank shall be deemed not to be in violation of the prohibition in this subsection on retaining such investment so long as the bank complies with the applicable requirements established by the Corporation for divesting such investments.

"(d) SUBSIDIARIES OF INSURED STATE BANKS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—After the end of the 1-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991, a subsidiary of an insured State bank may not engage as principal in any type of activity that is not permissible for a subsidiary of a national bank unless—

"(A) the Corporation has determined that the activity poses no significant risk to the appropriate deposit insurance fund; and

"(B) the bank is, and continues to be, in compliance with applicable capital standards prescribed by the appropriate Federal banking agency.

"(2) INSURANCE UNDERWRITING PROHIBITED.—

"(A) PROHIBITION.—Notwithstanding paragraph (1), no subsidiary of an insured State bank may engage in insurance underwriting except to the extent such activities are permissible for national banks.

"(B) CONTINUATION OF EXISTING ACTIVITIES.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), a well-capitalized insured State bank or any of its subsidiaries that was lawfully providing insurance as principal in a State on November 21, 1991, may continue to provide, as principal, insurance of the same type to residents of the State (including companies or partnerships incorporated in, organized under the laws of, licensed to do business in, or having an office in the State, but only on behalf of their employees resident in or property located in the State), individuals employed in the State, and any other person to whom the bank or subsidiary has provided insurance as principal, without interruption, since such person resided in or was employed in such State.

"(C) EXCEPTION.—Subparagraph (A) does not apply to a subsidiary of an insured State bank if—

"(i) the insured State bank was required, before June 1, 1991, to provide title insurance as a condition of the bank's initial chartering under State law; and

"(ii) control of the insured State bank has not changed since that date.

"(e) SAVINGS BANK LIFE INSURANCE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—No provision of this Act shall be construed as prohibiting or impairing the sale or underwriting of savings bank life insurance, or the ownership of stock in a savings bank life insurance company, by any insured bank which—

"(A) is located in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts or the State of New York or Connecticut; and

"(B) meets the consumer disclosure requirements under section 18(k) with respect to such insurance.

"(2) FDIC FINDING AND ACTION REGARDING RISK.—

"(A) FINDING.—Before the end of the 1-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991, the Corporation shall make a finding whether savings bank life insurance activities of insured banks pose or may pose any significant risk to the insurance fund of which such banks are members.

"(B) ACTIONS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The Corporation shall, pursuant to any finding made under subparagraph (A), take appropriate actions to address any risk that exists or may subsequently develop with respect to insured banks described in paragraph (1)(A).

"(ii) AUTHORIZED ACTIONS.—Actions the Corporation may take under this subparagraph include requiring the modification, suspension, or termination of insurance activities conducted by any insured bank if the Corporation finds that the activities pose a significant risk to any insured bank described in paragraph (1)(A) or to the insurance fund of which such bank is a member.

"(f) COMMON AND PREFERRED STOCK INVESTMENT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—An insured State bank shall not acquire or retain, directly or indirectly, any equity investment of a type or in an amount that is not permissible for a national bank or is not otherwise permitted under this section.

"(2) EXCEPTION FOR BANKS IN CERTAIN STATES.—Notwithstanding paragraph (1), an insured State bank may, to the extent permitted by the Corporation, acquire and retain ownership of securities described in paragraph (1) to the extent the aggregate amount of such investment does not exceed an amount equal to 100 percent of the bank's capital if such bank—

"(A) is located in a State that permitted, as of September 30, 1991, investment in common or preferred stock listed on a national securities exchange or shares of an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940; and

"(B) made or maintained an investment in such securities during the period beginning on September 30, 1990, and ending on November 26, 1991.

"(3) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN TYPES OF INSTITUTIONS.—Notwithstanding paragraph (1), an insured State bank may—

"(A) acquire not more than 10 percent of a corporation that only—

"(i) provides directors', trustees', and officers' liability insurance coverage or bankers' blanket bond group insurance coverage for insured depository institutions; or

"(ii) reinsures such policies; and

"(B) acquire or retain shares of a depository institution if—

"(i) the institution engages only in activities permissible for national banks;

"(ii) the institution is subject to examination and regulation by a State bank supervisor;

"(iii) 20 or more depository institutions own shares of the institution and none of those institutions owns more than 15 percent of the institution's shares; and

"(iv) the institution's shares (other than directors' qualifying shares or shares held under or initially acquired through a plan established for the benefit of the institution's officers and employees) are owned only by the institution.

"(4) TRANSITION PERIOD FOR COMMON AND PREFERRED STOCK INVESTMENTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—During each year in the 3-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991, each insured State bank shall reduce by not less than ⅓ of its shares (as of such date of enactment) the bank's ownership of securities in excess of the amount equal to 100 percent of the capital of such bank.

"(B) COMPLIANCE AT END OF PERIOD.—By the end of the 3-year period referred to in subparagraph (A), each insured State bank and each subsidiary of a State bank shall be in compliance with the maximum amount limitations on investments referred to in paragraph (1).

"(5) LOSS OF EXCEPTION UPON ACQUISITION.—Any exception applicable under paragraph (2) with respect to any insured State bank shall cease to apply with respect to such bank upon any change in control of such bank or any conversion of the charter of such bank.

"(6) NOTICE AND APPROVAL.—An insured State bank may only engage in any investment pursuant to paragraph (2) if—

"(A) the bank has filed a 1-time notice of the bank's intention to acquire and retain investments described in paragraph (1); and

"(B) the Corporation has determined, within 60 days of receiving such notice, that acquiring or retaining such investments does not pose a significant risk to the insurance fund of which such bank is a member.

"(7) DIVESTITURE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Corporation may require divestiture by an insured State bank of any investment permitted under this subsection if the Corporation determines that such investment will have an adverse effect on the safety and soundness of the bank.

"(B) REASONABLE STANDARD.—The Corporation shall not require divestiture by any bank pursuant to subparagraph (A) without reason to believe that such investment will have an adverse effect on the safety and soundness of the bank.

"(g) DETERMINATIONS.—The Corporation shall make determinations under this section by regulation or order.

"(h) ACTIVITY DEFINED.—For purposes of this section, the term 'activity' includes acquiring or retaining any investment.

"(i) OTHER AUTHORITY NOT AFFECTED.—This section shall not be construed as limiting the authority of any appropriate Federal banking agency or any State supervisory authority to impose more stringent restrictions.".

(b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The 13th undesignated paragraph of section 9 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 330) is amended by striking ": Provided, however, That no Federal reserve bank" and inserting ", except that the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System may limit the activities of State member banks and subsidiaries of State member banks in a manner consistent with section 24 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act. No Federal reserve bank".

SEC. 304. RESTRICTIONS ON REAL ESTATE LENDING.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 18 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1828) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(o) REAL ESTATE LENDING.—

"(1) UNIFORM REGULATIONS.—Not more than 9 months after the date of enactment of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991, each appropriate Federal banking agency shall adopt uniform regulations prescribing standards for extensions of credit that are—

"(A) secured by liens on interests in real estate; or

"(B) made for the purpose of financing the construction of a building or other improvements to real estate.

"(2) STANDARDS.—

"(A) CRITERIA.—In prescribing standards under paragraph (1), the agencies shall consider—

"(i) the risk posed to the deposit insurance funds by such extensions of credit;

"(ii) the need for safe and sound operation of insured depository institutions; and

"(iii) the availability of credit.

"(B) VARIATIONS PERMITTED.—In prescribing standards under paragraph (1), the appropriate Federal banking agencies may differentiate among types of loans—

"(i) as may be required by Federal statute;

"(ii) as may be warranted, based on the risk to the deposit insurance fund; or

"(iii) as may be warranted, based on the safety and soundness of the institutions.

"(3) LOAN EVALUATION STANDARD.—No appropriate Federal banking agency shall adversely evaluate an investment or a loan made by an insured depository institution, or consider such a loan to be nonperforming, solely because the loan is made to or the investment is in commercial, residential, or industrial property, unless such investment or loan may affect the institution's safety and soundness.

"(4) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The regulations adopted under paragraph (1) shall become effective not later than 15 months after the date of enactment of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991. Such regulations shall continue in effect except as uniformly amended by the appropriate Federal banking agencies, acting in concert.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 24(a) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 371(a)) is amended by striking "such terms," and all that follows through the period and inserting "section 18(o) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act and such restrictions and requirements as the Comptroller of the Currency may prescribe by regulation or order.".

SEC. 305. IMPROVING CAPITAL STANDARDS.

(a) PERIODIC REVIEW OF CAPITAL STANDARDS GENERALLY.—Section 18 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1828) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(o) PERIODIC REVIEW OF CAPITAL STANDARDS.—Each appropriate Federal banking agency shall, in consultation with the other Federal banking agencies, biennially review its capital standards for insured depository institutions to determine whether those standards require sufficient capital to facilitate prompt corrective action to prevent or minimize loss to the deposit insurance funds, consistent with section 38.".

(b) REVIEW OF RISK-BASED CAPITAL STANDARDS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Each appropriate Federal banking agency shall revise its risk-based capital standards for insured depository institutions to ensure that those standards—

(A) take adequate account of—

(i) interest-rate risk;

(ii) concentration of credit risk; and

(iii) the risks of nontraditional activities; and

(B) reflect the actual performance and expected risk of loss of multifamily mortgages.

(2) INTERNATIONAL DISCUSSIONS.—The Federal banking agencies shall discuss the development of comparable standards with members of the supervisory committee of the Bank for International Settlements.

(3) DEADLINE FOR PRESCRIBING REVISED STANDARDS.—Each appropriate Federal banking agency shall—

(A) publish final regulations in the Federal Register to implement paragraph (1) not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act; and

(B) establish reasonable transition rules to facilitate compliance with those regulations.

(4) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection, the terms "appropriate Federal banking agency", "Federal banking agency" and "insured depository institution" have the same meanings as in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1813).

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENT DEFINING FEDERAL BANKING AGENCIES.—Section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1813) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(z) FEDERAL BANKING AGENCIES.—The term 'Federal banking agencies' means the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, the Office of Thrift Supervision, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.".

SEC. 306. SAFEGUARDS AGAINST INSIDER ABUSE.

(a) RECODIFICATION OF CURRENT LAW RESTRICTING EXTENSIONS OF CREDIT TO INSIDERS.—Section 22(h) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 375b) is amended to read as follows:

"(h) EXTENSIONS OF CREDIT TO EXECUTIVE OFFICERS, DIRECTORS, AND PRINCIPAL SHAREHOLDERS OF MEMBER BANKS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—No member bank may extend credit to any of its executive officers, directors, or principal shareholders, or to any related interest of such a person, except to the extent permitted under paragraphs (2), (3), (4), and (6).

"(2) PREFERENTIAL TERMS PROHIBITED.—A member bank may extend credit to its executive officers, directors, or principal shareholders, or to any related interest of such a person, only if the extension of credit—

"(A) is made on substantially the same terms, including interest rates and collateral, as those prevailing at the time for comparable transactions by the bank with persons who are not executive officers, directors, principal shareholders, or employees of the bank; and

"(B) does not involve more than the normal risk of repayment or present other unfavorable features.

"(3) PRIOR APPROVAL REQUIRED.—A member bank may extend credit to a person described in paragraph (1) in an amount that, when aggregated with the amount of all other outstanding extensions of credit by that bank to each such person and that person's related interests, would exceed an amount prescribed by regulation of the appropriate Federal banking agency (as defined in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act) only if—

"(A) the extension of credit has been approved in advance by a majority vote of that bank's entire board of directors; and

"(B) the interested party has abstained from participating, directly or indirectly, in the deliberations or voting on the extension of credit.

"(4) AGGREGATE LIMIT ON EXTENSIONS OF CREDIT TO ANY EXECUTIVE OFFICER OR PRINCIPAL SHAREHOLDER.—A member bank may extend credit to any executive officer or principal shareholder, or to any related interest of such a person, only if the extension of credit is in an amount that, when aggregated with the amount of all outstanding extensions of credit by that bank to that person and that person's related interests, would not exceed the limits on loans to a single borrower established by section 5200 of the Revised Statutes. For purposes of this paragraph, section 5200 of the Revised Statutes shall be deemed to apply to a State member bank as if the State member bank were a national banking association.

"(5) [Reserved.]

"(6) OVERDRAFTS BY EXECUTIVE OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS PROHIBITED.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If any executive officer or director has an account at the member bank, the bank may not pay on behalf of that person an amount exceeding the funds on deposit in the account.

"(B) EXCEPTIONS.—Subparagraph (A) does not prohibit a member bank from paying funds in accordance with—

"(i) a written preauthorized, interest-bearing extension of credit specifying a method of repayment; and

"(ii) a written preauthorized transfer of funds from another account of the executive officer or director at that bank.

"(7) [Reserved.]

"(8) EXECUTIVE OFFICER, DIRECTOR, OR PRINCIPAL SHAREHOLDER OF CERTAIN AFFILIATES TREATED AS EXECUTIVE OFFICER, DIRECTOR, OR PRINCIPAL SHAREHOLDER OF MEMBER BANK.—For purposes of this subsection, any executive officer, director, or principal shareholder (as the case may be) of any bank holding company of which the member bank is a subsidiary, or of any other subsidiary of that company, shall be deemed to be an executive officer, director, or principal shareholder (as the case may be) of the member bank.

"(9) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection:

"(A) COMPANY.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in clause (ii), the term 'company' means any corporation, partnership, business or other trust, association, joint venture, pool syndicate, sole proprietorship, unincorporated organization, or other business entity.

"(ii) EXCEPTIONS.—The term 'company' does not include—

"(I) an insured depository institution (as defined in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act); or

"(II) a corporation the majority of the shares of which are owned by the United States or by any State.

"(B) CONTROL.—A person controls a company or bank if that person, directly or indirectly, or acting through or in concert with 1 or more persons—

"(i) owns, controls, or has the power to vote 25 percent or more of any class of the company's voting securities;

"(ii) controls in any manner the election of a majority of the company's directors; or

"(iii) has the power to exercise a controlling influence over the company's management or policies.

"(C) EXECUTIVE OFFICER.—A person is an 'executive officer' of a company or bank if that person participates or has authority to participate (other than as a director) in major policymaking functions of the company or bank.

"(D) EXTENSION OF CREDIT.—A member bank extends credit by making or renewing any loan, granting a line of credit, or entering into any similar transaction as a result of which a person becomes obligated (directly or indirectly, or by any means whatsoever) to pay money or its equivalent to the bank.

"(E) [Reserved.]

"(F) PRINCIPAL SHAREHOLDER.—The term 'principal shareholder' means any person that directly or indirectly, or acting through or in concert with one or more persons, owns, controls, or has the power to vote more than 10 percent of any class of voting securities of a member bank or company. For purposes of paragraph (4), if a member bank has its main banking office in a city, town, or village with a population of less than 30,000, the preceding sentence shall apply with '18 percent' substituted for '10 percent'.

"(G) RELATED INTEREST.—A 'related interest' of a person is—

"(i) any company controlled by that person; and

"(ii) any political or campaign committee that is controlled by that person or the funds or services of which will benefit that person.

"(H) SUBSIDIARY.—The term 'subsidiary' has the same meaning as in section 2 of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956.

"(10) BOARD'S RULEMAKING AUTHORITY.—The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System may prescribe such regulations, including definitions of terms, as it determines to be necessary to effectuate the purposes and prevent evasions of this subsection.".

(b) REQUIRING DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS TO FOLLOW NORMAL CREDIT UNDERWRITING PROCE-

DURES WHEN EXTENDING CREDIT TO INSIDERS.—Section 22(h)(2) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 375b(2)), as amended by subsection (a), is amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (A);

(2) by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting "; and"; and

(3) by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraph:

"(C) the bank follows credit underwriting procedures that are not less stringent than those applicable to comparable transactions by the bank with persons who are not executive officers, directors, principal shareholders, or employees of the bank.".

(c) APPLYING TO DIRECTORS THE LIMIT ON LOANS TO ONE BORROWER.—Section 22(h)(4) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 375b(4)), as amended by subsection (a), is amended—

(1) by inserting ", DIRECTOR," after "AGGREGATE LIMIT ON EXTENSIONS OF CREDIT TO ANY EXECUTIVE OFFICER"; and

(2) by inserting ", director," after "A member bank may extend credit to any executive officer".

(d) LIMITING DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION'S AGGREGATE EXTENSIONS OF CREDIT TO INSIDERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 22(h)(5) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 375b(5)), as amended by subsection (a), is amended to read as follows:

"(5) AGGREGATE LIMIT ON EXTENSIONS OF CREDIT TO ALL EXECUTIVE OFFICERS, DIRECTORS, AND PRINCIPAL SHAREHOLDERS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—A member bank may extend credit to any executive officer, director, or principal shareholder, or to any related interest of such a person, if the extension of credit is in an amount that, when aggregated with the amount of all outstanding extensions of credit by that bank to its executive officers, directors, principal shareholders, and those persons' related interests would not exceed the bank's unimpaired capital and unimpaired surplus.

"(B) MORE STRINGENT LIMIT AUTHORIZED.—The Board may, by regulation, prescribe a limit that is more stringent than that contained in subparagraph (A).

"(C) BOARD MAY MAKE EXCEPTIONS FOR CERTAIN BANKS.—The Board may, by regulation, make exceptions to subparagraph (A) for member banks with less than $100,000,000 in deposits if the Board determines that the exceptions are important to avoid constricting the availability of credit in small communities or to attract directors to such banks. In no case may the aggregate amount of all outstanding extensions of credit to a bank's executive officers, directors, principal shareholders, and those persons' related interests be more than 2 times the bank's unimpaired capital and unimpaired surplus.".

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 22(h)(1) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 375b(1)), as amended by subsection (a), is amended by inserting "(5)," after "(4),".

(e) PROHIBITING INSIDERS FROM ACCEPTING UNAUTHORIZED EXTENSIONS OF CREDIT.—Section 22(h)(7) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 375b(7)), as amended by subsection (a), is amended to read as follows:

"(7) PROHIBITION ON KNOWINGLY RECEIVING UNAUTHORIZED EXTENSION OF CREDIT.—No executive officer, director, or principal shareholder shall knowingly receive (or knowingly permit any of that person's related interests to receive) from a member bank, directly or indirectly, any extension of credit not authorized under this subsection.".

(f) APPLYING UNIFORM RULES TO ALL COMPANIES CONTROLLING DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS.—Section 22(h)(8) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 375b(8)), as amended by subsection (a), is amended by striking "bank holding".

(g) APPLYING SAFEGUARDS TO INSIDER TRANSACTIONS WITH DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION'S SUBSIDIARIES.—Section 22(h)(9)(E) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 375b(9)(E)), as amended by subsection (a), is amended to read as follows:

"(E) MEMBER BANK.—The term 'member bank' includes any subsidiary of a member bank.".

(h) APPLYING UNIFORM RULES TO ALL PRINCIPAL SHAREHOLDERS.—Section 22(h)(9)(F) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 375b(9)(F)), as amended by subsection (a), is amended by striking the last sentence.

(i) LIMITING SAVINGS ASSOCIATIONS' EXTENSIONS OF CREDIT TO EXECUTIVE OFFICERS.—Section 11(b)(1) of the Home Owners' Loan Act (12 U.S.C. 1468(b)(1)) is amended by striking "Section 22(h)" and inserting "Subsections (g) and (h) of section 22".

(j) PREVENTING SAVINGS ASSOCIATIONS FROM MAKING PREFERENTIAL EXTENSIONS OF CREDIT THROUGH CORRESPONDENT INSTITUTIONS.—Section 106(b)(2)(H)(i) of the Bank Holding Company Act Amendments of 1970 (12 U.S.C. 1972(2)(H)(i)) is amended by inserting ", a savings bank, and a savings association (as those terms are defined in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act)" after "mutual savings bank".

(k) LIMITING STATE NONMEMBER BANK'S EXTENSIONS OF CREDIT TO EXECUTIVE OFFICERS; CLARIFYING THE PROHIBITION ON PREFERENTIAL EXTENSIONS OF CREDIT TO INSIDERS.—Section 18(j) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1828(j)) is amended to read as follows:

"(j) RESTRICTIONS ON TRANSACTIONS WITH AFFILIATES AND INSIDERS.—

"(1) TRANSACTIONS WITH AFFILIATES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Sections 23A and 23B of the Federal Reserve Act shall apply with respect to every nonmember insured bank in the same manner and to the same extent as if the nonmember insured bank were a member bank.

"(B) AFFILIATE DEFINED.—For the purpose of subparagraph (A), any company that would be an affiliate (as defined in sections 23A and 23B) of a nonmember insured bank if the nonmember insured bank were a member bank shall be deemed to be an affiliate of that nonmember insured bank.

"(2) EXTENSIONS OF CREDIT TO OFFICERS, DIRECTORS, AND PRINCIPAL SHAREHOLDERS.—Subsections (g) and (h) of section 22 of the Federal Reserve Act shall apply with respect to every nonmember insured bank in the same manner and to the same extent as if the nonmember insured bank were a member bank.

"(3) AVOIDING EXTRATERRITORIAL APPLICATION TO FOREIGN BANKS.—

"(A) TRANSACTIONS WITH AFFILIATES.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply with respect to a foreign bank solely because the foreign bank has an insured branch.

"(B) EXTENSIONS OF CREDIT TO OFFICERS, DIRECTORS, AND PRINCIPAL SHAREHOLDERS.—Paragraph (2) shall not apply with respect to a foreign bank solely because the foreign bank has an insured branch, but shall apply with respect to the insured branch.

"(C) FOREIGN BANK DEFINED.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'foreign bank' has the same meaning as in section 1(b)(7) of the International Banking Act of 1978.".

(l) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall become effective upon the earlier of—

(1) the date on which final regulations under subsection (m)(1) become effective; or

(2) 150 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

(m) REGULATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System shall, not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act, promulgate final regulations to implement the amendments made by this section, other than the amendments made by subsections (i) and (k).

(2) LIMITING EXTENSIONS OF CREDIT TO EXECUTIVE OFFICERS.—The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and Director of the Office of Thrift Supervision shall each, not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act, promulgate final regulations prescribing the maximum amount that a nonmember insured bank or insured savings association (as the case may be) may lend under section 22(g)(4) of the Federal Reserve Act, as made applicable to those institutions by subsections (k) and (i), respectively.

(n) EXISTING TRANSACTIONS NOT AFFECTED.—The amendments made by this section do not affect the validity of any extension of credit or other transaction lawfully entered into on or before the effective date of those amendments.

(o) REPORTING OF CREDIT BY EXECUTIVE OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS.—An executive officer or director of an insured depository institution, a bank holding company, or a savings and loan holding company, the shares of which are not publicly traded, shall report annually to the board of directors of the institution or holding company the outstanding amount of any credit that was extended to such executive officer or director and that is secured by shares of the institution or holding company.

SEC. 307. FDIC BACK-UP ENFORCEMENT AUTHORITY.

Section 8(t) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1818(t)) is amended to read as follows:

"(t) AUTHORITY OF FDIC TO TAKE ENFORCEMENT ACTION AGAINST INSURED DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS AND INSTITUTION-AFFILIATED PARTIES.—

"(1) RECOMMENDING ACTION BY APPROPRIATE FEDERAL BANKING AGENCY.—The Corporation, based on an examination of an insured depository institution by the Corporation or by the appropriate Federal banking agency or on other information, may recommend in writing to the appropriate Federal banking agency that the agency take any enforcement action authorized under section 7(j), this section, or section 18(j) with respect to any insured depository institution or any institution-affiliated party. The recommendation shall be accompanied by a written explanation of the concerns giving rise to the recommendation.

"(2) FDIC'S AUTHORITY TO ACT IF APPROPRIATE FEDERAL BANKING AGENCY FAILS TO FOLLOW RECOMMENDATION.—If the appropriate Federal banking agency does not, before the end of the 60-day period beginning on the date on which the agency receives the recommendation under paragraph (1), take the enforcement action recommended by the Corporation or provide a plan acceptable to the Corporation for responding to the Corporation's concerns, the Corporation may take the recommended enforcement action if the Board of Directors determines, upon a vote of its members, that—

"(A) the insured depository institution is in an unsafe or unsound condition;

"(B) the institution is engaging in unsafe or unsound practices, and the recommended enforcement action will prevent the institution from continuing such practices; or

"(C) the institution's conduct or threatened conduct (including any acts or omissions) poses a risk to the deposit insurance fund, or may prejudice the interests of the institution's depositors.

"(3) EFFECT OF EXIGENT CIRCUMSTANCES.—

"(A) AUTHORITY TO ACT.—The Corporation may, upon a vote of the Board of Directors, and after notice to the appropriate Federal banking agency, exercise its authority under paragraph (2) in exigent circumstances without regard to the time period set forth in paragraph (2).

"(B) AGREEMENT ON EXIGENT CIRCUMSTANCES.—The Corporation shall, by agreement with the appropriate Federal banking agency, set forth those exigent circumstances in which the Corporation may act under subparagraph (A).

"(4) CORPORATION'S POWERS; INSTITUTION'S DUTIES.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) the Corporation shall have the same powers with respect to any insured depository institution and its affiliates as the appropriate Federal banking agency has with respect to the institution and its affiliates; and

"(B) the institution and its affiliates shall have the same duties and obligations with respect to the Corporation as the institution and its affiliates have with respect to the appropriate Federal banking agency.

"(5) REQUESTS FOR FORMAL ACTIONS AND INVESTIGATIONS.—

"(A) SUBMISSION OF REQUESTS.—A regional office of an appropriate Federal banking agency (including a Federal Reserve bank) that requests a formal investigation of or civil enforcement action against an insured depository institution shall submit the request concurrently to the chief officer of the appropriate Federal banking agency and to the Corporation.

"(B) AGENCIES REQUIRED TO REPORT ON REQUESTS.—Each appropriate Federal banking agency shall report semiannually to the Corporation on the status or disposition of all requests under subparagraph (A), including the reasons for any decision by the agency to approve or deny such requests.".

SEC. 308. INTERBANK LIABILITIES.

(a) REDUCING SYSTEMIC RISKS POSED BY LARGE BANK FAILURES.—The Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 221 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 22 the following new section:

"INTERBANK LIABILITIES

"SEC. 23. (a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this section is to limit the risks that the failure of a large depository institution (whether or not that institution is an insured depository institution) would pose to insured depository institutions.

"(b) AGGREGATE LIMITS ON INSURED DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS' EXPOSURE TO OTHER DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS.—The Board shall, by regulation or order, prescribe standards that have the effect of limiting the risks posed by an insured depository institution's exposure to any other depository institution.

"(c) EXPOSURE DEFINED.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of subsection (b), an insured depository institution's 'exposure' to another depository institution means—

"(A) all extensions of credit to the other depository institution, regardless of name or description, including—

"(i) all deposits at the other depository institution;

"(ii) all purchases of securities or other assets from the other depository institution subject to an agreement to repurchase; and

"(iii) all guarantees, acceptances, or letters of credit (including endorsements or standby letters of credit) on behalf of the other depository institution;

"(B) all purchases of or investments in securities issued by the other depository institution;

"(C) all securities issued by the other depository institution accepted as collateral for an extension of credit to any person; and

"(D) all similar transactions that the Board by regulation determines to be exposure for purposes of this section.

"(2) EXEMPTIONS.—The Board may, at its discretion, by regulation or order, exempt transactions from the definition of 'exposure' if it finds the exemptions to be in the public interest and consistent with the purpose of this section.

"(3) ATTRIBUTION RULE.—For purposes of this section, any transaction by an insured depository institution with any person is a transaction with another depository institution to the extent that the proceeds of the transaction are used for the benefit of, or transferred to, that other depository institution.

"(d) INSURED DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION.—For purposes of this section, the term 'insured depository institution' has the same meaning as in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

"(e) RULEMAKING AUTHORITY; ENFORCEMENT.—The Board may issue such regulations and orders, including definitions consistent with this section, as may be necessary to administer and carry out the purpose of this section. The appropriate Federal banking agency shall enforce compliance with those regulations under section 8 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.".

(b) TRANSITION RULES.—The Board shall prescribe reasonable transition rules to facilitate compliance with section 23 of the Federal Reserve Act (as added by subsection (a)).

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall become effective 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act.

Subtitle B—Coverage

SEC. 311. DEPOSIT AND PASS-THROUGH INSURANCE.

(a) EXCLUSION OF CERTAIN OBLIGATIONS FROM DEPOSIT INSURANCE COVERAGE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 11(a) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(8) CERTAIN INVESTMENT CONTRACTS NOT TREATED AS INSURED DEPOSITS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—A liability of an insured depository institution shall not be treated as an insured deposit if the liability arises under any insured depository institution investment contract between any insured depository institution and any employee benefit plan which expressly permits benefit-responsive withdrawals or transfers.

"(B) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of subparagraph (A)—

"(i) BENEFIT-RESPONSIVE WITHDRAWALS OR TRANSFERS.—The term 'benefit-responsive withdrawals or transfers' means any withdrawal or transfer of funds (consisting of any portion of the principal and any interest credited at a rate guaranteed by the insured depository institution investment contract) during the period in which any guaranteed rate is in effect, without substantial penalty or adjustment, to pay benefits provided by the employee benefit plan or to permit a plan participant or beneficiary to redirect the investment of his or her account balance.

"(ii) EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.—The term 'employee benefit plan'—

"(I) has the meaning given to such term in section 3(3) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974; and

"(II) includes any plan described in section 401(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.".

(2) EXCLUSION OF OBLIGATIONS FROM TREATMENT AS DEPOSITS FOR OTHER PURPOSES.—Section 7(b)(6) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(b)(6)) is amended—

(A) by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (B);

(B) by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (C) and inserting "; and"; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(D) any liability of the insured depository institution which is not treated as an insured deposit pursuant to section 11(a)(8).".

(b) INSURANCE OF DEPOSITS.—

(1) INSURED AMOUNTS PAYABLE.—Section 11(a) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(a)) (as amended by subsection (a)(1) of this section) is amended by striking "(a)(1)" and all that follows through paragraph (1) and inserting the following:

"(a) DEPOSIT INSURANCE.—

"(1) INSURED AMOUNTS PAYABLE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Corporation shall insure the deposits of all insured depository institutions as provided in this Act.

"(B) NET AMOUNT OF INSURED DEPOSIT.—The net amount due to any depositor at an insured depository institution shall not exceed $100,000 as determined in accordance with subparagraphs (C) and (D).

"(C) AGGREGATION OF DEPOSITS.—For the purpose of determining the net amount due to any depositor under subparagraph (B), the Corporation shall aggregate the amounts of all deposits in the insured depository institution which are maintained by a depositor in the same capacity and the same right for the benefit of the depositor either in the name of the depositor or in the name of any other person, other than any amount in a trust fund described in section 7(i)(1).

"(D) COVERAGE ON PRO RATA OR 'PASS-THROUGH' BASIS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in clause (ii), for the purpose of determining the amount of insurance due under subparagraph (B), the Corporation shall provide deposit insurance coverage with respect to deposits accepted by any insured depository institution on a pro rata or 'pass-through' basis to a participant in or beneficiary of an employee benefit plan (as defined in section 11(a)(8)(B)(ii)), including any eligible deferred compensation plan described in section 457 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

"(ii) EXCEPTION.—After the end of the 1-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991, the Corporation shall not provide insurance coverage on a pro rata or 'pass-through' basis pursuant to clause (i) with respect to deposits accepted by any insured depository institution which, at the time such deposits are accepted, may not accept brokered deposits under section 29.

"(iii) COVERAGE UNDER CERTAIN CIRCUMSTANCES.—Clause (ii) shall not apply with respect to any deposit accepted by an insured depository institution described in such clause if, at the time the deposit is accepted—

"(I) the institution meets each applicable capital standard; and

"(II) the depositor receives a written statement from the institution that such deposits at such institution are eligible for insurance coverage on a pro rata or 'pass-through' basis.".

(2) CERTAIN RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS.—Section 11(a)(3) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(a)(3)) is amended to read as follows:

"(3) CERTAIN RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any limitation in this Act relating to the amount of deposit insurance available for the account of any 1 depositor, deposits in an insured depository institution made in connection with—

"(i) any individual retirement account described in section 408(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986;

"(ii) subject to the exception contained in paragraph (1)(D)(ii), any eligible deferred compensation plan described in section 457 of such Code; and

"(iii) any individual account plan defined in section 3(34) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act, and any plan described in section 401(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, to the extent that participants and beneficiaries under such plan have the right to direct the investment of assets held in individual accounts maintained on their behalf by the plan, shall be aggregated and insured in an amount not to exceed $100,000 per participant per insured depository institution.

"(B) AMOUNTS TAKEN INTO ACCOUNT.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the amount aggregated for insurance coverage under this paragraph shall consist of the present vested and ascertainable interest of each participant under the plan, excluding any remainder interest created by, or as a result of, the plan.".

(3) CERTAIN TRUST FUNDS.—Section 7(i) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(i)) is amended to read as follows:

"(i) INSURANCE OF TRUST FUNDS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Trust funds held on deposit by an insured depository institution in a fiduciary capacity as trustee pursuant to any irrevocable trust established pursuant to any statute or written trust agreement shall be insured in an amount not to exceed $100,000 for each trust estate.

"(2) INTERBANK DEPOSITS.—Trust funds described in paragraph (1) which are deposited by the fiduciary depository institution in another insured depository institution shall be similarly insured to the fiduciary depository institution according to the trust estates represented.

"(3) REGULATIONS.—The Board of Directors may prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to clarify the insurance coverage under this subsection and to prescribe the manner of reporting and depositing such trust funds.".

(4) EXPANDED COVERAGE BY REGULATION.—

(A) REVIEW OF COVERAGE.—For the purpose of prescribing regulations, during the 1-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, the Board of Directors shall review the capacities and rights in which deposit accounts are maintained and for which deposit insurance coverage is provided by the Corporation.

(B) REGULATIONS.— After the end of the 1-year period referred to in subparagraph (A), the Board of Directors may prescribe regulations that provide for separate insurance coverage for the different capacities and rights in which deposit accounts are maintained if a determination is made by the Board of Directors that such separate insurance coverage is consistent with—

(i) the purpose of protecting small depositors and limiting the undue expansion of deposit insurance coverage; and

(ii) the insurance provisions of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

(C) DELAYED EFFECTIVE DATE FOR REGULATIONS.—No regulation prescribed under subparagraph (B) may take effect before the 2-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(5) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(A) Section 3(m) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1813(m)) is amended by striking "(m)(1)" and all that follows through paragraph (1) and inserting the following:

"(m) INSURED DEPOSIT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to paragraph (2), the term 'insured deposit' means the net amount due to any depositor for deposits in an insured depository institution as determined under sections 7(i) and 11(a).".

(B) Section 11(a)(2)(A) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(a)(2)(A)) is amended by striking "his deposit shall be insured" and inserting "such depositor shall, for the purpose of determining the amount of insured deposits under this subsection, be deemed a depositor in such custodial capacity separate and distinct from any other officer, employee, or agent of the United States or any public unit referred to in clause (ii), (iii), (iv), or (v) and the deposit of any such depositor shall be insured in an amount not to exceed $100,000 per account".

(C) The 2d subparagraph of section 11(a)(2) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(a)(2)) is amended by striking "(b)" and inserting "(B)".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by subsection (a) and paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (b) shall take effect at the end of the 2-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) APPLICATION TO TIME DEPOSITS.—

(A) CERTAIN DEPOSITS EXCLUDED.—Except with respect to the amendment referred to in paragraph (3), the amendments made by subsections (a) and (b) shall not apply to any time deposit which—

(i) was made before the date of enactment of this Act; and

(ii) matures after the end of the 2-year period referred to in paragraph (1).

(B) ROLLOVERS AND RENEWALS TREATED AS NEW DEPOSIT.—Any renewal or rollover of a time deposit described in subparagraph (A) after the date of the enactment of this Act shall be treated as a new deposit which is not described in such subparagraph.

(3) EFFECTIVE DATE FOR AMENDMENT RELATING TO CERTAIN EMPLOYEE PLANS.—

(A) Section 11(a)(1)(B) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (as amended by subsection (b)(1) of this section) shall take effect on the earlier of—

(i) the date of the enactment of this Act; or

(ii) January 1, 1992.

(B) Section 11(a)(3)(A) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (as amended by subsection (b)(2) of this section) shall take effect on the earlier of the dates described in clauses (i) and (ii) of subparagraph (A) with respect to plans described in clause (ii) of such section.

(d) INFORMATIONAL STUDY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, in conjunction with such consultants and technical experts as the Corporation determines to be appropriate, shall conduct a study of the cost and feasibility of tracking the insured and uninsured deposits of any individual and the exposure, under any Act of Congress or any regulation of any appropriate Federal banking agency, of the Federal Government with respect to all insured depository institutions.

(2) ANALYSIS OF COSTS AND BENEFITS.—The study under paragraph (1) shall include detailed, technical analysis of the costs and benefits associated with the least expensive way to implement the system.

(3) SPECIFIC FACTORS TO BE STUDIED.—As part of the study under paragraph (1), the Corporation shall investigate, review, and evaluate—

(A) the data systems that would be required to track deposits in all insured depository institutions;

(B) the reporting burdens of such tracking on individual depository institutions;

(C) the systems which exist or which would be required to be developed to aggregate such data on an accurate basis;

(D) the implications such tracking would have for individual privacy; and

(E) the manner in which systems would be administered and enforced.

(4) FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD SURVEY.—As part of the informational study required under paragraph (1), the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System shall conduct, in conjunction with other Federal departments and agencies as necessary, a survey of the ownership of deposits held by individuals including the dollar amount of deposits held, the type of deposit accounts held, and the type of financial institutions in which the deposit accounts are held.

(5) ANALYSIS BY FDIC.—The results of the survey under paragraph (4) shall be provided to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation before the end of the 1-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act for analysis and inclusion in the informational study.

(6) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Before the end of the 18-month period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation shall submit to the Congress a report containing a detailed statement of findings made and conclusions drawn from the study conducted under this section, including such recommendations for administrative and legislative action as the Corporation determines to be appropriate.

SEC. 312. FOREIGN DEPOSITS.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1811 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 40 (as added by preceding provisions of this Act) the following new section:

"SEC. 41. PAYMENTS ON FOREIGN DEPOSITS PROHIBITED.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Corporation, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, the Resolution Trust Corporation, any other agency, department, and instrumentality of the United States, and any corporation owned or controlled by the United States may not, directly or indirectly, make any payment or provide any assistance, guarantee, or transfer under this Act or any other provision of law in connection with any insured depository institution which would have the direct or indirect effect of satisfying, in whole or in part, any claim against the institution for obligations of the institution which would constitute deposits as defined in section 3(l) but for subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 3(l)(5).".

"(b) EXCEPTION.—Subsection (a) shall not apply to any payment, assistance, guarantee, or transfer made or provided by the Corporation if the Board of Directors determines in writing that such action is not inconsistent with any requirement of section 13(c).

"(c) DISCOUNT WINDOW LENDING.—No provision of this section shall be construed as prohibiting any Federal Reserve bank from making advances or otherwise extending credit pursuant to the Federal Reserve Act to any insured depository institution to the extent that such advance or extension of credit is consistent with the conditions and limitations imposed under section 10B of such Act.".

SEC. 313. PENALTY FOR FALSE ASSESSMENT REPORTS.

(a) INSURED DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS.—Section 7(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(c)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(5) PENALTY FOR FAILURE TO MAKE ACCURATE CERTIFIED STATEMENT.—

"(A) FIRST TIER.—Any insured depository institution which—

"(i) maintains procedures reasonably adapted to avoid any inadvertent error and, unintentionally and as a result of such an error, fails to submit the certified statement under paragraph (1) or (2) within the period of time required under paragraph (1) or (2) or submits a false or misleading certified statement; or

"(ii) submits the statement at a time which is minimally after the time required in such paragraph, shall be subject to a penalty of not more than $2,000 for each day during which such failure continues or such false and misleading information is not corrected. The institution shall have the burden of proving that an error was inadvertent or that a statement was inadvertently submitted late.

"(B) SECOND TIER.—Any insured depository institution which fails to submit the certified statement under paragraph (1) or (2) within the period of time required under paragraph (1) or (2) or submits a false or misleading certified statement in a manner not described in subparagraph (A) shall be subject to a penalty of not more than $20,000 for each day during which such failure continues or such false and misleading information is not corrected.

"(C) THIRD TIER.—Notwithstanding subparagraphs (A) and (B), if any insured depository institution knowingly or with reckless disregard for the accuracy of any certified statement described in paragraph (1) or (2) submits a false or misleading certified statement under paragraph (1) or (2), the Corporation may assess a penalty of not more than $1,000,000 or not more than 1 percent of the total assets of the institution, whichever is less, per day for each day during which the failure continues or the false or misleading information in such statement is not corrected.

"(D) ASSESSMENT PROCEDURE.—Any penalty imposed under this paragraph shall be assessed and collected by the Corporation in the manner provided in subparagraphs (E), (F), (G), and (I) of section 8(i)(2) (for penalties imposed under such section) and any such assessment (including the determination of the amount of the penalty) shall be subject to the provisions of such section.

"(E) HEARING.—Any insured depository institution against which any penalty is assessed under this paragraph shall be afforded an agency hearing if the institution submits a request for such hearing within 20 days after the issuance of the notice of the assessment. Section 8(h) shall apply to any proceeding under this subparagraph.".

(b) INSURED CREDIT UNIONS.—Section 202(d)(2) of the Federal Credit Union Act (12 U.S.C. 1782(d)(2)) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) PENALTY FOR FAILURE TO MAKE ACCURATE CERTIFIED STATEMENT OR TO PAY DEPOSIT OR PREMIUM.—

"(A) FIRST TIER.—Any insured credit union which—

"(i) maintains procedures reasonably adapted to avoid any inadvertent error and, unintentionally and as a result of such an error, fails to submit any certified statement under subsection (b)(1) within the period of time required or submits a false or misleading certified statement under such subsection; or

"(ii) submits the statement at a time which is minimally after the time required, shall be subject to a penalty of not more than $2,000 for each day during which such failure continues or such false and misleading information is not corrected. The insured credit union shall have the burden of proving that an error was inadvertent or that a statement was inadvertently submitted late.

"(B) SECOND TIER.—Any insured credit union which—

"(i) fails to submit any certified statement under subsection (b)(1) within the period of time required or submits a false or misleading certified statement in a manner not described in subparagraph (A); or

"(ii) fails or refuses to pay any deposit or premium for insurance required under this title, shall be subject to a penalty of not more than $20,000 for each day during which such failure continues, such false and misleading information is not corrected, or such deposit or premium is not paid.

"(C) THIRD TIER.—Notwithstanding subparagraphs (A) and (B), if any insured depository institution knowingly or with reckless disregard for the accuracy of any certified statement under subsection (b)(1) or submits a false or misleading certified statement under such subsection, the Corporation may assess a penalty of not more than $1,000,000 or not more than 1 percent of the total assets of the institution, whichever is less, per day for each day during which the failure continues or the false or misleading information in such statement is not corrected.

"(D) ASSESSMENT PROCEDURE.—Any penalty imposed under this paragraph shall be assessed and collected by the Corporation in the manner provided in section 206(k)(2) (for penalties imposed under such section) and any such assessment (including the determination of the amount of the penalty) shall be subject to the provisions of such section.

"(E) HEARING.—Any insured depository institution against which any penalty is assessed under this paragraph shall be afforded an agency hearing if the institution submits a request for such hearing within 20 days after the issuance of the notice of the assessment. Section 206(j) shall apply to any proceeding under this subparagraph.

"(F) SPECIAL RULE FOR DISPUTED PAYMENTS.—No penalty may be assessed for the failure of any insured credit union to pay any deposit or premium for insurance if—

"(i) the failure is due to a dispute between the credit union and the Board over the amount of the deposit or premium which is due from the credit union; and

"(ii) the credit union deposits security satisfactory to the Board for payment of the deposit or insurance premium upon final determination of the dispute.".

Subtitle C—Demonstration Project and Studies

SEC. 321. FEASIBILITY STUDY ON AUTHORIZING INSURED AND UNINSURED DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS.

(a) STUDY REQUIRED.—The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation shall study the feasibility of authorizing insured depository institutions to offer both insured and uninsured deposit accounts to customers.

(b) FACTORS TO CONSIDER.—In conducting the study required under subsection (a), the Corporation shall consider the following factors:

(1) The risk a 2-window deposit system would pose to the deposit insurance system.

(2) The disclosure standards which would be necessary to prevent customer confusion over the insured status of deposits and fraudulent or misleading practices with respect to such insured status.

(3) The extent to which accounting standards would have to be revised or changed.

(4) The manner in which a 2-window deposit plan could be implemented with the least disruption to the stability of, and the confidence of consumers in, the banking system.

(c) REPORT.—Before the end of the 6-month period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, the Corporation shall submit a report to the Congress containing the Corporation's findings and conclusions with respect to the study under subsection (a) and any recommendations for legislative or administrative action the Corporation may determine to be appropriate.

SEC. 322. PRIVATE REINSURANCE STUDY.

(a) STUDY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Board of Directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, in consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury and individuals from the private sector with expertise in private insurance, private reinsurance, depository institutions, or economics, shall conduct a study of the feasibility of establishing a private reinsurance system.

(2) PROJECT.—The study conducted under this subsection shall include a demonstration project consisting of a simulation, by a sample of private reinsurers and insured depository institutions, of the activities required for a private reinsurance system, including—

(A) establishment of a pricing structure for risk-based premiums;

(B) formulation of insurance or reinsurance contracts; and

(C) identification and collection of information necessary to evaluate and monitor the risks in insured depository institutions.

(3) ACTUAL REINSURANCE TRANSACTIONS.—The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation may engage in actual reinsurance transactions as part of a demonstration project conducted under paragraph (2).

(b) REPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Before the end of the 18-month period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation shall submit to the Congress a report on the study conducted under this section.

(2) CONTENTS.—The report under this subsection shall include—

(A) an analysis and review of the project conducted under subsection (a)(2);

(B) conclusions regarding the feasibility of a private reinsurance system;

(C) recommendations regarding whether—

(i) such a system should be restricted to depository institutions over a certain asset size;

(ii) similar systems are feasible for depository institutions or groups of depository institutions of a lesser asset size; and

(iii) public policy goals can be satisfied by such systems; and

(D) recommendations for administrative and legislative action that may be necessary to establish such systems.

TITLE IV—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Subtitle A—Payment System Risk Reduction

SEC. 401. FINDINGS AND PURPOSE.

The Congress finds that—

(1) many financial institutions engage daily in thousands of transactions with other financial institutions directly and through clearing organizations;

(2) the efficient processing of such transactions is essential to a smoothly functioning economy;

(3) such transactions can be processed most efficiently if, consistent with applicable contractual terms, obligations among financial institutions are netted;

(4) such netting procedures would reduce the systemic risk within the banking system and financial markets; and

(5) the effectiveness of such netting procedures can be assured only if they are recognized as valid and legally binding in the event of the closing of a financial institution participating in the netting procedures.

SEC. 402. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this subtitle—

(1) BROKER OR DEALER.—The term "broker or dealer" means—

(A) any company that is registered or licensed under Federal or State law to engage in the business of brokering, underwriting, or dealing in securities in the United States; and

(B) to the extent consistent with this title, as determined by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, any company that is an affiliate of a company described in subparagraph (A) and that is engaged in the business of entering into netting contracts.

(2) CLEARING ORGANIZATION.—The term "clearing organization" means a clearinghouse, clearing association, clearing corporation, or similar organization—

(A) that provides clearing, netting, or settlement services for its members and—

(i) in which all members other than the clearing organization itself are financial institutions or other clearing organizations; or

(ii) which is registered as a clearing agency under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934; or

(B) that performs clearing functions for a contract market designated pursuant to the Commodity Exchange Act.

(3) COVERED CLEARING OBLIGATION.—The term "covered clearing obligation" means an obligation of a member of a clearing organization to make payment to another member of a clearing organization, subject to a netting contract.

(4) COVERED CONTRACTUAL PAYMENT ENTITLEMENT.—The term "covered contractual payment entitlement" means—

(A) an entitlement of a financial institution to receive a payment, subject to a netting contract from another financial institution; and

(B) an entitlement of a member of a clearing organization to receive payment, subject to a netting contract, from another member of a clearing organization of a covered clearing obligation.

(5) COVERED CONTRACTUAL PAYMENT OBLIGATION.—The term "covered contractual payment obligation" means—

(A) an obligation of a financial institution to make payment, subject to a netting contract to another financial institution; and

(B) a covered clearing obligation.

(6) DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION.—The term "depository institution" means—

(A) a depository institution as defined in section 19(b)(1)(A) of the Federal Reserve Act (other than clause (vii));

(B) a branch or agency as defined in section 1(b) of the International Banking Act of 1978;

(C) a corporation chartered under section 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act; or

(D) a corporation having an agreement or undertaking with the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System under section 25 of the Federal Reserve Act.

(7) FAILED FINANCIAL INSTITUTION.—The term "failed financial institution" means a financial institution that—

(A) fails to satisfy a covered contractual payment obligation when due;

(B) has commenced or had commenced against it insolvency, liquidation, reorganization, receivership (including the appointment of a receiver), conservatorship, or similar proceedings; or

(C) has generally ceased to meet its obligations when due.

(8) FAILED MEMBER.—The term "failed member" means any member that—

(A) fails to satisfy a covered clearing obligation when due,

(B) has commenced or had commenced against it insolvency, liquidation, reorganization, receivership (including the appointment of a receiver), conservatorship, or similar proceedings, or

(C) has generally ceased to meet its obligations when due.

(9) FINANCIAL INSTITUTION.—The term "financial institution" means a broker or dealer, a depository institution, a futures commission merchant, or any other institution as determined by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

(10) FUTURES COMMISSION MERCHANT.—The term "futures commission merchant" means a company that is registered or licensed under Federal law to engage in the business of selling futures and options in commodities.

(11) MEMBER.—The term "member" means a member of or participant in a clearing organization, and includes the clearing organization.

(12) NET ENTITLEMENT.—The term "net entitlement" means the amount by which the covered contractual payment entitlements of a financial institution or member exceed the covered contractual payment obligations of the institution or member after netting under a netting contract.

(13) NET OBLIGATION.—The term "net obligation" means the amount by which the covered contractual payment obligations of a financial institution or member exceed the covered contractual payment entitlements of the institution or member after netting under a netting contract.

(14) NETTING CONTRACT.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term "netting contract"—

(i) means a contract or agreement between 2 or more financial institutions or members, that—

(I) is governed by the laws of the United States, any State, or any political subdivision of any State, and

(II) provides for netting present or future payment obligations or payment entitlements (including liquidation or close-out values relating to the obligations or entitlements) among the parties to the agreement; and

(ii) includes the rules of a clearing organization.

(B) INVALID CONTRACTS NOT INCLUDED.—The term "netting contract" does not include any contract or agreement that is invalid under or precluded by Federal commodities law.

SEC. 403. BILATERAL NETTING.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the covered contractual payment obligations and the covered contractual payment entitlements between any 2 financial institutions shall be netted in accordance with, and subject to the conditions of, the terms of any applicable netting contract.

(b) LIMITATION ON OBLIGATION TO MAKE PAYMENT.—The only obligation, if any, of a financial institution to make payment with respect to covered contractual payment obligations to another financial institution shall be equal to its net obligation to such other financial institution, and no such obligation shall exist if there is no net obligation.

(c) LIMITATION ON RIGHT TO RECEIVE PAYMENT.—The only right, if any, of a financial institution to receive payments with respect to covered contractual payment entitlements from another financial institution shall be equal to its net entitlement with respect to such other financial institution, and no such right shall exist if there is no net entitlement.

(d) PAYMENT OF NET ENTITLEMENT OF FAILED FINANCIAL INSTITUTION.—The net entitlement of any failed financial institution, if any, shall be paid to the failed financial institution in accordance with, and subject to the conditions of, the applicable netting contract.

(e) EFFECTIVENESS NOTWITHSTANDING STATUS AS FINANCIAL INSTITUTION.—This section shall be given effect notwithstanding that a financial institution is a failed financial institution.

SEC. 404. CLEARING ORGANIZATION NETTING.

(a) GENERAL NETTING RULE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the covered contractual payment obligations and covered contractual payment entitlements of a member of a clearing organization to and from all other members of a clearing organization shall be netted in accordance with and subject to the conditions of any applicable netting contract.

(b) LIMITATION OF OBLIGATION TO MAKE PAYMENT.—The only obligation, if any, of a member of a clearing organization to make payment with respect to covered contractual payment obligations arising under a single netting contract to any other member of a clearing organization shall be equal to its net obligation arising under that netting contract, and no such obligation shall exist if there is no net obligation.

(c) LIMITATION ON RIGHT TO RECEIVE PAYMENT.—The only right, if any, of a member of a clearing organization to receive payment with respect to a covered contractual payment entitlement arising under a single netting contract from other members of a clearing organization shall be equal to its net entitlement arising under that netting contract, and no such right shall exist if there is no net entitlement.

(d) ENTITLEMENT OF FAILED MEMBERS.—The net entitlement, if any, of any failed member of a clearing organization shall be paid to the failed member in accordance with, and subject to the conditions of, the applicable netting contract.

(e) OBLIGATIONS OF FAILED MEMBERS.—The net obligation, if any, of any failed member of a clearing organization shall be determined in accordance with, and subject to the conditions of, the applicable netting contract.

(f) LIMITATION ON CLAIMS FOR ENTITLEMENT.—A failed member of a clearing organization shall have no recognizable claim against any member of a clearing organization for any amount based on such covered contractual payment entitlements other than its net entitlement.

(g) EFFECTIVENESS NOTWITHSTANDING STATUS AS MEMBER.—This section shall be given effect notwithstanding that a member is a failed member.

SEC. 405. PREEMPTION.

No stay, injunction, avoidance, moratorium, or similar proceeding or order, whether issued or granted by a court, administrative agency, or otherwise, shall limit or delay application of otherwise enforceable netting contracts in accordance with sections 403 and 404.

SEC. 406. RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER PAYMENTS SYSTEMS.

This subtitle shall have no effect by implication or otherwise on the validity or legal enforceability of a netting arrangement of any payment system which is not subject to this subtitle.

SEC. 407. NATIONAL EMERGENCIES.

The provisions of this subtitle may not be construed to limit the authority of the President under the Trading With the Enemy Act (50 U.S.C. App. 1 et seq.) or the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (50 U.S.C. 1701 et seq.).

Subtitle B—Right to Financial Privacy Act of 1978

SEC. 411. AMENDMENTS TO THE RIGHT TO FINANCIAL PRIVACY ACT OF 1978.

The Right to Financial Privacy Act of 1978 is amended—

(1) in section 1112(f)(2) (12 U.S.C. 3412(f)(2))—

(A) by inserting "for civil actions under section 951 of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989, or for forfeiture under sections 981 or 982 of title 18, United States Code" after "purposes"; and

(B) by adding at the end the following new sentence: "No agency or department so transferring such records shall be deemed to have waived any privilege applicable to those records under law.";

(2) in section 1113(h)(1)(A) (12 U.S.C. 3413(h)(1)(A)), by striking "the financial institution in possession of such records" and inserting "a financial institution (whether or not such proceeding, investigation, examination, or inspection is also directed at a customer)";

(3) in section 1113(h)(4) (12 U.S.C. 3413(h)(4)) by striking "the financial institution in possession of such records" and inserting "a financial institution (whether or not such proceeding, investigation, examination, or inspection is also directed at a customer)"; and

(4) in section 1113(l) (12 U.S.C. 3413(l)), by adding after paragraph (2) the following new sentence:

"No supervisory agency which transfers any such record under this subsection shall be deemed to have waived any privilege applicable to that record under law.".

Subtitle C—Final Settlement Payment Procedure

SEC. 416. FINAL SETTLEMENT PAYMENT PROCEDURE.

Section 11(d)(4) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(d)) is amended to read as follows:

"(4) RULEMAKING AUTHORITY RELATING TO DETERMINATION OF CLAIMS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Corporation may prescribe regulations regarding the allowance or disallowance of claims by the receiver and providing for administrative determinations of claims and review of such determination.

"(B) FINAL SETTLEMENT PAYMENT PROCEDURE.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—In the handling of receiverships of insured depository institutions, to maintain essential liquidity and to prevent financial disruption, the Corporation may, after the declaration of an institution's insolvency, settle all uninsured and unsecured claims on the receivership with a final settlement payment which shall constitute full payment and disposition of the Corporation's obligations to such claimants.

"(ii) FINAL SETTLEMENT PAYMENT.—For purposes of clause (i), a final settlement payment shall be payment of an amount equal to the product of the final settlement payment rate and the amount of the uninsured and unsecured claim on the receivership; and

"(iii) FINAL SETTLEMENT PAYMENT RATE.—For purposes of clause (ii), the final settlement payment rate shall be a percentage rate reflecting an average of the Corporation's receivership recovery experience, determined by the Corporation in such a way that over such time period as the Corporation may deem appropriate, the Corporation in total will receive no more or less than it would have received in total as a general creditor standing in the place of insured depositors in each specific receivership.

"(iv) CORPORATION AUTHORITY.—The Corporation may undertake such supervisory actions and promulgate such regulations as may be necessary to assure that the requirements of this section can be implemented with respect to each insured depository institution in the event of its insolvency.".

Subtitle D—Miscellaneous Committees, Studies, and Reports

SEC. 421. AMENDMENTS RELATING TO FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD RESERVE REQUIREMENTS.

(a) STUDY ON PAYMENT OF IMPUTED EARNINGS ON STERILE RESERVES TO INSURANCE FUNDS.—The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Comptroller of the Currency, the Director of the Office of Thrift Supervision, and the National Credit Union Administration shall jointly—

(1) conduct a study on the feasibility of assessing Federal Reserve banks an amount equal to the imputed earnings on reserves held at such banks by insured depository institutions under section 19(b) of the Federal Reserve Act; and

(2) assess the likely beneficial and adverse effects such an assessment would have on the Federal reserve banks, the deposit insurance funds, the insured depository institutions, and the Federal payment system, including a comparison of the effects on each such subject of the study.

(b) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Before the end of the 6-month period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Comptroller of the Currency, the Director of the Office of Thrift Supervision, and the National Credit Union Administration shall jointly submit a report to the Congress on the findings and conclusions made with respect to the study under subsection (a), together with any recommendation for any legislative or administrative action which such agencies may determine to be appropriate.

(c) REPORT OF DISSENTING VIEWS.—Any agency described in subsections (a) and (b) which does not concur in the findings, conclusions, or recommendations referred to in subsection (b) or has additional findings, conclusions, or recommendations which were not included in the report may submit a report to the Congress describing—

(1) the reasons why the agency does not concur in the findings, conclusions, or recommendations referred to in subsection (b); and

(2) such additional findings, conclusions, or recommendations.

SEC. 422. PERMANENT AUTHORIZATION OF CREDIT STANDARDS BOARD.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 1205 of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 (12 U.S.C. 1818 note) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(f) FEDERAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE ACT DOES NOT APPLY.—The Federal Advisory Committee Act shall not apply with respect to the Committee.".

Section 11(d)(2) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(d)(2)) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(K) UTILIZATION OF PRIVATE SECTOR.—In carrying out its responsibilities in the management and disposition of assets from insured depository institutions, as conservator, receiver, or in its corporate capacity, the Corporation shall utilize the services of private persons, including real estate and loan portfolio asset management, property management, auction marketing, and brokerage services, if such services are available in the private sector and the Corporation determines utilization of such services is practicable, efficient, and cost effective.".

SEC. 427. REPORTING.

Section 17 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1827) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(h) ADDITIONAL REPORTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In addition to the reports required under subsections (a), (b), and (c), the Corporation shall submit to Congress not later than April 30 and October 31 of each year, a semiannual report on the activities and efforts of the Corporation for the 6-month period ending on the last day of the month prior to the month in which such report is required to be submitted.

"(2) CONTENTS OF REPORT.—Each semiannual report required under this subsection shall include the following information with respect to the Corporation's assets and liabilities and the assets and liabilities of institutions for which the Corporation serves as a conservator or receiver:

"(A) A statement of the total book value of all assets held or managed by the Corporation at the beginning and end of the reporting period.

"(B) A statement of the total book value of such assets which are under contract to be managed by private persons and entities at the beginning and end of the reporting period.

"(C) The number of employees of the Corporation at the beginning and end of the reporting period.

"(D) A statement of the total amount expended on private contractors for the management of such assets.

"(E) A statement of the efforts of the Corporation to maximize the efficient utilization of the resources of the private sector during the reporting period and in future reporting periods and a description of the policies and procedures adopted to ensure adequate competition and fair and consistent treatment of qualified third parties seeking to provide services to the Corporation.".

Subtitle F—Emergency Assistance for Rhode Island

SEC. 431. EMERGENCY LOAN GUARANTEE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) PROVISION FOR GUARANTEE.—Subject to the terms and conditions established by or under this subsection, the Secretary of the Treasury shall guarantee the repayment of any amount not to exceed $180,000,000 borrowed by the State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations (hereafter in this section referred to as the "State of Rhode Island"), or the Depositors Economic Protection Corporation established by such State, to expedite the repayment of depositors at State-chartered banks and credit unions in receivership in such State and to facilitate the resolution of such receiverships.

(2) LOAN COLLATERAL REQUIRED AS CONDITION FOR GUARANTEE.—The Secretary of the Treasury may not guarantee the repayment of any amount under paragraph (1) unless the amount of any loan for which the guarantee is sought is fully secured as follows:

(A) A first lien on assets held or controlled by the Depositors Economic Protection Corporation and the proceeds from the sale of such assets, are irrevocably pledged to the extent necessary to provide collateral for the guarantee.

(B) If the lien and assets described in subparagraph (A) are insufficient to fully secure the guarantee, then a first lien on any assets held or controlled by the State of Rhode Island or any instrumentality of the State of Rhode Island and the proceeds from the sale of such assets, are irrevocably pledged to the extent necessary to provide collateral for the guarantee.

(C) If the liens and assets described in subparagraphs (A) and (B) are insufficient to fully secure the guarantee, then any revenue from the State sales tax which is dedicated to the Depositors Economic Protection Corporation under the law of the State of Rhode Island in excess of the amount necessary to pay principal and interest on any obligation of the State or the Corporation issued before the date of the loan is irrevocably dedicated to the extent necessary to provide collateral for the guarantee.

(3) GUARANTEE FEES.—The Secretary may assess and collect with respect to loans guaranteed under this subsection an annual guarantee fee computed daily at a rate which may not exceed one-half of 1 percent of the outstanding principal amount of the guaranteed loan.

(4) PLEDGE OF CERTAIN INCOME FOR REPAYMENT.—The Secretary may not guarantee under this section the repayment of any loan proposed to be made to the Depositors Economic Protection Corporation unless, for each fiscal year of the Depositors Economic Protection Corporation, all rents, issues, profits, products, proceeds, revenues, and other income (including insurance proceeds and condemnation awards) received by the Corporation from, or attributable to, the assets pledged to the United States in accordance with this subsection, in excess of the amount necessary to pay the interest, or principal and interest on any loan to the Corporation guaranteed under paragraph (1) that is payable in such fiscal year are irrevocably pledged to be deposited into a sinking fund or defeasance fund maintained by the Corporation and are irrevocably pledged and dedicated to the repayment of the principal of such guaranteed loan in the inverse order of the maturity of such principal installments.

(5) INVESTMENT GRADE RATING.—The Secretary may not guarantee under this section the repayment of any loan proposed to be made to the State of Rhode Island or the Depositors Economic Protection Corporation unless each such proposed loan has received a rating (for purposes of which the collateral securing the guarantee is considered to be securing the loan) of—

(A) the highest investment grade from a nationally recognized statistical rating organization;

(B) not less than 1 less than the investment grade rating from 2 nationally recognized statistical rating organizations; or

(C) not less than 2 less than the highest investment grade from 2 nationally recognized statistical rating organizations to the extent that—

(i) a rating of not less than 1 less than the highest investment grade rating from 2 nationally recognized statistical rating organization has not been achieved through the use of all of the collateral listed in subsection (a)(2)(A) and the available collateral under subparagraph (B) or (C) of subsection (a)(2) at the time of the State of Rhode Island's request for the loan guarantee; and

(ii) representatives of the State of Rhode Island and the Secretary are able to agree upon the lesser grade rating based on changes negotiated to other terms of this subtitle, including the purchase of bond insurance.

(6) Terms.—

(A) In general.—The guarantee provided for in this subsection shall be with respect to a loan which—

(i) is made not more than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act;

(ii) will mature not later than 8 years after the date of such loan; and

(iii) is scheduled to be repaid in equal installments of principal during the last 4 years of the repayment term of such loan.

(B) Authority to vary time periods.—The Secretary and the duly authorized representative of the State of Rhode Island may, by mutual agreement, modify any durational requirement specified in subparagraph (A).

(7) Additional terms and conditions.—Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, the terms and conditions of any loan guarantee under this section shall be established by mutual agreement of the Secretary of the Treasury and the duly authorized representative of the State of Rhode Island.

(b) Appropriation of amounts.—There are hereby appropriated to the Secretary of the Treasury such sums as may be necessary for any fiscal year to meet the obligation of the United States under subsection (a)(1).

Subtitle H—Prohibition on Entering Secrecy Agreements and Protective Orders

SEC. 446. PROHIBITION ON ENTERING INTO SECRECY AGREEMENTS AND PROTECTIVE ORDERS.

Section 11 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(s) Prohibition on Entering Secrecy Agreements and Protective Orders.—The Corporation may not enter into any agreement or approve any protective order which prohibits the Corporation from disclosing the terms of any settlement of an administrative or other action for damages or restitution brought by the Corporation in its capacity as conservator or receiver for an insured depository institution.".

Subtitle I—Bank and Thrift Employee Provisions

SEC. 451. CONTINUATION OF HEALTH PLAN COVERAGE IN CASES OF FAILED FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS.

(a) Continuation Coverage.—The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation—

(1) shall, in its capacity as a successor of a failed depository institution (whether acting directly or through any bridge bank), have the same obligation to provide a group health plan meeting the requirements of section 602 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (relating to continuation coverage requirements of group health plans) with respect to former employees of such institution as such institution would have had but for its failure, and

(2) shall require that any successor described in subsection (b)(1)(B)(iii) provide a group health plan with respect to former employees of such institution in the same manner as the failed depository institution would have been required to provide but for its failure.

(b) Definitions.—For purposes of this section—

(1) Successor.—An entity is a successor of a failed depository institution during any period if—

(A) such entity holds substantially all of the assets or liabilities of such institution, and

(B) such entity is—

(i) the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation,

(ii) any bridge bank, or

(iii) an entity that acquires such assets or liabilities from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation or a bridge bank.

(2) Failed depository institution.—The term "failed depository institution" means any depository institution (as defined in section 3(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act) for which a receiver has been appointed.

(3) Bridge bank.—The term "bridge bank" has the meaning given such term by section 11(i) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

(c) No premium costs imposed on FDIC.—Subsection (a) shall not be construed as requiring the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to incur, by reason of this section, any obligation for any premium under any group health plan referred to in such subsection.

(d) Effective Date.—This section shall apply to plan years beginning on or after the date of the enactment of this Act, regardless of whether the qualifying event under section 603 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 occurred before, on, or after such date.

Subtitle J—Sense of the Congress Regarding the Credit Crisis

SEC. 456. CREDIT CRUNCH.

(a) Findings.—The Congress finds that—

(1) during the past year and a half a credit crunch of crisis proportions has taken hold of the economy and grown increasingly severe, particularly for real estate;

(2) to date the credit crisis has shown no sign of improvement with its effects being felt broadly throughout the Nation as business failures soar, financial institutions weaken, real estate values decline, and State and local property tax bases further erode;

(3) approximately $200,000,000,000 of the nearly $400,000,000,000 in commercial real estate loans now held by commercial banks are coming due within the next 2 years;

(4) banks for a variety of reasons, are reluctant to renew these maturing real estate loans;

(5) both pension funds in the United States, with assets of nearly $2,000,000,000,000, and a stronger and more active secondary market for commercial real estate debt and equity could play a more significant role in providing liquidity and credit to the real estate and banking sectors of the economy;

(6) many regulatory practices encourage banks to reduce their real estate lending without regard to long-term historical risk; and

(7) the stability of real estate has suffered during the past decade first from tax rules that in 1981 stimulated excessive investment in real estate, and then in 1986 when rules were adopted that discourage capital investment in real estate, artificially eroding real estate values.

(b) Sense of the Congress.—It is the sense of the Congress that—

(1) immediate and carefully-coordinated action should be taken by the Congress and the President to arrest the credit crisis referred to in subsection (a) and provide a healthy and efficient marketplace that works for owners, lenders, and investors; and

(2) that efforts should be undertaken to explore measures that—

(A) modernize and simplify the rules that apply to pension investment in real estate to remove unnecessary barriers to pension funds seeking to invest in real estate;

(B) strengthen the secondary market for commercial real estate debt and equity by removing arbitrary obstacles to private forms of credit enhancement;

(C) restore balance to the regulatory environment by considering the impact of risk-based capital standards on commercial, multifamily and single-family real estate; ending mark-to-market, liquidation-based, appraisals; encouraging loan renewals; and, fully communicating the supervisory policy to bank examiners in the field; and

(D) rationalize the tax system for real estate owners and operators by modifying the passive loss rules and encouraging loan restructures.

Subtitle K—Aquisition of Insolvent Savings Associations

SEC. 461. AQUISITION OF INSOLVENT SAVINGS ASSOCIATIONS.

Section 4(i) of the Bank Holding Company Act (12 U.S.C. 1843(i)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) Acquisition of insolvent savings associations.—

"(A) In general.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, any qualified savings association which became a federally chartered stock company in December of 1986 and which is acquired by any bank holding company without Federal financial assistance after June 1, 1991, and before March 1, 1992, and any subsidiary of any such association, may after such acquisition continue to engage within the home State of the qualified savings association in insurance agency activities in which any Federal savings association (or any subsidiary thereof) may engage in accordance with the Home Owners' Loan Act and regulations pursuant to such Act if the qualified savings association or subsidiary thereof was continuously engaged in such activity from June 1, 1991, to the date of the acquisition.

"(B) Definition of qualified savings association.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'qualified savings association' means any savings association that—"(i) was chartered or organized as a savings association before June 1, 1991;

"(ii) had, immediately before the acquisition of such association by the bank holding company referred to in subparagraph (A), negative tangible capital and total insured deposits in excess of $3,000,000,000; and

"(iii) will meet all applicable regulatory capital requirements as a result of such acquisition.".

Subtitle L—Creditability of Service

SEC. 466. CREDITABILITY OF SERVICE.

(a) Chapter 83.—Section 8332 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(n) Any employee who—

"(1) served in a position in which the employee was excluded from coverage under this subchapter because the employee was covered under a retirement system established under section 10 of the Federal Reserve Act; and

"(2) transferred without a break in service to a position to which the employee was appointed by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, and in which position the employee is subject to this subchapter, shall be treated for all purposes of this subchapter as if any service that would have been creditable under the retirement system established under section 10 of the Federal Reserve Act was service performed while subject to this subchapter if any employee and employer deductions, contributions or rights with respect to the employee's service are transferred from such retirement system to the Fund.".

(b) Chapter 84.—Section 8411 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(g) Any employee who—

"(1) served in a position in which the employee was excluded from coverage under this subchapter because the employee was covered under a retirement system established under section 10 of the Federal Reserve Act; and

"(2) transferred without a break in service to a position to which the employee was appointed by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, and in which position the employee is subject to this subchapter, shall be treated for all purposes of this subchapter as if any service that would have been creditable under the retirement system established under section 10 of the Federal Reserve Act was service performed while subject to this subchapter if any employee and employer deductions, contributions or rights with respect to the employee's service are transferred from such retirement system to the Fund.".

(c) Applicability.—The amendment made by this section shall apply with respect to any individual who transfers to a position in which he or she is subject to subchapter III of chapter 83 or chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, on or after October 1, 1991.

Subtitle M—Other Miscellaneous Provisions

SEC. 471. PROVIDING SERVICES TO INSURED DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS.

Section 21A of the Home Owners' Loan Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(q) Continuation of Obligation To Provide Services.—No person obligated to provide services to an insured depository institution at the time the Resolution Trust Corporation is appointed conservator or receiver for the institution shall fail to provide those services to any person to whom the right to receive those services was transferred by the Resolution Trust Corporation after August 9, 1989, unless the refusal is based on the transferee's failure to comply with any material term or condition of the original obligation. This subsection does not limit any authority of the Resolution Trust Corporation as conservator or receiver under section 11(e) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.".

SEC. 472. REAL ESTATE APPRAISALS.

(a) Certification and Licensing Requirements.—Section 1116 of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 (12 U.S.C. 3345) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(e) Authority of the Appraisal Subcommittee.—The Appraisal Subcommittee shall not set qualifications or experience requirements for the States in licensing real estate appraisers, including a de minimus standard. Recommendations of the Subcommittee shall be nonbinding on the States.".

(b) Use of State Certified and State Licensed Appraisers.—

(1) Effective date for use.—Section 1119(a)(1) of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 (12 U.S.C. 3348(a)(1)) is amended by striking "July 1, 1991" and inserting "December 31, 1992".

(2) Extension of effective date.—Section 1119(b) of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 (12 U.S.C. 3348(b)) is amended—

(A) in the first sentence, by striking "leading to inordinate delays" and inserting ", or in any geographical political subdivision of a State, leading to significant delays"; and

(B) in the second sentence, by striking "inordinate" and inserting "significant".

(c) OMB Study of De Minimus Standards.—Before the end of the 6-month period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall conduct a study of whether there is a need to establish de minimus levels for commercial real estate.

SEC. 473. EMERGENCY LIQUIDITY.

Section 13 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 343) is amended in the third paragraph by striking "of the kinds and maturities made eligible for discount for member banks under other provisions of this Act".

SEC. 474. DISCRIMINATION AGAINST REORGANIZED DEBTORS.

Section 7(a) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1817(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(9) A Federal banking agency may not, by regulation or otherwise, designate, or require an insured institution or an affiliate to designate, a corporation as highly leveraged or a transaction with a corporation as a highly leveraged transaction solely because such corporation is or has been a debtor or bankrupt under title 11, United States Code, if, after confirmation of a plan of reorganization, such corporation would not otherwise be highly leveraged.".

SEC. 475. PURCHASED MORTGAGE SERVICING RIGHTS.

(a) In General.—Notwithstanding section 5(t)(4) of the Home Owners' Loan Act, each appropriate Federal banking agency shall determine, with respect to insured depository institutions for which it is the appropriate Federal regulator, the amount of readily marketable purchased mortgage servicing rights that may be included in calculating such institution's tangible capital, risk-based capital, or leverage limit, if—

(1) such servicing rights are valued at not more than 90 percent of their fair market value; and

(2) the fair market value of such servicing rights is determined not less often than quarterly.

(b) Definition.—For purposes of this section, the terms "appropriate Federal banking agency" and "insured depository institution" have the same meanings as in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this Act shall take effect at the end of the 60-day period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 476. LIMITATION ON SECURITIES PRIVATE RIGHTS OF ACTION.

The Securities Exchange Act of 1934 is amended by inserting after section 27 (15 U.S.C. 78aa) the following new section:

"SPECIAL PROVISION RELATING TO STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS ON PRIVATE CAUSES OF ACTION

"Sec. 27A. (a) Effect on Pending Causes of Action.—The limitation period for any private civil action implied under section 10(b) of this Act that was commenced on or before June 19, 1991, shall be the limitation period provided by the laws applicable in the jurisdiction, including principles of retroactivity, as such laws existed on June 19, 1991.

"(b) Effect on Dismissed Causes of Action.—Any private civil action implied under section 10(b) of this Act that was commenced on or before June 19, 1991—

"(1) which was dismissed as time barred subsequent to June 19, 1991, and

"(2) which would have been timely filed under the limitation period provided by the laws applicable in the jurisdiction, including principles of retroactivity, as such laws existed on June 19, 1991, shall be reinstated on motion by the plaintiff not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this section.".

SEC. 477. MODIFIED SMALL BUSINESS LENDING DISCLOSURE.

The Federal Reserve Board shall collect and publish, on an annual basis, information on the availability of credit to small businesses. The information shall, to the extent practicable—

(1) include information on commercial loans to small businesses, agricultural loans to small farms, and loans to minority-owned small businesses;

(2) be given for categories of small businesses determined by annual sales and for small businesses in existence for less than 1 year; and

(3) be given for each geographic region of the United States.

In collecting the information, the Federal Reserve board shall take into consideration the need to minimize reporting costs, if any, on financial institutions.

Subtitle N—Severability

SEC. 481. SEVERABILITY.

If any provision of this Act, or any application of any provision of this Act to any person or circumstance, is held invalid, the remainder of the Act, and the application of any remaining provision of the Act to any other person or circumstance, shall not be affected by such holding.

TITLE V—DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION CONVERSIONS

SEC. 501. MERGERS AND ACQUISITIONS OF INSURED DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS DURING CONVERSION MORATORIUM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 5(d)(3) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1815(d)(3)) is amended to read as follows:

"(3) OPTIONAL CONVERSIONS SUBJECT TO SPECIAL RULES ON DEPOSIT INSURANCE PAYMENTS.—

"(A) CONVERSIONS ALLOWED.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding paragraph (2)(A) and subject to the requirements of this paragraph, any insured depository institution may participate in a transaction described in clause (ii), (iii), or (iv) of paragraph (2)(B) with the prior written approval of the responsible agency under section 18(c)(2).

"(ii) HOLDING COMPANY SUBSIDIARIES.—If, in connection with any transaction referred to in clause (i), the acquiring, assuming, or resulting depository institution is a Bank Insurance Fund member which is a subsidiary of a bank holding company, the prior written approval of the Board shall be required for such transaction in addition to the approval of any agency referred to in clause (i).

"(B) ASSESSMENTS ON DEPOSITS ATTRIBUTABLE TO FORMER DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION.—

"(i) ASSESSMENTS BY SAIF.—In the case of any acquiring, assuming, or resulting depository institution which is a Bank Insurance Fund member, that portion of the average assessment base of such member for any semiannual period which is equal to the adjusted attributable deposit amount (determined under subparagraph (C) with respect to the transaction) shall—

"(I) be subject to assessment at the assessment rate applicable under section 7 for Savings Association Insurance Fund members;

"(II) not be taken into account for purposes of any assessment under section 7 for Bank Insurance Fund members; and

"(III) be treated as deposits which are insured by the Savings Association Insurance Fund.

"(ii) ASSESSMENTS BY BIF.—In the case of any acquiring, assuming, or resulting depository institution which is a Savings Association Insurance Fund member, that portion of the average assessment base of such member for any semiannual period which is equal to the adjusted attributable deposit amount (determined under subparagraph (C) with respect to the transaction) shall—

"(I) be subject to assessment at the assessment rate applicable under section 7 for Bank Insurance Fund members;

"(II) not be taken into account for purposes of any assessment under section 7 for Savings Association Insurance Fund members; and

"(III) be treated as deposits which are insured by the Bank Insurance Fund.

"(C) DETERMINATION OF ADJUSTED ATTRIBUTABLE DEPOSIT AMOUNT.—The adjusted attributable deposit amount which shall be taken into account for purposes of determining the amount of the assessment under subparagraph (B) for any semiannual period by any acquiring, assuming, or resulting depository institution in connection with a transaction under subparagraph (A) is the amount which is equal to the sum of—

"(i) the amount of any deposits acquired by the institution in connection with the transaction (as determined at the time of such transaction);

"(ii) the total of the amounts determined under clause (iii) for semiannual periods preceding the semiannual period for which the determination is being made under this subparagraph; and

"(iii) the amount by which the sum of the amounts described in clauses (i) and (ii) would have increased during the preceding semiannual period (other than any semiannual period beginning before the date of such transaction) if such increase occurred at a rate equal to the annual rate of growth of deposits of the acquiring, assuming, or resulting depository institution minus the amount of any deposits acquired through the acquisition, in whole or in part, of another insured depository institution.

"(D) DEPOSIT OF ASSESSMENT.—That portion of any assessment under section 7 which—

"(i) is determined in accordance with subparagraph (B)(i) shall be deposited in the Savings Association Insurance Fund; and

"(ii) is determined in accordance with subparagraph (B)(ii) shall be deposited in the Bank Insurance Fund.

"(E) CONDITIONS FOR APPROVAL, GENERALLY.—

"(i) FACTORS TO BE CONSIDERED; APPROVAL PROCESS.—In reviewing any application for a proposed transaction under subparagraph (A), the responsible agency (and, in the event the acquiring, assuming, or resulting depository institution is a Bank Insurance Fund member which is a subsidiary of a bank holding company, the Board) shall follow the procedures and consider the factors set forth in section 18(c).

"(ii) INFORMATION REQUIRED.—An application to engage in any transaction under this paragraph shall contain such information relating to the factors to be considered for approval as the responsible agency or Board may require, by regulation or by specific request, in connection with any particular application.

"(iii) NO TRANSFER OF DEPOSIT INSURANCE PERMITTED.—This paragraph shall not be construed as authorizing transactions which result in the transfer of any insured depository institution's Federal deposit insurance from 1 Federal deposit insurance fund to the other Federal deposit insurance fund.,

"(iv) MINIMUM CAPITAL.—The responsible agency, and the appropriate Federal banking agency for any depository institution holding company, shall disapprove any application for any transaction under this paragraph unless each such agency determines that the acquiring, assuming, or resulting depository institution, and any depository institution holding company which controls such institution, will meet all applicable capital requirements upon consummation of the transaction.

"(F) CERTAIN INTERSTATE TRANSACTIONS.—The Board may not approve any transaction under subparagraph (A) in which the acquiring, assuming, or resulting depository institution is a Bank Insurance Fund member which is a subsidiary of a bank holding company unless the Board determines that the transaction would comply with the requirements of section 3(d) of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 if, at the time of such transaction, the Savings Association Insurance Fund member involved in such transaction was a State bank that the bank holding company was applying to acquire.

"(G) EXPEDITED APPROVAL OF ACQUISITIONS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Any application by a State nonmember insured bank to acquire another insured depository institution that is required to be filed with the Corporation by subparagraph (A) or any other applicable law or regulation shall be approved or disapproved in writing by the Corporation before the end of the 60-day period beginning on the date such application is filed with the Corporation.

"(ii) EXTENSIONS OF PERIOD.—The period for approval or disapproval referred to in clause (i) may be extended for an additional 30-day period if the Corporation determines that—

"(I) an applicant has not furnished all of the information required to be submitted; or

"(II) in the Corporation's judgment, any material information submitted is substantially inaccurate or incomplete.

"(H) ALLOCATION OF COSTS IN EVENT OF DEFAULT.—If any acquiring, assuming, or resulting depository institution is in default or danger of default at any time before this paragraph ceases to apply, any loss incurred by the Corporation shall be allocated between the Bank Insurance Fund and the Savings Association Insurance Fund, in amounts reflecting the amount of insured deposits of such acquiring, assuming, or resulting depository institution assessed by the Bank Insurance Fund and the Savings Association Insurance Fund, respectively, under subparagraph (B).

"(I) SUBSEQUENT APPROVAL OF CONVERSION TRANSACTION.—This paragraph shall cease to apply if—

"(i) after the end of the 5-year period referred to in paragraph (2)(A), the Corporation approves an application by any acquiring, assuming, or resulting depository institution to treat the transaction described in subparagraph (A) as a conversion transaction; and

"(ii) the acquiring, assuming, or resulting depository institution pays the amount of any exit and entrance fee assessed by the Corporation under subparagraph (E) of paragraph (2) with respect to such transaction.

"(J) ACQUIRING, ASSUMING, OR RESULTING DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION DEFINED.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'acquiring, assuming, or resulting depository institution' means any insured depository institution which—

"(i) results from any transaction described in paragraph (2)(B)(ii) and approved under this paragraph;

"(ii) in connection with a transaction described in paragraph (2)(B)(iii) and approved under this paragraph, assumes any liability to pay deposits of another insured depository institution; or

"(iii) in connection with a transaction described in paragraph (2)(B)(iv) and approved under this paragraph, acquires assets from any insured depository institution in consideration of the assumption of liability for any deposits of such institution.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) to section 5(d)(3)(C) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act shall apply with respect to semiannual periods beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) TRANSITION RULE FOR SAVINGS ASSOCIATIONS ACQUIRING BANKS.—Section 5(c) of the Home Owners' Loan Act (12 U.S.C. 1464(c)) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraph (5) as paragraph (6); and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (4) the following new paragraph:

"(5) TRANSITION RULE FOR SAVINGS ASSOCIATIONS ACQUIRING BANKS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If, under section 5(d)(3) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, a savings association acquires all or substantially all of the assets of a bank that is a member of the Bank Insurance Fund, the Director may permit the savings association to retain any such asset during the 2-year period beginning on the date of the acquisition.

"(B) EXTENSION.—The Director may extend the 2-year period described in subparagraph (A) for not more than 1 year at a time and not more than 2 years in the aggregate, if the Director determines that the extension is consistent with the purposes of this Act.".

SEC. 502. MERGERS, CONSOLIDATIONS, AND OTHER ACQUISITIONS AUTHORIZED.

(a) FEDERAL SAVINGS ASSOCIATIONS.—Section 10 of the Home Owners' Loan Act (12 U.S.C. 1467a) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(t) MERGERS, CONSOLIDATIONS, AND OTHER ACQUISITIONS AUTHORIZED.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to sections 5(d)(3) and 18(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act and all other applicable laws, any Federal savings association may acquire or be acquired by any insured depository institution.

"(2) EXPEDITED APPROVAL OF ACQUISITIONS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Any application by a savings association to acquire or be acquired by another insured depository institution which is required to be filed with the Director under section 5(d)(3) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act or any other applicable law or regulation shall be approved or disapproved in writing by the Director before the end of the 60-day period beginning on the date such application is filed with the agency.

"(B) EXTENSION OF PERIOD.—The period for approval or disapproval referred to in subparagraph (A) may be extended for an additional 30-day period if the Director determines that—

"(i) an applicant has not furnished all of the information required to be submitted; or

"(ii) in the Director's judgment, any material information submitted is substantially inaccurate or incomplete.

"(3) ACQUIRE DEFINED.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'acquire' means to acquire, directly or indirectly, ownership or control through a merger or consolidation or an acquisition of assets or assumption of liabilities, provided that following such merger, consolidation, or acquisition, an acquiring insured depository institution may not own the shares of the acquired insured depository institution.

"(4) REGULATIONS.—

"(A) REQUIRED.—The Director shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out paragraph (1).

"(B) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The regulations required under subparagraph (A) shall—

"(i) be prescribed in final form before the end of the 90-day period beginning on the date of the enactment of this subsection; and

"(ii) take effect before the end of the 120-day period beginning on such date.

"(5) LIMITATION..—No provision of this section shall be construed to authorize a national bank or any subsidiary thereof to engage in any activity not otherwise authorized under the National Bank Act or any other law governing the powers of a national bank.".

(b) NATIONAL BANKS.—Chapter 1 of title LXII of the Revised Statutes of the United States (12 U.S.C. 5133 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 5156A. MERGERS, CONSOLIDATIONS, AND OTHER ACQUISITIONS AUTHORIZED.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to sections 5(d)(3) and 18(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act and all other applicable laws, any national bank may acquire or be acquired by any insured depository institution.

"(b) EXPEDITED APPROVAL OF ACQUISITIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Any application by a national bank to acquire or be acquired by another insured depository institution which is required to be filed with the Comptroller of the Currency by section 5(d)(3) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act or any other applicable law or regulation shall be approved or disapproved in writing by the agency before the end of the 60-day period beginning on the date such application is filed with the agency.

"(2) EXTENSIONS OF PERIOD.—The period for approval or disapproval referred to in paragraph (1) may be extended for an additional 30-day period if the Comptroller of the Currency determines that—

"(A) an applicant has not furnished all of the information required to be submitted; or

"(B) in the Comptroller's judgment, any material information submitted is substantially inaccurate or incomplete.

"(c) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—No provision of this section shall be construed as authorizing a national bank or a subsidiary of a national bank to engage in any activity not otherwise authorized under this Act or any other law governing the powers of national banks.

"(d) ACQUIRE DEFINED.—For purposes of this section, the term 'acquire' means to acquire, directly or indirectly, ownership or control through a merger or consolidation or an acquisition of assets or assumption of liabilities, provided that following such merger, consolidation, or acquisition, an acquiring insured depository institution may not own the shares of the acquired insured depository institution.".

And the House agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the title of the bill and agree to the same.

JOINT STATEMENT OF CONFERENCE COMMITTEE

House and Senate conferees met for two days under a stringent deadline to consider H.R. 3768 and S. 543, bills to recapitalize the Bank Insurance Fund and to improve the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. On November 25, 1991, the House overwhelmingly passed a motion by a vote of 398 ayes to 3 nays to instruct its conferees to consider only issues addressed within the scope of H.R. 3768, rather than the more voluminous bill, S. 543.

The conferees exchanged several offers, and worked from these to combine parts of each bill to form this conference agreement. While the conferees certainly hold differing views about the long-term changes needed in the banking system, all agreed that in the short time available for forging this compromise, recapitalizating the BIF took top priority. The FDIC have the resources to honor its guarantee of insured deposits, so that Americans will know their funds are safe.

Mr. NEAL of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 318, I call up the conference report on the Senate bill (S. 543 to reform Federal deposit insurance, protect the deposit insurance funds, recapitalize the Bank Insurance Fund, improve supervision and regulation of insured depository institutions, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. STUDDS). Pursuant to House Resolution 318, the conference report is considered as having been read.

☐ 1040

The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. NEAL] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. NEAL].

Mr. NEAL of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this is essentially very similar to the bill that has passed the House. My colleagues may be interested to know that the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs conferees were in conference with the Senate conferees essentially from yesterday morning at 9:30, on and on all day, into the evening, until this morning at something like 5 o'clock, and we finally came to this agreement which, as I say, is in most major respects very much like the bill that passed the House recently by an overwhelming margin.

Mr. Speaker, I think the significant thing to say about this legislation is that it is essential. There is a problem.

The bill represents a new day for regulation

The bank insurance fund needs money, and, if it were not for that problem, we would not be here.

Now this bill provides some money to fix that problem for the short term, but I will have to report to our colleagues that, as far as fixing the problem for the long term, we do not do it.

We do provide some very significant regulatory reform, a couple of hundred pages of it. That is all to the good. But we knew how to do much more, and we should have done much more.

Mr. Speaker, our Subcommittee on Financial Institutions Supervision, Regulation and Insurance, after many days of hearings and study over a long period of time, reported out legislation that would have in a major way reformed the banking system of this country. It would have made the system safer, and sounder and more competitive, would have provided for economic diversity in terms of services, products and services, would have provided geographic diversity for safety and soundness. That bill passed our subcommittee with no votes against it. I think the vote was 35 to zero, something like that.

Well, Mr. Speaker, we took it to the full committee. The full committee worked its will on it, found a few more little problems, and the bill, very much the same bill, passed the full committee by about a 60-40 margin. But because of a lot of little manipulations that I will not go into now, we never really got a chance to vote on that major reform package.

Now I mention it at this time because one of these days, I would say to my colleagues, we must return to that. We must modernize this system. If we do not modernize the system, we will be back here again sometime in the future looking for more money to bail out banks. I do not want to vote one penny to bail out banks.

Mr. Speaker, there is a way to fix this system. We should provide geographic diversity, we should provide product diversity for safety and soundness, we should modernize the system so that it serves our savers, and our consumers and the businesses of this country so that we can be competitive in world trade. Now that is the challenge.

Mr. Speaker, we are engaged now in a stopgap measure. It is necessary. We have no choice. But very soon we must return to this subject and engage in a major reform.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the conference report on H.R. 3768, the banking reform bill. As I do that, I want to compliment the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs who has worked so diligently, and so hard and so long. Without his persistent efforts we would not be here today. He encouraged us to work on this bill through the day yesterday, for almost 24 straight hours, until 5 o'clock this morning; and we came up with a very good bill in my judgment. Although the path has been arduous, the compromise before us encompasses pretty much the parameters of the House passed bill.

No one was completely satisfied with the product that we came out with, but clearly this is the most important issue that we have before the First Session of the 102nd Congress. Other important issues are not included: interstate banking, banking and commerce, modification of Glass-Steagall are still unanswered and will have to be revisited early next year. However the bill before us is a good compromise given where we started from when we went into our conference yesterday with Members of the other body.

First and foremost the bill provides the funding to recapitalize the bank insurance fund, and again I repeat again and again that this is not a taxpayer bailout. There is no taxpayer money authorized in this bill. This is a loan which will be repaid by the banking industry through an increase in premiums. This money will be used solely to protect depositors. Not one cent will be used to pay off any shareholders or any directors.

Mr. Speaker, we must recapitalize the bank insurance fund to show depositors that the government stands behind the promise to protect their deposits. We must show the American people that their money is protected by the full faith and credit of the United States Government. It would be irresponsible not to provide the FDIC with this crucial funding, as I have stated, before we adjourn.

Besides funding, Mr. Speaker, the bill does incorporate a number of very important reforms. It calls for annual examinations and independent audits. It implements a tripwire system of prompt early intervention to handle troubled institutions before they fail, and to minimize taxpayer losses. To further minimize the taxpayer liability, the bill limits brokered deposits to only those banks with the highest capital levels.

Furthermore, it establishes risk-based premiums. Risk-based premiums will reward well-capitalized and prudently managed institutions. Such a system will restore equity to the system and encourage high capital levels.

Although this legislation is not as comprehensive as some would like, it does make a number of important reforms. It is essentially the House bill which we passed by an overwhelming margin here last week. The capitalization, again I repeat, is must legislation, and I, therefore, urge my colleagues to approve the conference report on this crucial bill.

I would just add one other caveat, and that is that we did add to the bill a provision which was not before the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs legislation, and that has to do with the so-called Lamp F decision. What it does is it extends the statute of limitations for securities and fraud cases. It is regarded as very important, and the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Energy and Commerce has signed off on that, according to the distinguished chairman of the House Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ]. We have a good package and I urge an aye vote.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may be permitted to assign the balance of the time to the various Members seeking recognition.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, essentially what we have, as the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE] stated, is what we were under the mandate, because the bill overwhelmingly passed the House, to stick to the House version that passed with a vote of 344 to 64, and we did that. Essentially what we have here is more than just what has been referred to as a narrow bill. This is an achievement, and I just merely want to thank my colleagues on the Committee on Banking, Finance, and Urban Affairs.

☐ 1050

We have walked the plank three times and, with this, four times.

Also, I wanted to compliment and thank, express my profound gratitude to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE] and people like the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA] and the members of the minority as well as to our conferees from the State side who I think performed wonderfully.

We settled down 24 hours ago at 9:30 and kept going until 5:00 this morning when the conference rose. So I just merely wanted to express my profound gratitude. I am very proud of the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs and of our colleague and of the House Members as a whole.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to report to the House that we have completed a successful House-Senate conference on the banking legislation. We have produced an excellent bill that will move us a giant step forward in restoring confidence in our Nation's financial system.

S. 543, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991, meets the priority of refinancing the bank insurance fund by providing an immediate line of credit of $30 billion at the Treasury Department. This ensures that depositors at the Nation's 12,300 banks will have protection for their funds.

The bill represents a new day for regulation of the Nation's banks. Key to this new approach will be a requirement for prompt intervention by regulators when the vital signs of a bank reach a critical point. This means that banks will no longer be allowed to slip away while the regulators wring their hands and hope for a better day—all at the expense of the taxpayer. S. 543 requires action to protect the bank and the insurance fund.

S. 543 also requires that the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation resolve failed banks by the method least costly to the taxpayers. The discount window at the Federal Reserve, which dispenses below market interest rate loans to banks, will now operate under specific criteria that will prevent backdoor bailouts. Pouring money into sick financial institutions does more harm than good, as evidenced by a House Banking Committee study which showed that 90 percent of the banks that received loans from the discount window failed in the end anyway.

This conference report requires annual audits and annual examinations—both essential to a healthy banking system.

Not only our domestic banks, but foreign banking entities in the United States must now operate under a new set of regulatory requirements. The rogue banks like Banca Nazionale del Lavoro [BNL] and the Bank of Credit and Commerce International [BCCI] will no longer escape scrutiny in this Nation.

Mr. Speaker, I am also proud of the people issues we were able to deal with to make certain that consumers got a better break at insured institutions.

The conference report contains the House version of the Truth in Savings legislation that has languished through four Congresses without reaching final passage. This legislation, pushed through by our colleague, ESTEBAN TORRES, chairman of our Consumer Affairs and Coinage Subcommittee, puts an end to deceptive advertising and confusing information about savings rates. People who put their hard-earned dollars in financial institutions will know the terms precisely and will be in a position to shop for the best rates.

The conference report also contains important new steps forward in fair lending enforcement, including better requirements for more complete disclosure of banks' performance under the Community Reinvestment Act [CRA]. We've also closed a loophole that has let many mortgage banks escape reporting under the Home Mortgage Disclosure Act [HMDA]. The bill also provides protections against the willy-nilly closing of branches, particularly in innercity neighborhoods. Banks must now provide customers and the communities 90-day advance notice before closing branches and leaving neighborhoods without service.

Mr. Speaker, there are many who would have preferred that we had produced a bill with broader powers for banks—the right to expand into new activities and new markets. These provisions were brought to the House floor twice this month and they failed. This legislation would have failed again had the conferees been foolish enough to ignore the House's wishes.

But, I hope that the long fight over expanded powers for banks does not obscure the tremendous advances represented by this bill. It is a landmark piece of legislation that will serve the Nation and its financial system well.

Many will continue to mislabel the refinancing of the bank insurance fund as a bailout. This charge ignores the fact that the money provided from Treasury is a loan and the conference report requires that the funds be repaid by the banks on a specific schedule extending over 15 years. The prompt refinancing of BIF through this credit arrangement and the accompanying regulatory safeguards are the very best insurance against a taxpayer's bailout.

Mr. Speaker, S. 543 is extremely important legislation. The conference report should be adopted.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to our ranking majority member of the committee and the chairman of the Financial Institutions Subcommittee, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ANNUNZIO].

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, 8 months ago, the Subcommittee on Financial Institutions, which I chair, began hearings on a major banking bill. It was the beginning of a long legislative journey. This morning we are seeing the end of that journey and hopefully a new beginning in the commercial banking industry.

I strongly support the conference report before the House today. I want to commend the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ] and the banking Republican, CHALMERS WYLIE for the leadership they have shown throughout the entire legislative process on this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I doubt if any bill in recent memory has been the subject of so much attention and scrutiny as this bill has been. But I think the turmoil that has surrounded this bill has actually made for a better bill. No section of this bill was won without hours of discussion and hundreds of votes. Too many cooks spoil the broth may be an old wives' tale, but the cooks of this legislative broth did a great job.

I am particularly proud of several provisions in this bill that I authored, including the requirement that every federally insured financial institution be examined at least once a year. The early intervention procedures will make certain that brain dead banks are not kept open on the misguided belief that they can grow into recovery.

The whistleblower section will make certain that those dedicated public servants who expose corruption and wrong-doing will not be punished for making that information pubic.

And most importantly, when the banks borrow $30 billion to replenish the bank insurance fund, my amendment will make certain that the banks, not the taxpayers will have to repay those loans.

Mr. Speaker, I urge adoption of the conference report.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON].

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I will certainly try not to use all of the 5 minutes in rising to, regrettably, oppose this legislation, since it seems that everybody seems to be for it.

I do want to, first of all, commend the chairman of the committee and my friend, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE], and the subcommittee chairman and ranking members and everybody who has labored so diligently on this effort.

I know that this is probably the only bill that could come before the House. But I just want to state my concerns once again as I do when the House passed this measure, that I am afraid that we are simply not solving the problem. When this bill passed the House it was a non-reform bill. I said that then, and also predicted that the Senate would not improve on it. Sadly, I believe the bill before us now shows that I was correct.

This legislation, which does recapitalize the FDIC's bank insurance fund with a $70 billion loan from the taxpayers does nothing in the way of meaningful, significant reforms. I know that despite the considerable funds in this bill, we are going to be back here next year, and I think all of you know that too. Then we will really have to revisit the issue and approve some major reforms. We will be doing that in an election year, and that is going to be very, very difficult.

My first regret about this bill today is that it does nothing to maintain firewalls that keep bankers and the banking business out of everybody else's business, such as real estate, and insurance, and securities and everything else. Instead, it leaves those walls open so that they can continue to do what they have been doing in the past: losing money and being bailed out by the taxpayers of this Nation.

The second and more important problem that we have not dealt with at all in the bill is the issue of multiple deposit insurance guarantees available to investors. Despite today's $100,000 limit on deposit insurance, a family can effectively insure up to $1,400,000 of its savings in not just one bank but as may banks as they want. As long as that kind of system is in place, we will never solve this problem.

As I mentioned in our earlier debate on the bill, when I came to this Congress 13-14 years ago, I sold all of my stock and all of my businesses, as I had to. I took that money and put it into certificates of deposit. Since coming to Washington I have not only found that I am 100-percent Scotsman, tight with a dollar, but I also found myself instructing my wife by phone in upstate New York on how to go out and find whatever insured bank she could get with the highest possible return on our investment from dollars and certificates of deposit. Forgetting to look for a long-established conservative bank, even in our hometown, she did that and I did it. If we did that, ladies and gentlemen, everybody in this country did that, and that is how we got ourselves in the mess today. Unfortunately, in this bill we have totally ignored doing anything about it.

An amendment to this bill, which would have required only one insured deposit of up to $100,000 per individual, would have gone a long way toward solving this problem. Although we have not done that, we are going to have to do it, and you had better think about it too because in March or April we will be back here again doing the same thing.

I hesitantly oppose the legislation, but I do commend the gentlemen for the hard work that went into it.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ANNUNZIO], for the purposes of a colloquy.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a minute to ask the distinguished chairman of the Banking Committee, Mr. Gonzalez to join me in a colloquy. I would like to ask the chairman if it is not true that under the new qualified thrift lender test in the conference report if it is the intent of the conferees that the increase from 30 to 35 percent of the consumer lending basket prohibits a savings and loan from placing loan application in an automobile or appliance showroom et cetera, and then have the sales people give their customers the loan applications. Is it not true that the intent of this provision is that consumers wishing to borrow money from the S&L for consumer loans under the increased loan authority are expected to deal directly with the S&L and not with a third party or middleman in any way whatsoever.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANNUNZIO. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, on both counts, absolutely, the gentleman is correct. That is right.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. I want to once again extend my thanks and appreciation to the chairman.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO].

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for yielding me this time.

I want to commend the committee. I think that we did a good job in terms of the conference. Certainly we had give and take with the Senate, but, frankly, we came in, we used the House bill, and while we made modfications with our Senate colleagues, I think that it is a good product, and it deserves the support of the House.

Candidly, it does not have the powers in the branch banking and the security power issues that were so contentious in this House.

We came up to the floor twice, and we sunk twice, and everyone can get involved in their own revisionist history as to why that happened.

Today I think the task is before us to improve the deposit system, to reform it, and I think we have done the best we can as a Congress of 535 Members with this problem.

We have written new prescriptive language in this law to guide the administration and the regulators. There is less flexibility, for the banking regulators, but I think our experience has indicated that such limits are necessary.

We have obviously capitalized the BIF fund which is a principal responsibility based on the statements of Mr. Taylor, the new Director of the FDIC, that is essential before the House adjourns to back the deposits of hundreds of millions of people across this country that have savings in our financial institutions.

□ 1100

This is a comprehensive bill. It is a solid foundation that we can build on next year. We can deal with the powers issues. We have a sound foundation of deposit insurance now, and limiting the powers and addressing the issues of too big to fail of banks. We cannot deal with the symbolic issue of $100,000 accounts, but I think, candidly, that is more symbolic than substantive. The central issue of cost is to get the banks off the track of too big to fail. There are problems remaining with systematic risk that is in this measure but hopefully that should be limited in terms of the safeguards and tripwires we put in this measure, including early intervention and other necessary approvals.

Mr. Speaker, I think this is a good bill and I hope Members will support it.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I think I would be remiss if I did not publicly thank the minority members who participated in this conference last night and yesterday. I would like to say that the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LEACH], the gentleman from Florida [Mr. MCCOLLUM], the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA], the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BEREUTER], the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RIDGE], the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. ROTH], the gentleman from California [Mr. MCCANDLESS], and the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BAKER] were in attendance throughout and gave of their best to this fine product we have before us.

I would also like to thank the minority staff and majority staff for all of the fine work they did do this legislation. It was a very difficult and trying experience.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WYLIE. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I would ask the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE], what about the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BAKER]?

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, yes, I have Mr. BAKER's name on here. I add him to my list, also, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SLATTERY].

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Speaker, first I would like to commend the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALES] and the ranking minority member, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE], and all those that have worked tirelessly to bring this legislation to the floor today.

I think there are five basic reasons why we should be pleased with this legislation and support it. First of all, this legislation does provide for the recapitalization of the Bank Insurance Fund.

We are not bailing out the banks. We are merely honoring a promise and a commitment that was made to depositors in this country 50 years ago. We have no choice. We have to recapitalize the bank insurance fund.

The "too big to fail" doctrine that many of our small community banks across this country have been very, very concerned about has also been changed. I happen to believe the provisions in this legislation requiring the President, the Treasury Department, the Federal Reserve and FDIC to certify in writing that a bank would cause systemic risk if it was allowed to fail is going to have the effect of putting the brakes on the use of the too big to fail doctrine. I think that is a very important reform.

In addition to that, there are other regulatory reforms empowering the regulators to intervene at an early stage, to use least cost resolution and also have annual audits of banks across the country. As far as I am concerned, all of this is good.

Another important reform is the change in the area of brokered deposits. Under this legislation we would prohibit undercapilatized institutions from accepting brokered deposits, this is another very important reform.

Many people who have observed the banking crisis in this country believe very strongly that brokered deposits have played a big role in creating the mess we are in. That is being corrected.

In addition to that, we are empowering the Federal Reserve System to regulate much more carefully foreign banks operating in this country, to deal with future BCCI type problems. This is also good.

Mr. Speaker, I know some of my colleagues wish we would have repealed Glass-Steagall and empowered the banks to get involved in the securities industry. We did not do that. This is one Member who is glad that we did not do that.

I believe one of the big achievements of this session is the defeat of efforts to repeal Glass-Steagall. Over the long term this will serve the taxpayers and consumers of this country well.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly urge Members to support this reform package. I know that next year we will have the opportunity to come back and revisit the question of interstate branch banking and revisit the question of Glass-Steagall. But today this is as good as we can do.

Mr. Speaker, this is a significant step forward. It is good legislation. It is deserving of strong bipartisan support. So I strongly urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this legislation.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, I respectfully yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA], who was a very good member of our conference.

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman my ranking member, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE] for yielding. I do want to concur with some of the comments that have been made by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SLATTERY]. The gentleman alluded to the fact there are some very good parts to this bill. The tenor of his remarks were positive, and I want to underscore, that really we should not be ashamed of this product.

Mr. Speaker, we went through a procedure that resulted in the defeat of 2 bills that embodied more comprehensive reforms. Rightly or wrongly, the judgment was made by this body that we were not going to enter into new powers such as security and insurance powers with the attendant problems of how to define firewalls. Rightly or wrongly, that decision was made.

But I would suggest that when we are dealing with those kinds of complex issues that could have profound consequences that if we are going to err at all, we should err on the side of caution.

In this bill we have some excellent reforms with respect to capital requirements; with respect to early intervention and with respect to stronger, regulatory, requirements. There are reforms to be proud of. We must also say that with respect to new powers, firewalls, and interstate banking, we have some work to be done.

Mr. Speaker, because we could not come to those conclusions at this particular time, it does not mean that the product that we come out with in the new year will not be better for the time and effort that has already been expended on this matter.

Mr. Speaker, I do want to say, for those who are concerned, because I think there is a general tenor of regret that we have not reformed the deposit insurance fund, by limiting deposit insurance to $100,000 per customer.

Mr. Speaker, in my opinion, that was the correct decision to make. I understand that this decision is open to debate; but it is not open to debate to question the really fundamental reforms that we did put in this legislation.

It has already been mentioned that we have addressed in a very meaningful was "the too big to fail doctrine." I think that is quite a substantial accomplishment.

In addition, we have put limitations on brokered deposits. This particular issue of the brokered deposits and the level of capitalization that is needed in institutions that are permitted to use brokered deposits occupied a great deal of our time and effort. There was extended debate.

But the provision of brokered deposits is a meaningful one. It is restrictive, and it is a major reform in this bill.

Mr. Speaker, we have restrictions on pass-through insurance, the foreign deposits, and the risk-based premiums, in which I take some pride of authorship. I had a lot of help from others, but the fact is we are now basing the premium payments from the banks into the fund on the basis of the risks and the type of investments that they make.

Mr. Speaker, I think all in all there is nothing to be hesitant about here. We have meaningful reform, We are leaving to another day some of those questions that were more divisive, and merely more problematic in many ways, and for good reason. So we will have a number of engines that can lead us to the second level of reform next year.

In the meantime, we are protecting the depositors, we are restoring faith in the system, and, I think, Mr. Speaker, that the fact that we passed this bill 344 to 84 when it left the House the first time, and in this measure we have 95 percent of the House bill, that it is deserving of our support. Maybe we can get unanimous support.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would just add that the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA] deserves a high compliment for leading the charge on the risk-based premium issue. She has been very diligent on this. The amendment that was adopted is pretty much her handiwork and, in that regard, made a real contribution to our deliberations.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BAKER], who certainly made a very tremendous contribution to the conference deliberations.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding. I certainly appreciate his kind comments and extend to him and to the chairman of the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs my appreciation for their hard work and diligence in bringing this measure to the House floor.

As we are all painfully aware, taxpayers of this country are indeed frustrated with the current condition of the financial marketplace. Everyone back home expects us to resolve the current problems without additional taxpayer dollars, to make sure our banks are operated in a safe and sound manner and that their deposits remain free from threat of loss.

□ 1110

The bill we have before us this morning goes a long way toward making important reforms. Certainly there is much yet to be done. The question of additional bank powers and commercial ownership of institutions were provisions contained in the bank bill as reported by the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs earlier this session. And unfortunately they are not addressed in the measure before us now.

But equally important are those important regulatory tools necessary to intervene at an early time in a bank's business activities so that franchise value is preserved, so that taxpayer funds are protected and so that ultimately we are not called upon as a Federal deposit insuror to pay off losses of troubled institutions.

This legislation takes many progressive steps to allow regulators to do their jobs much more efficiently than they have been able to do in the past. It also makes some significant changes with regard to the operation of the thrifts. Provisions relating to the qualified thrift lender test which are included in this legislation will ensure that some 180, perhaps 200 thrifts in this country who were well-run, well-capitalized institutions will not arbitrarily be closed for their failure to meet a government standard relating to the construction of their lending portfolio, a technical change, for sure, but one very important in minimizing cost to the taxpayer.

I commend the bill and I hope the House will adopt it.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARKEY].

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. OAKAR].

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the conference report, the FDIC Recapitalization and Improvement Act of 1991.

Mr. Speaker, this bill before us today is critical to protecting the millions of depositors throughout our banking system and it is needed to protect our economy. The only protection between depositors and the potential loss of their hard-earned money when a bank closes its doors is the FDIC's bank insurance fund, which is currently on the verge of insolvency. Make no mistake about it; a delay in recapitalizing the bank insurance fund will imperil the funds of depositors and our entire economy. It would not be responsible to vote against this bill and permit a return to the desperate economic times of our parents and grandparents.

This provides additional enforcement powers to bring foreign banks to comply with our regulations.

First, a provision I offered which I believe will limit the loss of the taxpayers which occurs when banks and savings and loans fail. In summary, this provision will permit any depository institution to combine with any savings association insurance fund member, and vice versa. This provision will encourage the use of private capital to acquire and merge financial institutions which may otherwise fail and end up costing the taxpayers a great deal of money.

The second provision which I strongly support will protect the retirement pensions of millions of Americans. The provision will continue the 25-year-old FDIC practice of providing pass through deposit insurance on a pro rata basis for pension plans. Again, this is good legislation since it will protect the pensions of millions of Americans at a time many of them are concerned about the safety of their deposits and investments in financial institutions. Stability of the banking system is also enhanced since, if deposit insurance for pension plans is discontinued, pension fund managers will probably move their pension fund deposits to financial institutions which they perceive as "too-big-to-fail". This movement of funds will undermine the stability of small banks. The amendment also provides fairness since so-called 401(k) plans—which are offered to management—will continue to receive pass through deposit insurance. It is only fair to also protect the retirement pensions of hard working Americans of all incomes.

Again, I want to commend Chairman GONZALEZ for his leadership regarding this legislation. I urge all Members to support the conference report.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I would just say that I think the chairman and I have reason to be very proud of the product which came out of the conference last night, and I urge adoption of the conference report.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 mintues to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SCHUMER].

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. Speaker, first let me compliment the gentleman from Texas, Chairman GONZALEZ, and the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. WYLIE], for their persistence in getting to this point. Obviously this is not a day for great celebration. We all tried to pass bills or we all believed there was a need for real reform, dramatic and sweeping reform. We could not agree on what that reform was.

I say to the reform-minded Members, our day will come. There will be real reform. The banking system is sick and demands it. But this bill, given the fact that we could not have reform, is the best that could have been done. Anyone who feels it does not have much reform is sadly mistaken. The higher capital standards, the early intervention, the too-big-to-fail, those are three significant changes in the way the banking system will work.

In my judgment, the system will still stay sick. These are measures that deal with the sickness after the disease. But they do not cure it. They do not remove it. They do not remove it. We have to deal with the inextricable relationship between insured deposits and what banks can do with them to cure the disease.

But if one is sick, and this system is, and we could not come up with a cure, then having this kind of medicine is the best and right way to go. And this demands, I think, that we pass it.

It is a comprehensive bill within those confines. As I said, the three reforms, major reforms in there, are very important. We should pass them.

Once again, I want to say, it took a lot of persistence and hard work on the part of the chairman and on the part of the ranking minority member and the members of the committee to come up with this package. It is a package no one has to hang their head low about. We will come back next year and we will try again to cure the patient, the banking system, of the awful disease that it has.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. FLAKE], a member of the committee.

Mr. FLAKE. Mr. Speaker, certainly it is a good day for those of us who have shared, as a part of the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, as we are able to commend both our chairman, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ] and the ranking minority member, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE]. They have been very fair in allowing us to put up our amendments before them and allowing the committee to make its decision.

Two particular areas that I am very pleased with are still in the bill; one of them—the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RIDGE] and I sponsored an amendment for green-lighting, which is our tempt to try to deal with the problem of "red-lighting" by many of our banks, which allows us to be able to create community development banks so that those communities where there is a need to create housing, it might be able to be done.

I think that this is worthwhile. I think it is a fair and just means of trying to solve that problem.

Second, the Freedom National Bank issue. We have been fighting ever since the closing of Freedom, asking for fairness and justice as it relates to the Freedom Bank issue.

It is now in the bill. We are thankful to the chairman for fighting to keep it there, and we are grateful for the opportunity to be able to stand today to commend them and to say that this is a bill that everybody in the House ought to support.

The Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs has worked hard on it, and it needs to pass this House.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HENRY].

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I regret that I cannot support the measure before us. While we all recognize the urgent need to recapitalize the FDIC, the problem with this legislation is that it treats the symptoms of a weakened banking system rather than treating the root causes.

As Secretary Brady has indicated, simply putting funds into the FDIC without also strengthening the competitive position of the banking industry only invites the need for future appropriations. The record will show that I supported many of the reforms which insured better capitalization by the banks. It will also show, however, that I have been consistent in my belief that the administration was correct in insisting that broadened banking powers are essential to addressing the root problems of the banking industry.

Regrettably, the achievements taken by the Senate in this direction were undone by the House in its consideration of the banking legislation. And it is unfortunate that during the conference process, the Senate repudiated its former position. Hence, we are left with a bailout for the FDIC—but without meaningful reform which will allow banks to become profitable. Given that fact, I cannot support the current legislation.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of a colloquy, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. REED].

Mr. REED. Mr. Chairman, in section 451 of H.R. 3768, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvements Act, referring to Rhode Island, references are made to investment grade ratings.

I understand that the highest grade rating means AAA; one less than the highest grade rating means AA; and two less than the highest grade rating means A.

Is my understanding correct?

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield; yes, it is.

Mr. REED. Mr. Speaker, I would also at this time like personally to commend the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ] for his extraordinary help to my home State of Rhode Island, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE], the ranking minority leader, for his help, particularly the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. HUBBARD] and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANKS] and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KLECZKA], who also helped us immensely.

With this help, with this loan guarantee, I hope we can help the people of Rhode Island. With this bill I hope we can help the people throughout the United States to avoid the crisis that we have faced in Rhode Island.

I close again by commending the gentleman from Texas, Chairman GONZALEZ, for his extraordinary help.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I commend the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ] the chairman of the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs for the conference report on the banking bill (S. 543). That conference report includes a compromise worked out between the chairman and ranking member of the Senate Banking Committee and the House Energy and Commerce Committee to reverse the retroactive application of the Supreme Court's decision in Lampf versus Gilbertson. This provision is urgently needed to avoid dismissal of securities fraud cases that were timely filed prior to the Court's decision. It is our intent that "any private civil action implied under section 10(b) of the Act that was commenced on or before June 19, 1991 (1) which was dismissed as time barred subsequent to June 19, 1991, and (2) which would have been timely filed under the limitation period provided by the laws applicable in the jurisdiction, including principles of retroactivity, as such laws existed on June 19, 1991" shall have their clear meaning and shall not be interpreted to exclude any private civil action falling squarely within the plain meaning of the words of this statute.

This provision is critically important because Lampf has resulted in the dismissal of many private rule 10b–5 actions against figures in major financial scandals, including Charles Keating, Michael Milken, and others. Those cases can now be reinstated on motion by the plaintiff not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this section.

I would also note that the conference report includes in title IV amendments reported by the Committee on Energy and Commerce with respect to payment system risk reduction and nettling contracts (see H. Rept. 102–157, part 4). The definition of the term "broker or dealer" in section 402 in the conference report includes language worked out between the Senate Banking Committee and the Committee on Energy and Commerce to include "to the extent consistent with this title, as determined by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, any company that is an affiliate of a company described in subparagraph (A) that is engaged in the business of entering into netting contracts." It is our intent that the term "affiliate" shall have the meaning as determined by section 3(a)(19) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and sections 2(a)(2) and 2(a)(3) of the Investment Company Act of 1940, and that the Federal Reserve Board shall exercise this authority to include these entities in order to reduce the credit exposure of these entities and thus to reduce systemic risk. It is our belief that this is consistent with this title. I commend the conferees for including this important provision.

I urge my colleagues to vote "aye" on the conference report.

SEC. 476. LIMITATION ON SECURITIES PRIVATE RIGHTS OF ACTION.

The Securities Exchange Act of 1934 is amended by inserting after section 27 (15 U.S.C. 78aa) the following new section:

"SPECIAL PROVISION RELATING TO STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS ON PRIVATE CAUSES OF ACTION

"SEC. 27A. (a) EFFECT ON PENDING CAUSES OF ACTION.—The limitation period for any private civil action implied under section 10(b) of this Act that was commenced on or before June 19, 1991, shall be the limitation period provided by the laws applicable in the jurisdiction, including principles of retroactivity, as such laws existed on June 19, 1991.

"(b) EFFECT ON DISMISSED CAUSES OF ACTION—Any private civil action implied under section 10(b) of this Act that was commenced on or before June 19, 1991—

"(1) which was dismissed as time barred subsequent to June 19, 1991, and

"(2) which would have been timely filed under the limitation period provided by the laws applicable in the jurisdiction, including principles of retroactivity, as such laws existed on June 19, 1991.

shall be reinstated on motion by the plaintiff not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this section.".

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, DC, November 25, 1991.

Hon. THOMAS S. FOLEY,
The Speaker, U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: As you know, the House-Senate conference on S. 543, the Comprehensive Deposit Insurance Reform and Taxpayer Protection Act, is under way to discuss the issues primarily within the jurisdiction of the respective Banking Committees. As was discussed on Friday, November 22, Members and staff of the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs have been meeting with Members and staffs of other House Committees to resolve issues contained in the Senate bill that are outside the jurisdiction of the House Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs. We are pleased to report that agreement has been reached between the Chairman and Ranking Member of the Senate Banking Committee and the House Energy and Commerce Committee[1] on a provision to return the law regarding the statute of limitations for securities fraud cases that were pending on June 19, 1991 to that which applied in the jurisdiction on that date. This has the effect of reversing the retroactive application of the Supreme Court's decision in Lampf versus Gilbertson. This provision is urgently needed to avoid dismissal of securities fraud cases that were timely filed prior to the Court's decision.

In light of the agreement between the bipartisan leadership of the two committees of jurisdiction, we respectfully request that you appoint Members of the House Committee on Energy and Commerce (Messrs. Dingell, Markey, and Lent) as conferees to the banking conference for the purpose of including this provision in the Conference Report.

Sincerely,

Donald W. Riegle, Jr., Chairman, Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs, U.S. Senate.

John D. Dingell, Chairman, Committee on Energy and Commerce, U.S. House of Representatives.

U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
COMMITTEE ON ENERGY AND COMMERCE,
Washington, DC, November 26, 1991.

Hon. HENRY B. GONZALEZ,
Chairman, Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Washington, DC.

DEAR HENRY: I am writing to you in your capacity as Chairman of the House conferees on S. 543, the Comprehensive Deposit Insurance Reform and Taxpayer Protection Act, to advise you that this Committee has resolved its differences with the Senate Banking Committee on Section 1126 (Limitation on Securities Private Rights of Action). Consistent with the procedures outlined by the Speaker, we are writing to the Speaker to request appointment of Energy and Commerce conferees solely for the purpose of including this provision in the Conference Report.

On June 21, 1991, in a landmark 5–4 decision that alters the settled law of nine Circuits, the Supreme Court selected Section 9(e) of the 1934 Act (15 U.S.C. sec. 78i(e)) as the statute of limitations for private actions under Rule 10b–5 of the 1934 Act: one year from discovery, but in no event more than three years from the underlying violation. Lampf, Pleva, Lipkind, Prupis & Petigrow v. Gilbertson, No. 90–333 (U.S. June 20, 1991). Although the decision altered the law of the Circuit from which the case originated, the Court applied the new limitations period and dismissed respondents' claims as time-barred.

Moreover, in James B. Beam Distilling Co. versus Georgia, No. 89–689 (U.S. June 21, 1991), the Supreme Court changed the rules on retroactive application of civil decisions. This ruling portends full retroactive application of the new, shortened limitations period for private Rule 10b–5 actions established in Lampf, Pleva. In Beam, the Court ruled that where—as in Lampf, Pleva—the case announcing a new rule of federal law has applied that new rule to the litigants in the case, it is error for other courts to refuse to apply the rule retroactively. Thus, the Beam decision has resulted in dismissal of many currently pending private Rule 10b–5 actions against Charles Keating, Michael Milken and other figures in major financial scandals. According to a survey by our Telecommunications and Finance Subcommittee, suits totaling $652 million have been thrown out as a result of the Court's ruling. Motions to dismiss an additional $4.55 billion of suits are pending, and motions to dismiss a further $1.21 billion of suits are expected. As Arthur R. Miller, Bruce Bromley Professor of Law, Harvard University Law School, testified before the Subcommittee:

> As a result, a number of lower courts have dismissed as untimely many important securities cases that victims originally filed in a timely fashion and thereafter prosecuted for long periods of time and at great expense. In some instances, the Lampf decision threatens verdicts already rendered. This completely unfair result undermines the reliance of parties on precedent and significantly undermines the principle of stare decisis.

The compromise to be included in the Conference Report is urgently needed to allow timely filed cases to be reinstated and to avoid dismissal of further securities fraud cases that were timely filed prior to the Court's decision. In light of your Committee's extensive hearings on Charles Keating and the circumstances surrounding the failure of Lincoln Savings and Loan, we hope that you will support this result.

---

[1] Messrs. Markey, Dingell, Wyden and Harris, the sponsors of companion House legislation (H.R. 3185) have approved the compromise language, as have Messrs. Lent and Rinaldo.

Sincerely,

JOHN D. DINGELL,
Chairman.

PUBLIC CITIZEN,
November 22, 1991.

Hon. JOHN DINGELL,
Chairman, Committee on Energy and Commerce, U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: We would like to commend you for co-sponsoring H.R. 3185, the Securities Investors Legal Rights Act of 1991, which would restore vital protections to consumers and investors that were taken away by the recent Supreme Court decision of Lampf v. Gilbertson. This proposal is critically important because it would establish a reasonable statute of limitations for securities fraud cases, while restoring lawsuits that were brought in reliance on the law as it stood prior to Lampf.

As you may know, the Senate Banking Committee added a similar proposal to banking legislation earlier this year. In a compromise made during floor consideration of the measure this week, the Lampf proposal was modified so that, while it continues to protect lawsuits pending when Lampf was decided, it does not change the statute of limitations for future cases. While we are disappointed that the proposal was weakened in this way, we strongly support the compromise to protect fraud victims who relied on pre-Lampf rules in bringing their lawsuits.

We are writing to urge you to accept the Senate compromise when the House and Senate banking bills are reconciled. We believe that it is critical to pass the retroactive piece of the Lampf legislation before it is too late to protect pending or recently dismissed lawsuits. We would like to work with you next year to enact the rest of the proposal, so that the securities laws can once again afford fraud victims a meaningful remedy against those who conceal their fraudulent activities.

Thank you again for your leadership in the fight against (in Al Capone's phrase) the legitimate rackets.

Sincerely,

MICHAEL WALDMAN,
Director, Congress Watch.
PAMELA GILBERT,
Legislative Director, Congress Watch.

LEGISLATIVE ALERT,
November 25, 1991.

Hon. EDWARD J. MARKEY,
Chairman, Subcommittee on Telecommunications and Finance, House Committee on Energy and Commerce, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: On behalf of the millions of workers and retirees whose retirement savings are invested by pension plans, the AFL–CIO supports H.R. 3185, the Securities Investors Legal Rights Act of 1991.

H.R. 3185 is needed to reverse Lampf v. Gilbertson, a recent Supreme Court ruling which could destroy claims by thousands of defrauded investors who had been pursuing their rights in court in a timely manner. The Court's 5–4 decision held that private actions pursuant to Section 10(b) and Rule 10b–5 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 must be brought within one year after the injured party discovers the fraud and no later than three years after the fraud has occurred. The majority disregarded years of lower court precedent and applied its new rule retroactively to all cases currently pending in federal courts nationwide.

The Lampf decision ignores the reality of financial fraud which is by its very nature complex, difficult to detect, and often perpetrated against the most vulnerable in society. Because of Lampf, victims of some of the worst financial scandals in recent history will be unable to recover their losses, a result particularly harmful for senior citizens dependent on pension and other retirement investment income. A shortened limitations period protects the most stealthy and sophisticated criminals, while punishing pension funds and other innocent investors. As Justice Kennedy wrote in his dissent to Lampf, the majority simply tips the scale too far in favor of wrongdoers.

Here is a sampling of just a few of the financial manipulators who will not need to compensate their victims because of the legal loophole created by Lampf:

Executive Life Insurance CEO Fred Carr and assorted securities firms that are the subject of eight consolidated fraud cases filed between April and December 1990 have already sought to have their cases dismissed under the new, shorter limitations period. Meanwhile, thousands of workers and retirees lost significant portions of their meager monthly pension checks because of that long concealed scandal.

In Anixter v. Home-Stake Production Co. the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals recently dismissed a $310 million jury verdict against the perpetrators of one of the most widely publicized financial scandals of the 1970s. In that case thousands of investors were swindled by a Ponzi scheme, a sophisticated fraud that can maintain the illusion of a profit-making enterprise for many years. The Court cited Lampf and noted the draconian nature of the result in its opinion.

The Kansas Professional Employees Retirement System recently dscovered that it was the victim of a complex fraud that occurred over 3 years ago. That pension fund's beneficiaries will suffer a multi-million-dollar loss if the Lampf decision stands.

We agree with S.E.C. Chairman Richard Breeden that private fraud suits are an essential element in enforcing federal securities laws since the S.E.C does not have adequate resources to detect and prosecute all violations of the federal securities laws. Because Rule 10b–5 violations inherently involve fraud and concealment, the removal of a meaningful opportunity for private action by security holders is an invitation to abuse.

The purposes of the securities laws—to deter fraud and to preserve investor confidence in the market—are well served by this remedial legislation. We therefore support and urge swift Congressional approval of H.R. 3185.

Sincerely,

ROBERT M. MCGLOTTEN,
Director, Department of Legislation.

Mr. BACCHUS. Mr. Speaker, I voted against S. 543 today because I am very concerned that this legislation opens the back door of the Treasury wide open to a taxpayer bailout of commercial banks that could rival the scandalous bailout of the savings and loans.

S. 543 recapitalizes the Ban Insurance Fund through a loan from the taxpayers that is supposed to be repaid from across-the-board increases in bank premiums. FDIC Chairman William Seidman recently stated that the banking industry could not sustain the increase in premiums needed to repay the loan. Significantly higher premiums would undoubtedly cause more bank failures, with the taxpayers footing the bill. And under the financing scheme included in S. 543, the only alternative to higher premiums would also be to have the taxpayers foot the bill. I would have preferred to have the most profitable banks, with the most capital, loan the needed money to the BIF, as they offered to do. We should go to the taxpayers as a last resort, not a first resort.

Mr. MACHTLEY. Mr. Speaker, it has now been almost a year since the closure of Rhode Island's credit unions. Thirteen institutions remain closed, over $1 billion remains frozen, nearly 20 percent of Rhode Island's citizens remain without their money.

Since that day in Rhode Island's history, times have gotten worse. Rhode Island's unemployment has skyrocketed to 9.8 percent. Our State deficit is among the highest in the Nation. To put it simply, We are in a depressed recession.

Travelling through my district, I have personally heard and received thousands of letters and calls since the crisis occurred from helpless citizens who have their life's savings frozen in the closed credit unions.

I constantly hear about the deep economic difficulties this crisis is causing in my State. My constituents want to know how do they pay for the basic necessities? Their rent? Their mortgages? Their children's education? Their medical bills? Their groceries? How can they go on if all of their money is tied up in institutions whose doors have not opened for a year?

Over the past 11 months, members of Rhode Island's congressional delegation have been working hard to create a Federal response which will not cost the American taxpayer one penny. With the strong support of Chairman Gonzalez, the conference report to H.R. 3768 includes a $180 million Federal loan guarantee for Rhode Island.

This provision, which has passed in the House in every prior banking reform bill, has been scored as budget neutral by the Congressional Budget Office. This provision to the conference report allows Rhode Island to borrow money for the sole purpose of repaying depositors whose accounts were frozen as a result of the insolvency of their private insurer.

I strongly support adoption of the conference report and urge other members to support it as well.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of S. 543, and seek to focus my remarks in particular upon Section 476, which is a compromise version of H.R. 3185, the Securities Investors Legal Rights Act of 1991, which I introduced earlier this year with Chairman DINGELL, and Messrs. WYDEN and HARRIS. The adopted compromise rights at least the most egregious wrong of last summer's Supreme Court decisions, Lampf versus Gilbertson. This section would reverse the Court's retroactive application of that decision to dozens of cases across the country brought in the Federal courts by defrauded investors.

For the last 4 years, I have worked with my colleagues at the Telecommunications and Finance Subcommittee to expand the rights of small investors and the sanction authority of the Securities and Exchange Commission in confronting securities fraud, through legislation on insider trading, stock market reform, enforcement remedies and penny stock reform among others. Yet with one stroke of the pen last spring, the Supreme Court of the United States plunged a sword directly at the heart of victims of securities fraud. In that one action, the case of Lampf versus Gilbertson, the Supreme Court signed over a multibillion dollar check to Michael Milken, Charles Keating, and a coalition of special interests which produced the financial wreckage of the 1980's. And threatened as well the recovery of billions of taxpayer dollars in S&L and bank failures attributable to securities fraud.

On November 21, 1991, I released a compilation of the effects to date of the Supreme Court's ill-considered decision to impose a severely restricted statute of limitations on securities fraud actions. As of today, over $650 million of securities fraud claims have been dismissed in suits brought all over the country long before the Supreme Court's decision. More shockingly, over $4 billion of fraud claims, including those against Milken, Keating, and Fred Carr, are threatened with pending dismissal motions solely as a result of Lampf, and that decision's retroactive application to every securities fraud case pending as of last summer.

For over 50 years, victims of securities fraud could file civil law suits pursuant to Section 10 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 under time limitations generally determined by appropriate State statutes, many with generous statutes of limitation. The Lampf decision reversed this long-standing practice. The Court ruled that any litigation instituted pursuant to section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and rule 10b-5 must be initiated within 3 years after the violation has occurred and within 1 year after discovery of the facts constituting that violation. Even more importantly, the Court applied its decision retroactively, denying thousands of victims whose cases are currently pending their rightful day in court.

In handing down its decision, the Court rejected the argument made by the Securities and Exchange Commission, among others, that it should have applied the explicit 5-year statute of limitations contained in the Insider Trader and Securities Fraud Enforcement Act, a piece of legislation I coauthored with Energy and Commerce Committee Chairman DINGELL and subcommittee ranking Republican member RINALDO In 1988. This 5-year limitation established an appropriate time frame for investors to uncover any wrongdoing while at the same time not punishing investors who may not discover the crime until a few years later.

The language of Section 476 unambiguously reverses the Lampf ruling's application of the 1-year and 3-year statute of limitations period to thousands of cases which were filed prior to June 19, 1991, and which were pending as of that data. Furthermore, it permits the reinstatement of any suit which may have been dismissed post-Lampf as a result of the Lampf decision.

As the statute specifically states, its application is to "any private civil action implied under section 10(b)" of the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934 "that was commenced on or before June 19, 1991." For all of those cases, without exception, the applicable limitation period is that "provided by the laws applicable in the jurisdiction, including principles of retroactivity, as such laws existed on June 19, 1991." Thus, this language would apply directly to the case and parties of Lampf versus Gilbertson itself, insofar as that case was a "private civil action implied under section 10(b)" and was "commenced on or before June 19, 1991."

The 1980's left us a legacy of financial fraud unparalleled in its size and scope. From the crime factories run out of savings and loans to the chicanery in the junk bond market to consumer rip-offs in limited partnership rollups, we are only now beginning to sort through the financial damage done in that decade. The language contained in this bill will directly reverse an egregious Supreme Court decision and will prevent the stripping away of legal rights of thousands of Americans. While I hope and fully expect to address the broader concerns of H.R. 3185 early next year, at this time I urge the adoption of this compromise language to alleviate the immediate injustice posed by Lampf.

Mr. LEHMAN of California. Mr. Speaker, perhaps the most visible change to average bank customers in this comprehensive banking bill will result from provisions requiring banks and savings institutions to clearly and uniformly disclose the interest rate, fees, and terms of savings and checking accounts. In all of the protracted debate over interstate banking, deposit insurance reform, and insurance sales, it should not be overlooked that true bank reform is that which provides the consumer with the ability to make banks more competitive.

As the primary sponsor of truth-in-savings legislation through five Congresses, I have considerable interest in seeing this measure enacted. As you may be aware, truth-in-savings has been approved unanimously by the House since the 99th Congress. Final passage of the bill has been delayed over the years after being caught up in the ongoing struggle to enact broader banking reform. It seems appropriate that enactment of truth-in-savings legislation coincides with the culmination of this effort.

The truth-in-savings provision which I have shepherded through Congress will give consumers the necessary tools to comparison shop in what has become an increasingly confusing and complex financial services marketplace. The delay in enacting this legislation has only heightened the need for it. As the banking markets become more sophisticated and as new and innovative products and services are offered, the consumer's confusion continues to grow over where to invest, how yields are calculated, what fees will be incurred, and how minimum balances affect their interest. Simple and understandable disclosure of terms, fees, conditions, and yields will go far to improving customer awareness.

Passage of truth-in-savings reform is long overdue and I applaud its inclusion in this measure. Bank reform which serves the customer's interest is the most important bank reform of all.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore [Mr. HOYER]. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the conference report.

There was no objection.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore [Mr. HOYER]. The Chair would simply advise the Members that the leadership is trying to work out some procedures with respect to legislation to be considered. That is the reason for the discussions that are ongoing. As soon as agreement is reached, the House will move forward.

ELEVATING EPA TO CABINET LEVEL

(Mr. BOEHLERT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, while we are waiting, I wonder if I might ask a question of the Chair.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has not seen the bill on the calendar yet, just anticipating the gentleman's question.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, would the Chair like to borrow my glasses, because all of us would like to see on the calendar that bill which would elevate the Environmental Protection Agency to Cabinet level status, and we are quite concerned, Mr. Speaker, that it is unnecessarily being delayed.

The American people are being denied something that is very important that they want. Our colleagues in the House on a bipartisan basis are being denied something we very much want. Every single environmental group in the country is being denied something that they very much want. The Administration is being denied something that it has worked assiduously on for the past year with Democrats and Republicans.

Can we not, Mr. Speaker, have some hope that this will be on the agenda sometime before we take leave of this fine institution?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Frankly, the Chair would advise the gentleman from New York that the only information the Chair can pass along to the gentleman is that it is not currently on the agenda that the Chair has before it.

Mr. BOEHLERT. I wonder, Mr. Speaker, if we might have a personal colloquy to discuss how we might get it on the agenda?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has answered to the extent of the Chair's knowledge.

The Chair thanks the gentleman for his inquiry.

Mr. BOEHLERT. I am in good humor, Mr. Speaker, despite the fact that we first appeared here about 24 hours ago to call attention to this shortcoming of this session.

I am ever hopeful, ever optimistic, and I thank the Chair.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is a good attitude to have.

APPOINTMENT OF MEMBER TO BRITISH-AMERICAN INTERPARLIAMENTARY GROUP

The SPEAKER pursuant to the provisions of section 168(b) of Public Law 102–138, the Chair appoints the following Member to the British-American Interparliamentary Group on the part of the House: Mr. HAMILTON, Indiana, chairman.

□ 1140

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HOYER). Again the Chair would call to the attention of the Members and others who may be interested that the House is waiting for an agreement. In these last hours of the session, the leadership is trying to move a few bills. There are some agreements that have to be reached before they get to the floor.

TAXPAYER BILL OF RIGHTS ACT OF 1991

(Mr. PICKLE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PICKLE. Mr. Speaker, last week, I was joined by a number of my colleagues in introducing H.R. 3838, the Taxpayer Bill of Rights Act of 1991. This important legislation is a well-balanced and responsible package of reform measures that will provide taxpayers with long-needed and significant protections in their dealings with the IRS.

H.R. 3838 is a bipartisan effort and was introduced with the unanimous support of the Ways and Means Subcommittee on Oversight. The bill contains 33 provisions, and almost 80 recommendations, addressing inequities or problems that taxpayers experience in dealing with the IRS.

H.R. 3838 was developed after the Subcommittee on Oversight conducted an extensive investigation into the problems that taxpayers frequently encounter with the IRS. Many of these problems were brought to the subcommittee's attention by Members of this body who had heard of the difficulties from their constituents. Further, to develop this bill, the subcommittee held a series of hearings and visited IRS processing and taxpayer service offices around the country to review their operations, practices, and procedures. We considered numerous recommendations for improving the tax system which were made by individual taxpayers, tax professionals, and IRS employees.

H.R. 3838 is a good, pro-taxpayer reform package. With regard to certain issues, I recognize that this is an ongoing process, and therefore, intend to continue working with the IRS, Treasury, and others to fine-tune and improve the legislation. I urge you to join with me and my colleagues on the Committee in supporting the Taxpayer Bill of Rights Act of 1991.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PICKLE. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. BOEHLERT. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 3838, the Taxpayer Bill of Rights Act of 1991, I have had the opportunity to see the Dear Colleague letter of the gentleman from Texas, and I think it is a very fine piece of legislation and will be glad to support it.

Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the gentleman from Texas might join in supporting legislation that I am planning to introduce later today. It is called the Environmentalists Bill of Rights. It will give to the environmentalists and all those people across America, and our Republican and Democratic colleagues in this House, what they want and very much deserve, and that is cabinet-level status for the Environmental Protection Agency.

I think, as my colleague from Texas knows, the United States is the only developed Nation in the industrialized world that does not have cabinet or ministerial level for its top environmentalists in the Government. That is something I would like to correct.

I am sure my colleague would like to help in that.

Mr. PICKLE. I would be delighted to have a copy of the gentleman's bill and to join his name to the measure that we have introduced.

Mr. BOEHLERT. I thank the gentleman.

THE ADMINISTRATION, NOT CONGRESS, IS TO BLAME FOR THE DELAY IN FUNDING RTC

(Mr. ANNUNZIO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, last week I received a letter from Peter H. Monroe, President of the Oversight Board of the Resolution Trust Corporation. In part, Mr. Monroe says that congressional delay in providing funds costs taxpayers $4 million for every day that funding is delayed.

I suggest that Mr. Monroe does not have his facts straight. It is the administration, not Congress, that has delayed RTC funding.

On May 28, I wrote to Secretary of the Treasury Brady asking him to send an RTC bill to the Congress immediately to avoid any last minute delays.

The administration did not send a bill to Congress for 129 days, and in fact, it was only after the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA] introduced her own bill, that the administration finally sent up its bill. Using the administration's own figures, the 129-day delay means that the administration's unwillingness to forward a request to Congress amounts to a $516 million cost to the American people.

The RTC may not be good at placing blame, but it does know how to spend money. Only Imelda Marcos in a shoe store can spend money faster than the RTC.

THE RIGHT OF EVERY AMERICAN: COMPREHENSIVE HEALTH CARE

(Ms. OAKAR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I hope when we return that we will address what I consider to be a crisis in our country, and that is that we have 37 million Americans who have no access to health care, and we have another 40 million who are underinsured, and 8 million who are in need of long-term care; that is, home care and nursing home care. In our country one must be dirt poor to be able to get quality nursing home care, and it demeans families who have children with chronic diseases, and it demeans elderly who have saved all their lives for their golden years and all of a sudden find themselves in a predicament to get the kind of care they need.

Mr. Speaker, I think we can do it cheaper and with higher quality than the average American has today, even if one has insurance. We spend $750 billion in this country on health care. We spend 12.5 percent of our GNP. Canada spends about 8.5 percent; France, and England, and Italy, and Australia, about 8 percent of their GNP, and yet we have all of these American people, most of whom are from working families, who have no access to health care.

Mr. Speaker, I have a bill that will do just that, H.R. 8. I think we can have a high standard of coverage with acute care, with preventative care, wellness programs for children, immunization, mammography, prostate screening for men, and all the other important early detection and preventative health care needs, and more dollars for research so that we find cures to diseases. We include long-term care with homemaker services and home services, and it costs about five-sevenths of what the American people pay today, so we can do it better in this country.

We should have, as every American's right, access to comprehensive, high-level health care. We are the only industrialized country, besides South Africa, that does not guarantee that right.

So, my colleagues, let us commit ourselves to listening to the American people. I do not think we are listening the way we should, and I certainly do not think the President has health care on his agenda. So, let us commit ourselves to what I think is a right of every American, comprehensive health care.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 3435, RESOLUTION TRUST CORPORATION REFINANCING, RESTRUCTURING, AND IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 1991

Mr. DERRICK, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 102–408) on the resolution (H. Res. 320) providing for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 3435) to provide funding for the resolution of failed savings associations and working capital for the Resolution Trust Corporation, to restructure the Oversight Board and the Resolution Trust Corporation, and for other purposes, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

RESOLUTION TRUST CORPORATION REFINANCING, RESTRUCTURING, AND IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 1991

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 320 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 320

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 1(b) of rule XXIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 3435) to provide funding for the resolution of failed savings associations and working capital for the Resolution Trust Corporation, to restructure the Oversight Board and the Resolution Trust Corporation, and for other purposes. All points of order against consideration of the bill are hereby waived. Immediately after dispensing with the first reading, the bill shall be considered for amendment. No amendment to the bill shall be in order except: (1) the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs now printed in the bill; and (2) the amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this resolution. Each amendment shall be considered as having been read and each shall be debatable for not to exceed thirty minutes, equally divided and controlled by the proponent and a Member opposed thereto. Neither amendment shall be subject to amendment, and all points of order against the amendments are hereby waived. If both amendments are adopted, only the latter amendment which is adopted shall be considered as finally adopted and reported back to the House. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendment thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, which may contain instructions if offered by Representative Michel of Illinois or his designee, or without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. DERRICK] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. DREIER], and pending that, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 320 is the rule providing for the consideration of H.R. 3435, the Resolution Trust Corporation Refinancing, Restructuring, and Improvement Act of 1991. The rule provides no separate time for general debate. The rule makes in order only two amendments: First, the Banking Committee amendment in the nature of a substitute now printed in the bill, and second, the Barnard substitute now printed in the report to accompany the rule. Each substitute is debatable for 30 minutes.

The substitute amendments are considered under the king-of-the hill procedure. Under this procedure, only the last amendment adopted is finally adopted and reported back to the House. The substitutes are not subject to amendment, and all points of order are waived against the amendments.

Finally, the rule provides one motion to recommit without instructions, or one motion to recommit with instructions if offered by Representative MICHEL.

Mr. Speaker, this is a vitally important bill. It provides the funding needed to continue the work of the Resolution Trust Corporation and to make some needed improvements in the structure and operations of the Corporation.

Mr. Speaker, this rule permits the House to complete its business quickly, and fairly. I urge adoption of the resolution.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. speaker, given the controversial nature of the RTC funding bill and the time constraints we face, I believe this is an appropriate rule, and I will support it. The RTC has run out of funds to continue closing down as many as 400 insolvent institutions that remain open. Delaying this legislation will only add to the costs to the U.S. taxpayer, as much as $400 million by February.

In addition, the bill does not contain many of the objectionable provisions that worked to undermine the legislation reported out by the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs on November 20. However it does include reforms to expedite the sale of assets of failed thrifts, which is very important. It also streamlines what many people have found is inefficient management at the Resolution Trust Corporation.

□ 1200

Mr. Speaker, I am deeply disappointed, however, that the rule does not make in order an important Republican amendment containing a package of economic growth incentives. That package would effectively reduce the cost of the savings-and-loan cleanup by addressing the economic problems that have contributed to thrift failures.

At the same time, it would help struggling families by lowering taxes, creating jobs, and expanding the economy. It acknowledges that the economic downturn is led by the real estate industry, and we are willing to provide the incentives to improve real estate values and lower the cost of the RTC's funding needs.

I am very heartened to know that the President will be working with us to submit a comprehensive economic growth package following his State of the Union Address. I believe, in light of the fact we have offered several Republican amendments in the Committee on Rules and failed in our effort to get those in, that we should proceed.

We have a number of requests for time. I will end up supporting this rule, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ANNUNZIO].

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, during the debate on the RTC funding legislation, it will be alleged that congressional delay in passing the funding costs the taxpayers $4 million for every day that the legislation is not passed. There are figures that are put forth by the Resolution Trust Corporation itself.

While I do not want to dispute what delay costs the American taxpayers, I strongly challenge the assertion that the delay in getting funding for the RTC is the fault of the Congress.

The delay in gaining RTC funding is squarely on the back of the administration. It was the administration that delayed RTC funding, not Congress, and once Congress started an RTC bill moving through the Banking Committee, it was the RTC that lobbied against most of the reform provisions that were attempted to be placed in the RTC funding bill. In short, the RTC wants to money, but it does not want to do anything to make sure that the taxpayers are protected.

On May 28, I wrote to the Secretary of the Treasury in my capacity as chairman of the Financial Institutions Subcommittee, asking him not to delay in sending an RTC funding bill to the Congress. I pointed out that we could not wait until the last minute to deal with RTC because of the many needed reforms that had to be placed in the bill.

I promised the Secretary an immediate hearing on the legislation, but I had to wait 129 days before the administration sent up its funding request. In fact, the administration only sent up its funding request after the gentlelady from New Jersey submitted her own bill on RTC funding.

Apparently embarrassed that it had dropped the ball, the administration, shortly thereafter, sent up its own bill, but once again, 129 days after I had asked the Secretary of the Treasury to send a bill up immediately.

Mr. Speaker, if there was such urgency in the RTC funding, why did the administration wait nearly a quarter of a year before sending Congress a bill? Based on the RTC's own figures, the delay costs $4 million a day. The administration's delay in sending a bill to Congress has cost the taxpayer $516 million.

So if anybody wants to talk about delay during the debate let them talk about the administration's delay. Congress moved swiftly on an RTC bill after the administration delayed 129 days in sending it to the Congress. The administration must accept the blame for the delay, and it should not try to use Members of this House to shift the blame to the Congress where it does not belong.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. McCOLLUM], a hard-working member of the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, and the vice-chairman of the Republican conference.

Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

I rise today to urge my colleagues to defeat this rule, to vote down the previous question, so an appropriate rule can be made in order, because what happened in the Committee on Rules, and I think in the committee as a whole as well, is a real travesty for the American taxpayer.

We were not allowed to make in order amendments that would save, in my judgment and the judgment of many others, anywhere from $25 to $35 billion from the cost in the loss of the RTC in resolving thrifts in this country, and in addition to that, I believe, and in connection with that, we could have saved and may still be able to save as many as 70 or 80 institutions or more that may otherwise be closed unnecessarily simply because they are not able to meet capital standards and simply because of supervisory goodwill.

Two amendments were offered before the Committee on Rules by the Republican leadership task force. One of them was a comprehensive substitute.

I want to say up front that this has nothing to do with the growth plan that you are going to hear discussed here in a minute that the Republicans authored. This is a comprehensive substitute that in and of itself, freestanding, could have saved these billions of dollars if we had had a chance to vote on it out here today, but we have not.

This particular comprehensive substitute would have brought back a substantial portion of supervisory goodwill that is on the books at many of these institutions today, and I want to explain that more in a minute. It would have given the Office of Thrift Supervision the discretion to save many more, because it would have allowed him some time to make up for capital that they do not have right now in their standards and delinked what is going to be an increase in the capital standards very shortly to much higher standards connected with banks here next year. It would have given the Office of Thrift Supervision the discretion to halt a lot of real estate sales that otherwise would have occurred.

It would have also provided three economic growth incentives in itself, a capital gains tax reduction, partial reinstatement of passive-loss rules for real estate, and penalty for use of IRA's for the purchase of primary residences.

The thing I want to focus on most of all was an independent freestanding amendment that I offered before the Committee on Rules that was held nongermane by the Democratic leadership both in the full committee and the Democratic leadership of the Committee on Rules that would, in my judgment, in one fell swoop have saved $25 to $35 billion. That concerns what is known as supervisory goodwill. That is what a lot of savings and loans took on the books in an agreement with the Home Loan Bank Board back in the decade of the 1980's, in return to take on some failing savings and loans.

These were healthy savings and loans we are talking about who took this on with the promise that they would have 40 years to pay it off. In 1989 we decided that that was not such a good idea. It probably was not. But instead of giving them a reasonable time to pay back that goodwill and pay it off and raise capital in other ways, we said you have got to get rid of that, or it cannot count towards capital over the next 5 years. We now have gotten rid of or closed through the RTC and the Thrift Supervision Office most of the really bad savings and loans. We now have quite a number of institutions out there with about $4 billion of this supervisory goodwill that are perfectly healthy, whose core earnings are good, who are in the black, under regular management, but we are about to close them.

We have no need to do that. We have no business to do that. For about $2 billion we can buy back supervisory goodwill from about 70 of these institutions.

The studies of the folks that are doing this closing can tell us, and have told us, that these institutions have about $180 billion in total assets. We also know that the closing costs to the RTC of closing these institutions is running now about 15 to 20 percent of total assets.

So it is very easy to see if we do not have to close those institutions you can save $25 to $35 billion, and the only cost is about $2 billion.

It does not make sense. There is one savings and loan in my area of Florida recently that was closed at a cost that was estimated by the Office of Thrift Supervision to be $170 million.

The cost of buying back supervisory goodwill from the otherwise healthy institution was running in the black on its core earnings would have been only $50 million, a savings to the taxpayers.

We could have saved the taxpayers at least $120 million in that one institution alone. That is an example of the folly of not buying back some supervisory goodwill when those are healthy institutions out there was only failing is the fact that they ar not going to be able to meet the capital standards we enacted in 1989, simply because of thise so-called supervisory goodwill that we contracted with them on that they took on at the request of the Goverment in the first place, a very egregious mistake.

I submit to my colleagues that it is a travesty for the Democratic leadership in the Committee on Rules not to allow us the opportunity today to save this kind of money.

We are being asked to vote for $80 billion in recapitalization of the RTC in order to take care of it over the next few years, in order to close down all of this.

We may get some other substitutes for short-term funding. We are talking about billions and billions of dollars. We do not need to be speding that. We could be saving a good hunk of that. We do not need to be closing all of those institutions.

We are making a horrible mistake here today by not having that kind of opportunity to have those savings.

I encourage my colleagues to vote against the rule; vote down the previous question. Let use have another opportunity at that, and if none of that succeeds, for gosh sakes, vote against the folly of what is out here today, and vote against the final passage of these bills.

□ 1210

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ], the chairman of the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise merely to ask the nature of the rule. I have not had the chance to see the rule. My basic question is, what is the basic intent of the rule?

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GONZALEZ. I yield to the gentleman from South Carolina.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, the basic text is the Banking Committee text.

Mr. GONZALEZ. As it was approved by the Committee on Banking and Urban Affairs?

Mr. DERRICK. That is right. Then Barnard is a substitute, and it is a king of the hill rule. In other words, you will vote on the original text, then vote on the Barnard substitute, and then there is a motion to recommit with or without instructions by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MICHEL].

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. OAKAR].

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule. I want to thank the Committee on Rules for folding in an amendment that I offered which built upon an amendment that was offered in committee by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONAZALEZ] and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE]. One of the reasons why I am convinced at times the American people do not support this agency and Congress as well is because of the lack of accountability. We hear of huge legal fees, the 7,000 people employed, the lack of computerized database, et cetera, and we wonder what are they really doing.

On the other hand, they have an awesome job to do. It is not easy to provide for this cleanup of the S&L crisis.

It seems very clear to me that the operations of the RTC have not been fully supported by the Congress or the American people. I believe this is because the Congress has not had sufficient information which allows us to carefully monitor and understand the many complex activities of the RTC. Specifically, we have not had the benefit of receiving regular quarterly and semiannual reports from the RTC regarding the progress of the sales of RTC assets, the progress made in auction sales of assets, the funding activities of the RTC, the use of seller financing to encourage sales of RTC assets, or the many other activities of this corporation. These are critical elements of the RTC's operations which need to be more closely monitored.

My amendment today expands upon the good work done by Chairman GONZALEZ. In addition, as an indication of its bipartisan support, language very similar to my amendment was offered by Mr. WYLIE as part of a substitute amendment he offered during full committee consideration of the RTC bill.

The language of the amendment includes quarterly reports from the RTC to the Banking Committees of the House and Senate which describe the following:

First, the total value of sales of RTC assets during the quarter;

Second, the total book value of asset sales;

Third, estimated fair market value of assets;

Fourth, net RTC recovery on the assets sold;

Fifth, subtotals by category of assets (i.e., commercial real estate, residential real estate, performing loans, nonperforming loans, etc.);

Sixth, the progress made on auction sales of assets;

Seventh, the amount and effectiveness of RTC's seller financing program;

Eighth, Federal financing bank loans status and activities;

Ninth, activities of the RTC Board; and

Tenth, activities and plans of the RTC to eventually phase out its operations.

I firmly believe we need to receive more information which gives the Congress and the public a better understanding of the complex operations of the RTC. This is the only way we can monitor the activities and the progress of the RTC in its mission to dispose of hundreds of billions of dollars of assets or the implications of the many other activities of the RTC. This is commonsense legislation which will result in a better run RTC.

So I was very, very pleased that the Committee on Rules allowed an amendment that would allow for RTC to regularly report quarterly and semi-annually to the progress of the sales of RTC assets to Congress, the progress made in auction sales of their assets, the funding activities of RTC, the use of seller financing to encourage the sales of RTC assets by a Federal agency.

Although some will point out by delay it is a $4 million a day additional cost to the taxpayers, perhaps that is not as great a concern as the fact that at this moment there are some 88 institutions which are now under RTC control representing 4½ million depositors around this Nation who are waiting on funding of the RTC to get their money back as a result of our inability to fund RTC activities.

The average size of those deposits is about $9,700. They are not large depositors, but there are 4.5 million of them around the country.

Much will be said about the failure of the RTC to act responsibly. Of 670 seized institutions, 582 have been sold or closed. Of $358 billion worth of assets under their control, over 60 percent, $210 billion, have now been disposed of.

But the more important issue as to how we got into this mess in the first place, of 871 criminals charged, 661 convictions have been rendered.

During the first 6 months of 1991, for the first time since 1986, the thrift industry has shown a profit. Now is not the time to turn our back on the industry.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARNARD].

Mr. BARNARD. Mr. Speaker, this amendment is an attempt by myself, Mr. WYLIE, Mr. VENTO, Mr. McCANDLESS, Mr. KLECZKA, and Mr. BAKER to provide an alternative for Members to consider on the floor. Given the very short time available to us to get a bill through the House and Senate, we have tried to develop an alternative whose major provisions are as close to the Senate language as possible with the exception of the RTC funding. The Senate bill provides $80 billion while our alternative provides such sums as are necessary until April 15, with a cap of $25 billion.

The RTC is a difficult vote for Members and this is our best judgment as to what Members of both parties can support on the floor. As you know, it is vital that we provide some funding for continued RTC operations, as costs rapidly escalate when insufficient funds are available to resolve institutions in receivership.

The amendment that we have crafted is designed to provide enough loss funding and working capital to carry the RTC through until at least the end of March. Hopefully we can reach a consensus on a longer term bill that will pass the floor by that time. As I just mentioned, we did not provide an absolute funding figure in the amendment, but instead provided a cutoff date of April 1 with a cap of $25 billion.

There are 88 thrifts in the resolution process and the RTC should resolve as many of these as possible to staunch the hemorrhaging and lower the cost to the taxpayer. Rather than try and guess precisely how much funding the RTC would need April 1, we decided to provide "such sums as necessary." This is not a blank check for the RTC by any means since the language we chose does not permit the RTC to obligate itself past April 1, effectively making it a drop dead date. Additionally, there are substantial operational constraints that prevent the RTC from excessive spending. They can handle only a certain number of institutions at any given time. A rough estimate of how much they would spend would be in the area of $20 billion.

In addition to the funding provisions, the amendment adopts the RTC restructuring provisions agreed to in the Senate which provide for a single board and which are a substantial improvement.

It retains the housing provisions of H.R. 3435 as adopted in the full committee. It retains the minority provisions adopted in the subcommittee print of H.R. 3435.

An alternative in this form would represent a good faith effort to acknowledge Congress's concern for the taxpayer and minorities as well as the need for affordable housing while getting on with the task at hand.

Thank you for considering my views and I hope that you will make this alternative in order.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER], our chief deputy whip.

Mr. WALKER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, as we approach this rule, this will be our last chance to try to get an economic growth package in this particular session of Congress.

Let me talk about the parliamentary situation. By defeating the previous question to this rule, it would permit an amendment to be offered. That amendment would say within the rule that we would bring an economic growth package to the floor. That would give us a chance to debate that economic growth package.

Should we defeat the previous question, we would be recognized to offer such an amendment. We would be prepared to do that, and then we are also prepared to offer an economic growth package.

There has been some talk that no such package really exists. Here it is. It is 67 pages. It does in fact represent a significant attempt to get economic growth going in the country.

This is a bill where it makes sense to do it. The RTC would not need additional taxpayer funding in a growing economy. If you had a growing economy, the likelihood is that the recapitalization of real estate alone would ensure the solvency of RTC and we would not have to be here for large amounts of money.

This 67-page package that I talk about would save the taxpayers further bailout money and would put them back to work in those situations where they are unemployed. It would keep their jobs intact where they are working, but fearful of the future.

☐ 1220

After all, that is what America really wants. It wants jobs and it wants confidence in our economic future.

We can start down the road toward that kind of situation today and we can do so by passing this package.

We are likely to hear in the course of the debate about this package that somehow it does not represent a middle-class package. I know that there is a table being circulated that was brought up on the floor yesterday indicating that a substantial portion of this does not go to the middle-class. The fact is that they are only telling us part of the story.

First of all, only 2 of the 12 provisions in this package were analyzed in that study. Meaning that five-sixths of the package was not analyzed, much of which goes to the middle-class.

Let me give one example, eliminating the earnings test on social security was not analyzed. Yet that helps middle-income senior citizens to a great extent. It brings them down from a 70-percent tax bracket that many of them are in. And yet that is not analyzed as part of the Democrats' package.

It is also interesting to note that even the analysis that they had done indicates that people making between $20,000 and $30,000 a year, almost 55 percent of them are going to get capital gains tax breaks in this particular package; people making between $30,000 and $40,000 a year, 72 percent of them. That is middle-class America. And what it means is that we are not getting a real story about the nature of this package as it affects middle-income America.

I would ask that we defeat the previous question. Help us bring about an economic growth package by bringing it to the floor today, and I hope that we can effect passage of that package and get the economy growing again.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield two minutes and 30 seconds to the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. DORGAN].

Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota. Mr. Speaker, we have just heard another description of an economic growth package. It is the 11th hour, the 12th hour now of the legislative session. We see the construction of it in the 12th hour, of a 27- or 47-page bill that has been written in recent evenings and without hearings.

We are told that we ought to pass this bill in order to jump-start the American economy. Some of the bill has been analyzed. We understand that the engine of this bill is a classic approach to provide capital gains tax reductions.

The question is, who will receive those tax reductions? The answer is very simple. The folks that have capital gains. Who has capital gains? A lot of people have some. So a lot of people get a very small benefit. But a few people have a lot, and those few will get an enormous benefit. The fact is, no matter how you describe it, this is not new. This is not improved. This is classic tax policy proposed by our friends on the other side.

About 70 percent of the benefit will go to those folks whose incomes are above $100,000 a year.

The fact is, anyone who seriously looks at this as a package is going to score it to say that this loses revenue. I know the Treasury Department has conveniently told them it does not, but the CBO and joint tax and others say this is a loser. So the proposition we have before us is to say, let us increase the federal deficit in the 12th hour of the legislative session so they can offer the wealthiest of the country a tax break.

Is that the way to jump-start the American economy? It is not the way to put this American economy back on track to solve the real problems, and are not the real problems that we have too much debt? It is not a case that the rich are not rich enough. We do not have to offer them more largesse with deep tax cuts.

What we have to do, it seems to me, is propose an economic package that does the basics, restores the old virtues. Pay your bills. The best thing we could do for the American economy is decide as Democrats and Republicans that we are going to start paying our bills and reduce the deficit.

When we reduce the deficit, this ship of state will be back sailing on the seas to the road to economic health again. That is the way to improve the economy of this country.

Mr. RUSSO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. RUSSO. Mr. speaker, for those of us who have looked at the package, is it not a fact that 57 percent of the tax breaks go to people over $200,000?

Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota. Mr. Speaker, yes. And 70 percent goes to those over $100,000.

Mr. RUSSO. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will continue to yield, and for those people over $200,000, they will get $11,000 tax cut, and people under $50,000 will get a whopping $85.

Mr. DORGAN of North Dakota. Mr. Speaker, that is correct.

Yesterday, when I learned of this package, I called it the dollar and a quarter tax cut. A dollar and a quarter a week to the middle-income families so they save up for 5 or 6 weeks, maybe they chip together and send one person to a movie with this tax cut to middle-income families. Of course, they do not have enough left over for popcorn, just one movie ticket, 5 weeks of middle-class tax relief. The folks on the other end, $11,000 a year tax cut to those whose incomes are over $200,000 a year.

Listen, that is tired economic policy that has failed. That is not going to jump-start this economy. Let us come up with some new ideas that help middle-income families, give them something to work with.

They will be the engine for this American economy, to get this country moving again.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. WEBER], the distinguished secretary of the Republican conference and a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. WEBER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the rule. As has been stated quite well by the preceding speakers, the issue hanging over this Congress is indeed the economy. And this is the best of a bunch of poor vehicles available to us, admittedly at the 11th hour, to do something about it.

I oppose the rule because it does not afford us the opportunity to do something about the economy. Mr. Speaker, the economy needs help now. I am not going to talk about the details of the proposal. Other speakers are going to talk about that.

I would like to focus for a minute on something that I think Members on both sides of the aisle could agree on if we could get out of this supercharged last minute environment. Our economy is hurting a great deal. Yesterday we found that consumer confidence had dropped below the levels of the 1982 recession. I talk to people and they say they are puzzled by this. How can it be? After all, unemployment is not at levels that it was at at that time. We actually saw some small upturn in the economy in the last quarter.

Why is it that consumer confidence is going through the floor? There are a number of other indicators we have to look at to understand the depth of the economic problem we face right now.

The value of residential fixed assets has fallen 10 percent in this country in the last 18 months, Mr. Speaker. Why is that important? For the average middle-class American, the kind of people that my friend from North Dakota was just talking about, that is their only asset. Their only asset is their home and the possessions that are inside that home.

When they see the value of that asset falling, that sets off all sorts of red lights and warning signals in their minds about their own financial security.

I believe that that contributes materially to the drop in consumer confidence, even among people who are not unemployed and who do not have any great fear of being unemployed.

Housing starts are at the level of the 1920's. New business formation has fallen 5 years in a row, and that is where the engine of growth normally comes from in this economy.

We found out yesterday that the auto industry for all practical purposes has entered the double dip of this recession that many of us have been concerned would happen.

Mr. Speaker, all I am suggesting is, despite the fact that it is the 11th hour, we should act now. We should try to do something about the economy now.

The fact that it is the 11th hour, by the way, sort of does not state the fact that we have been here all 11 hours. It is not as if this issue crept up on us in the Congress.

We could go back over all the speeches in this well, and 1-minute speeches and special orders for the last year about the lack of action on a domestic agenda, lack of action on the economy. We knew there was a problem. We have been talking about a problem.

If we are now here incapable of acting at the 11th hour, we have no one to blame but ourselves.

Mr. Speaker, I further oppose this rule because of the issue itself, the narrow issue of the RTC. Look at the numbers. Eighty billion dollars so far has been spent on the RTC.

☐ 1230

Eight hundred thirty billion dollars so far, $830 billion more officially projected, of which we are going to authorize up to $25 billion, but the unofficial estimates range from $200 to $500 billion. What is that $300 billion swing all about? It is our inability to accurately predict the value of the properties held by the RTC. We are potentially playing with up to $300 billion more of our taxpayers' money.

We have to spend some of that. I understand that. I voted for the S&L bill. I feel it is a responsible thing to do. But today the responsible thing to do is to take those minimal steps necessary to assure that at least through tax policy we have enhanced the value of those properties to the maximum degree possible to minimize the cost to the taxpayers.

Mr. Speaker, I do not know if I am going to vote against this bill in the event that we fail to amend it. I do not want to vote for it, but I want to do the responsible thing. But I will tell the Members, beyond today I can guarantee them if we do not do some things like capital gains tax reduction and restoration of passive loss deductibility, which will enhance the value of those and all the other real estate properties in the country, this is one Member that feels that he has lived up to his obligation to help the savings and loan problem. I for one will not be voting for one more nickel down the RTC rathole as long as this Congress refuses to take those steps necessary to minimize the cost of that bailout.

Vote against the previous question. Vote against the rule.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. KAPTUR].

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

I rise in support of this rule but will vote against the final bill, whether it has an open-ended appropriation in it or whether or not it specifies such sums as are necessary, or whether it says $80 billion or $60 billion more. I want to explain the reasons for that.

First of all, I think it is absolutely wrong that, as last year, we bring up such an important measure in the closing minutes of this session. I think it is absolutely wrong, and I do not thank the leadership on either side of the aisle for doing that to us and to the American people.

All of us here understand our responsibility to protect the depositors of this country. We understand that and we do not like being told that we do not understand that as part of this measure. But what is wrong about this bill is that it again asks the average taxpayers of our country to bear the costs of the S&L bailout. They have already paid up to $110 billion and the GAO estimates that overall they will end up paying over $371 billion. We have to ask the important question: If the taxpayers are going to be asked to pay the costs, what are the benefits that can go to the average taxpayer.

I have four proposals. All we are being asked to vote on here is the Bush bond bailout scheme. Basically the committees here gave to us the Bush proposal to vote on, which I do not support at all.

Alternative financing proposals have been offered. One involves the measure by the gentleman from Louisiana, BILLY TAUZIN, that would give tax exemptions to average depositors who put money into federally insured institutions, and it says to them if they put in up to $500 they do not have to pay Federal taxes on that. Revenue costs of that are about $1.2 billion, but it would help to promote savings inflows in institutions.

Mr. Speaker, I will give the other three proposals during a succeeding time.

All of those who serve here understand our obligation to protect the deposits of the American consumer in our Nation's saving and loans and banking institutions, but the question of a Member like myself is: At whose expense? Who should be paying to protect those deposits?

Mr. Speaker, essentially what has been happening is the administration's bill asks the taxpayers, the people listening, again to shoulder a S&L bailout. The U.S. taxpayer has already buoyed up failing S&L's to the tune of $110 billion. Our tax dollars are going to pay for the damage just in that industry, and economists estimate that taxpayers will be asked to add as much as $115 billion, not million, billion dollars more to that total, and then the General Accounting Office tells us that the overall cost of the bailout may rise just for the savings and loans as high as $371 billion before it is all over.

The pit truly seems bottomless. The focus should be on how to pay for the damage in this S&L debacle and do so on behalf of the American taxpayer.

The Bush bill is appallingly deficient on balancing taxpayer costs, the taxes the taxpayer is being asked to pay, with the benefits that go directly to the taxpayer. In essence what has been happening here in Washington is that the Bush administration and the banking industry, in alliance with powerful States that have the most to gain from this administration's proposal, have succeeded, succeeded in diverting public attention away from the cost of the taxpayer bailout and who is paying for it.

Meanwhile, the hidden interest payments on the Bush bond scheme to pay for the S&L mess and flow out of the Treasury to the tune of billions each year, and the American taxpayer has nearly forgotten that this in fact is going on.

Alternative financing proposals have been quashed in various congressional committees. The tax committees in both Chambers, the Committee on Ways and Means in this Chamber, essential to finding a fair solution to paying for this, have remained resoundingly silent.

Members of Congress like myself want a Democratic alternative bill that is fair to the average American taxpayer. They must benefit directly from the costs they are being asked to bear. There are plenty of ideas that hold promise. It is amazing to me that the financial press, the committees of jurisdiction, and brilliant economists have chosen to be so vastly uncreative in fashioning a fair answer for the American public who are paying the bill.

I want to just discuss four approaches that can be taken to resolve this serious financial crisis in the S&L industry. One part of the answer involves focusing on restoring healthy banks by encouraging more deposit inflows into those institutions. In this way, Federal policy could change from what it is today, merely propping up sick institutions and going bankrupt while you are doing it, to, rather, building healthy institutions.

For example, a proposal has been introduced in this House by my colleague, Congressman BILLY TAUZIN, called the Save America Act of 1989. This legislation exempts from taxable income interest up to a certain level earned in passbook savings accounts in federally insured institutions, so if you are a depositor out there and you put your money in a bank or a savings and loan or a credit union, up to a certain level the interest you earn would be tax free.

That tax incentive would create huge increased deposit flows to banks as well as savings and loans and other financial institutions like credit unions, and those very institutions would be able to improve their capitalization, they would be able to pay their assessments in taxes, they would be able to make safer investments, and most of all they would be able to cut their umbilical cord to the U.S. Treasury. Taxpayers would directly benefit from such an approach, and the costs that the taxpayers are currently paying would actually accrue back to them in the form of reduced tax payments to the Government of the United States.

Now, the institutions that would be benefiting from the deposit inflows would be asked to pay more in taxes, but that is only fair. And in this case the permission to remain in business and to receive increased deposit flows would be taxed by the Government and those taxes would go to pay for the bailout that is needed in the industry.

You do not hear much talk around here about how to make institutions more healthy. The talk always here is about how to prop up sick institutions.

A second set of choices involves how to democratize, and I like to use that word, the bond offerings that are currently in place to try to pay the cost of the bailout. Now, most of the American public does not realize that the way that this is being paid for currently is that every month the U.S. Treasury markets securities, and that the bailout bonds that are being used to pay for the insured accounts, depositors' accounts in institutions, are actually being floated by our Treasury Department.

In fact, these bonds are really not being sold to the average American taxpayers. What happens is that the majority of them are sold through 20 Wall Street bond houses which get really nice fees from the taxpayers for acting as intermediaries, and then those bond houses offer them to those who are in the buying public of bond buyers. Only about 10 percent of the people in our country currently purchase bonds. This certainly is not a very democratic system.

My idea would be to ask the Treasury Department to change the way that it markets and sells bonds, to make them broadly available to the American public. But I will tell you this, the Treasury Department will hate this idea. So will the Federal Reserve, because they have gotten real comfortable in dealing with those 20 bond houses, and you have seen recently how some of them have gotten in real trouble as a result of their finagling up on Wall Street and taking advantage of their special relationship.

But in view of the hemorrhage we are dealing with in this industry, U.S. taxpayers must be convinced that their sacrifices have a return, and if they are going to be asked to pay any of the bill on these banking messes, then by golly, the Treasury Department of this country which is asking them to pay for it should give them a benefit in the form of a bond that they can buy and earn the interest on. Business as usual at Treasury securities offerings can no longer prevail.

The average citizen of our country does not even know where to go to buy a Treasury security. In fact, only 25 percent, just one quarter of U.S. households, even own savings bonds, and the U.S. Treasury continues to sell bonds through its cozy relationship with about a dozen and a half bond houses up in New York. It is really time to democratize the sale of U.S. Treasury securities through banks, through savings and loan, through credit unions. My gosh, we could even do it through post offices.

Let average Jane and Joe Citizen earn the 8 to 9 percent interest the big bond buyers enjoy. You know, America used to do that, until our financial industry became so concentrated. We have all seen what happened with Salomon Bros. recently when they took advantage of their special relationship with Treasury and all their big CEO's and presidents had to resign up there in New York.

Would it not be wonderful if bonds in denominations of as low as $25 could be made available to the ordinary consumer? You would think that is what the U.S. Treasury Department, which collects taxes from every one of those consumers, you would think that would be the business they were in.

Not so. The U.S. Treasury, which loves to collect taxes from U.S. citizens, should be directed in a bill that comes out of this House, a Democratic bill, to design a bond offering to benefit the taxpayers footing this bill.

A third set of choices in how to dig ourselves out from under the S&L mess involves targeted taxes and plugging tax loopholes to raise the needed revenue. Over a 5-year period it would be reasonable to impose temporary surtaxes across the financial service industry which benefited from the S&L scam and bank transactions.

It is really amazing that no such idea has been offered yet. But if you watch the corridors of power in Washington, you can understand why. Instead, hard-working taxpayers struggling to get by in this recession. American people who are unemployed in my district and cannot even get the benefits of more than 6 weeks of unemployment compensation, are being asked to shoulder the load of this banking mess.

Two Members of the House Committee on Ways and Means, the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. DORGAN], and the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. GUARINI], have introduced a bill to plug tax loopholes for savings and loan owners that would recoup up to $5 billion by avoiding something called double-dipping in tax submissions by those institutions.

These funds could also then be applied to the amounts needed to salvage current problems within the banking industry. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. DONNELLY], has introduced legislation to recapture overgenerous tax breaks which the S&L's received in 1988. I have been pushing legislation with the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLPE], that passed in the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, but somehow never made it onto this floor, what would make States pay for the proportion of the cleanup which their own failed thrifts caused by requiring those States that incurred excessive costs to pay an extra Federal deposit insurance premium if the thrifts want to remain federally insured.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KANJORSKI] has introduced legislation to permit private civil suits to be filed to recover funds from those who have plundered our Nation's savings and loans. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY] proposes to levy a tax on those who enjoyed the benefits of our financial system through the Fedwire and Clearing House Interbanks Payments system to raise billions annually.

Mr. Speaker, I bring up these examples in the tax system merely to point out that money could be raised in alternative ways to pay for the savings and loan and banking crisis. Those bills have not been permitted here on the floor.

A fourth set of solutions involves getting rid of weaknesses in the current financial system that caused the problems in the first place, most especially overly generous deposit insurance in multiple accounts. Let us put together a bill that helps our real constituents—average Americans, sick of paying for the high times and the cunning of the few during the 1980's.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I would like to respond to the statement made by my good friend, the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. KAPTUR], and state that the figures we have been hearing of $60, $70, and $80 billion are not in fact, on track. We got an amendment from the Committee on Rules which has this structured as "such sums as may be necessary, not to exceed $25 billion."

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to my friend, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SANTORUM].

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. Speaker, 26 hours ago I came here at the beginning of the mother of all sessions, and before I get into my remarks I want to commend the chairman and the ranking members and all of those who worked very hard and diligently through the night on all of these conference reports to get them to the floor and to have them voted on, and I want to offer my congratulations on doing so. It was very important work.

I also want to comment on the civility of the debate throughout the evening. I am on a half hour's sleep tonight and a lot of Members likewise, and I think we have all handled ourselves very responsibly and respectably. As a freshman Member I want to comment on that, and encourage the action to continue. I will try to depart from that decorum.

But 26 hours ago I came here and asked in a 1-minute speech that we consider an economic growth package. This is our opportunity. This is the vote on the rule to allow us to have an opportunity to offer our economic growth package today here on the floor before we leave.

Many speakers have already gotten up on our side and talked about what is in the package, and those on the other side have responded. If I can make a couple of comments, the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. DORGAN], just made the statement that we got the Treasury Department to score this and they will do whatever we want them to do. I would remind the gentleman from North Dakota that in the budget agreement of last year the Treasury Department is responsible for scoring. We accepted that. They scored at $400 million plus. We accept that.

The gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. DORGAN], also said that the real need is for budget reduction. In the next couple of months the Republicans are going to be, or at least some members of the Republican Party, are going to be offering an alternative package that makes a budget reduction, and I extend my hand to the gentleman from North Dakota and Members on the other side of the aisle to come back here next year and to try to do spending cuts and deficit reductions, because I agree with the gentleman that we do need to do something.

I want to compliment the chairman of the Committee on the Budget for the work he has been doing on trying to find areas where we can cut spending to reduce the deficit.

The other thing I would like to comment on is the chart that the gentleman from Illinois brought to the floor, and has been referred to about the redistribution effects of this proposal. This chart is irrelevant. I would say to the gentleman from Illinois that we are proposing an economic growth package to create jobs, not an economic redistribution to create votes. This is not a relevant chart. What is relevant is to show how many jobs are created.

I would agree with the gentleman from $100 to someone making $200,000 a year may not be a substantial amount of money, but a $25,000 job to someone who is unemployed is a very substantial amount of money, is important to those people, and that is what this package is about. He is arguing apples and oranges.

What we are talking about is jobs. What we are talking about is growth. We are not talking about the Government redistributing the income of this country. That is the relevant issue, not this.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO].

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me. I rise to support the rule and the previous question. I would say that someone commented that the reason the S&L's are problems is because of our tax policy. Indeed that is the case. In 1981 we passed a tax policy that did not make business sense; it made tax sense one could receive a tax break, a big tax benefit by investing in buildings and overbuilding and doing a variety of things, and clearly the S&L's financed that, the banks financed that. Now we are sitting with 25 percent excess commercial property in most parts of the nation and such property is not occupied.

In 1986 we passed the tax bill to correct the 1981 tax law. We corrected it, all right, and the fact of the matter is overnight some of those investments that made tax sense and did not make business sense and went immediately into the red, and some of those S&L's lost money, and many investors across this country lost money.

Today we are being asked in the last minute here, without even the type of analysis that went into those other tax bills, which I think I have indicated that serious problems developed with such policy and some expect us to act on a package that was introduced just last night. Ideas, some of these have been around for a long time, that people are receptive to, many are new and unknown, I would just point out the folly of pursuing this type of policy. These issues, even when we think we know what we are doing, do not always come out with the right consequences. The examples of 1981 and 1986 stand as a caution. Hopefully we will heed it. Vote yes on the previous question and the rule before the house today.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GUNDERSON].

Mr. GUNDERSON. Mr. Speaker, let me apologize to everyone who wants to catch a plane and get out of here. But do not blame those of us concerned about RTC. We are not the ones who scheduled it at 12:40 on Wednesday afternoon.

Let us understand why we are asking Members to vote no on a previous question in simple economics. We just by voice vote authorized the borrowing of $70 billion for FDIC. We now are going to commit $25 billion of taxpayer money to the RTC. That is $100 billion that this Congress is going to commit in less that 1 hour.

The reason we are concerned about what is happening is it is like providing blood transfusions to a bleeding patient without ever sewing up the wound. You cannot do enough if you do not solve the problem and only treat the symptoms.

□ 1240

The fact is the RTC and the FDIC have been told, liquidate your acquired properties as fast as possible. The net effect of that in a recession is to destroy literally the value of all other real estate around it.

What we are trying to do is get the opportunity to bring forth the economic growth package to restore some value in real estate so we do not have to come back next spring and add even more taxpayer dollars to the RTC.

First it was $50 billion, then it was $30 billion, up to $80 billion. Now we are going to provide $25 billion more to the RTC. That is $105 billion of taxpayers money to treat the symptom, not once trying to get at the disease.

Mr. Speaker, we have a chance to solve the problem if we vote no on the previous question. We beg you to do that, not in the interest of getting out of here, but in the interest of the taxpayers of this country and the economy that we are here to serve.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DURBIN].

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. Speaker, as we approach the Thanksgiving season, I am sure that President Bush has visions of Camp David in his head. Instead, the President was badgered to think of Camp Gingrich, and to try to embrace this last-minute scheme by our Republican colleges to try to jump-start the economy.

The centerpiece of the Republican's so-called growth plan is a reduction of the capital gains tax rate, in effect a tax cut for the wealthy.

Let us be honest. Is this the right medicine at this time for our economy?

Take a look at the holiday season we now face, a season critical for our Nation's economy, particularly for our retailers. At this moment American consumers, American families are deep in personal debt. They fear layoffs and dismissals. There is real uncertainty about our Nation's economy and its future.

Can we overcome this recession mentality, this consumer reluctance, by giving an $11,000 tax break to people who make over $200,000 a year?

The Republicans would calm the fears of working families by giving massive tax breaks to millionaires.

In my mind, this is not the way to come out of this recession. A real growth plan does not put Donald Trump on Santa's knee with a longer wish list. A real growth plan goes back to the traditional Democratic approach which we favor and support in several pieces of legislation.

Give the tax break to working families. Have the wealthier Americans pay more. Give the spending power back to the working families who had to sacrifice through 10 years of Reagan-Bush supply side economics. That in my mind is more sensible. It is fair and it will work.

The so-called Republican growth plan is still unfair. It gives the tax breaks to the people who do not need them and sacrifices the kind of economic growth we need for America's working families.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from California [Mrs. BOXER].

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, the Republicans have a tax package and they think it is good. A first look says to us that it is a giveaway to those over $200,000 a year. Now, maybe it is better than that. Maybe it is only a giveaway to those with $175,000 a year and above.

The point is let us not rush. Let the Ways and Means Committee look at it, the Republicans and the Democrats.

I want to remind this body that the last time a Republican Member of the Senate had a good idea, which he got from the President, dealing with credit card caps, and maybe it is a great idea, it was acted on rashly. The market dropped 125 points. I used to be a stockbroker. I know how volatile that can be.

Let us not make political points here. Let the Ways and Means Committee do its job. Let us look at a true economic growth and investment and incentive package in a bipartisan way and get this country moving again.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. EDWARDS], the chairman of the Republican Policy Committee.

Mr. EDWARDS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I oppose the ordering of the previous question because we have here a rule that excludes not only the economic growth package that some of us feel very strongly this Congress ought to deal with quickly, but because it excludes consideration of the McCollum amendment, an amendment that in my opinion is necessary to send a message that is the responsibility of the regulators not to rush into situations that close down thrifts, but to find ways to keep them open.

I have a situation in my part of the country where we are not only having property dumped on the market and destroying real estate values, but that we are finding thrift institutions could be forced out of business.

It seems to me that the people who are running the RTC need to get a clear signal from the Congress that that is not the way we want business done and we cannot do it with this kind of a rule.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. PANETTA].

Mr. PANETTA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule and obviously in support of ordering the previous question.

I think all of us share a common concern and a deep concern about the state of the economy. We are, as has been pointed out by both sides, looking at the weakest economy in the postwar era, whether you are looking at growth, productivity, unemployment growth and the deficit.

The most important thing is that we are dealing with a very fragile and sensitive economy and something that we ought not to just take for granted.

It is a sensitive and fragile economy and not one that we ought to simply take for granted or try to play political games with at this point in time.

The worst thing we can do right now, the very worst thing we can do in the Congress, is to raise expectations of the public that somehow there is a quick fix or a magic solution to the problems that confront the economy. It is going to take a lot of hard work on both sides to develop the kind of comprehensive program that does not just try to provide some tax incentives, but also looks at meaningful investments within our economy that will provide the kind of long-term growth that all of us are interested in.

The worst thing we can do right now is to take up a tax proposal that has had absolutely no hearings in the Ways and Means Committee, that has had no one focusing on the consequences of this proposal. It is a 60-page proposal that was developed, obviously, within the last 24 hours in terms of legislative language. That is not a way to do business when you are facing a fragile economy.

Last, the worst thing we can do is repeat the mistakes of the past. I get very suspicious when the promise is made that somehow we can cut taxes for everyone, particularly the wealthy, and that it will not involve any increase in the deficit.

I heard that same promise in 1981 and we have reaped the whirlwind.

This is not the way to do business. We can do better. The American people expect us to do better. The President of the United States can do better.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from San Diego, California [Mr. HUNTER], the chairman of the Republican Research Committee.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, this is not a last minute Johnny-come-lately proposal.

I looked over the statistics the other night. President Bush in the last 24 months has brought up his economic growth plan in 95 speeches. He has given 27 press conferences in which he brought up his economic growth plan. We have worked long and hard to put this together.

Now, 8.6 million Americans are unemployed as we leave for the holiday. I think we have to conclude that an economic growth and jobs plan is the unfinished business of 1991 for this Congress.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK].

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

First, Mr. Speaker, let us be clear what we are doing. The RTC which was created in 1989 after the problems that the savings and loan industry had during the 1980's, what the committee and the Congress did was to give President Bush and his Treasury Department exactly the structure it wanted to have. That was the way that you wanted it structured and that is the way we have it.

Since then, there has been a drain on the Treasury that has come from having to pay off depositors; so the question is whether or not you want to pay off the depositors or not.

□ 1250

Now, one argument we had today was we should not vote for this now because it does not include supervisory goodwill.

Members should understand what supervisory goodwill is. It is from the "proof, you are a malted" school of creating capital. The man goes into the candy store and says, "Make me a malted." The man says, "Poof, you are a malted."

Supervisory goodwill is when somebody says, "I need some capital for my S&L," and you say in Congress, "Poof, you have some capital." There is no money there. Supervisory goodwill is not good currency; the ruble has a higher understanding. It is simply an artificial construct.

To defeat this bill as we have been asked to do because it does not restore supervisory goodwill is to express a very strong nostalgia for never-never land.

Then we have the tax package. And I agree with my friend who says, well, from the standpoint of the tax package, this is not the 11th hour; it is the 27th hour. We have passed the international dateline already.

This is a tax package which as far as distribution is skewed to the rich and the gentleman from Pennsylvania quite honestly said the chart was irrelevant. Irrelevant is something you say in a political debate, something which is embarrassing and true. You cannot refute it, you say it is irrelevant. So they have now stipulated to the truth of the distributional facts that Members on our side have talked about.

Then what they do, they brought the tax package up without any real support in their own administration, too late to do any good. I think the most carefully planned thing about this tax package is if we have been in such a terrible economic situation, where was it in May, June, July, when people say we needed unemployment compensation?

It is a tax package carefully crafted to be brought out too late to possibly be voted on.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the chairman of the Republican Study Committee, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DELAY].

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me, and I support defeat of the previous question.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to close.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DERRICK. Mr. Speaker, let me yield myself such time as I may consume in order to make a brief remark before we move to close.

You know, in 1980 we were the largest creditor nation in the world; today we are the largest debtor nation in the world.

In 1980 we had an annual deficit around $60 billion. Now it is up between $300 and $400 billion.

In 1980 we had a debt, a total indebtedness of this Government of about $1 trillion; today it is about $3 to $4 trillion.

We did all of that in 10 years. We did that under two Republican administrations. And I do not give them all the blame for it. The Congress had to vote on it as well.

But I think we need to look at why that happened.

I think one of the reasons that that happened and one of the primary reasons is that someone always had a quick fix, starting out with Gramm/Latta in 1981, and moving on down through the 1980's.

The position that this country finds itself in today, and our country is hurting economically speaking, is that we are having to pay for the mistakes that we made during the 1980's.

I think it is really precipitous, and I cannot believe that anyone on the other side of the aisle is serious about taking up a growth package here at this late date when you have part of the economists who say it will cost the taxpayer $23 to $28 billion; you have other economists say that it is not going to cost anything.

You have some economists that say 70 percent of it will go to the very wealthy; others who disagree.

Mr. Speaker, these are things we need to have some reasonable certainty about before we move ahead with a package this far-reaching and this important. I do not say the package is all bad. Some of the parts of the package I have supported myself. But I think it would be very precipitous, very ill-advised and I think the people would look unkindly if we were to do that.

Mr. Speaker, having said that, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on ordering the previous question.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. DREIER of California. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently, a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The Vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 248, nays 144, not voting 42, as follows:

Ms. MOLINARI and Mr. RAVENEL, changed their vote from "yea" to "nay."

Mr. CARDIN, Mrs. KENNELLY, and Mr. SANDERS changed their vote from "nay" to "yea."

So the previous question was ordered.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The resolution was agreed to. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 320 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 3435.

□ 1314

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 3435) to provide funding for the resolution of failed savings associations and working capital for the Resolution Trust Corporation, to restructure the Oversight Board and the Resolution Trust Corporation, and for other purposes, with Mr. DURBIN in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered as having been read the first time and shall be considered as read for amendment. No amendment to the bill is in order except the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs now printed in the reported bill and the amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in the House Report 102–48.

Each amendment is considered as read, and will be debated for 30 minutes equally divided and controlled by the proponent of the amendment and a Member opposed thereto. Neither amendment is subject to amendment. If both amendments are adopted, only the latter amendment adopted will be considered as finally adopted and reported back to the House.

The Clerk will designate the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The text of the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute is as follows:

H.R. 3435

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

TITLE I—RESOLUTION TRUST CORPORATION REFINANCING

SEC. 101. THRIFT RESOLUTION FUNDING PROVISIONS.

Section 21A(i) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(i)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(3) ADDITIONAL INTERIM FUNDING.—In addition to amounts appropriated under paragraph (2), there is authorized to be appropriated to the Corporation for fiscal years beginning after fiscal year 1991 not more than $20,000,000,000 to carry out the purposes of this section.

"(4) CONDITIONAL AUTHORITY.—No amount is authorized to be appropriated to the Corporation under any provision of law other than paragraph (3) unless—

"(A) the President submits to the Congress a plan which has the agreement of the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the majority leader and the minority leader of the House, the President pro tempore of the Senate, and the majority leader and the minority leader of the Senate to finance the losses incurred by the Corporation after the date of the enactment of this paragraph;

"(B) the plan submitted—

"(i) provides for the payment of such losses over a period of not more than 5 years beginning on the date the plan is implemented;

"(ii) allows no increase in the public indebtedness of the United States after the end of such period with respect to such payments;

"(iii) ensures that the financing of the payment of those losses is carried out in a manner such that any liability of persons to make any payment, the proceeds of which will be used to finance the payment of those losses, is distributed among the persons in accordance with the ability of each person to pay;

"(iv) provides that no amount authorized to be appropriated shall be funded by increased tax revenues or revenue enhancements in any manner; and

"(C) the plan is submitted to the Congress not less than 30 days after the date on which the Comptroller General of the United States reports to the Congress that the Corporation is, or within 60 days will be, unable to meet losses.".

SEC. 102. RTC WORKING CAPITAL BORROWING LIMIT.

Section 21A(j)(1) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(j)(1)) is amended to read as follows:

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The total amount of outstanding obligations of the Corporation may not exceed the lesser of—

"(A) $160,000,000,000; or

"(B) the amount that is equal to the sum of—

"(i) the amount of cash held by the Corporation; and

"(ii) 85 percent of the Corporation's estimate of the fair market value of other assets held by the Corporation.".

SEC. 103. APPOINTMENT BY DIRECTOR OF THE OFFICE OF THRIFT SUPERVISION.

Section 11(c)(6)(B) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(c)(6)(B)) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 36. REGULATORY REQUIREMENTS REGARDING CAPITAL AVAILABILITY.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Office of Thrift Supervision may grant limited and temporary exceptions to the separate capitalization required for certain subsidiaries pursuant to subparagraphs (A) and (D) of section 5(t)(5) of the Home Owners' Loan Act as the Director deems necessary and appropriate, if—

"(1) the Director determines, in writing, that extraordinary circumstances exist or that economic conditions at the national, regional, or local level are such that an insufficient opportunity exists for the association to divest a subsidiary engaged in activities not permissible for a national bank or any investment in or extension of credit to such subsidiary; and

"(2) the Director determines, in writing, that the standards set forth in paragraph (7)(C)(i) are satisfied (and for purposes of such determination, such paragraph shall be applied by substituting 'exception' for 'exemption');

"(b) SCOPE OF EXCEPTION.—Any exception granted under subsection (a) may only apply to the amount of the savings association's investments in or extensions of credit to a subsidiary as of April 12, 1989, and the amounts that have been or will be expended to complete projects or investments that were initiated by such subsidiary before the date of the enactment of the Resolution Trust Corporation Refinancing, Restructuring, and Improvement Act of 1991.

"(c) DEDUCTIONS FROM CAPITAL.—In granting any exception pursuant to this paragraph, the Director shall require the same percentage deduction from capital for amounts invested and credit extended as of April 12, 1989, and for amounts invested and credit extended after such date.

"(d) LIMITATIONS.—

"(1) MAXIMUM EFFECTIVE PERIOD OF EXCEPTION.—No exception under this subsection shall be effective after July 1, 1995.

"(2) LIMIT ON DEDUCTION OF CAPITAL.—No exception under this subsection may reduce the percentage deduction from capital to a percentage less than that required as of the date of the enactment of the Resolution Trust Corporation Refinancing, Restructuring, and Improvement Act of 1991 for investments and extensions of credit made prior to April 12, 1989.".

SEC. 241. IMPROVEMENTS TO THE LIST OF LEGAL COUNSEL WHOSE SERVICES ARE AUTHORIZED TO BE RETAINED.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Before the end of the 6-month period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Resolution Trust Corporation shall each establish and maintain procedures governing the use of the list maintained by the respective corporation of legal counsel whose services are authorized to be retained by such corporation.

(b) SPECIFIC PROCEDURES REQUIRED.—The procedures established under subsection (a) shall include the following requirements:

(1) The list of legal counsel referred to in subsection (a) shall be updated on a monthly basis to remove legal counsel whose services are no longer authorized to be retained by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation or the Resolution Trust Corporation, as the case may be—

(A) because the counsel represents clients who are suing the corporation;

(B) because of other conflicts of interest involving such counsel;

(C) due to the failure of such counsel to meet reasonable performance standards established by the appropriate corporation for legal counsel retained by the corporation; or

(D) for any other reason as the corporation may determine to be appropriate.

(2) The list shall include information on any area of expertise of any counsel on the list and the billing rates of such counsel.

(3) Any minority- or woman-owned law firm on the list shall be identified as such.

(4) Any error or omission with respect to the list shall be corrected within 2 weeks of the date on which the appropriate corporation first learns of the error or omission, or as promptly as practicable, and reported to the regional offices.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—

(1) LAW FIRM.—For the purposes of this section, the term "law firm"—

(A) means any person who provides legal services for hire; and

(B) includes all partners, associates, employees, branch offices, and affiliates of such a person.

(2) MINORITY-OWNED LAW FIRM.—The term 'minority-owned law firm' means a law firm—

(A) more than 50 percent of the principals or members of, or partners in, are minority individuals; and

TITLE III—MINORITIES, WOMEN, AND SMALL BUSINESS PROVISIONS

SEC. 301. INCREASED PARTICIPATION OF MINORITIES AND WOMEN IN CONTRACTING PROCESS.

Section 21A of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a) is amended by inserting after subsection (s) (as added by section 225 of this Act) the following new subsection:

"(t) REVIEW AND EVALUATION PROCEDURE FOR CONTRACTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In the review and evaluation of proposals in accordance with this section and section 1216(c) of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989, the Corporation shall provide additional incentives to minority- or women-owned businesses by awarding any such business an additional 10 percent of the total technical points and an additional 5 percent of the total cost preference points achievable in the technical and cost rating process applicable with respect to such proposals.

"(2) CERTAIN JOINT VENTURES INCLUDED.—Paragraph (1) shall apply with respect to any proposal submitted by a joint venture in which—

"(A) a minority- or woman-owned business performs at least 25 percent of the duties;

"(B) the minority- or woman-owned business is responsible for a clearly defined portion of the work to be performed and holds management responsibilities in the joint venture: and

"(C) the minority- or woman-owned business is contractually entitled to compensation that is reasonably proportional to the duties performed by the business.

"(3) AUTHORITY TO ADJUST TECHNICAL AND COST PREFERENCE POINTS.—The Corporation may adjust the technical and cost preference points applicable in evaluating proposals to the extent necessary to ensure the maximum participation level possible for minority- or women-owned businesses.

"(4) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection.—

"(A) MINORITY-OWNED BUSINESS.—The term 'minority-owned business' means a business—

"(i) more than 50 percent of the ownership or control of which is held by 1 or more minority individuals; and

"(ii) more than 50 percent of the net profit or loss of which accrues to 1 or more minority individuals.

"(B) WOMEN-OWNED BUSINESS.—The term 'women's business' means a business—

"(i) more than 50 percent of the ownership or control of which is held by 1 or more women;

"(ii) more than 50 percent of the net profit or loss of which accrues to 1 or more women; and

"(iii) a significant percentage of senior management positions of which are held by women.".

SEC. 302. OPERATION OF BRANCH FACILITIES BY MINORITIES AND WOMEN.

(a) ACQUISITION OF BRANCH FACILITIES FROM THE RTC.—Section 21A of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a) is amended by inserting after subsection (t) (as added by section 301 of this title) the following new subsection:

"(u) ACQUISITION OF BRANCH FACILITIES IN MINORITY NEIGHBORHOODS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any savings association for which the Corporation has been appointed conservator or receiver, the Corporation may make available any branch of such association which is located in any predominantly minority neighborhood to any minority depository institution or women's depository institution on the following terms:

"(A) The branch may be made available on a rent-free or reduced-rent lease basis for not less than 5 years.

"(B) Of all expenses incurred in maintaining the operation of the facilities in which such branch is located, the institution shall be liable only for the payment of applicable real property taxes, real property insurance, capital improvements, and utilities.

"(C) The lease may provide an option to purchase the branch during the term of the lease.

"(2) AVAILABILITY TO MINORITY-OWNED ASSOCIATION HAVING THE SAME ETHNIC IDENTIFICATION.—In the case of any savings association which is not a minority-owned institution and for which the Corporation has been appointed conservator or receiver, the Corporation shall, to the maximum extent practicable, make available any branch of such association which is located in any predominantly minority neighborhood to a minority-owned depository institution or minority investors having the same ethnic identification of the community or neighborhood being served by the branch.

"(3) CONSIDERATION OF FINANCIAL CONDITION OF MINORITY OR WOMEN'S DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION.—In determining whether to make available on a rent-free or reduced-rent basis a branch of a savings association to a minority depository institution or to a women's depository institution under this subsection, the Corporation shall consider the financial condition of the minority or women's depository institution.

"(4) ANNUAL REVIEW.—In the event the Corporation makes available to a minority depository institution or to a women's depository institution a branch of a savings association under this subsection, the Corporation shall—

"(A) conduct annual reviews of the condition of the minority or women's depository institution to assess the financial health of the institution; and

"(B) adjust the amount of rent, if any, charged to such institution under this subsection to reflect changes, if any, in the financial condition of the minority or women's depository institution that are determined, as a result of such a review, to have occurred.".

"(5) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) MINORITY DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION.—The term 'minority institution' means a depository institution (as defined in section 3(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act)—

"(i) more than 50 percent of the ownership or control of which is held by 1 or more minority individuals; and

"(ii) more than 50 percent of the net profit or loss of which accrues to 1 or more minority individuals.

"(B) WOMEN'S DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION.—The term 'women's depository institution' means a depository institution (as defined in section 3(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act)—

"(i) more than 50 percent of the ownership or control of which is held by 1 or more women;

"(ii) more than 50 percent of the net profit or loss of which accrues to 1 or more women; and

"(iii) a significant percentage of senior management positions of which are held by women.

"(C) MINORITY.—The term 'minority' has the meaning given to such term by section 1204(c)(3) of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989.".

(b) COMMUNITY REINVESTMENT CREDIT FOR DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS PROVIDING ASSISTANCE.—The Community Reinvestment Act of 1977 (12 U.S.C. 2901 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"SEC. 808. OPERATION OF BRANCH FACILITIES BY MINORITIES AND WOMEN.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—In the case of any depository institution which donates, sells on favorable terms (as determined by the appropriate Federal financial supervisory agency), or makes available on a rent-free or reduced-rent basis any branch of such institution which is located in any predominantly minority neighborhood to any minority depository institution or women's depository institution, the amount of the contribution or the amount of the loss incurred in connection with such activity shall be treated as meeting the credit needs of the institution's community for purposes of this title.

"(b) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) MINORITY DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION.—The term 'minority institution' means a depository institution (as defined in section 3(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act)—

"(A) more than 50 percent of the ownership or control of which is held by 1 or more minority individuals; and

"(B) more than 50 percent of the net profit or loss of which accrues to 1 or more minority individuals.

"(2) WOMEN'S DEPOSITORY INSTITUTION.—The term 'women's depository institution' means a depository institution (as defined in section 3(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act)—

"(A) more than 50 percent of the ownership or control of which is held by 1 or more women;

"(B) more than 50 percent of the net profit or loss of which accrues to 1 or more women; and

"(C) a significant percentage of senior management positions of which are held by women.

"(3) MINORITY.—The term 'minority' has the meaning given to such term by section 1204(c)(3) of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989.".

SEC. 303. ACQUISITION OF FAILING MAJORITY ASSOCIATIONS BY MINORITY INSTITUTIONS.

Section 21A of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a) is amended by inserting after subsection (u) (as added by section 302 of this title) the following new subsection:

"(v) ASSISTANCE UNDER CIRCUMSTANCES FOR ACQUISITION OF MAJORITY-OWNED INSTITUTIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In addition to the assistance provided pursuant to the minority interim capital assistance program established by the Oversight Board by regulation pursuant to the strategic plan under subsection (a), the Corporation may provide assistance for minority-owned depository institutions and minority investors for the acquisition of any savings association for which the Corporation has been appointed conservator or receiver and which, before such appointment, was not a minority-owned association, if the Corporation has not received acceptable bids for the acquisition of such association without offering such assistance.

"(2) ADDITIONAL ASSETS.—In connection with the acquisition of any savings association for which the Corporation provides assistance under paragraph (1), the Corporation may transfer assets of other savings associations for which the Corporation has been appointed conservator or receiver.

"(3) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) MINORITY.—The term 'minority' has the meaning given to such term by section 1204(c)(3) of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989.

"(B) ACQUISITION.—The term 'acquisition' means any transaction in which a savings association is acquired (as defined in section 13(f)(8)(B) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act).".

SEC. 304. STATUTORY ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.

Section 21A of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a) is amended by inserting after subsection (v) (as added by section 303 of this title) the following new subsection:

"(w) MINORITY INTERIM CAPITAL ASSISTANCE PROGRAM.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The minority interim capital assistance program established by the Oversight Board by regulation pursuant to the strategic plan under subsection (a) is hereby established by law.

"(2) ASSISTANCE UNDER CIRCUMSTANCES FOR ACQUISITION OF MAJORITY-OWNED INSTITUTIONS.—In addition to the assistance provided pursuant to the program established under paragraph (1), the Corporation shall provide assistance under such program for minority-owned depository institutions and minority investors for the acquisition of any savings association for which the Corporation has been appointed conservator or receiver and which, before such appointment, was not a minority-owned association, if the Corporation has not received acceptable bids for the acquisition of such association without offering such assistance.

"(3) EXTENSION OF INTERIM FINANCING PERIOD.—The period for repayment of capital assistance provided under the minority interim capital assistance program shall be not less than 2 years.

"(4) INTEREST RATE.—The rate of interest imposed by the Corporation in connection with any interim financing provided under the minority interim capital assistance program may not exceed the average cost of funds to the Corporation as of the time such rate is established.

"(5) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) MINORITY.—The term 'minority' has the meaning given to such term by section 1204(c)(3) of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989.

"(B) ACQUISITION.—The term 'acquisition' means any transaction in which a savings association is acquired (as defined in section 13(f)(8)(B) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act).".

SEC. 305. GOAL FOR PARTICIPATION OF SMALL BUSINESS CONCERNS.

Section 21A(b)(14) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(b)(14)) is amended to read as follows:

"(14) GOAL FOR PARTICIPATION OF SMALL BUSINESS CONCERNS.—The Corporation shall have an annual goal that presents the maximum practicable opportunity for small business concerns and small business concerns owned and controlled by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals to participate in the performance of contracts awarded by the Corporation.".

TITLE IV—REAL ESTATE PROVISIONS

SEC. 401. REAL ESTATE AUCTION POLICY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Resolution Trust Corporation shall examine the Corporation's policies and procedures with respect to conducting auctions for the disposition of real estate assets and shall to the extent it deems appropriate, consistent with section 21A(b)(3)(C) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, adjust the Corporation's threshold limitations with respect to dollar amounts of assets which may be disposed of through auction on an absolute basis.

(b) REPORT.—The Resolution Trust Corporation shall report to Congress not later than April 1, 1992, on the steps the Corporation has taken to comply with subsection (a).

SEC. 402. OUTREACH PROGRAM FOR STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS.

(a) OUTREACH PROGRAM ESTABLISHED.—Section 21A of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a) is amended by inserting after subsection (w) (as added by section 304 of this title) the following new subsection:

"(x) OUTREACH PROGRAM FOR STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS.—

"(1) ESTABLISHMENT REQUIRED.—The Corporation shall establish and maintain an intergovernmental affairs branch within the office of governmental affairs or any successor to such office.

"(2) DUTIES.—The responsibilities of such branch shall include aggressive outreach to, and liaison with, State and local governments and any associations of State and local governments, as a means of enabling the Corporation to better take into account the concern of such governments and associations about the Corporation's policies and operations.

"(3) PRIMARY GOAL.—The primary goal of the outreach program shall be to inform State and local governments of the availability of real property assets within the jurisdiction of such governments and facilitating efforts by those governments to purchase real estate assets of institutions subject to the Corporation's jurisdiction.

"(4) REGIONAL OFFICE REPRESENTATIVES.—At least 1 representative of the intergovernmental affairs branch shall be employed in each regional office of the Corporation.".

(b) SELLER FINANCING FOR SALES TO STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS.—Section 21A(b)(12) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act is amended by redesignating subparagraph (G) as subparagraph (H) and by inserting after subparagraph (F) the following new subparagraph:

"(G) SELLER FINANCING FOR SALES TO STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS.—

"(i) REVIEW OF SELLER FINANCING PROCEDURES.—Before the end of the 180-day period beginning on the date of the enactment of the Resolution Trust Corporation Refinancing, Restructuring, and Improvement Act of 1991, the Corporation shall—

"(I) conduct a review of the Corporation's seller financing procedures; and

"(II) modify such seller financing procedures to ensure that the procedures consider the special needs of States, municipalities, and other political subdivisions in acquiring real property assets of the institutions described in paragraph (3)(A).

"(ii) MINIMUM REQUIREMENTS.—The seller financing procedures referred to in clause (i) shall provide that, to the extent consistent with the Corporation's mandate to maximize the return on the sale of assets, the Corporation will endeavor to arrange appropriate financing to States, municipalities, and other political subdivisions seeking to acquire real property assets of institutions described in paragraph (3)(A).".

SEC. 403. SEPARATE INVENTORY OF PROPERTY WITH SPECIAL SIGNIFICANCE.

Section 21A(b)(12) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(b)(12)) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (F), by striking the last sentence;

(2) by redesignating subparagraph (H) (as so redesignated by section 402 of this title) as subparagraph (K); and

(3) by inserting after subparagraph (G) (as added by section 402 of this title) the following new subparagraphs:

"(H) REAL PROPERTY INVENTORY.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in clause (ii), the inventory of real property assets required to be published under subparagraph (F) shall be updated and republished semiannually.

"(ii) INVENTORY OF PROPERTY OF SPECIAL SIGNIFICANCE.—In the case of real property assets of institutions subject to the jurisdiction of the Corporation which is property of special significance, the Corporation shall develop and maintain, in accordance with clause (iii), an inventory of such property separately from the inventory required under subparagraph (F) and shall update and republish such inventory at least once during each calendar quarter.

"(iii) CONSULTATION WITH AGENCIES WITH EXPERTISE.—In developing, maintaining, and updating the inventory of property of special significance, the Corporation shall consult with the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, the National Park Service, the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation, and other appropriate agencies or instrumentalities of the United States.

"(iv) PROPERTY OF SPECIAL SIGNIFICANCE DEFINED.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'property of special significance' means real property with natural, cultural, or scientific values of special significance, including real property which is protected or eligible for protection or special status under any Federal law or Executive order, such as wetlands, floodplains, endangered species habitats, historic sites, archaeological sites, natural landmarks, wilderness areas, wild and scenic rivers, and coastal barriers.

"(I) PROPERTY MAINTENANCE AND MANAGEMENT.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The Corporation shall maintain any property identified in the real property inventory maintained by the Corporation under subparagraph (H) as property of special significance in a manner consistent with the preservation of the property's value of special significance.

"(ii) EMPLOYMENT OF QUALIFIED PERSONS.—The Corporation may employ, on a reimbursable basis, the services of any qualified person to provide technical assistance and to maintain and manage property referred to in clause (i) during such period as the property is subject to the jurisdiction or control of the Corporation.

"(iii) NO DUTY TO REHABILITATE PROPERTY.—Clause (i) shall not be construed as requiring the Corporation to rehabilitate, restore, or reclaim any property referred to in such clause with respect to any condition of the property which existed at the time the Corporation acquired jurisdiction of the property.".

SEC. 404. DISPOSITION OF PROPERTY OF SPECIAL SIGNIFICANCE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 21A(b)(12) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(b)(12)) is amended by inserting after subparagraph (I) (as added by section 403 of this Act) the following new subparagraph:

"(J) LIMITATION ON TRANSFER.—

"(i) NOTICE OF AVAILABILITY.—The Corporation may not sell or otherwise transfer any covered property unless the Corporation causes to be published in the Federal Register a notice of availability of the property for purchase or other transfer that identifies the property and describes the location, characteristics, and size of the property.

"(ii) EXPRESSION OF SERIOUS INTEREST.—During the 90-day period beginning on the date that notice under clause (i) concerning a covered property is first published, any Federal land management agency, governmental agency, or qualified organization may submit to the Corporation a written notice of serious interest for the purchase or other transfer of a particular covered property for which notice has been published. The notice of serious interest shall be in such form and include such information as the Corporation may prescribe.

"(iii) PROHIBITION ON TRANSFER DURING SERIOUS INTEREST NOTIFICATION PERIOD.—During the period under clause (ii), the Corporation may not sell or otherwise transfer any covered property with respect to which a notice of availability has been published under clause (i). After the expiration of such period, the Corporation may sell or otherwise transfer any covered property for which notice under clause (i) has been published if no notice of serious interest under clause (ii) concerning the property has been timely submitted.

"(iv) PROHIBITION ON TRANSFER AFTER NOTIFICATION PERIOD.—Except as provided in clause (v), if a notice of serious interest in a covered property is timely submitted pursuant to clause (ii), the Corporation may not sell or otherwise transfer such covered property during the 90-day period beginning upon the expiration of the period under clause (ii), unless all notices of serious interest submitted pursuant to clause (ii) have been withdrawn.

"(v) REQUIRED TRANSFERS.—During the 90-day period referred to in clause (iv), the Corporation may sell or otherwise transfer a covered property for which any notice of serious interest has been timely submitted pursuant to clause (ii) only—

"(I) pursuant to notice of serious interest submitted by a Federal land management agency, government agency, or qualified organization for use of the covered property primarily for wildlife refuge, sanctuary, open space, historical, cultural, or natural resource conservation purposes; or

"(II) to any other such agency or qualified organization for any such purpose, except that the agency or organization which first submitted such notice of serious interest shall have a right of first refusal with respect to such property if such agency or organization matches any offer received under this subclause by the Corporation.

"(vi) REVERSIONARY INTEREST.—If any covered property sold or otherwise transferred under clause (v) ceases to be used for the purposes described in such clause, all rights, title, and interest in and to the covered property shall revert to the United States.

"(vii) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subparagraph:

"(I) COVERED PROPERTY.—The term 'covered property' means any property to which the Corporation has acquired title in any capacity and that is identified in the inventory of property of special significance published under subparagraph (H)(ii).

"(II) FEDERAL LAND MANAGEMENT AGENCY.—The term 'Federal land management agency' means any Federal agency that manages land or structures for use primarily for wildlife refuge, sanctuary, open space, historical, cultural, or natural resources conservation purposes.

"(III) GOVERNMENTAL AGENCY.—The term 'governmental agency' means any agency or entity of a State or local government that manages land or structures for use primarily for wildlife refuge, sanctuary, open space, historical, cultural, or natural resources conservation purposes.

"(IV) QUALIFIED ORGANIZATION.—The term 'qualified organization' has the meaning given the term in section 170(h)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.".

(b) APPLICABILITY.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply with respect to any covered property held by the Resolution Trust Corporation at any time on or after the date of the enactment of this Act without regard to the date on which the Corporation acquired the property or was appointed as conservator or receiver. This subsection shall not apply to covered property that is subject to a contract to sell or otherwise transfer as of the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—This section shall not take effect until sufficient funds are determined to be available to compensate the RTC for any losses resulting from its implementation.

(2) PUBLIC INDEBTEDNESS.—No funding described in paragraph (1) shall increase the public indebtedness of the United States.

(3) TAXES.—No funding described in paragraph (1) may be provided from increased tax revenues or revenue enhancements in any manner.

SEC. 405. DELEGATIONS OF AUTHORITY FOR THE DISPOSITION OF ASSETS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Resolution Trust Corporation shall examine any delegation of authority which the Corporation has made with respect to the disposition of assets and shall further delegate such authority as the Corporation determines to be appropriate and to be consistent with section 21A(b)(3)(C) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act and prudent business judgment.

(b) REPORT.—The Resolution Trust Corporation shall report to Congress not later than April 1, 1992, on the steps the Corporation has taken to comply with subsection (a).

SEC. 406. SELLER FINANCING.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Resolution Trust Corporation shall examine the policies and procedures of the Corporation with respect to seller financing and shall use its best efforts, consistent with section 21A(b)(3)(C) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, to lower the Corporation's threshold limitations with respect to the size of transactions for seller financing.

(b) REPORT.—The Resolution Trust Corporation shall report to Congress not later than April 1, 1992, on the steps the Corporation has taken to comply with subsection (a).

SEC. 407. FDIC PROPERTY DISPOSITION STANDARDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 11(d)(13) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(d)(13)) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(E) DISPOSITION OF ASSETS.—In exercising any right, power, privilege, or authority as conservator or receiver in connection with any sale or disposition of assets of any insured depository institution for which the Corporation has been appointed conservator or receiver, including any sale or disposition of assets acquired by the Corporation under section 13(d)(1), the Corporation shall conduct its operations in a manner which—

"(i) maximizes the net present value return from the sale or disposition of such assets;

"(ii) minimizes the amount of any loss realized in the resolution of cases;

"(iii) ensures adequate competition and fair and consistent treatment of offerors;

"(iv) prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, sex, or ethnic groups in the solicitation and consideration of offers; and

"(v) maximizes the preservation of the availability and affordability of residential real property for low- and moderate-income individuals.".

(b) CORPORATE CAPACITY.—Section 13(d)(3) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1823(d)(3)) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(D) DISPOSITION OF ASSETS.—In exercising any right, power, privilege, or authority described in subparagraph (A) regarding the sale or disposition of assets sold to the Corporation pursuant to paragraph (1), the Corporation shall conduct its operations in a manner which—

"(i) maximizes the net present value return from the sale or disposition of such assets;

"(ii) minimizes the amount of any loss realized in the resolution of cases;

"(iii) ensures adequate competition and fair and consistent treatment of offerors;

"(iv) prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, sex, or ethnic groups in the solicitation and consideration of offers; and

"(v) maximizes the preservation of the availability and affordability of residential real property for low- and moderate-income individuals.".

SEC. 408. RISK-WEIGHTING FOR SINGLE FAMILY HOUSING LOANS.

(a) 50 PERCENT RISK-WEIGHTED CLASSIFICATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—To provide consistent regulatory treatment of loans made for the construction of single family housing, not later than the expiration of the 120-day period beginning on the date of this Act each Federal banking agency shall amend the regulations and guidelines of the agency establishing minimum acceptable capital levels to provide that any single family residence construction loan described under paragraph (2) shall be considered as a loan within the 50 percent risk-weighted category.

(2) REQUIREMENTS.—Paragraph (1) shall apply to any construction loan—

(A) made for the construction of a residence consisting of 1 to 4 dwelling units;

(B) under which the lender has acquired from the lender originating the mortgage loan for purchase of the residence, before the making of the construction loan—

(i) documentation demonstrating that the buyer of the residence intends to purchase the residence and has the ability to obtain a mortgage loan sufficient to purchase the residence; and

(ii) any other documentation from the mortgage lender that the appropriate Federal banking agency may consider appropriate to provide assurances of the buyer's intent to purchase the property (including written commitments and letters of intent);

(C) under which the borrower requires the buyer of the residence to make a nonrefundable deposit to the borrower in an amount (as determined by the appropriate Federal banking agency) of not less than 1 percent of the principal amount of mortgage loan obtained by the borrower for purchase of the residence, for use in defraying any costs relating to any cancellation of the purchase contract of the buyer; and

(D) that meets any other underwriting characteristics that the appropriate Federal banking agency may establish, consistent with the purposes of the minimum acceptable capital requirements to maintain the safety and soundness of financial institutions.

(b) 100 PERCENT RISK-WEIGHTED CLASSIFICATION.—Not later than the expiration of the 120-day period beginning on the date of this Act each Federal banking agency shall amend the regulations and guidelines of the agency establishing minimum acceptable capital levels to provide that—

(1) any single family residence construction loan for a residence for which the purchase contract is canceled shall be considered as a loan within the 100 percent risk-weighted category; and

(2) the lender of any single family residence construction loan shall promptly notify the appropriate Federal banking agency of any such cancellation.

(c) APPROPRIATE FEDERAL BANKING AGENCY.—For purposes of this section, the term "Federal banking agency" means the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Comptroller of the Currency, and the Director of the Office of Thrift Supervision.

SEC. 409. RISK-WEIGHTING FOR MULTIFAMILY HOUSING LOANS.

(a) 50 PERCENT RISK-WEIGHTED CLASSIFICATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—To provide consistent regulatory treatment of loans made for the purchase of multifamily rental and homeowner properties, not later than the expiration of the 120-day period beginning on the date of this Act each Federal banking agency shall amend the regulations and guidelines of the agency establishing minimum acceptable capital levels to provide that any multifamily housing loan described under paragraph (2) and any security collateralized by such a loan shall be considered as a loan or security within the 50 percent risk-weighted category.

(2) REQUIREMENTS.—Paragraph (1) shall apply to any loan—

(A) secured by a first lien on a residence consisting of more than 4 dwelling units;

(B) under which—

(i)(I) the rate of interest does not change over the term of the loan, (II) the principal obligation does not exceed 80 percent of the appraised value of the property, and (III) the ratio of annual net operating income generated by the property (before payment of any debt service on the loan) to annual debt service on the loan is not less than 120 percent; or

(ii)(I) the rate of interest changes over the term of the loan, (II) the principal obligation does not exceed 75 percent of the appraised value of the property, and (III) the ratio of annual net operating income generated by the property (before payment of any debt service on the loan) to annual debt service on the loan is not less than 115 percent;

(C) under which—

(i) amortization of principal and interest occurs over a period of not more than 30 years;

(ii) the minimum maturity for repayment of principal is not less than 7 years; and

(iii) timely payment of all principal and interest, in accordance with the terms of the loan, occurs for a period of not less than 1 year; and

(D) that meets any other underwriting characteristics that the appropriate Federal banking agency may establish, consistent with the purposes of the minimum acceptable capital requirements to maintain the safety and soundness of financial institutions.

(b) SALE PURSUANT TO PRO RATA LOSS SHARING ARRANGEMENTS.—Not later than the expiration of the 120-day period beginning on the date of this Act, each Federal banking agency shall amend the regulations and guidelines of the agency establishing minimum acceptable capital levels to provide that any loan fully secured by a first lien on a multifamily housing property that is sold subject to a pro rata loss sharing arrangement by an institution subject to the jurisdiction of the agency shall be treated as sold to the extent that loss is incurred by the purchaser of the loan. For purposes of this subsection, the term "pro rata loss sharing arrangement" means an agreement providing that the purchaser of a loan shares in any loss incurred on the loan with the selling institution on a pro rata basis.

(c) SALE PURSUANT TO OTHER ARRANGEMENTS FOR LOSS.—Not later than the expiration of the 180-day period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, each Federal banking agency shall amend the regulations and guidelines of the agency establishing minimum acceptable capital levels to take into account other loss sharing arrangements, in connection with the sale by an institution subject to the jurisdiction of the agency of any loan that is fully secured by a first lien on multifamily housing property, for purposes of determining the extent to which such loans shall be treated as sold. For purposes of this subsection, the term "other loss sharing arrangement" means an agreement providing that the purchaser of a loan shares in any loss incurred on the loan with the selling institution on other than a pro rata basis.

(d) APPROPRIATE FEDERAL BANKING AGENCY.—For purposes of this section, the term "Federal banking agency" means the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Comptroller of the Currency, and the Director of the Office of Thrift Supervision.

(1) by redesignating clauses (iii), (iv), and (v) as clauses (iv), (v), and (vi), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after clause (ii), the following new clause:

"(iii) UTILIZATION OF BROKERS AND AGENTS.—

"(I) IN GENERAL.—Before the end of the 180-day period beginning on date of the enactment of the Resolution Trust Corporation Refinancing, Restructuring, and Improvement Act of 1991, the Corporation shall establish policies and procedures for the utilization of real estate brokers and agents.

"(II) PRIVATE BROKERS AND AGENTS.—The policies and procedures established under subclause (I) shall be designed to include, to the greatest extent practicable, private brokers and agents in the asset disposition activity of the Corporation.".

SEC. 413. EXPEDITED TITLE CLEARANCE PROCEDURES.

Section 21A(b) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act as amended (12 U.S.C. 1441a(b)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(15) CONVEYANCE OF TITLE AND RELATED CLAIMS.—

"(A) TITLE PRESUMPTION.—Any purchaser for value of real property from the Corporation acting as receiver for a depository institution shall be conclusively presumed to have acquired free and clear title to the real property described in the document of conveyance, subject only to covenants, conditions, restrictions, encumbrances, easements, rights-of-way and other matters specifically described in the document of conveyance.

"(B) CLAIMS.—Any person having an interest in real property conveyed by the Corporation as receiver in accordance with paragraph (i) shall have a claim against the proceeds derived by the Corporation as receiver from such conveyance for the proportionate value of such interest.

"(C) DETERMINATION OF CLAIMS.—Any claim under subparagraph (B) shall be filed and determined in accordance with section 11(d) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act and regulations prescribed by the Corporation.

"(D) FILING PERIOD.—Any claim under subparagraph (B) shall be considered timely if filed within 90 days after the date of any conveyance giving rise to the claim.

"(E) NO CLAIM OR REMEDY AGAINST THE CORPORATION.—No provision of this subsection shall be construed as creating any claim or afford any remedy against the Corporation in its corporate capacity.

"(F) REGULATIONS.—Before the end of the 90-day period beginning on the date of the enactment of the Resolution Trust Corporation Refinancing, Restructuring, and Improvement Act of 1991, the Corporation shall prescribe regulations regarding conveyancing procedures and forms to be utilized under subparagraph (A), the procedure for giving public notice of the conveyance, and procedures related to claims under subparagraph (B), including procedures for identifying and setting aside proceeds of sale subject to such claims and establishing priorities of such claims.

"(G) NO AFFECT ON PRIOR CLAIMS.—No provision of this subsection shall affect, reduce, or impair any claim which could have been asserted (if timely filed) before any conveyance, or the priority of any such claim as against other claims.".

SEC. 414. CORPORATE POWERS RELATING TO FINANCING.

Section 21A(b)(10)(E) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(b)(10)(E)) is amended by inserting "using any legally available methods, including seller financing, securitizations of assets, negotiated sales, structured financings, partnerships, mortgage investment conduits, and real estate investment trusts," after "real and personal property,".

SEC. 415. MAINTENANCE OF PROPERTIES IN INVENTORY.

Section 21A(b) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(b)) is amended by adding after paragraph (17) (as added by section 401 of this Act) the following new paragraph:

"(18) MAINTENANCE OF PROPERTIES IN INVENTORY.—Any occupied residential real property assets of institutions for which the Corporation has been appointed as conservator or receiver shall be subject to any standards for housing quality or maintenance relating to safety, sanitation, or habitability, that are established under State or local law, regulation, or ordinance by the State or unit of general local government in which the property is located.".

SEC. 416. REDUCTION OF MULTIPLE ENTITIES REPRESENTING THE RTC IN CASES OF SINGLE ASSETS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Resolution Trust Corporation shall establish and maintain policies and procedures to consolidate representation on behalf of the Corporation in connection with any qualified single-asset transaction in as few entities as is consistent with minimizing operating costs of the Corporation (including administrative expenses of conservatorships and receiverships) and expediting the resolution of disputes regarding the sale of the Corporation's assets.

(b) QUALIFIED SINGLE-ASSET TRANSACTION DEFINED.—For purposes of subsection (a), the term "qualified single-asset transaction" means any litigation, negotiation, sale, or other transaction involving a single asset in which the Resolution Trust Corporation has acquired interests through more than 1 depository institution for which the Corporation has been appointed conservator or receiver.

TITLE V—RESOLUTION TRUST CORPORATION AFFORDABLE HOUSING PROGRAM

SEC. 501. INCLUSION OF ELIGIBLE RESIDENTIAL PROPERTY UNDER CONSERVATORSHIP.

Section 21A(c)(9) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)(9)) is amended—

(1) by striking subparagraphs (C) and (D) and inserting the following new subparagraphs:

"(C) CORPORATION.—The term 'Corporation' means the Resolution Trust Corporation.

"(D) ELIGIBLE MULTIFAMILY HOUSING PROPERTY.—

"(i) BASIC DEFINITION.—The term 'eligible multifamily housing property' means a property consisting of more than 4 dwelling units—

"(I) to which the Corporation acquires title either in its corporate capacity or as receiver (including its capacity as the sole owner of a subsidiary corporation of a depository institution under receivership, which subsidiary has as its principal business the ownership of real property), but not in its capacity as conservator; and

"(II) that has an appraised value that does not exceed the applicable dollar amount set forth in section 221(d)(3)(ii) of the National Housing Act for elevator-type structures (without regard to any increase of such amount for high-cost areas).

"(ii) EXPANDED DEFINITION.—Notwithstanding clause (i), effective upon a determination by the Oversight Board that sufficient amounts are available (subject to clause (iii)) to compensate the Corporation for any losses resulting from this clause taking effect, the term 'eligible multifamily housing property' shall mean a property consisting of more than 4 dwelling units—

"(I) to which the Corporation acquires title in its corporate capacity, its capacity as conservator, or its capacity as receiver (including its capacity as the sole owner of a subsidiary corporation of a depository institution under conservatorship or receivership, which subsidiary has as its principal business the ownership of real property); and

"(II) that has an appraised value that does not exceed the applicable dollar amount set forth in section 221(d)(3)(ii) of the National Housing Act for elevator-type structures (without regard to any increase of such amount for high-cost areas).

"(iii) LIMITATIONS.—No amount shall be considered as available for purposes of clause (ii) if such availability would result in an increase in the public indebtedness of the United States. No amount shall be considered as available for purposes of clause (ii) if the amount is provided from increased tax revenues or revenue enhancements in any manner."; and

(2) by striking subparagraph (F) and inserting the following new subparagraph:

"(F) ELIGIBLE SINGLE FAMILY PROPERTY.—The term 'eligible single family property' means a 1- to 4-family residence (including a manufactured home)—

"(I) to which the Corporation acquires title in its corporate capacity, its capacity as conservator, or its capacity as receiver (including its capacity as the sole owner of a subsidiary corporation of a depository institution under conservatorship or receivership, which subsidiary has as its principal business the ownership of real property); and

"(II) that has an appraised value that does not exceed the applicable dollar amount set forth in the first sentence of section 203(b)(2) of the National Housing Act (without regard to any increase of such amount for high-cost areas).".

SEC. 502. TIME LIMITATIONS ON SALE OF ELIGIBLE SINGLE FAMILY PROPERTY.

Section 21A(c)(2)(B) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)(2)(B)), as amended by Public Law 102-139, is amended by striking "3-month and one week period" each place it occurs and inserting "180-day period".

SEC. 503. ACTIVE MARKETING OF ELIGIBLE SINGLE FAMILY PROPERTY TO LOWER-INCOME VETERANS.

Section 21A(c)(2)(B) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)(2)(B)) is amended—

(1) in clause (i) of the first sentence, by inserting "(including qualifying households with members who are veterans)" after "households";

(2) in subclause (I) of clause (ii) of the first sentence, by inserting "(including lower-income families with members who are veterans)" after "lower-income families"; and

(3) in the fourth sentence, by inserting "and to lower-income families with members who are veterans" before the period.

SEC. 504. PREVENTION OF SPECULATION ON ELIGIBLE SINGLE FAMILY PROPERTY.

(a) RESIDENCY REQUIREMENTS.—

(1) QUALIFYING HOUSEHOLDS.—Section 21A(c)(9)(K) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)(9)(K)) is amended by striking "and (ii) whose adjusted income" and inserting the following: "(ii) who agrees to occupy the property as a principal residence for at least 12 months (except as provided in paragraph (2)(D)); (iii) who certifies in writing that the household intends to occupy the property as a principal residence for at least 12 months (except as provided in paragraph (2)(D)); and (iv) whose income".

(2) LOWER-INCOME FAMILIES.—The first sentence of section 21A(c)(2)(B) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)(2)) is amended by striking "by such families." and inserting the following: "by any such family who, except as provided in subparagraph (D), agrees to occupy the property as a principal residence for at least 12 months and who certifies in writing that the family intends to occupy the property for at least 12 months.".

(b) RECAPTURE OF PROFITS FROM RESALE.—Section 21A(c)(2) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)(2)) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraphs:

"(C) RECAPTURE OF PROFITS FROM RESALE.—Except as provided in subparagraph (D), if any eligible single family property sold (i) to a qualifying household, or (ii) to a lower-income family pursuant to subparagraph (B)(ii)(II), paragraph (12)(C)(i), or paragraph (13)(B), is resold by the qualifying household or lower-income family during the 1-year period beginning upon initial acquisition by the household or lower-income family, the Corporation shall recapture 75 percent of the amount of any proceeds from the resale that exceed the sum of (I) the original sale price for the acquisition of the property by the qualifying household or lower-income family, (II) the costs of any improvements to the property made after the date of the acquisition, and (III) any closing costs in connection with the acquisition.

"(D) EXCEPTIONS TO RECAPTURE REQUIREMENT.—

"(i) RELOCATION.—The Corporation (or its successor) may in its discretion waive the applicability (I) to any qualifying household of the requirement under subparagraph (C) and the requirements relating to residency of a qualifying household under paragraphs (9)(L) (ii) and (iii), and (II) to any lower-income family of the requirement under subparagraph (C) and the residency requirements under subparagraph (B)(ii)(II). The Corporation may grant any such a waiver only for good cause shown, including any necessary relocation of the qualifying household or lower-income family.

"(ii) OTHER RECAPTURE PROVISIONS.—The requirement under subparagraph (C) shall not apply to any eligible single family property for which, upon resale by the qualifying household or lower-income family during the 1-year period beginning upon initial acquisition by the household or family, a portion of the sale proceeds or any subsidy provided in connection with the acquisition of the property by the household or family is required to be recaptured or repaid under any other Federal, State, or local law (including section 143(m) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) or regulation or under any sale agreement.".

SEC. 505. AVOIDANCE OF DISPLACEMENT UNDER SINGLE FAMILY PROPERTY DISPOSITION PROGRAM.

Section 21A(c)(2) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)(2)) is amended by adding after subparagraph (D) (as added by section 504(b) of this Act) the following new subparagraph:

"(E) EXCEPTION TO AVOID DISPLACEMENT OF EXISTING RESIDENTS.—Notwithstanding the first sentence of subparagraph (B), during the 180-day period following the date on which the Corporation makes an eligible single family property available for sale, the Corporation may sell the property to the household residing in the property, but only if (i) such household was residing in the property at the time notice regarding the property was provided to clearinghouses under subparagraph (A), (ii) such sale is necessary to avoid the displacement of, and unnecessary hardship to, the resident household, (iii) the resident household intends to occupy the property as a principal residence for at least 12 months, and (iv) and the resident household certifies in writing that the household intends to occupy the property for at least 12 months.".

SEC. 506. PERIODS FOR EXPRESSION OF SERIOUS INTEREST AND RESTRICTED BIDS FOR ELIGIBLE MULTIFAMILY HOUSING PROPERTY.

Section 21A(c)(3) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)(3)) is amended—

(1) in the first sentence of subparagraph (B), by striking the first comma and all that follows through "first";

(2) in subparagraph (C), by striking "determining that a property is ready for sale" and inserting the following: "the expiration of the period referred to in subparagraph (B) for a property,"; and

(3) in subparagraph (D), by inserting after the period at the end the following new sentence: "If, before the expiration of such 45-day period, any offer to purchase a property initially accepted by the Corporation is subsequently rejected or fails (for any reason), the Corporation shall accept another offer to purchase the property made during such period that complies with the terms and conditions established by the Corporation (if such another offer is made). The preceding sentence may not be construed to require a qualifying multifamily purchaser whose offer is accepted during the 45-day period to purchase the property before the expiration of the period.".

SEC. 507. LOWER-INCOME OCCUPANCY REQUIREMENTS FOR ELIGIBLE MULTIFAMILY HOUSING PROPERTY.

Section 21A(c)(3)(E) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)(3)(E)) is amended to read as follows:

"(E) LOWER-INCOME OCCUPANCY REQUIREMENTS.—

"(i) SINGLE PROPERTY PURCHASES.—With respect to any purchase of a single eligible multifamily housing property by a qualifying multifamily purchaser under subparagraph (D)—

"(I) not less than 35 percent of all dwelling units purchased shall be made available for occupancy by and maintained as affordable for lower-income and very low-income families during the remaining useful life of the building or structure in which the units are located; provided that

"(II) not less than 20 percent of all dwelling units purchased shall be made available for occupancy by and maintained as affordable for very low-income families during the remaining useful life of the building or structure in which the units are located.

"(ii) AGGREGATION REQUIREMENTS FOR MULTIPROPERTY PURCHASES.—With respect to any purchase under subparagraph (D) by a qualifying multifamily purchaser involving more than one eligible multifamily housing property as a part of the same negotiation, with respect to which the purchaser intends to aggregate the lower-income occupancy required under this subparagraph over the total number of units so purchased—

"(I) not less than 40 percent of the aggregate number of all dwelling units purchased shall be made available for occupancy by and maintained as affordable for lower-income and very low-income families during the remaining useful life of the building or structure in which the units are located; provided that

"(II) not less than 20 percent of the aggregate number of all dwelling units purchased shall be made available for occupancy by and maintained as affordable for very low-income families during the remaining useful life of the building or structure in which the units are located; and further provided that

"(III) not less than 10 percent of the dwelling units in each separate property purchased shall be made available for occupancy by and maintained as affordable for lower-income families during the remaining useful life of the property in which the units are located.

The requirements of this subparagraph shall be contained in the deed or other recorded instrument.".

SEC. 508. EXTENSION OF RESTRICTED OFFER PERIOD FOR ELIGIBLE MULTIFAMILY HOUSING PROPERTY.

Section 21A(c)(3) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)(3)) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subparagraph (G) as subparagraph (H); and

(2) by inserting after subparagraph (F) the following new subparagraph:

"(G) EXTENSION OF RESTRICTED OFFER PERIODS.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (F), the Corporation may provide notice to clearinghouses regarding, and offer for sale under the provisions of subparagraphs (A) through (D), any eligible multifamily housing property—

"(i) in which no qualifying multifamily purchaser has expressed serious interest during the period referred to in subparagraph (B), or

"(ii) for which no qualifying multifamily purchaser has made a bona fide offer before the expiration of the period referred to in subparagraph (D), except that the Corporation may, in the discretion of the Corporation, alter the duration of the periods referred to in subparagraphs (B) and (D) in offering any property for sale under this subparagraph.".

SEC. 509. SALE PRICE.

Section 21A(c)(6)(A)(i) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)(6)(A)(i)) is amended to read as follows:

"(i) SALE PRICE.—The Corporation shall establish a market value for each eligible multifamily housing property. The Corporation shall sell eligible multifamily housing property at the net realizable market value. The Corporation may agree to sell eligible multifamily housing property at a price below the net realizable market value to the extent necessary to facilitate an expedited sale of such property and enable a public agency or nonprofit organization to comply with the lower-income occupancy requirements applicable to such property under paragraph (3). The Corporation may sell eligible single family property or eligible condominium property to qualifying households, nonprofit organizations, and public agencies without regard to any minimum sale price.".

SEC. 510. AUTHORITY FOR RTC TO PARTICIPATE IN MULTIFAMILY FINANCING POOLS.

Section 21A(c)(6)(A)(ii) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)(6)(A)(ii)) is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "In providing financing for combinations of eligible multifamily housing properties under this subsection, the Corporation may hold a participating share, including a subordinate participation.".

SEC. 511. CREDIT ENHANCEMENT FOR CERTAIN TAX-EXEMPT BONDS.

Section 21A(c)(8)(B) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)(8)(B)) is amended—

(1) by striking "(B) CREDIT ENHANCEMENT.—With respect to" and inserting the following:

"(B) CREDIT ENHANCEMENT.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—With respect to"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new clause:

"(ii) CERTAIN TAX-EXEMPT BONDS.—The Corporation may provide credit enhancements with respect to tax-exempt bonds issued on behalf of nonprofit organizations pursuant to section 103, and subpart A of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1, of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, with respect to the disposition of eligible residential properties for the purposes described in clause (i).".

SEC. 512. PERMANENT EFFECTIVENESS OF EXEMPTION FOR TRANSACTIONS WITH INSURED DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS.

Notwithstanding section 203 of the Resolution Trust Corporation Funding Act of 1991, the amendment made by section 201(b) of such Act shall apply on and after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 513. TRANSFER OF CERTAIN ELIGIBLE RESIDENTIAL PROPERTIES TO STATE HOUSING AGENCIES FOR DISPOSITION.

Section 21A(c) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(12) TRANSFER OF CERTAIN ELIGIBLE RESIDENTIAL PROPERTIES TO STATE HOUSING AGENCIES FOR DISPOSITION.—Notwithstanding paragraphs (2), (3), (5), and (6), the Corporation may transfer eligible residential properties to the State housing finance agency or any other State housing agency for the State in which the property is located, or to any local housing agency in whose jurisdiction the property is located. Transfers of eligible residential properties under this paragraph may be conducted by direct sale, consignment sale, or any other method the Corporation considers appropriate and shall be subject to the following requirements:

"(A) INDIVIDUAL OR BULK TRANSFER.—The Corporation may transfer such properties individually or in bulk, as agreed to by the Corporation and the State housing finance agency or State or local housing agency.

"(B) ACQUISITION PRICE AND DISCOUNT.—The acquisition price paid by the State housing finance agency or State or local housing agency to the Corporation for properties transferred under this paragraph shall be an amount agreed to by the Corporation and the transferee agency.

"(C) LOWER-INCOME USE.—Any State housing finance agency or State or local housing agency acquiring properties under this paragraph shall offer to sell or transfer the properties only as follows:

"(i) ELIGIBLE SINGLE FAMILY PROPERTIES.—For eligible single family properties—

"(I) to purchasers described under clauses (i) and (ii) of paragraph (2)(B);

"(II) if the purchaser is a purchaser described under paragraph (2)(B)(ii)(I), subject to the rent limitations under paragraph (4)(A);

"(III) subject to the requirement in the second sentence of paragraph (2)(B); and

"(IV) subject to recapture by the Corporation of excess proceeds from resale of the properties under subparagraphs (C) and (D) of paragraph (2).

"(ii) ELIGIBLE MULTIFAMILY HOUSING PROPERTIES.—For eligible multifamily housing properties—

"(I) to qualifying multifamily purchasers;

"(II) subject to the lower-income occupancy requirements under paragraph (3)(E);

"(III) subject to the provisions of paragraph (3)(H);

"(IV) subject to a preference, among financially acceptable offers, to the offer that would reserve the highest percentage of dwelling units for occupancy or purchase by very low-income families and lower-income families and would retain such affordability for the longest term; and

"(V) subject to the rent limitations under paragraph (4)(A).

"(D) AFFORDABILITY.—The State housing finance agency or State or local housing agency shall endeavor to make the properties transferred under this paragraph more affordable to lower-income families based upon the extent to which the acquisition price of a property under subparagraph (B) is less than the market value of the property.".

SEC. 514. SUSPENSION OF OFFER PERIODS FOR SALES OF ELIGIBLE RESIDENTIAL PROPERTY TO NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS AND PUBLIC AGENCIES.

Section 21A(c) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)) is amended by adding after paragraph (12) (as added by section 513 of this Act) the following new paragraph:

"(13) EXCEPTION FOR SALES TO NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS AND PUBLIC AGENCIES.—

"(A) SUSPENSION OF OFFER PERIODS.—With respect to any eligible residential property, the Corporation may (in the discretion of the Corporation) suspend any of the requirements of subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (2) and subparagraphs (A) through (D) of paragraph (3), as applicable, but only to the extent that for the duration of the suspension the Corporation negotiates the sale of the property to a nonprofit organization or public agency. If the property is not sold pursuant to such negotiations, the requirements of any provisions suspended shall apply upon the termination of the suspension. Any time period referred to in such paragraphs shall toll for the duration of any suspension under this subparagraph.

"(B) USE RESTRICTIONS.—

"(i) ELIGIBLE SINGLE FAMILY PROPERTY.—Any eligible single family property sold under this paragraph shall be (I) made available for occupancy by and maintained as affordable for lower-income families for the remaining useful life of the property, or made available for purchase by such families, (II) subject to the rent limitations under paragraph (4)(A), (III) subject to the requirements relating to residency of a qualifying household under paragraph (9)(L) and to residency of a lower-income family under paragraph (2)(B)(ii), and (IV) subject to recapture by the Corporation of excess proceeds from resale of the property under subparagraphs (C) and (D) of paragraph (2).

"(ii) ELIGIBLE MULTIFAMILY HOUSING PROPERTY.—Any eligible multifamily housing property sold under this paragraph shall comply with the lower-income occupancy requirements under paragraph (3)(E) and shall be subject to the rent limitations under paragraph (4)(A).".

SEC. 515. SALE OF ELIGIBLE CONDOMINIUM PROPERTY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 21A(c) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)) is amended by adding after paragraph (13) (as added by section 514 of this Act) the following new paragraph:

"(14) RULES GOVERNING DISPOSITION OF ELIGIBLE CONDOMINIUM PROPERTY.—

"(A) NOTICE TO CLEARINGHOUSES.—Within a reasonable period of time after acquiring title to an eligible condominium property, the Corporation shall provide written notice to clearinghouses. Such notice shall contain basic information about the property. Each clearinghouse shall make such information available, upon request, to purchasers described in clauses (i) through (iv) of subparagraph (B). The Corporation shall allow such purchasers reasonable access to an eligible condominium property for purposes of inspection.

"(B) OFFERS TO SELL.—For the 180-day period following the date on which the Corporation makes an eligible condominium property available for sale, the Corporation may offer to sell the property, at the discretion of the Corporation, to 1 or more of the following purchasers:

"(i) Qualifying households.

"(ii) Nonprofit organizations.

"(iii) Public agencies.

"(iv) For-profit entities.

"(C) LOWER-INCOME OCCUPANCY REQUIREMENTS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in clause (ii), any nonprofit organization, public agency, or for-profit entity that purchases an eligible condominium property shall (I) make the property available for occupancy by and maintain it as affordable for lower-income families for the remaining useful life of the property, or (II) make the property available for purchase by any such family who, except as provided in subparagraph (E), agrees to occupy the property as a principal residence for at least 12 months and who certifies in writing that the family intends to occupy the property for at least 12 months. The restriction described in subclause (I) of the preceding sentence shall be contained in the deed or other recorded instrument.

"(ii) MULTIPLE-UNIT PURCHASES.—If any nonprofit organization, public agency, or for-profit entity purchases more than 1 eligible condominium property as a part of the same negotiation or purchase, the Corporation may (in the discretion of the Corporation) waive the requirement under clause (i) and provide instead that not less than 35 percent of all eligible condominium properties purchased shall be (I) made available for occupancy by and maintained as affordable for lower-income families for the remaining useful life of the property, or (II) made available for purchase by any such family who, except as provided in subparagraph (E), agrees to occupy the property as a principal residence for at least 12 months and who certifies in writing that the family intends to occupy the property for at least 12 months. The restriction described subclause (I) of the preceding sentence shall be contained in the deed or other recorded instrument.

"(iii) SALE TO OTHER PURCHASERS.—If, upon the expiration of the 180-day period referred to in subparagraph (B), no purchaser described in clauses (i) through (iv) of subparagraph (B) has made a bona fide offer to purchase the property, the Corporation may offer to sell the property to any other purchaser.

"(D) RECAPTURE OF PROFITS FROM RESALE.—Except as provided in subparagraph (E), if any eligible condominium property sold (i) to a qualifying household, or (ii) to a lower-income family pursuant to subparagraph (C)(i)(II) or (C)(ii)(II), is resold by the qualifying household or lower-income family during the 1-year period beginning upon initial acquisition by the household or family, the Corporation shall recapture 75 percent of the amount of any proceeds from the resale that exceed the sum of (I) the original sale price for the acquisition of the property by the qualifying household or lower-income family, (II) the costs of any improvements to the property made after the date of the acquisition, and (III) any closing costs in connection with the acquisition.

"(E) EXCEPTION TO RECAPTURE REQUIREMENT.—The Corporation (or its successor) may in its discretion waive the applicability to any qualifying household or lower-income family of the requirement under subparagraph (D) and the requirements relating to residency of a qualifying household or lower-income family (under paragraph (9)(L) and subparagraph (C) of this paragraph, respectively). The Corporation may grant any such a waiver only for good cause shown, including any necessary relocation of the qualifying household or lower-income family.

"(F) LIMITATIONS ON MULTIPLE UNIT PURCHASES.—The Corporation may not sell or offer to sell as part of the same negotiation or purchase any eligible condominium properties that are not located in the same condominium project (as such term is defined in section 604 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1980). The preceding sentence may not be construed to require all eligible condominium properties offered or sold as part of the same negotiation or purchase to be located in the same structure.

"(G) RENT LIMITATIONS.—Rents charged to tenants of eligible condominium properties made available for occupancy by very low-income families shall not exceed 30 percent of the adjusted income of a family whose income equals 50 percent of the median income for the area, as determined by the Secretary, with adjustment for family size. Rents charged to tenants of eligible condominium properties made available for occupancy by lower-income families other than very low-income families shall not exceed 30 percent of the adjusted income of a family whose income equals 65 percent of the median income for the area, as determined by the Secretary, with adjustment for family size.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 21A(c)(11)(B) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)(11)(B)) is amended by striking "specified under paragraphs (2) and (3)" and inserting "applicable under paragraphs (2), (3), (12)(C), (13)(B), and (14)(C)".

SEC. 516. REPORTS TO CONGRESS REGARDING AFFORDABLE HOUSING PROGRAM.

Section 21A(c) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)) is amended by adding after paragraph (14) (as added by section 515 of this Act) the following new paragraph:

"(15) REPORTS TO CONGRESS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Corporation shall submit to the Congress semiannual reports under this paragraph regarding the disposition of eligible residential properties under this subsection during the most recently concluded reporting period. The first report under this paragraph shall be submitted not later than the expiration of the 4-month period beginning upon the conclusion of the first reporting period under subparagraph (B). Subsequent reports shall be submitted not less than every 6 months after such expiration.

"(B) REPORTING PERIODS.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'reporting period' means the 6-month period for which a report under this paragraph is made, except that the first reporting period shall be the period beginning on the date of the enactment of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 and ending on the date of the enactment of the Resolution Trust Corporation Refinancing, Restructuring, and Improvement Act of 1991. Each successive reporting period shall begin upon the conclusion of the preceding reporting period.

"(C) INFORMATION REGARDING PROPERTIES SOLD.—Each report under this paragraph shall contain information regarding each eligible residential property sold by the Corporation during the applicable reporting period, as follows:

"(i) A description of the property, the location of the property, and the number of dwelling units in the property.

"(ii) The appraised value of the property.

"(iii) The sale price of the property.

"(iv) For eligible single family properties—

"(I) the income and race of the purchaser of the property, if the property is sold to an occupying household or is sold for resale to an occupying household; and

"(II) whether the property is reserved for residency by very low- or lower-income families, if the property is sold for use as rental property.

"(v) For eligible multifamily housing properties, the number and percentage of dwelling units in the property reserved for occupancy by very low- and lower-income families.

"(vi) The number of eligible single family properties sold after the expiration of the offer period for such properties referred to in paragraph (2)(B).

"(vii) The number of eligible multifamily housing properties sold after the expiration of the periods for such properties referred to in subparagraphs (B) and (D) of paragraph (3).

"(D) NUMBER OF PROPERTIES WITHIN WINDOWS.—Each report under this paragraph shall contain the following information:

"(i) The number of eligible single family properties for which the offer period referred to in paragraph (2)(B) had not expired before the conclusion of the applicable reporting period (or had not yet commenced).

"(ii) The number of eligible multifamily housing properties for which the 90-day period referred to in paragraph (3)(B) had not expired before the conclusion of the applicable reporting period (or had not yet commenced).".

SEC. 517. DEFINITIONS.

Section 21A(c)(9) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)(9)), as amended by sections 501 and 504(a)(1) of this Act, is further amended—

(1) by striking subparagraph (A) and inserting the following new subparagraph:

"(A) ADJUSTED INCOME AND INCOME.—The terms 'adjusted income' and 'income' shall have the meaning given such terms in section 3(b) of the United States Housing Act of 1937.";

(2) by redesignating subparagraphs (D) through (P) as subparagraphs (E) through (Q), respectively; and

(3) by inserting after subparagraph (C) the following new subparagraph:

"(D) ELIGIBLE CONDOMINIUM PROPERTY.—The term 'eligible condominium property' means a condominium unit, as such term is defined in section 604 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1980—

"(i) to which the Corporation acquires title in its corporate capacity, its capacity as conservator, or its capacity as receiver (including its capacity as the sole owner of a subsidiary corporation of a depository institution under conservatorship or receivership, which subsidiary has as its principal business the ownership of real property); and

"(ii) that has an appraised value that does not exceed the applicable dollar amount set forth in the first sentence of section 203(b)(2) of the National Housing Act (without regard to any increase of such amount for high cost areas).".

SEC. 518. APPLICABILITY.

The amendments made by this title shall not apply to any eligible residential property or eligible condominium property of the Resolution Trust Corporation, that is subject to an agreement for sale entered into by the Corporation before the date of the enactment of this Act.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ], will be recognized for 15 minutes, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE], the Member opposed, will be recognized for 15 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ].

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

It is absolutely essential that the Congress provide further funding to the Resolution Trust Corporation. Unpleasant, distasteful as this may be, it is an inescapable responsibility.

Congress has insured deposits in the Nation's banks and savings and loan associations—we stand behind those deposits. Since our laws have made the commitment, we must honor it.

The Resolution Trust Corporation is necessary because the savings and loan insurance fund went broke. So what I bring to you is a report on the RTC bill reported by the Banking Committee and an urgent plea that you join in providing adequate financing not only for the bank insurance fund when it is considered later today, but that you join in providing the money needed to close out the business of the Resolution Trust Corporation.

The RTC has only one job—to pay off the insured deposits in failed savings and loan associations. In the process of doing that, it must incur losses because the assets of those institutions are not worth enough to cover the cost of the insured liabilities—the deposits. The cost of this operation has been greater than anyone expected, in large part because the economy has performed worse than expected. The poor economy has caused more institutions to fail, and it has also caused the value of the assets held by RTC to be lower than expected—meaning that there are more cases to handle, and that each one costs more than expected.

RTC has accomplished a great deal—it has resolved 587 dead thrifts and paid off almost 19 million accounts in 45 States.

What is left to be done? There are about 85 institutions in conservatorship now, and there are about 220 more that are likely to fail. These institutions have about $200 billion worth of assets. If losses in those institutions run to 40 percent of assets, we can expect RTC to spend about $80 billion to wind up its affairs. If losses are at a lower rate or there are fewer failures the need would be less. But one thing is certain: the job has to be done, and if we delay it will cost more. The final cost may be $65 billion, it may be $80 billion—but whatever the loss is, it must be covered, if we are going to keep faith with the insured depositors. The RTC is unpopular, its job is unpleasant, but it fulfills the Federal commitment to protect depositors. In short, like the mortician, it performs a necessary and unavoidable service. Once this job is done, the savings and loan insurance fund should again become self-sustaining, as it was for decades before the disaster of the eighties.

I would like now to report to you the action of the Banking Committee on

H.R. 3535, the RTC funding and reform bill.

Your committee reported this bill on a vote of 27 ayes and 25 nays. During the markup we considered 70 amendments, many of them difficult, and some of them very controversial.

The greatest controversy is of course about funding.

We considered one suggestion, a permanent, indefinite appropriation—a blank check to get the job done. This was rejected with only 7 votes in favor.

We considered another proposal, $80 billion—the sum estimated as necessary to finish the job outright, and that got only 17 aye votes.

As reported, the bill authorizes $20 billion. After that amount is consumed, any additional authorization would require that the President and the joint congressional leadership submit a pay as you go plan. However, as amended by Mr. WYLIE, that pay as you go plan could not include any taxes or revenue enhancements of any kind—it would all have to come from a spending reduction plan. This plan in turn would be predicated on an ability to pay basis.

In short, no funding option is easy. But the responsibility of adopting a bill that provides all that is required, is inescapable. We cannot leave without acting favorably.

In addition to funding, this bill contains provisions to make the operations of RTC more efficient, more accountable and more flexible. It greatly improves the operation of the RTC's affordable housing program. It improves other property disposition programs by encouraging greater flexibility in financing, for example. But the issue at hand is this: Do we want to finish the job? Will we provide the money to protect the depositors in those 300 or so institutions that have failed or soon will fail? That is the heart of the issue.

Let me reiterate this one thing: The money expended in this program is for the protection of innocent depositors. It does not help anyone else. If we fail to provide this funding, we will put in question the integrity of deposit insurance guarantees—and those guarantees are vital in today's very shaky economy. The truth is, if we don't protect those deposits, we will worsen the credit crunch, we will make things worse, and we will have reneged on the Federal guarantee.

It is not easy to honor this commitment—the vote in your committee demonstrates that. But honor it we must.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY], a very active and very perminent member of the committee.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the committee bill, and in opposition to the Barnard substitute. The Barnard substitute fails to offer any real reform of the way in which this bailout is currently paid. And real reform is what the American people are screaming for.

As everyone knows, the bailout is currently funded entirely by deficit financing. This borrow and spend scheme roughly triples the cost of the bailout in interest. It adds hundreds of billions of dollars to the national debt. Worst of all, it sends the bill for this debacle to working families, their children, and even their grandchildren. They'll be paying for this mess for the next 30 years. That's why they're so upset: they are getting stuck with a tab for a party to which they were never even invited.

The Barnard substitute just continues this unfair, costly, borrow and spend policy. By contrast, the committee bill contains real reform. It would cut funding for the bailout from $80 billion to $20 billion, and require the President to fund all remaining losses on a pay-as-you-go basis. Right now there is an outrageous double standard at work in the way we pay for Government programs. We can't come up with even a few million dollars around here for food aid or housing or school loans without having to find offsetting revenues. Yet, the President and others have no trouble adding hundreds of billions of dollars to the country's debt to bail out failed thrifts. If pay-as-you-go is good enough for housing, for health care, for food stamps, and for education, then it should be good enough for the S&L bailout.

Now, I am well aware that the committee bill contains a Republican-sponsored measure that would prohibit any tax increases to fund thrift losses. Many of my Democratic colleagues say that this amendment confirms their worst fears about a pay-as-you-go bailout: that it will take funds from vital social programs. Let me just make a couple of points in response. First, I share their concerns. I don't think I take a back seat to anyone in this body when it comes to supporting social programs. That's why I suggested that the Rules Committee allow an amendment to permit us to tax the wealthiest 5 percent of the population to help pay for this problem. After all, the wealthy are the ones who most benefited from the thrift crisis, and they are best able to pay for it now. Beyond that, though, the money does not have to come out of social programs. It can come out of defense. And it can come out of the sale of the RTC's sale of its assets. Right now, the RTC is sitting on over $150 billion in assets. A lot of these assets could pay for losses.

The bottom line is that we who support social programs have got to realize that, by heaping this problem into the deficit, we are just hurting the programs we are trying to protect. Interest on our national debt will top $230 billion next year—more than all discretionary social spending combined. If we want to have money in the future to pay for social programs, we have go to stop this mindless deficit spending for unpopular programs.

In sum, the committee bill will end the morally indefensible and economically senseless way in which we currently pay for this bailout. It will require some tough choices, that's for sure. But we were not elected to make easy ones. I urge its adoption, and the defeat of the Barnard substitute.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I oppose the substitute that is before us now because of the Kennedy proposal that is contained in it. It was referred to as pay-go. What it does is simply require that the President would have to submit a plan to Congress to pay for these funds over the next 5 years without increasing the deficit.

During the course of the consideration of this bill in the committee, I offered an amendment that said that the President could not offer in his proposal to pay for it with a tax increase. That amendment was adopted.

Now we are looking at what has commonly been referred to as cut-go. In other words, in order to pay for the $60 billion, other programs would have to be cut, but the President would have to come up with a recommendation as to how those other programs could be cut.

Now, this is in violation of the budget summit agreement which was entered into last year, which said that these funds would not go to reduce other programs.

Mr. Chairman, the words "bailout" were used several times by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY]. I submit that that is a misnomer. Nobody is being bailed out. The people who are being paid or are receiving these moneys are the depositors in these failed institutions.

The U.S. Government has a clear obligation. We have said that we stand behind those deposits with the full faith and credit of the U.S. Government. What this money goes for then is to pay them off. But in order to pay them off, we have to have the money in the Resolution Trust Corporation fund. Right now that fund is broke. The Resolution Trust Corporation estimates that there is something like $4 million a day being lost to the taxpayer because they do not have the funds to close these institutions timely.

Mr. Chairman, the Kennedy amendment, as I suggest, would give the Resolution Trust Corporation $20 billion. Then before they could get any more money, this so-called pay-go provision would have to be eliminated.

Mr. Chairman, the committee bill is pretty good otherwise. I prefer the Barnard-Wylie substitute because it deletes the pay-go provision and deletes the provision which I had offered as an amendment which would say that none of these could be used from taxpayer money.

Mr. Chairman, I support that concept, that no new taxes should go to pay for these programs. On the other hand, we do need to get the money before us now, and we are not going to do it if this provision, the Kennedy pay-go provision, is in it.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. HUBBARD].

Mr. HUBBARD. Mr. Chairman, the bill reported from the House Banking Committee, which is now being offered as an amendment to the bill before us, itself includes an amendment offered in committee by the gentleman from Florida, Mr. MCCOLLUM, that is designed to enhance the viability and lending capacity of certain thrift institutions. The McCollum amendment permits the Office of Thrift Supervision to grant exceptions from currently applicable capital requirements to institutions that own subsidiaries engaged in activities that are not permissible for national banks. Specifically, the provision authorizes exceptions from a schedule provided in the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 [FIRREA] phasing out the degree to which a thrift institution's interest in any such subsidiary may count toward the computation of the thrift's capital. These subsidiaries often hold investments defined by the Office of Thrift Supervision as equity investments, which include a wide variety of investments in real estate. Under the McCollum provision, thrifts with subsidiaries that hold such investments can receive exceptions if the strict criteria specified in the provision are met.

The case for the McCollum provision is a strong one. When Congress enacted the phaseout schedule of FIRREA, it assumed that thrifts with subsidiaries covered by the schedule would divest themselves of the subsidiaries or their nonconforming investments as the schedule increasingly reduced the regulatory capital position of the institution. It did not assume, however, that the weakness of the market for those subsidiaries and investments would make divestiture a practical impossibility for most thrifts. In light of the current market conditions, the House Banking Committee agreed with Congressman MCCOLLUM that some relief from the FIRREA schedule should be authorized on a case-by-case basis. The Office of Thrift Supervision, which would administer the exceptions provided by the amendment, also supported the provision and is a strong proponent of its enactment.

It is important to note, however, that the rationale for the amendment applies equally to a situation that differs marginally from the specific fact situation covered by the amendment. Some thrift institutions now own equity investments not indirectly through a subsidiary but rather directly through the parent itself. The Office of Thrift Supervision's regulations provide for capital treatment for such investments that closely parallels the treatment provided to thrifts with subsidiaries engaged in such investments. A thrift with equity investments must phase out the degree to which such investments may count toward meeting the institution's risk based capital requirement. The phaseout schedule is exactly the same as that provided by FIRREA for thrifts with subsidiaries that hold such investments. As with the subsidiaries, the schedule was constructed based on the assumption that the investments would be divested. As with the subsidiaries, it has now become apparent that the market for the investments is so weak as to preclude divestiture in most cases.

It follows that while the language of the McCollum provision does not specifically cover thrift institutions holding equity investments other than through a subsidiary, the policy of the provision is directly applicable to such institutions. If the provision is enacted, therefore, the Office of Thrift Supervision should revise its regulations as they relate not only to the subsidiaries specifically referred to in the provision but also to institutions that own equity investments directly. Any other course would create an imbalance in the capital regulatory system that cannot be supported by any legitimate public policy consideration.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BROOKS], distinguished chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary and my distinguished fellow Texan and dean of the Texas delegation.

Mr BROOKS. Mr. Chairman, I have a question really.

Section 1133 of S. 543 which was accepted by the conferees on the banking bill is a pending antitrust issue that should rightfully be determined in the courts. Since the matter involves ligitation between Sears and VISA, Congress should let the matter be determined by the tenth circuit. I would like to clarify for the record that nothing in the language of section 1133 is intended to interfere with the pending Sears-VISA litigation.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Chairman, I questioned that last night. Unfortunately, I wish I had had the aid of my chairmen, but I did not. To be specific, the date they have in that amendment, August 9, 1989, is the date of the enactment of FIRREA. FIRREA, which we are enacting now, it certainly was never the intention to retroactively abridge or restrict the legal rights of anybody.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. CUNNINGHAM].

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Chairman, I rise opposed to the substitute. The theme that the Democratic Party has, that the economic growth package is only for the rich, is not true. They have marketed that very well. I will give that to them. But I would ask that we combine both the Democratic and Republican goods and bads and do something. In the desert bill, all the amendments except the Vento-Blaz amendment were bad on the Republican side. In the crime bill, all of the issues were wrong.

In the RTC, we are not allowed to offer any amendments. I just had a call from a boat builder in San Diego about 45 minutes ago. He said he called the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI]. He called the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT], and he has called on every Member he can because he employs 150 blue-collar workers that are going to lose their jobs.

So is it a luxury tax for the rich, or do we cut the tens of thousands of jobs and hurt the blue-collar workers? People change their buying habits. The luxury tax in the package, it takes the luxury tax out of the general fund. It costs more, and it was a mistake.

The Senate just did a straw man and would repeal the luxury tax.

What about the earnings test for the senior citizens? We do not call them senior citizens. They are chronologically gifted.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. JOHNSON].

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I represent Texas' Third District, Dallas, one of the areas hardest hit by the S&L failures and the RTC. Fifty-five percent of the RTC-controlled property is in Texas, which just happens to be $10.4 billion of real estate. As far as the Texas real estate market is concerned, the RTC is the only show in town. And it's a horror show.

I have, here, a few of the over 3,000 responses to my RTC newsletter poll. It was no surprise that 99 percent of the Dallas-area residents who responded, said they don't want to give the RTC another red cent. Texans are tired of being held hostage by the RTC.

Mr. Speaker, I don't believe Congress realizes just where the taxpayer's money is going. The RTC says it spent the previous $80 billion only to bail out depositors, but that isn't true. Those dollars also go toward operating costs and other expenditures by the RTC.

Right now, the RTC's southwest region alone, is spending $50 million a year in salaries and $1.6 million a year in rent for office space in one of the plushest buildings in Dallas. You'd be hard pressed to find a more blatant abuse of tax dollars.

As a matter of fact, at the rate the RTC is going right now, we really don't know if the additional $80 billion will be enough to clean up the failed S&L's and guarantee the end of the RTC.

The RTC was created to accomplish two things—to salvage failing thrifts and, as quickly as possible, liquidate their assets. We've given the RTC plenty of money to do the first half of its job. But on the asset disposal side, cash offers sit for months at a time while tax dollars go down the drain. As America falters on economic recovery—the RTC is stockpiling its assets and inadvertently controlling entire real estate markets.

With this $80 billion, the RTC is going to shut down S&L's with a vengeance. I just wish they would use the same vengeance to sell off the assets they already control. The assets they stockpile are costing the taxpayers millions in maintenance fees and carrying costs. Mr. Chairman, we're pouring American tax dollars down a black hole. We're never going to get this S&L mess cleaned up, until the RTC understands that it is hamstringing any economic recovery for this Nation.

I can't say this any plainer—Congress must refuse to pay another penny to the RTC until we're given a specific agenda on how they plan to effectively dispose of real estate assets.

As if the incompetency and mismanagement isn't enough, last year, the RTC spent an estimated $300 million—some reports even say $500 million on private lawyers' fees and legal expenses.

Mr. Chairman, the taxpayers are being rolled. Americans don't want, don't need, and certainly don't deserve to have to pony-up another $80 billion for the RTC. I urge my colleagues to reject this bill and send a message to the RTC—This is not a permanent deal. The American taxpayers have had enough.

Mr. ORTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Utah.

Mr. ORTON. Mr. Chairman, could the gentleman describe for this group what percentage of the RTC assets were within his district and what percentage of the $160 billion of losses attributable to the RTC are found in Dallas? I am astounded that the people of Dallas say no more funding to bail out their real estate market.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Chairman, they are fed up with it. That is what.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. MORELLA].

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of a critical, anticredit crunch provision of H.R. 3435.

For many months, I have been deeply concerned about the credit crunch paralyzing our economy. Many economists and analysts agree that mortgage and construction financing has been largely cut off even for feasible, viable rental property and commercial projects. As one local developer recently told me, "Builders are finding it difficult to finance the construction of new homes, even when they have signed contracts from purchasers."

Mr. Chairman, an economy in trouble cannot recover if the building industry, which employs millions of people and spends billions of dollars on goods and services annually, cannot obtain financing for the construction of even presold homes—the safest investments in the building industry. For this reason, I asked my friend and colleague, Congressman WYLIE, the ranking member of the Banking Committee, to incorporate into H.R. 3435 language which would rationalize the regulatory process as it applies to construction loans on presold homes. As a result, H.R. 3435 stipulates that new construction loans for presold single and multifamily homes will carry a 50 percent, rather than a 100 percent, risk weighting. The banking committee unanimously adopted this proposal, which was already under serious consideration by the Office of Thrift Supervision.

I wish to thank Congressman WYLIE for his generous help in achieving this critical anticredit crunch measure. In addition, I would like to thank Mr. Bill Warfield, formerly of the professional minority staff of the Banking Committee, now with the Appropriations Committee, who provided invaluable assistance in this effort. My appreciation also to Joe Ventrone and Kyle Lundstedt of Congressman WYLIE'S staff for their thorough research and diligent follow-through on this important provision. To Mario Correa and Helen McDonald of my staff, thank you.

I urge my colleagues to take action against this debilitating credit crunch by supporting H.R. 3435.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair advises at this point in the debate that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WYLIE] has 5½ minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ] has 3 minutes remaining. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ] has the right to close.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute to comment on the statement by the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. MORELLA]. She honed in on a very important provision in this bill, which is in there as a result of an amendment which I offered and it has to do with risk weighting on housing loans for purposes of capital requirements.

This issue came up in the Committee on Rules this morning, and what it does is direct the financial institution regulators to place single-family presold home construction loans in the 50 percent risk-weighted category of minimum capital standards, so they get a double advantage there. They are not rated 100 percent on risk weighting. This is the minimum standard as permitted by the BASL agreement, and for that reason would make the money go further.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Vermont [Mr. SANDERS].

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding. We have been here for 27 hours. We are tired, and I fear that the significance and impact of what we are doing now is not fully appreciated.

Mr. Chairman, the taxpayers of this country have already been hit up for $80 billion and today we are talking about another $80 billion, and there may be more to come.

Very simply, Mr. Chairman, one, I cannot support legislation which simply dumps this $80 billion payback into the deficit. That is absolutely irresponsible. We must have the courage to go forward on a pay-as-you-go basis.

Secondly, Mr. Chairman, in the last dozen years the wealthiest people in this country have become much wealthier, are paying less in taxes, and the working people have become poorer and are paying more in taxes. The payback must be based on a progressive basis. We cannot ask the middle class and the working class to bail out the S&Ls.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I would just observe that I was a little bit taken aback by the statements from the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GONZALEZ], who is a very good member of the House Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs. As was pointed out by the gentleman from Utah [Mr. ORTON], most of the money going to failed thrifts have gone to the State of Texas. I think 80 percent of all the failed S&Ls are in that particular area of the country. I know that he would not want us to leave here today without voting more money to close down some more of those failed thrifts.

My position is a no vote on the substitute, an aye vote on the substitute offered by Mr. BARNARD that has been worked out with Members on the other side of the House here, and the amendment which is before us now is flawed because of the pay-go provision. The Members in the other body would not take this bill if that is contained in it. I urge a no vote now.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WYLIE. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Chairman, I just want to enlighten the Members about Texas. We heard about Dallas from the gentleman from Texas [Mr. JOHNSON].

I want to tell every one of my colleagues and fellow Americans that in San Antonio, my district, the only thing RTC has not gotten yet is the Alamo, and we have drawn the line and we are going to fight to the death.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Kansas [Mr. SLATTERY] to close the debate.

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of the committee bill. I rise in support of the concept of pay as you go. I do so for one simple reason. That is that if we would agree next year to pay for this $60 billion over a 5-year period we would save the taxpayers of this country $100 billion in interest costs over the 30-year payment plan that the administration and probably the majority here today favor.

As far as I am concerned it is a simple concept. We have a moral obligation to pay our bills. This is not a pleasant thing to pay for. It will not be easy to pay for it next year, but it is right that we figure out how to pay for it next year even in an election year.

I know the hour is late and I am going to be very brief and just ask the Members to vote for the concept of pay as you go. We can find $60 billion in cuts in a $1.4 trillion budget over a 5-year period. That is $12 billion a year. That is not unreasonable. With all due respect to the gentleman from Ohio, Mr. WYLIE, it does not violate the budget agreement.

Any suggestion that by reducing the deficit further than the agreement called for last November, somehow we have breached the budget agreement I think is standing logic on its head. I think all of us understand that that agreement certainly was not an end-all in dealing with the deficit problem. This will help us solve that problem by requiring us to come together next year and develop a plan to pay for at least $60 billion of this terrible problem.

I believe so strongly that we have the moral obligation to do this for our kids and grandkids, and to stop handing them all these unpaid bills.

Mr. WYLIE. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, I might join the gentleman. He says "we." I think he means we in Congress.

Mr. SLATTERY. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I would just observe that the President of the United States has told the people of this country that he can solve all these problems without any additional revenue. If he can do that I would like to see his plan. That is what this whole concept envisions. After he would lay his plan on the table the heat would be on us to produce. I think that given his leadership, this body could produce. I urge my colleagues to vote for the committee bill, vote for the concept of pay as you go, and to stop handling all these unpaid bills to our kids and grandkids.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, all time has expired.

The question is on the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The Committee amendment in the nature of a substitute was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. It is now in order to consider the amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in House Report 102-408.

AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE OFFERED BY MR. BARNARD

Mr. BARNARD. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The text of the amendment in the nature of a substitute is as follows:

Amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by Mr. BARNARD: Strike all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Resolution Trust Corporation Refinancing, Restructuring, and Improvement Act of 1991".

TITLE I—RESOLUTION TRUST CORPORATION REFINANCING

SEC. 101. THRIFT RESOLUTION FUNDING PROVISIONS.

Section 21A(i) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(i)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

TITLE II—RESTRUCTURING AND IMPROVEMENT OF THE RESOLUTION TRUST CORPORATION

SEC. 201. STAFF OF THE RESOLUTION TRUST CORPORATION; CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER.

Section 21A(b)(9) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(b)(9)) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (B), by amending clause (i) to read as follows:

"(i) FDIC.—The Corporation shall use employees (selected by the Corporation) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation shall provide such personnel to the Corporation for its use. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation need not provide to the Corporation any employee of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation who was employed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation on the date of enactment of the Resolution Trust Corporation Thrift Depositor Protection Refinance Act of 1991 and who had not theretofore been provided to the Corporation by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. In addition to persons otherwise employed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation shall employ, and shall provide to the Corporation, such persons as the Corporation may request from time to time. Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation employees provided to the Corporation shall be subject to the direction and control of the Corporation and any of them may be returned to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation at any time by the Corporation in the discretion of the Corporation. The Corporation shall reimburse the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation for the actual costs incurred in providing such employees. Any permanent employee of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation who was performing services on behalf of the Corporation immediately prior to the date of enactment of the Resolution Trust Corporation Thrift Depositor Protection Refinance Act of 1991 shall continue to be provided to the Corporation after that date unless the Corporation determines the services of any such employee to be unnecessary, in which case such employee shall be returned to a similar position performing services on behalf of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. In any ensuing reduction-in-force or reorganization within the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, any such employee shall compete with the same rights as any other Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation employee. The Corporation may use administrative services of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and, if it does so, shall reimburse the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation for the actual costs of providing such services. Any employee or officer in the executive service of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation who was performing services on behalf of the Corporation at level E-4 or above immediately prior to the date of enactment of the Resolution Trust Corporation Thrift Depositor Protection Refinance Act of 1991 shall continue to be assigned to perform substantially similar services on behalf of the Corporation after such date unless the Corporation—

"(I) determines that the services of any such employees are unnecessary, or

"(II) reassigns or substantially alters the responsibilities or duties of any such employees.

If an action described in subclause (I) or (II) occurs, any such employee with at least 20 years of service, as defined by chapter 83 or chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, shall be entitled to an annuity under section 8336(d) or section 8414(b)(1) of title 5, United States Code, notwithstanding the fact that such employee has not attained the age of 50 years or has declined another position with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and the annuity of such employee shall not be reduced because of the age of such employee. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation shall reimburse the appropriate retirement insurance fund for any increased costs it incurs as a result of the annuities authorized pursuant to this clause."; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER.—There is established the office of chief executive officer of the Corporation. The chief executive officer of the Corporation shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall serve at the pleasure of the President.".

"(II) if the purchaser is a purchaser described under paragraph (2)(B)(ii)(I), subject to the rent limitations under paragraph (4)(A);

"(III) subject to the requirement in the second sentence of paragraph (2)(B); and

"(IV) subject to recapture by the Corporation of excess proceeds from resale of the properties under subparagraphs (C) and (D) of paragraph (2).

"(ii) ELIGIBLE MULTIFAMILY HOUSING PROPERTIES.—For eligible multifamily housing properties—

"(I) to qualifying multifamily purchasers;

"(II) subject to the lower-income occupancy requirements under paragraph (3)(E);

"(III) subject to the provisions of paragraph (3)(H);

"(IV) subject to a preference, among financially acceptable offers, to the offer that would reserve the highest percentage of dwelling units for occupancy or purchase by very low-income families and lower-income families and would retain such affordability for the longest term; and

"(V) subject to the rent limitations under paragraph (4)(A).

"(D) AFFORDABILITY.—The State housing finance agency or State or local housing agency shall endeavor to make the properties transferred under this paragraph more affordable to lower-income families based upon the extent to which the acquisition price of a property under subparagraph (B) is less than the market value of the property.".

SEC. 614. SUSPENSION OF OFFER PERIODS FOR SALES OF ELIGIBLE RESIDENTIAL PROPERTY TO NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS AND PUBLIC AGENCIES.

Section 21A(c) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)) is amended by adding after paragraph (12) (as added by section 513 of this Act) the following new paragraph:

"(13) EXCEPTION FOR SALES TO NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS AND PUBLIC AGENCIES.—

"(A) SUSPENSION OF OFFER PERIODS.—With respect to any eligible residential property, the Corporation may (in the discretion of the Corporation) suspend any of the requirements of subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (2) and subparagraphs (A) through (D) of paragraph (3), as applicable, but only to the extent that for the duration of the suspension the Corporation negotiates the sale of the property to a nonprofit organization or public agency. If the property is not sold pursuant to such negotiations, the requirements of any provisions suspended shall apply upon the termination of the suspension. Any time period referred to in such paragraphs shall toll for the duration of any suspension under this subparagraph.

"(B) USE RESTRICTIONS.—

"(i) ELIGIBLE SINGLE FAMILY PROPERTY.—Any eligible single family property sold under this paragraph shall be (I) made available for occupancy by and maintained as affordable for lower-income families for the remaining useful life of the property, or made available for purchase by such families, (II) subject to the rent limitations under paragraph (4)(A), (III) subject to the requirements relating to residency of a qualifying household under paragraph (9)(L) and to residency of a lower-income family under paragraph (2)(B)(ii), and (IV) subject to recapture by the Corporation of excess proceeds from resale of the property under subparagraphs (C) and (D) of paragraph (2).

"(ii) ELIGIBLE MULTIFAMILY HOUSING PROPERTY.—Any eligible multifamily housing property sold under this paragraph shall comply with the lower-income occupancy requirements under paragraph (3)(E) and shall be subject to the rent limitations under paragraph (4)(A).".

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 21A(c) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)) is amended by adding after paragraph (13) (as added by section 514 of this Act) the following new paragraph:

"(14) RULES GOVERNING DISPOSITION OF ELIGIBLE CONDOMINIUM PROPERTY.—

"(A) NOTICE TO CLEARINGHOUSES.—Within a reasonable period of time after acquiring title to an eligible condominium property, the Corporation shall provide written notice to clearinghouses. Such notice shall contain basic information about the property. Each clearinghouse shall make such information available, upon request, to purchasers described in clauses (i) through (iv) of subparagraph (B). The Corporation shall allow such purchasers reasonable access to an eligible condominium property for purposes of inspection.

"(B) OFFERS TO SELL.—For the 180-day period following the date on which the Corporation makes an eligible condominium property available for sale, the Corporation may offer to sell the property, at the discretion of the Corporation, to 1 or more of the following purchasers:

"(i) Qualifying households.

"(ii) Nonprofit organizations.

"(iii) Public agencies.

"(iv) For-profit entities.

"(C) LOWER-INCOME OCCUPANCY REQUIREMENTS.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in clause (ii), any nonprofit organization, public agency, or for-profit entity that purchases an eligible condominium property shall (I) make the property available for occupancy by and maintain it as affordable for lower-income families for the remaining useful life of the property, or (II) make the property available for purchase by any such family who, except as provided in subparagraph (E), agrees to occupy the property as a principal residence for at least 12 months and who certifies in writing that the family intends to occupy the property for at least 12 months. The restriction described in subclause (I) of the preceding sentence shall be contained in the deed or other recorded instrument.

"(ii) MULTIPLE-UNIT PURCHASES.—If any nonprofit organization, public agency, or for-profit entity purchases more than 1 eligible condominium property as a part of the same negotiation or purchase, the Corporation may (in the discretion of the Corporation) waive the requirement under clause (i) and provide instead that not less than 35 percent of all eligible condominium properties purchased shall be (I) made available for occupancy by and maintained as affordable for lower-income families for the remaining useful life of the property or (II) made available for purchase by any such family who, except as provided in subparagraph (E), agrees to occupy the property as a principal residence for at least 12 months and who certifies in writing that the family intends to occupy the property for at least 12 months. The restriction described subclause (I) of the preceding sentence shall be contained in the deed or other recorded instrument.

"(iii) SALE TO OTHER PURCHASERS.—If upon the expiration of the 180-day period referred to in subparagraph (B), no purchaser described in clauses (i) through (iv) of subparagraph (B) has made a bona fide offer to purchase the property the Corporation may offer to sell the property to any other purchaser.

"(D) RECAPTURE OF PROFITS FROM RESALE.—Except as provided in subparagraph (E), if any eligible condominium property sold (i) to a qualifying household, or (ii) to a lower-income family pursuant to subparagraph (C)(i)(II) or (C)(ii)(II), is resold by the qualifying household or lower-income family during the 1-year period beginning upon initial acquisition by the household or family, the Corporation shall recapture 75 percent of the amount of any proceeds from the resale that exceed the sum of (I) the original sale price for the acquisition of the property by the qualifying household or lower-income family, (II) the costs of any improvements to the property made after the date of the acquisition, and (III) any closing costs in connection with the acquisition.

"(E) EXCEPTION TO RECAPTURE REQUIREMENT.—The Corporation (or its successor) may in its discretion waive the applicability to any qualifying household or lower-income family of the requirement under subparagraph (D) and the requirements relating to residency of a qualifying household or lower-income family (under paragraph (9)(L) and subparagraph (C) of this paragraph respectively). The Corporation may grant any such a waiver only for good cause shown, including any necessary relocation of the qualifying household or lower-income family.

"(F) LIMITATIONS ON MULTIPLE UNIT PURCHASES.—The Corporation may not sell or offer to sell as part of the same negotiation or purchase any eligible condominium properties that are not located in the same condominium project (as such term is defined in section 604 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1980). The preceding sentence may not be construed to require all eligible condominium properties offered or sold as part of the same negotiation or purchase to be located in the same structure.

"(G) RENT LIMITATIONS.—Rents charged to tenants of eligible condominium properties made available for occupancy by very low-income families shall not exceed 30 percent of the adjusted income of a family whose income equals 50 percent of the median income for the area, as determined by the Secretary, with adjustment for family size. Rents charged to tenants of eligible condominium properties made available for occupancy by lower-income families other than very low-income families shall not exceed 30 percent of the adjusted income of a family whose income equals 65 percent of the median income for the area, as determined by the Secretary, with adjustment for family size.".

"(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 21A(c)(11)(B) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)(11)(B)) is amended by striking "specified under paragraphs (2) and (3)" and inserting "applicable under paragraphs (2), (3), (12)(C), (13)(B), and (14)(C)".

SEC. 616. REPORTS TO CONGRESS REGARDING AFFORDABLE HOUSING PROGRAM.

Section 21A(c) of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act (12 U.S.C. 1441a(c)) is amended by adding after paragraph (14) (as added by section 515 of this Act) the following new paragraph:

"(15) REPORTS TO CONGRESS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The Corporation shall submit to the Congress semiannual reports under this paragraph regarding the disposition of eligible residential properties under this subsection during the most recently concluded reporting period. The first report under this paragraph shall be submitted not later than the expiration of the 4-month period beginning upon the conclusion of the first reporting period under subparagraph (B). Subsequent reports shall be submitted not less than every 6 months after such expiration.
